Freshmen Probe Study Problems

Special Forum Draws 50 To Discuss College Scholastic Rate

Approximately 50 freshmen met in a student forum last Tuesday night in order to determine the reasons for the rise in the college scholastic rating from 1.4 to 1.7.

Nancy Kulp, secretary and sophomore representative to the forum, called the meeting to order, and turned it over to Jean Hitchcock, president, of the freshman class, and Kitty Jo Hickman, president of the incoming sophomore class Maxine Armistead, president of the forum, was present to receive suggestions.

"There are plenty of offices for us to hold while we are at Florida State college, but we can't get them without grades to back us up," explained Jean Hitchcock. "They don't mean everything, but they are the determining factor."

In request for suggestions as to why freshman grades have gone down, Betty Lang offered three reasons: first, there are too many people who think nothing of going over a study ban, and these brief interruptions add up much loss of time every night; second, the noise in both the halls and showers is annoying to the point that concentration is impossible; third, overcrowded conditions from concentrated study; third too often, the Smart Shop and Spic are too good to stay away from, and consequently more time is lost. Fourth, outside activities play a large part in the usurping of student's studying time, and finally, the feeling of overwork or some chronic ailment often result in lack of ability to study. Those who are ill were urged to go to the infirmary and remain there until they recover.

Other suggestions followed, some of which related to the orientation program and the cheating situation in connection with hygiene classes. It was then announced that a freshman class meeting will be held in the near future, at which time the discussion will be continued.

Mitchell Wins Editor's Chair Of Flastacowo

Tops Erwin by 224 Votes In Special Election At Convocation

Staff Will Be Announced After Official Approval

Results of the recent election for editor of Flastacowo showed Sonia Mitchell the victor over Rachel Erwin by 224 votes. Formerly annual editors have been voted upon in regular elections, but as no petitions had been submitted at that time this year, a special election was held in convocation Tuesday.

Staff to be Announce

The new editor's platform was "a book someone who I would like to make a printed picture of our campus." She has had no actual working experience on an annual, but plans to spend the rest of the term learning as much as the time will allow. At present she is selecting her staff, but as selections must be approved by the personnel office, the registrar's office, the infirmary, and the dean's office, members will not be announced until later. Preprints plans, however, include many who were on the staff this year; will keep their positions.

The publication date will be out around May 15, according to information made by Jean Webster, editor.

Orchestra Closes Concert Season

Florida State college orchestra repeated a part of its spring concert at convocation Tuesday as its final appearance for the season 1939-40. This performance closed a full list of activities for the year.

The program opened with the movement of Mendelssohn's Minor Concerto for piano and orchestra, with Betty Craven as pianist soloist. The orchestra followed this with the first Prelude from Bach's Well-Tempered Clavichord" arranged by Mr. W. R. Cowles, conductor of the orchestra, for brass and string obligato. Miss Mary Reeder was the harpist. Additional selections included the first movement of Grieg's Concerto for piano and orchestra with Ruby Dunstan as soloist. Both Miss Craven and Miss Dunstan are seniors in the school of music.

Sophomore Council Hears Academic Advisor Speak On Work For Next Year

Elisabeth Linn, freshman adviser for next year, talked to the sophomore council members yesterday afternoon in a meeting of freshman counselors next year. Miss Linn who will succeed in the work were asked to sign up on the sophomore council bulletin board at this last meeting. Mary Caldwell, chairman of the sophomore-freshman council, gave further instructions and details to the council. Girls who will serve at the breakfast.

Checking cards and hats tomorrow night at the May dance is included in the council's activities for this week.

Excitement Seekers Will Revel In Caroline Wild's Adventures

FSCW Graduate Spends Two Years Teaching In Government School in Aleutian Islands

By SELMA SCHLOSS

If you're looking for excitement, as an alumna of this college you have a good chance for it! For instance there's the example of Miss Caroline Wild, a graduate of our college, who taught school for a government ward on St. Paul, one of the two inhabited Pribilof Islands.

The story of Miss Wild's adventures appeared in a recent feature in the Washington news of Washington, D. C. The article in the Post painted a picture of Caroline Wild as she was in 1923 —a brunette, twenty-one years of age, with no definite job in sight. She decided it was necessary to obtain money by taking her wits. Therefore, this young girl from Avon Park, Fla., went to Washington, and inquired concerning the prospects for employment. They did, and I guess just in the Bureau of Fisheries. Here the job of becoming one of the two teachers on St. Paul Island was offered her. At first Caroline was rather desolate, she accepted with misgivings, but a job is a job and off she went.

This island is approximately 15 miles long and 5 miles wide, and two-score white people live within a radius of 240 miles. The Pribilofs compose a small portion of the Aleutian Islands and are located in the Bering sea about 300 miles from the Alaskan shore and 340 miles north of Dutch Harbor. This group of islands were included in the Alaska purchase in 1867, and are now United States possessions. They are the center of the government-owned and operated fur industry which turns in a profitable sum to the treasury each year.

The most enjoyable part of Miss Wild's two year stay in the islands was the receiving of Christmas present three times a year; in Oc-

Club Schedules Russian Ballet

Civic Music Association Gives Students Low Rate On Tickets

The Tallahassee Civic Music association has announced the booking of one of the most famed entertainments of the modern world, the greater Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo for the season 1940-41.

The Russian ballet, which has played almost every week in London and eleven weeks in Paris, is said to be an unforgettable delight with its cast of great dancing stars, fine music, beautiful scenery and gorgeous costumes. Season tickets are available for membership in the local civic music telephoning headquarters. 2125, at the chamber of commerce on efforts organization.

Although the Ballet Russe is planned the most for its musical grace by New York critics, there is more to ballet than meets the eye. It takes real, natural enough ballet dancer to appear in the Ballet Russe. Even the Metropolitan Opera House one must have decided long ago to devote a life time to the months training and arduous work to the ballet. Grace, poise and a degree of constant work are ahead of all.

As children, they are told to stand with "heads up" and "shoulders down." The muscles of their shoes are stuffed with cotton to give the dancer firm hands and arms while "passing the bread, please," have been trained to gesture with curved wrists. Flexibility of ease and grace in all essential movements has been accomplished by daily prize exercises, bending and molding since infancy. They are all young but have many years of work and study behind them.

The Ballet Russe which will sail to South America for a special performance next year is composed of dancers from many nations. Many of them have devoted their lives to their work. Many have been trained by famed personals. They never eat before a performance; but after the show, they consume enormous meals of steak and other substantial food, as a result of the amount of energy used up by each performance.

The beautiful smooth production is the result of a daily routine of hard, monotonous practice of all, after which lamb's wool is put on followed by the toe shoes which are used to open length stockings. Coiffures are

Doyle to Limit Transfer Credit

Registrar Will Accept Only Nine Hours of Summer Work

Mr. S. R. Doyle, registrar, has announced the requirements of scholastic work transferred from other institutions this summer. A student may take as much work as she may choose, but only nine hours' maximum work will be accepted toward graduation.

A 1.0 average student may only be given credit for six hours' summer work toward graduation. A 1.5 student, seven hours, a 1.6 student, eight hours, and any other student, a maximum of nine hours' work. Other summer school work will be accredited but will not count toward graduation.

Mr. Doyle explained that these points are required only for work from other schools need not be repeated on the basis of quality points. Grades from other schools are recorded exactly as they are but are figured differently here. There has been some question as to how the grades are not reduced at any time.

According to a new regulation, any student may not take a teacher or a doctor's statement or a written excuse from a parent or guardian, if they are to be excused from class attendance. Such a statement must be presented at the infirmary no later than the day on which the student returns to class, or the absence will be counted as a cut.

National Group Marks Distaff 'All American'

Judging Based On First Two Issues Edited Under Gregory

Excellent Rating Given Three Special Sections

The Distaff, Florida State college's campus literary magazine has been given an excellent first rating by the National Scholastic Press association, marking it as superior among college publications. It was one of 52 college and high school publications out of 1,000 judged to achieve this ranking. The Distaff received 900 points, with 700 the minimum for All-American standards.

Judging was based on the first two issues published by the retiring staff, with Florence Gregory as editor. In the report from the association, art work in the magazine received especial praise. Poetry, fiction, and critical writing judged excellent, and essays were pronounced superior.

Evman Interprets Honors Work Plan

Guided Study Explained At Student Meeting

"Honors Work" was the subject of a speech by Dr. Evman, dean of the school of education in convocation Tuesday. Honors work is open to juniors or seniors who have a B average. This is done in their major field under the guidance of their major professor. Although honors work under students are given a written or oral examination required by the department's recommendation.

Students who complete the honors work satisfactorily receive degrees "with distinction" in their major fields, Dr. Evman explained.

General honors with cum laude, magna cum laude are received by students who have a 2.5 average, 2.75 and 3.0 are awarded masters in college, he added.

Girls who will receive special honors in the May 26 Ruth Rogers, who has done honors work in accounting, and Martha Dent Perry, in history.

Juniors who have done honors in the field of history are Frances Boyles, history Selma Hyman, history; and Mary Louise Lindsey, Patricia Holbert, history; and Dorothy Hickerson, history.

Those who will be doing juniors honors work next year should see Dr. Evman about the choice of personnel, before the close of this semester.

Seventeen students have been recommended by the Honors committee for the degree diploma this year, subject to their completion of requirements for graduation and if they maintain a 2.5 average. The girls are as follows: Ruth Rogers; Accounting, Francelice Lasche, Betty Markham, Lena

Mythical and Historical Characters Have Figured Prominently in May Day Celebrations Here

Persephone, Demeter, Pluto, the seasons, Robin Hood and the history of Florida have figured prominently in the Florida State college since 1929.

Although the origin is unknown, May Day has existed in some form or another for centuries. It has been celebrated in conjunction with the sophomore-freshman hike on the campus for many years and has become an established custom. The ceremony is scheduled for May 4 this year when the breakfast, parasol, and May Day dance fill the activities of the day.

The program in 1929 was divided into the four seasons with a queen and her court of followers for each season, which appropriate dances exemplified the different season with a fres... queen was accompanied by snow flakes. She paid allegiance to Father Earth and was followed by Spring, who in her turn gave way to Summer. Summer flower-bearers, overflowing with beautiful blossoms, were given as a tribute to Earth. With a harvest queen reigning, Autumn chased Summer away, with fluttering moths and autumn eves that followed. This year Dean Olivia Dorman and Miss Edith West assisted with the speaking parts of the program. Violette Chatham was queen of the whole festival.

The prologue for May Day the next year was based on the story of Demeter and Persephone. Persephone, the beautiful daughter of Demeter, was sought in marriage by Pluto, the god of the underworld. Pluto took her away to his realm in Hades where she was to reign as queen. However, Persephone longed for Demeter, and finally Pluto allowed her to spend six months of every year in the upper world. That treacherous courtier Winter has taken Princess Rosalind and her eight attendants sunk in their credit, and his merry Men, at the request of Spring, Spruce, and Autumn, went to rescue them. Fulfilling their mission, the men returned with the princess who was leading her captor in bonds. Princess Rosalind was crowned the queen of May. The court was accompanied by dancers dressed to represent them.

A new type of program was featured on May Day the next year, consisting of a new version of the fairy tale Sleeping Beauty. 1936 saw another fairyland setting, with a theme based upon a tale of the queen of Asaac-Lorraine, who was so bored with life that she offered a bag of gold for enjoyable entertainment. Vain attempts were made by her subjects who presented national dances. The jesters tried their luck; Pierrot and Pierrette danced. The soldiers drilled for her pleasure, but the queen was not satisfied. Suddenly, in the midst of a dance a fairy came from the court pursued by a beast which the soldiers then slayed, thereby winning for her escape, the maid. Another fairy appeared and thanked her, and received the bag of gold.

Coming forth again in 1935 was the story of Persephone and Demeter under the names of Proserpina, Ceres and Pluto. Although similar to the version of a few years before, a few changes were made in the tale. Proserpina was stolen from the earth by the god of the underworld. Pluto. Ceres mother of Proserpina, thought the earth had swallowed her daughter; so she pronounced the curse of winter upon H. However, a messenger from the gods informed Ceres that Proserpina must return to earth for six months each year. Then the spring festivities

What If War Should Come?

Reporter Finds That Most Students Have Made Definite Plans For Their Activities If America Enters Conflict

By EMMA JEAN HIGLEY

If the United States were to suddenly declare war and you were to be drafted, in color, what would you do? This question is running through the mind of each girl on campus. The war situation is the main topic of conversation, no matter where one goes lately.

The girls are really worried about the European situation, and they hope that the matter how horrible and it may be it is better decided now than to live with this idea in mind. the majority of the girls on campus have decided that they would do, or at least what they "think" they would do, if the war suddenly thrown into the present European war.

Upon interviewing some girls concerning this question, I made a remarkable discovery. It might Miss Wild composed one-sixth of a very consensual island group consisting of the island doctor, the storekeeper, the mechanic, the doctor, and the other school teacher. They played poker for lack of anything better to do, and the evening suite an accomplished player. When they were not playing cards or visiting, they attended the native dances. Banquets were held on Thanksgiving, Christmas, and other holidays. On these occasions the entire population of St. Paul dressed in their best clothes and feasted on renewed chops.

Today Miss Wild's adventures are over for the time being and she is vesting in the civilized atmosphere of the Bureau of Fisheries in Washington. 3 Classes Hear Federal Agent

Thurston Explains FBI For Social Studies Classes Monday

Mr. Lawrence Thurston, special investigator for the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington, spoke Monday to several social studie classes on the administration of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the activities and qualifications of a federal agent.

Mr. Thurston stated that there are three divisions of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the administrative, the investigative, and the identification. Under the administrative division comes the training of men for the progress of an agent. The qualifications for becoming an agent are very strict. A man must be a graduate from a law school or a school of accounting. He must spend two years of criminal record in his family as far back as his family history can be traced. He must be in good physical condition; he must be short; he must be a married man; and he should be a good athlete. Preference is given its months of training in all departments. Every agent, including J. Edgar Hoover, must spend two hours each day in the gymnasium and two hours on the target range.

Mr. Thurston said that no women are hired in the F.B.I. because the work is too strenuous. Wives, however, are employed to assist in any way a wife of one of the agents is employed.

The F.B.I. budget now costs $12,000,000 annually. The cause of crime is due to the home environment, that of thickly populated areas and the slums of large cities. Negroes commit fifty percent of all crimes. The crimes of the negroes are chiefly murders. The averages woman criminal is 24 years old. The average man is 19. Robbery is the chief motive of all crimes it is found through investigation.

The department of identification maintains nicknames files on criminals in its files also files. Among the nicknames of women criminals are "Dirty Neck Lizzy," "Chinese Lil," and "Chez Annie." In case dead files a tab is kept on a criminal's card as long as he is wanted. If a man is never found he is declared dead when, according to his card, he is 90 years old.

Agents never carry guns with them unless they are on a dangerous assignment. Mr. Thurston revealed. An agent is not allowed a gun as a threat, using it only in self-defense. When he shoots to injure," I'd much rather be taught to aim for the stomach because a shot in the region causes the criminal to drop his gun immediately and double over. The Federal Bureau of Investigation is not called into a case until the city police, and the state order its intervention, or the criminal crosses from state to state line.

The greatest concern of the bureau at the present time is the spy system. Constant contact is being made with spies in this country as the United States is involved in war. At this time our munition and airplane factories would be in danger of being destroyed by saboteurs.

Counselors To Be Tested As Training Course Ends

Freshmen counselors for next year will be tested this afternoon on their preparatory work at 4:30 in room 303 Westcott building.

Climaxing an eight weeks training course, the examinations will cover the duties of a counselor and the knowledges and technique necessary for handling groups and individuals.

Plans for the fall orientation program are indefinite as yet, according to Elizabeth Linn, freshman advisor.

Students End Bird Study Trip In Federal Correction House

Wild Bobolink Search Leads Deviney's Class To Habitats Inside Governments Prison Walls

By MARJORIE RICHARDSON

Prison cells, field glasses and mysterious cars zooming around all added interest, make an exciting adventure for six girls of Miss Deviney's ornithology class on a recent field trip. The girls are seriously considering adopting "The Protector Gang" as a marching song for a high spot in the way of adventure.

After nosing around in search of the wild bobolinks reported in the area, of the Federal Institution of Correction for first offenders about five miles outside Tallahassee, the girls had the creepy feeling all psychologists deny that they were being watched from one of the high guard towers inside the prison walls. Turning their field glasses in said guards' direction their feeling was not altogether unfounded.

"I guess we did look rather suspicious," Elizabeth Crawford said looking on the ground and shuddering. "Mrs. Lucy Rebia Southwell estimatedly retired to Tavares to her tale. Suddenly out from the prison gates roared a high powered car. The side emblazoned on the car was an exceedingly good looking man and in prison garb Six lovely

Opossums Pickled For Zoology Lab

A mother opossum and her ten babies have just been committed to perpetual confinement in formaldehyde by the purpose of instructing curious students in the zoology laboratory. The mother new specimens were found by Mrs Betty Blackmon, instructor in botany, near her home outside Tallahassee.

The mother opossum is about three feet long. The babies are each about six inches long with no hair, undeveloped ears, and closed eyes. The opossum keeps its young in her pouch constantly until they are old enough to run about and forage for themselves. The little opossums which are kept in the zoology laboratory had lived in their mother's pouch for about two weeks and were still quite helpless.

Last month Mrs Komarek found an opossum and had been killed by an automobile. Eight little opossums which were in the body of the mother lived for an entire day afterwards.

Canine Seeks Book Larnin'

Monday night at 8 o'clock the services of the library were crowded as usual with diligent students. Suddenly to the ears of many of them came a distinct, rapid, clicking sound Heads lifted, and they looked in search of the cause of the unusual disturbance came into view.

A thin, brindled dog, his tail wagging like a pendulum and his ears erect, was trotting down the floor, trotted down the well-worn aisle to the bookshelves where the latest numbers of Harper's Magazine are kept when not being perused by students. Finding a smiling librarian, intent on perusing the newspaper, he evinced from the library at 9-10 o'clock door for accompanied by scratches and stasies from amused spectators.

Few of the students, however, noticed the unkempt appearance of the newcomer, intent on the wandering dog. The next day at lunch time and again at dinner the same animal was observed near the north door of the new building but he waited with a pathetic, eager air for handouts from sympathetic girls. What his name is and to whom he belongs no one knows. Perhaps he is just a stray but he must be some kind person who will appreciate this 'dog's hunger for knowledge and for food.

Vance, Bristol Speak to AAUP

One Paper Discusses Part of Faculty In Government

On Sunday, April 28, a business dinner meeting was held by the American Association of University Professors. Mr. Henry F. Becker, professor of Geography and president of the organization was in charge of the meeting.

The F S C W chapter had its meeting in honor of the University of Florida chapter and representatives from both chapters were present. Mrs. Margaret Edwards, professor of economics, gave a report, and Mr. Carl Vance, of the Journalism department, gave a talk; there also composed the speakers from the F S C W chapter.

Mrs. Bristow's report, a report given to a previous local meeting of A. A. U. P., was a study made of 25 other public and private institutions and was about the "participation of the faculty in government."

Mr. Vance talked on "The Problems of Professors in Professions." The first problem is brought up was that of interested professors in their professions. He said that most professors are interested in their subjects, but many do not take an interest in the problems of the profession as a whole.

The second point he stated concerned the problem of teaching college teachers in the broader problems of college life. The next study by A. A. U. P. showed that in many college faculties they do not concern themselves about the government of their institutions and in many cases do not participate very little in policy formation.

Richey Gathers Bits of Japan In Stay There

Beautiful Prints, Handpainted Fans, Among Collection

A glimpse by proxy of the land of the cherry blossoms was given by Miss Helen L. Richey's collection of Japanese trays, fans, towels, and other oriental things. A bit of colorful Japan and her beauty-loving people is invited to enter through this collection.

Miss Richey at present is in textiles and clothing instructor in the home economics department, but previously she taught home economics and English in a girls' high school in suburb of Tokyo and in a girls' normal school at Japanese government. The former was one of the two home economics schools established in Japan. Miss Richey spent six years in Tokyo and five in the Nagasaki district.

During her stay in Japan she collected many of the articles on display here. Some were party gifts, some were travel gifts or others were presented on New Year's day. This is the answer to the letter exchanging greetings as New Year's is everybody's birthday except the emperor's.

A synonym for the orient to the average person is chopsticks. Miss Richey owns a beautiful pair. This particular pair is for children's use but there are also medium size ones used for ladies and longer ones for husbands use. Chopsticks are made of ivory, wood, and bone.

A big book of wood-block prints was presented to Miss Richey as a farewell gift by the head of the English department in the girls' normal school. This prints were made by Hiroshige, one of the most famous wood artists, and portray various old houses. Since Miss Richey's residence in the United States she learned that the man who gave her this book has committed suicide. He had taken a few school girls on a mountain hike when a snowstorm came up. Several girls died and, feeling responsible, he took his life.

The story connected with one of the fans in the collection typifies the Japanese ideas of good entertainment. This personalized fan was a party souvenir at a

Despite Seriousness of Task, Girls Enjoy Learning To Fly

Bad Weather Conditions Don't Mean Stay At Home for These Future Aviatrixes

The 46 aviation students who began their instruction at the end of the last semester find that their hours grow more and more exciting as time passes. Some of them tell stories of solo flights advisement and of getting lost above the clouds.

Everybody hung like a heavy cloud over the airport for several hours last Tuesday morning because Frances Dugger, student flyer, had not returned from taking her early morning spins. When she finally found her way home she told this story.

As she was going up to do her spins she passed through a layer of clouds. Thinking nothing new for a three months student. However, after she had gone up about 1,000 feet she noticed that a whole layer of flake clouds had formed between her and the earth. Not wishing to worry about that later, she found a clear place on the clouds and started her spins.

"After I finished, I noticed that the clouds were all gone, and at first I cruised about hopefully. Eventually, however, I saw that I was getting nowhere so I made a few under the layer of clouds and started to have a look at my surroundings.

"I saw houses and railroad tracks, but nothing that looked like airport and I couldn't find the college," explained Frances.

Finally she went back above the clouds to find the sun and the sun's rays. There was nothing to follow plane. Irvin, of the airport, to the rescue!

"I followed him home like a homesick angel!" said Frances.

The other morning Frances made another student aviator, took a solo hop to several neighboring towns and spent a long distance of about 100 miles.

Beginning a participated Irene flier in Monticello where she had some difficulty in finding the airport. Once there, however, she took off to fly for Quincy. At Quincy she again landed safely and this time took off to return to Tallahassee. She flew his course by means of a compass, visual landmarks, and her air map.

The total time in the air was one hour and fifty-five minutes. Irene stated, "I felt pretty proud grand and I thoroughly enjoyed the whole trip."

This flight was a requirement in the maneuvers in working toward a private license.

The CAA girls are fast learning that there is more to flying than is commonly thought. A solo flight is only the beginning. After that comes the minimum of 35 hours solo work required for a private pilot's license. They must learn to do such things as stalls, spins, and figure eights besides the ordinary turns and landings. They must learn to use the field so that the inspector who comes to "inspect" at the end of the course will judge them capable of handling a heavier-than-air craft.

Despite the deep seriousness of the undertaking, the airport does manage to wear a slight layman of humor that makes the worst mistakes seem not too bad. The student may be gloaming down inside about that terrible landing, but a light quip from the instructor, Ivan Munroe, about "trying to bury my plane so that co-o-old dark ground" seems to lighten the situation, and she begins to feel as excited that a whole layer of flake clouds had formed between her and the earth.

Everyone makes laughable mistakes. One girl, who was practicing her landings, proved that by herself, put her earphones on and began to taxi. Before she went down the runway, all by herself with the earphones clamped firmly down as if she might be intently listening to everything that an instructor might be saying when someone brought them off and went around the runway again, to be greeted at her return with the remark that "I don't know but that you didn't do better that time."

Someone, too, got her words mixed up. There was silence for a moment. Asking for information on how to drop her altimeter for a landing, she asked Munroe how to droop the rudder. "Droop the rudder!" he echoed, then repeated, "Droop the rudder? Well, I don't think that's necessary, but that." And for the remainder of the afternoon, hopeful pupils kept inquiring how to droop the rudder.

One girl, nester than the rest, surveyed the chaotic condition of the desk and cleared it of papers. Then she won't forgotten that. either. For weeks the instructor found this "tidy" person and find a thing. "You'll be putting things in order!" he would say, fumed. But he didn't get ince curbed. Soon the desk became of beautiful flowers plants flourishing on his desk to the delight of girls in the office, and even flowers had him stumped for long in a greenhouse was started. he replied that one of the girls thought that she might solo that afternoon, so she had brought the flowers to brighten the desk.

Classes Scheduled

The CAA girls are scheduled for one-half hour of instruction for six days out of a week. Usually weather conditions are sometimes unsuitable for flying. But bad weather is not necessarily a bad thing. There's a nice, warm office where they can study and very few students admiringly to such tales as the one about the plane that went into a tail spin. Then can go out in the hangar and look over the ships that they know every part. Or they can ask for explanations of the various devices or anything else they don't understand. Time that can be spent in the office is wasted as long as it can be spent in the hangar.

Going out to the airport presented a problem at first, said Mr. Munroe brought forth an old college-age girl consists of a sweater, a pair of comfortable slacks and a pair of saddle shoes. Not so in the winter. The shoes are comfortable in June, but impossible to buy the soles and straps separately. After purchasing a pair of the uppers chooses a strap from the basement and a sole from the other.

Next in the collection are big squares of beautifully colored cloth. Miss Richey used these to wrap books enroute to school and to wrap other things. Nothing is for nothing is carried unwrapped in Japan.

When asked about the difference between Japanese and American girls Miss Richey replied that their actions in class were quiet, but that the biggest distinction lay in appearance. Japanese girls are very polite, riding on the teacher enters and leaves the room. Japanese girls are very short, black-haired. The hair, worn in a long braid, is naturally wavy and straight. Generally, American type clothes are worn by students until they enter the dormitory. Then they reacustom themselves to native dress during part of every a year or two after leaving school.

Annual Banquet to Honor New WAA Board Member At Wakulla Wednesday

Next Wednesday evening the annual WAA banquet honoring new officers will be held, it was announced today. The banquet will take place at the Wakulla Springs hotel.

New members to be honored are Minnie Hazlip, president; Peaches McKay, vice president; Waylea Wood, secretary; Frances Dugger, treasurer; Frances Bittle, senior intramural manager; Josephine Bishop, junior athletic manager; Brunelle Mobley, publicity chairman; Nellie Lojious, senior athletic manager; Mary Jane Medlin, junior athletic manager; Jean Hall, senior intramural manager; Marion Freeling, president of the Florida Recreation Association; Nancy White, president of the Florida Recreation Association; Nancy White, president of the P. club; and Rietz Beaubien, president of the life saving corps.

Tennis Teams to be Picked

Both Odd and Even tennis teams will be chosen from the regular practice hours this afternoon and Monday afternoon. The teams will probably be composed of five players each, as announced yesterday by Venetia Marchesano, Even leader, today. She said that the teams would be chosen definitely decided.

The matches will begin on Monday of next week and continue through the week being played at 4:30 o'clock each afternoon.

Tarpons Name New Head Coach

At a recent meeting of the Tarpon club the following officers were elected: president, Dorothy Gray; vice-president, Frances Battle; secretary-treasurer, Jean Wood; and member of the scrap book, Vivian Adamo.

"look-buzzes" for that purpose. It has certainly been used by comrades, back and forth between college and airport, since it was first put into service by Uncle Sam.

Then there's ground school at 7:30 Tuesday and Thursday nights and at 1:30 Saturday afternoons in the classroom under Mr. Mattice's leadership, the history of aviation came first. Following that the theory of flight, a digest of the Civil Air Regulations, and the Manual of Aeronautics.

All the girls are to put it boldly, "crazy about" the course. Meeting each other in the halls they have a number of two or three possible questions. "Been out to-day?" "Going out this afternoon?", or "Going now?". The conversation is always centered, duly, on aviation. Consequently, they must listen to roommates and retired friends about how they flap the covers at night while they're supposed to be sleep. One roomie even went so far as to say that she barely caught her roommate's feet as she started to fly out of a fifth-floor window.

Food, clothing and shelter used to be the primary needs of life. But CAA girls have added another—learning to fly a plane.

And did someone ask about the future? Well, a pair of wings from the instructor and a pilot's license are big moments and everyone who happens to be around.

Student Views Negro Problem

Indifference To Uncle Tom's Cabin Symbolizes Feeling of Most Southern Collegians Toward Old Slave Race

By ELEANOR MILLER

Uncle Tom's Cabins was never allowed in our house. The fact is that I am graduating from college without ever having read it, and I am afraid I have the feeling that it is not worth reading. They always tell at my house that Harriet Beecher Stowe came down to Manchester and admitted herself that her book was a bunch of lies.

So I am graduating from college. I read just yesterday that Uncle Tom's Cabin is an epic and at the very least an example of the literature of the day. Perhaps such educated persons would certainly have had me beat. But I tell myself too that I am a liberal; yet I take a certain pride in being absolutely ignorant of Mrs. Stowe's abolitionist "epic" beyond the knowledge that it has to do with the bloodhounds on the icebergs which have filtered in through the animated cartoons.

It is amazing how liberal we are in the South. Every girl in the graduating class on any southern campus this year "opposes" secondly do anything to change the status of the negro here. Yet it is one of the outstanding problems of the South and they are the educated people like the girls. Of this graduating class few of the girls of the southern colleges will not take a deal of absent-minded pleasure in having their proud old names changed after wedding veils, few who will not shudder to think of a marriage to sick or needy servants But of all, each one, I think, is a well educated person, a surprisingly small number will bother to see that some reforms are improved, that the shacks on East Alibama avenue pull down and replaced with respectable homes, that more hospitals, clinics and clinic services are available to negro mothers.

To me, a short four years in college would for most of us have been frequently divided into a of twenty years. And this conditioning process is a continuous one. Fathers who have had their children question the fitness of the system and in real terms the Old South refuse to discuss the matter with their children in the spring. Incidents are recounted in the porch at night over the highball of porters and janitors and bellhops in northern and southern hotels. Newspapers in Georgia draw and outdid themselves.

I can believe and honestly feel that something like the above and these very nerves are housed and more especially about the general management of the education. And yet I can drive to a town in Georgia and find that things are not really so bad. They are happy! All their friends are friendly. They are wonderful as my father took the south name on this trip. Everyone from her roof leaked or the wind whistled through the cracks in the walls the house was never warm.

None of us can help the situation. We are born a Yankee mistrusts our negroes or our cotton-growers. We have decided to want to take care of them and we want to do it now! We are certainly that something must be done for them physically in a way that will not be noticeable enough to make the master-servant relationship we have inherited from childhood. Probably all of us will find this feeling a deep-rooted thing that can only be removed by words or any amount of the logical intellectual approach. Very few of us, and I number myself among these, have the situation changed socially. Furthermore we cannot imagine in what direction such a social change could go for the picture, as we have seen it of the negro's treatment in the North fills us with an involuntary disgust. "We haven't should stay in his place."

As I set that statement down, I honestly believe it. I admit that something should be done, but I don't see what we can do. I was brought up as you were on Joel Chandler Harris but in spite of four years in college I think I shall never read Uncle Tom's Cabin or forget that the two most famous men in United States history are not Washington and Lincoln but Washington and Lee.

Bright Pupils Try Teachers

"Jimmie, will you please settle down?" the practice teacher said in a somewhat impatient tone of voice.

"Sure, if you will settle down with me," erupted the student.

Every day girls of this college go down to the demonstration school, observe classes, watch model teachers, and every day the student problems like the above which do much to upset their dignity. Usually a practice teacher can immediately squelch bursting the wittiest of the "bright" pupil. Sometimes, however she finds it rather difficult to surrender her laughter which was the case of a girl who, after playing on a victrola the comical ditty, "Lazy Mary, Will You Get Up?" had a pupil come forward and say, "That reminds me of my old Aunt Addie who is dead." Also the time Betty Brent demonstrated chairman of the committee in charge. It was aided by Mary Thompson and Virginia and Helen Grimes.

The program for the meeting included a talk by Rev. H. F. Caldwell, Episcopalian minister who reviewed The Gospel in the Stars by Joseph A Seiss.

Astronomers Plan Annual Camp Trip

At the April meeting of the Astronomy club on Tuesday evening, Sondra Hunter announced plans for the annual trip to camp. The traditional over-night outing is scheduled for Friday, May 10, with sparkling stars and sizzling steaks as special attractions. Miss Hunter is also second chairman of the committee in charge. She is aided by Mary Thompson and Virginia and Helen Grimes.

The program for the meeting included a talk by Rev. H. F. Caldwell, Episcopalian minister who reviewed The Gospel in the Stars by Joseph A Seiss.

Home Ec Councils Make Fall Plans

At a combined meeting of the new and retiring council of the home economics club Sunday night the date was set for their formal banquet and plans were made for their annual freshman tea which will be held in October.

Other plans made by the council for next year include the addition to the council of a freshman representative to be elected in December and the payment of dues amounting to 25 cents each. Lucille Arnold was appointed chairman of the historian's committee and Mary Phillips was appointed project chairman.

The meeting was held at the home of Miss Margaret Sandlin, dean of the School of Home Economics.

FSC Economist Goes to Meeting

Dr. Beulah B. Briley, head of the economics department, attended the third annual Southern Conference for Human Welfare in Chattanooga, Tenn., from April 5-16. Colleges and universities from eleven southern states were represented. Dr. Briley was the only faculty member present from this college.

Among the speakers were Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Miss Lucy Randolph Mason, Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, and Miss Louise Charlton, United States commissioner at Birmingham, Ala. Other leading educators, social workers, and labor leaders were also present. The problems discussed included Religion in a Democracy, Rural Life in the South, Children in the South, Constitutional Rights and suffrage, and Industry in the South.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in speaking on "Children in the South," urged the conference to "do everything possible to equalize the opportunities of children in all states of the country." Having just returned from a trip to California Mrs. Roosevelt was asked whether or not she thought the conditions were "as bad as the Grapes of Wrath" were true. She replied that the book was true.

Approximately 800 people met at this inter-racial conference.

Oh Say Can We Hear?

When Stunt Chase was in Orlando this spring there was a great deal of talk among the students about how wonderful it would be to have an anthor so famous come to talk to us. It seemed a chance in a lifetime for us to hear one of the leading scholars of the country whom we would probably never have an opportunity to meet in our life out of college and educational circles. That enthusiasm made it hard for us to keep on smiling when we found that we couldn't afford it. Treats like that cost money.

The fact is that we have only $300 to spend for one whole lecture series, which sum is allotted from the student activity fund through the artist series fund. When outstanding lecturers often charge all that and more for one lecture it means that our series is sure to be a little on the scanty side. Besides, students, as a rule, want to see features and they are usually the most expensive.

We have been very lucky this year in securing a number of splendid speakers for practically nothing because they have been on tour and were willing to speak here en route. The noted speakers brought here this year by the Alumnae association also served to round out the program and to introduce us to a wider variety of personages. If attendance this year has been quite good, especially when the speakers had been well publicized and were speaking of subjects of current interest.

Judging from the answers given by students to the Inquiring Reporter recorded in this issue, the students as a whole are heartily in favor of more and better speakers; and yet they would be willing to pay nothing for more in favor of the better if necessary. Most of them say that if more money were spent on the lecture series they would make an added effort to attend all of them. Although it is not the universal opinion, a number of girls would be willing to cut down on the artist series fund if that were the only way possible to raise the fund for lecturers.

We are in favor of raising the fund for the lecture series somehow. We realize that we can not expect to obtain good speakers and to present a well-rounded lecture series if we do not have the money to pay for them and therefore we would be willing if need be to have one less violinist or organist in exchange for a worthwhile speaker on music or scientist. It seems a little unfair that we have to spend dollars to hear a singer and not fifty dollars to offer a thinker.

During our college years we are really enjoying our best cultural opportunities and it is at this time that we should be exposed to as many broadening experiences as possible. This is the time that we should be learning to comprehend contemporary thought and action, so that later we will know how to take advantage of the privileges accumulated us for knowledge in our home towns. In this age of radio we need to learn to enjoy good speakers as much as we need to learn the value of good magazines.

Even if the whole student body does not attend the lecture en masse we will feel that a full lecture series program is integral part of the college curriculum. Henry Adams, in the introduction of Henry's book, said that he would rather speak to 500 who are interested than to a mob who are just there, and we think that most lecturers and listeners agree.

It seems to us a question of college honor that our program be the best we can offer, for this is one of the ways in which our institutional personality is expressed. It keeps us from being provincial and it does a great part to make the student a different and more cosmopolitan person. And that is just to which she has been exposed.

More About Rosebuds

Last week the Flambeau carried an editorial suggesting the initiation of a dating bureau on this campus. Since that time Mrs. Harold Richards, wife of Dr. Harold F. Richards and editor of the Mortar Board quarterly, has given the Flambeau some information about dating bureaus that really worked on other college campuses. According to Mrs. Richards, a dating bureau has been established at Purdue and has been found very successful. Registration on the university campus "Tis for all students, blondes and brunettes, Greeks and Independents, ags, engineers, and home ecers, to give you opportunity to meet more and different interesting personalities of the opposite sex. This is our own special version of date bureau, initiated because we feel that the custom of meeting dates through pals has been lacking on the campus for a long time, and that most anyone's ego is boosted from time to time by true appreciation."

This is not the deaf post, neither is it blind, for it sees all, hears all, knows all! It will listen to the lonely hearts, look over, and select the right date for you. We hope that you will like it, and will become an enthusiastic adunt it as your own! Here the registrations—read them, and meet us at the Hitching Post.

1. The Hitching Post will be open in Royal hall Wednesday, November 1, from 3:30 P. M. to 6:00 P. M. for registration. For week-end dates, Men will be asked questions about the type of date they prefer and the evening or occasion for which they desire a date, which aid in the selection of just the right date for them, and similar information will be solicited from girls who register.

2. Those registered return to the Post Thursday between 3:30 P. M and 6:00 P. M to learn the name and phone number of the man he's explained to telephone the girl, introducing himself and setting a time for the engagement

3. Anyone who does not keep an engagement is automatically ineligible for further consideration.

May We Add Our Name?

According to the last NSFA reporter, the suspension of the college newspaper at New Mexico college of Agriculture and Mechanics for comment in collegiate circles. The Campus News, 20-year-old college newspaper, was suspended by Dean Fabian Garcia, "who refuses to comply with regulations of the college administration by publishing the names of the students in the Honor Roll" before submitting them to the administration for approval.

A faculty committee has been set up by Dean Corwin to which plans may be submitted for campus wide parties. Proposed social plans meet with the following six points: 1. The paper must submit its constitution to the dean of students, as well as the by-laws of the organization. Any changes in these must be submitted to the dean of students for approval. (2) Each social event must be submitted to the same office and at the close of the year a full financial report must be made out for the dean. (3) Charges for the social events of the paper must be audited in the bursar's office. (4) Funds must be requisitioned through the dean of students. (5) Social events must end with the dean of students a report of the year's work when she leaves office. (6) Names of nominees for officers, representatives to editorial, reportorial, or business staffs, and all other students connected with the publication of the paper must be submitted to the office of dean of students.

The Reporter says these provisions, as it is obvious, provide for virtual control of the newspaper through choice of officers and editorial policy. The editor of the article says government on that campus students favored the granting of powers to a campus news investigative committee, which would submit its plans and present them for the administration's approval. Executive head of the student government association sent a request to Dean Corwin asking for student representation on the faculty committee considering the plans for a new paper and received the reply that students would be interviewed on the basis.

Student council members at Rutgers, which placed itself as unanimously opposed to the suspension, said that the suspension constitutes a serious infringement of the rights of free press, a cherished and fundamental principle. As long as any administration member can disapprove of a nomination, the council believes, the faculty administration member is exercising a control over the future policy of the newspaper and a controlled press has resulted."

Comments upholding this stand have been published in the college papers of Princeton, New York university, Rutgers, and Vassar. And to this list we would like to add the name of the student newspaper of Florida State college for women.

Of The World

By MARY CELESTE HARDEE

Reports from Sweden indicate that German forces are battling down the Norwegian Alps and even threatening to drive them back to the sea. The Nazis have now linked Oslo to Trondheim through their sledge-hammer drive. Meanwhile, the Reuters office said to have fallen as the Germans bolstered with their tanks, artillery, and airplanes. If this is so, the Nazis have killed Haakon indeed yesterday as Nord Fjord have evidently been too late. Strong British forces are also reported to have must have been trapped between Steren and the northward town of Gjodal. Prime Minister Chamberlain remained silent about the Norwegian situation, but he did say, "It would not be in the public interest" to make comment. Meanwhile British received the news of the Nazi drives calmly and expressed the hope that destruction will be the thing through.

It is true that the German forces have connected Oslo with Trondheim, they will be able to dominate southern Norway which juts out into the North sea toward Scotland and the British naval base at Scarn Flow. This also lets them have an excellent base for flying bases supplies and men from Denmark and Oslo by airplane means at least a partial command of the Skagerrak and the Kattegat. Oslo, the seat of the Nazi headquarters, was bombed by the British yesterday, the first time since killing many and ruining a British destroyer. A large area of the city was set afire by the British air attack was intended to cripple Nazi operations. Meanwhile, depending for a victory on her air force, the Biltzkrieg tactics against the Norwegians and Norwegian troops left so-called Trojan horse within the Norwegian defenses which will appear this week to be successful.

However, there are several clouds on Hitler's otherwise bright horizon. First, there is reason to fear that Norwegian troops struck cautionary blow at the Nazi invaders by the Nazis and occupied two towns left by the invaders. It is not yet known whether this perhaps the Germans had voluntarily left Lillestrom and Kjeller in order more manpower to the struggle against the Allies in the Lake Mjosa-Steren zone. The British war office announced that the Allies had taken Lillestrom and Kjeller in the Narvik area and were closing down on Trondheim. Meanwhile Royal Air Force bombers have also been busy attacking German airports in Norway and Denmark, where the British say they have destroyed 100 enemy planes.

Although the past week seemingly dark for the Allies in Norway current successes and reverses cannot be decisive, as a long battle is anticipated. Even in midsummer Mr. Churchill plans to hold several thousand Norwegian troops into action, and Hitler will probably do the same thing.

The Nazis have also curtailed his invasion of Norway by certain developments which will be favorable for the war in Scandinavia on Germany and the Allies' side. On grounds that the Allies had begun to spread the war to the north of April 4 when the British laid German invasion of April 9 had been prepared for months, the Nazis have won a base of battle. Here von Rundstedt, commander of the Nazi flank of the document, declared that Norway had planned with the the Allies to "rob the Nordic Scandinavian from those which they could conquer." Germany, many thinks, however, accord-

Or Forever Hold Your Peace . .

Maybe I'm a little old-fashioned or occasionally but I say why have things if you're not going to use them.

Now we do use our study signs but for some reason they apparently don't do much good. I'm not advocating the abandonment of study signs but they just don't do what they were intended to do.

Of course everyone knows the minimum amount of time that one has exactly one hour to study for an exam, who puts up her study sign, and studies exactly that number minutes when the girl down the hall pounds on the door pounds on the door. This keeps up until the girl before the study sign is given up and finally rests. Come on in. After a few interruptions like this the desired study period has been accomplished.

Then study signs are getting to be a joke on campus. They seem to do no good whatsoever when it comes to privacy, no time to really concentrate on our studies. Girls are beginning to get the idea that study signs are just a formal notice that a box from home has just arrived, or a test has to be taken, or you are mad at everyone in general and wish to live in seclusion. Therefore, everyone is beginning to trespass on forbidden land.

I know that there are some of us who wish that we could do a little bit of private cramming on exams; so if the students would only be considerate enough to let you STUDY, grades, gals, forever and all would be a lot better off.

After having had the experience of appearing before judiciary, I can say with authority suggest a change in the hours for judiciary. Why not Monday night?

It is indeed unfortunate that some provision cannot be made for judiciary other than the regular court, too, for that matter; may be that the court meeting Monday night we met at 9 o'clock in the evening. I was called as witness at about 1:45 Wednesday morning and released at 2:45.

Presumably court is held at night so that it will not interfere with the regular pursuits of students. Actually students lose more time than they would otherwise for many have to go to the infirmary to recover from simple physical and mental exhaustion. In this case I know of four girls who went to the infirmary; one of them stayed all day. It is probable that no more classes

Collegiate Comebacks

Joke quiet so you'll recognize it as such!

Old Lady: "Little Boy, you shouldn't kick your little sister around in the gutter like that."

L. B. "Aw shucks. It won't hurt her. She's dead anyhow."

Not that we think the above is particularly funny—but it oughta appeal to the G'ville sense of humor.

Some questionable statistics tell us that in a typical year the average girl wastes—burns down 125 dates; receive five declarations of tender sentiments, and be the object of 500 kisses.

We hope the above statement doesn't hurt your ego as much as it did ours when we first read it.

We can't remember the meter to the poem we remember from our high school days but after looking out of West Landis windows on weekends recently we have decided it has to be said so—

My dress is of sossamer, shining and sheer
And given to me from heaven to the waist.
My parasol's ruffled and dainty and dear,
And each cur on my head is encased.

Oh, mother, I've waited so long for this day,
And hoped that they let me out.
Of the May.
Oh, and get out my rain coat of the mackintosh sort
For tomorrow is Saturday, of course it will rain.

The Kentucky Kernel expresses some of the sentiments on the subject of men's failings and we wholeheartedly join in the cry.

2 Their happy confidence in their conversational ability which leads them to be selecting the subject of whatever they're majoring in.

3. Their stammering confusion when they actually meet you, and they have that awful little wrenk hanging on their arm.

4. Their unconcealed disapproval when you reward their roommate with anything other than motherly affection. Double check's.

5 Their simply adorable habit of appearing at your door either half hour early or late, expecting you to entertain them while you finish the light of their presence

We have a feeling we're letting ourselves in for something—but what, we haven't figured out yet.

We knew that if we kept this column up long enough we'd write something constructive.

Here's a little humor :who should have had better things to do!! reading an article on "How to Study" by Dr. Paul Walter. He wanted to know, "are you reading this?" Carelessly omitting a sentence with a preposition!

"Oh," she said. "I'm wise You're not among those being one of the three hundred whose study habits are to be studied." remark being made in a smug manner.

We hope she sends us a wedding invitation.

"What," we

Three cheers to the seniors for their class spirit. They've promised to warble for us. We've noticed quite a number every week-end more lifeless voices in the singing. We always thought a little competition and such competition!—would be good for the G'ville playboys.

Contemporary Student Thought

The question, "If college students wrote our political platforms and elected our presidents would the quality be improved?" will be answered by delegates to three national student political conventions—Democratic, Republican, and Independent-Liberal—being held on the Westminster college campus at Fulton, Mo. this weekend.

More than 500 delegates from colleges and universities throughout the country are expected to have a say in selecting the students' choices for presidential and vice-presidential candidates. These conventions climax a series of addresses at Westminster college by nationally well known politicos—Postmaster General James A. Farley, Governor Lehman, Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, Paul V. McNutt, Senator Tafft, Governor Alf Landon of Kansas, Governor Stark of Missouri, Representative Martin—and reveals that here democracy will be at work. Students of America will be given the opportunity to show their interest in and understanding of current political issues and gain practice in political activities.

Student Suppression

Many students at John Hopkins university have recently been harassed and indignant at what they define as suppression of freedom of speech on the campus

Immediately after Dr. E. Blumberg, ex-Hopkins professor and secretary of the Maryland branch of the Communist party, finished his speech on "The Communist Approach;" he was arrested and later released because of a multitude of client grounds to legally hold him. Because the doors of Latrobe hall had been ordered locked by Dean W. Barry, almost 500 students had to wait. Inquiring Reporter . .

Would you attend more programs of the lecture series if there were more? Do you think that the lecture series fund should be spent toward getting more widely-known speakers, and, if necessary, raising the activity fee? In this way, would you attend more often?

Patty Holbert: I attend as many lecture series as I can, and I'm always interested in what I hear them as often as possible if more and better speakers should be appeared here. I believe that both the artist and lecture series should be emphasized if we are to have more.

Norma Pennoyer: If there were more lecture series programs provided I would attend them. I would attend them for I believe that they contribute much of value to our college as anything. If we had additional funds and could get more widely-known speakers I am sure that each program would have a better attendance. I am in favor of raising the activity fee.

Betty Ross Howe: If more lecture series were given I would attend them. I do believe our lecture series is well worth having a larger fund so that we might have more and better lectures. I have attended all of the lecture series this year and found them quite enjoyable. I would like to see more.

Martha Sue Medlin: Since I am not going to be here next year I cannot speak as strongly on this subject as students who will be here several years. Nevertheless, I have to say that more questions is a most emphatic "yes." I think that the activity fee our college pay is for more and better lectures. Along with such cultural attractions as excellent musicians, actresses, dancers and so on, we must have lectures to have a completely well-rounded program. There should be some revision in in a system which does not provide funds to obtain such a speaker and person as Stuart Chase when he was only a few hundred miles away.

Miriam Stucky: I have enjoyed immensely each and every lecture of the lecture series this year which I have attended. Some of the college should do everything in their power to obtain more speech artists for the students. Then it is up to us to take advantage of one of our student activity fund.

Frances Mashburn: Yes. I would attend more programs of the lecture series if there were more. I do think that more funds were spent for better-known speakers because that would mean better speakers.

Amanda Zewadski: A major part of the student body is listening to people who have something to say and think. I believe that by think that the students who are interested enough now in attending lectures, and there seem to be many, will be even more interested if more and better speakers are brought here. I am sure that each program would have a better attendance if we had a larger fund.

Martha Murphy: Although I don't attend the programs of the lecture series regularly, I think that it would be a very good thing to spend more money toward getting more widely-known speakers. I would be glad to pay more to attend more often.

Mary Ann Medlin: I would attend the lecture series programs if the speakers would talk on more personal subjects or on something special in which I am interested. I think more money would be well spent in bringing more good speakers to the campus.

Frances Rickland: I have not attended all of the lecture series.

President James Bryant Conant of Harvard reminds us of the ideals which Jefferson thought essential for our public education in the first article entitled "Education For A Classless Society" in the May Atlantic Monthly.

The United States was one of the first nations to establish a system of free public schools. Now we are more often reminded that "seems to be all but forgotten" the original and continuing element in the development of American education.

In his brief autobiographical sketch of himself, Jefferson has deemed it essential to a well-ordered republic to establish, at public expense, a system of education adapted to the varying capacities of children, and with the early years of the nineteenth century for the first time in history that the Jeffersonian traditions were steeped in the practice of the United States. However, these rationalizations were stepped over-estimated the role of reason in human affairs, especially in a period of reaction. The original ideals of Jefferson are:

"I venture to look forward to a time when the benefits of the first element of the Jeffersonian traditions in education, that dealing with the early years, will be nearly universally optimistic about the seemingly early of opportunity.

President Conant hopes for the evolution of a less stratified society, a more solid society. Our erected system of public education has profoundly affected the social dream. More boys and girls have the privilege to attend what was in Jefferson's day a select few academies. Doctors, lawyers and ministers are not alone in positions to which commission declared that considering the preceding campus of Jefferson's day, it is hard to allow Kunze to address the students.

According to the editorial in the John Hopkins "News-Letter," Dean Brown directly threatened to bar the editor of the college newspaper from the campus if any of the aforesaid events were prominently displayed. The editor therefore reframed, and the freedom of expression was thoroughly suppressed in the next issue of the newspaper by the stiff criticism

Picknicking, Floundering and Flambeau Activities For This Year

Climaxing another year of newspaper publication, the Flambeau Flounderers will again assemble Hashlights, gas, food, and other picnicking equipment for their annual flounder party which this afternoon at Wakulla beach. The old and new Flambeau staffs, sophomore journalism students, junior and senior journalism students are invited.

Following a custom established some years ago, the hopeful flounderers will meet here at 4 o'clock and prepare and eat a meal supper on the beach, before under-taking the exciting process of floundering. The fish are speared with short steel tines fastened to long poles called "rigs," and are discovered in shallow water by flashlights which reflect in the fishes' eyes. The flounderer follows in the water and does seeing the fish "lets him have it."

For the fish caught during the event of the catch has been very small, but this year predictions say it will be much larger. Refreshments are caught, they will, by tradition be cooked to the second journalists at a banquet given by Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Bruce Saturday night at their home.

Accompanying the flounderers were Mr. J. A. Vance, Mary Ruth Bell, Dr. W. M. Barrows, Dr. Edward Conradi, and Mrs. Margaret C. Bistoi.

Italian Club Has Banquet Honoring New Officers

Honoring their newly elected officers, the Italian Club gave a formal banquet following an Italian table talk, Monday evening at the campus and am in favor of speedy election of officers. I think it does not take away funds from some project which is just as important.

Welda Christie If there were interesting, worthwhile speakers on campus I would attend the lecture series. I think the students would prefer to hear them than they do now. I enjoy hearing lecturers when they are well-trained enough so that they don't have to read their speeches.

Lelia Watrous: I think that it is very worthwhile for us to have well-known speakers on our campus. Of course, I don't know just how much is spent for this now, but I do think that funds spent in such a way would be well spent. Many of us make special effort to hear the well-known speakers and would enjoy hearing more of them.

Peggy Curry: In the two years I have been here our lecture series programs have been very good. I thought I would attend more if we had them probably but from where would the additional funds come? From the Student Activity Fee or from a higher fee? I do think speakers attract a greater audience than politicians on this campus.

Mary Henry: I would like to have fewer but better speakers on this campus. I don't believe the majority of students have the time to attend many lectures but they would be inclined to make it a point to attend if the speakers were more widely known. I think that the lecture series should be given greater publicity. Also everyone should know when the speaker is coming.

Margie Hinck: I have not attended all of the lecture series programs because I have not had the time to do so. For my part, I am definitely in favor of having more speakers, but more widely-known speakers. Students will find the time for widely-known speakers who they think have something of real value to say to them. Spend the money for the best speakers we can possibly get if it does not take away funds for something more important.

Marty Mattox: Indeed I would if have enjoyed the lecturers we have had this year very much and I'm sorry I missed those who were given so little publicity that they escaped my attention.

Nancy Kulp: I certainly would, by our going and supporting this cause we could get some more prominent speakers. It would indeed be worth our while. I know that this year we could have had Stuart Chase, who was in Orlando, if it had been financially possible, so we should do our best to aid financially and otherwise, in order that we may secure the cream of the lecturing crop.

Helen Milam: The school budget provides us with the Artist Series which spends a great deal every year to develop and further our appreciation of art and music. Why should the development of the mind be neglected?

would be missed in the long run if trials could be held in the daytime.

Naturally members of the court as well as defendants and witnesses suffer from the effects of staying up until such hours. I think that it is enough for members of judiciary to give their services to the college without their having to endure the hardships of staying up so late in a cold damp room. Moreover, they cannot do their best work while under the strain of fatigue.

In Wednesday night's case the witnesses and girls on trial had an opportunity to be down on the floor and sleep a little, but their judges had not. Does this not appear as giving an unfair advantage to the defendants in a case?

COFFEES AND SENIOR FAREWELL PARTIES LEAD SOCIAL EVENTS FOR FIRST OF MAY

With the end of school in sight, the month of May spells considerable activity in the social world. Open house, coffees, a supper, senior farewell ceremony, and a "track meet" party combine to form the last-minute social functions before exams.

The Chi Omegas and Phi Mus are holding informal open house at their respective houses tomorrow afternoon. The Chi O's will be receiving guests from 2 to 5 and the Phi Mus from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Chi Omega members also plan to honor their graduating seniors with a farewell banquet Wednesday night at the Cherokee hotel. A Hawaiian theme will be carried out in the decorations.

Last Wednesday night at 7:30 the Kappa house entertained their patrons and patronesses with an after-dinner coffee. Martha Bostwick was chairman for the occasion. Spring flowers composed the decorations. Kappa patrons and patronesses present were Miss Sadie Young, Dr. Pearl Stevenson, Miss Louise Richardson, Miss Mary Elizabeth Johnson, Miss Mary Elizabeth Johnson, Jester and Mrs. Roy Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Elliot, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bostwick, and Miss Florence Tyson; faculty adviser.

A Saturday night supper for members and dates will take place in the K.D. house. Jimmy Lee Fain, chairman, is assisted by Lillian Sample and Betty Evans.

From 5:30 to 6:30 at the Zeta Tau Alpha house last Wednesday, a "track meet" party took place for members, guests, and rushees.

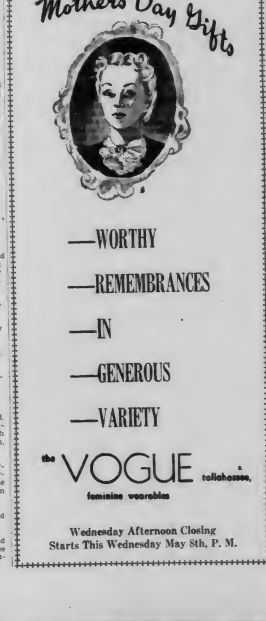
Oil cloth pennants were the favors and the invitations were in the form of track meet tickets. Entertainment consisted of the javelin throw, hurdles, 50-yard dash, and the shot put. The girls participating in these games were divided into teams named Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and Dartmouth. Popcorn and pink lemonade were served as refreshments. Betty Capshman was the chairman.

On Sunday night the Z.T.A.'s will give an after-dinner coffee at 7 o'clock. Dr. Carmen Rogers will speak to the members on "Privacy." Betty Dumont is in charge of the coffee.

The graduating members of Pi Beta Phi will be honored in a senior farewell ceremony, Monday night, at 6 o'clock in the Pi Phi house. Following the ceremony the Kappa "pin shine" will be held. All members will dress in white.

The 13 senior Pi Phis are: Mary Ann Bowden, Jackie Buchanan, Mabel Bennett, Minnis Dembis, Janet Jewett, Mary Alice Lefler, Jean Miller, Betty Post, Martha Robbins, Lucille Gleason Mary Taylor Barrow, Betty Tharpe, and Betsy Venable.

Open house will be held for friends and rushees Saturday afternoon by the members of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority. Plans have been made for a banquet honoring the graduating seniors Monday, to be held at the Floridan hotel. Members who are graduating are Betty Lindsay, Marion Grenall, Betty Graves, Betty Nicholson, and Dot Parker. Edna Sue Henry, Margaret Barker and Cecil Andrus are in charge of plans for the banquet.



The members and pledges of Alpha Chi Delta are having an end-of-doors picnic lunch Saturday. They also plan to entertain friends and rushees at a tea to be given Saturday afternoon.

Alpha Chi Omega sisters are honoring their pledges with a supper at the chapter house Wednesday night.

Delta Zeta is giving a party for its pledge members Saturday night. Invited are friends and alumnae from town.

Beta Phi Alpha will entertain members and rushees with an after-dinner coffee Sunday evening.

Summer Distaff To Appear Soon

Issue Will Inaugurate Changes In Content And Appearance

The last issue of the Distaff for this session will make its appearance May 16 This issue, the first published by the new staff, will feature several new features. The cover will carry a photograph representing the bronzheaver's motto, "Manuscript or Career." Articles will be printed on enhanced paper instead of the stock which has been formerly used. Illustrations will be done by art students under the direction of Frances Cushing, art editor.

The feature of the issue will be a symposium of articles by seniors entitled, "A Senior Clears Her Conscience." This will contain "Confessions of a White Ribbon Bally" by Dorothy Lou Collins; "Les Miserables, Feminine Style," by Muryl Roland; and "I Hate Good Girls" by Anne Towns.

Feature articles will be "Man of the World" a character sketch by Polly Douglas and "Marion-ette" by Anne Gaylord. Other articles are "Back Seats Is Blind," by Marguerite Diaz; "Training—Or Education" by Carolyn Collins; "Cash and Colors" by Bertha Bloodworth; and "Credit: Three Hours" by Margaret Robertson. "The Fear Part," by Charlotte Bell John, is the story for this issue. Poems are "Sonnet" by Dorothy Miller; "Letters" by Clyde Bailey; "De-vils," by Mimi McGowan; "In Time of Pain" by Bertha Bloodworth; and "Lessons in Love" by Edith Williams. In addition to these poems there will be a page of cinquains by several members of the contemporary poetry class.

"People On These Pages," a monthly feature, will be written by Marguerite Diaz. Another regular, "All Wool," will contain a group of essays: "Rain in the Philippines" by Mary May Patchall; "Women of Youth" by Lily Berger; "Of Elections" by Carrie Marshall; and a poem by Marion Goldman, "Scarlet."

The book reviews will be written by Lorraine Leedy, Frances McClure and Mary Meade Marx. Annie Hersey essay on "The Bride of San Luis Rey" by Thornton Wilder will be included as well as a drama review by Mimi McGowan. Two enchanted poems from the Florida Review, University of Florida publication will be included.

The reguiar staff now includes two new members: Edith Williams as staff photographer and Betty Curnes as exchange editor.

Exchange To Take Books May 22, 24

As a service to the student body, the YWCA will again open its book exchange May 22-24 for those wishing to turn in textbooks to be sold next fall.

The book exchange will be ready to receive books from 1:30 to 4:30 on these afternoons in the Y room on the top floor of the Westcott building. Students are requested to write their names, addresses and prices to be asked on a slip of paper and insert it in the front of each book.

No books will be sold until September. During the summer months the books will be stored in moth-proof boxes and carefully accounted for. Doris Jackson, in charge of the exchange this year, urges all students to take advantage of this opportunity to save time, effort, and money.

ing to the German foreign minister, had maintained strict neutrality. At the same time Hitler declared that Germany was at war with Norway. This was characteristic of German propaganda to throw the blame on the Allies. Hitler has shown time after time that he can "prove" that every war movement is brought about by the Allies. On this score he has certain accused the Germans of 'deliberate perversion of the truth.' The truth of the matter seems to be that several days before the Norwegian invasion, the Allied intelligence services discovered that Germany was planning for the middle of May the invasion of Norway, the invasion of Holland, the occupation of Greece by Mussolini, and an attack on the Maginot line. It was probably planned at the meeting of Mussolini and Hitler at the Brenner Pass that the Allies learned of this and they started checking the conditions in Norway and began to fire the pro-Nazi government officials. Germany discovered that the Allies knew their plans and so invaded Norway immediately.

During the 1939-40 semester at Pennsylvania State College, student failures were proportionately 17 times greater among those who had been "hell-raiders" in high school than among those who had their high school elmates.

Faculty Exhibits Receive Ribbons

Eight Awards Given For Various Art Works

At the art exhibit held by Tallahassee women on Sunday and Monday a number of the faculty received honor for the works presented by them.

Among those receiving prizes were the following: Blue ribbons in fine arts were awarded Dr. Walter R. Davies, director of orchestra, for his art on landscape. Miss Elizabeth Kurr, of the botany department, received a blue ribbon, for his still life in photography.

Mr. Henry F Becker, professor of geography, received a ribbon for his series of photograph on Mexico.

Mr Robert Miller, professor of philosophy and religion received an award for his 12 outdoor photographs.

Miss Elisabeth Lynn, of the physics department received honorable mention for her photograph of the long leaf pine.

Student Housing Tour Is Planned

Study of Nation Will Be Made This Summer

A unique opportunity for students to combine a survey of American public housing developments with a month's sightseeing vacation is provided in the All-American public housing study tour to be taken from July 15 to August 15 this year.

This non-profit educational service, the fifth sponsored by the National Public Housing conference, will cover eleven states and the District of Columbia on a "great circle route" extending from New York, southward to Texas, west to California and back norththrough the Rockies and the Midwest.

In each of the thirteen cities visited conferences will be held with the local housing authority, enabling the students to obtain a clear picture of the needs and accomplishments of the community. Projects, both completed and under construction in urban and rural areas, will be inspected under the guidance of officials and the four members will have the advantage of travelling with architects, builders and other experts in the housing field.

Participation in this survey tour should be of particular value to students who have vocational interest in housing or related fields of endeavor. A field trip such as this would prove of great value as background for the future engineer, architect, planning worker or builder or social worker.

But the month will not be entirely devoted to study. Ample time for sightseeing is allowed and the tour includes many of the nation's most interesting cities and famous beauty spots. The tourists will see the New York World's Fair and the Golden Gate International Exposition in San Francisco, as each of which a day will be spent, two days will give ample opportunity to see the nation's Capital, the planned town of Norris and the Tennessee Valley Authority project will be visited.

The tour will include Atlanta New Orleans and San Antonio and the Alamo. Three full days will be spent in the Texas metropolitan capital, Los Angeles, from which California's beaches will be visited and a barbecue luncheon will be given on the Palos Verde Estate.

Yosemite, wold-renowned beauty spot, San Francisco, with its world's fair; Salt Lake City, the Mormon Temple and the lake, and Chicago, Metropolis of the middle west, will be seen n the homeward journey New York, the Pax, and all the other attractions of one of the country's greatest summer resorts is the final stop.

While it is desirable that the entire tour be taken from New York to New York, arrangements can be made for taking part of it. Tour information may be obtained by writing the National Public Housing Conference. 122 East 22nd Street New York City

Group of One-Act Plays Closes Speech Calendar

Announcement of three one-act plays scheduled for presentation on May 9 and 10 closes the calendar of plays produced by the speech department during the current school year. Heading the program of three plays is "Concise Account," written by Miss Janet R Smith, instructor in home economics, and directed by Miss Johnson. Completing the group is "Suds in the Mood Box," under the direction of Louise Usher, and "Blue Beads" directed by Jean Hankes.

"Concise Account" was first published in the 1939 Bowe-Peterson Yearbook of Short Plays.

Two performances will be given, a matinee at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and the evening presentation at 8:15 o'clock.

Old Mortar Board Has Final Party

Following secret initiation rites last Sunday at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Harold Richards, the old members of Mortar Board dismissed the new initiates and held their own final party of the year. Miss Helen Smith, editor of the Mortar Board Quarterly, entertained the group at an informal supper.

The twelve juniors tapped last week by the honor group and initiated Sunday include Mary Carr, president; Minnie Ratliff, vice president; Virginia Bahnson, Pat Brandt, Wilma Johns, Elizabeth Hodges, Nancy Mims, Martha Murphy, Betty Nickinson, Margaret Scott, and Cornelia Watson.

A number of Mortar Board alumnae witnessed the ceremony, including Mrs. Daisy Parker, class of '27; Miss Sidney Gray, class of '28 Miss Margaret Graham, class of '30; Miss Clarice Cowan, Miss Clara Guerry, music instructor here; Miss Edith Shornherst, instructor in botany here.

Mrs. Helen Goodyear, 1936 graduate member of the Tarchbearers, an honor society preceeding the Mortar Board on the campus, was also initiated Sunday.

Youth Hosteler Trips Spread Over America

Organization Extends Facilities Offered In Eleventh Year

(NSFA)—Now in its fifth year of organization the American Youth Hostels, Inc, with headquarters at Northfield, Massachusetts, is rapidly extending its facilities across country. In nine regional hostel leagues are sufficiently complete for students to travel by cycle, foot, horseback, or boat and see intimately the most picturesque countryside of their land.

At present hostel regions include each widely diversified places as the Green and White Mountains of Vermont and New Hampshire, the Connecticut River valley of the New England states, the Berkshires, down western Massachusetts to New York, a salt water loop through Rhode Island, and the Appalachian trails of Pennsylvania in the east. Detroit southward are such hostels along the Rhodedendron trail in West Virginia and through North Carolina's Smokies. Following the Great Lakes in a youth hostel circuit are chartered facilities in Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin. Other and western states sponsoring chains of hostels are Indiana, Iowa, and Missouri. In the far west loop hostel activity has centered around the Sierra Nevada, Washington's Puget Sound, and the Olympic Peninsula, region.

Altogether, the United States are 209 places for wanderers to be spent, two days at a give sample opportunity to see the nation's Capital, the planned town of Norris and the Tennessee Valley Authority project will be visited.

The tour will include Atlanta New Orleans and San Antonio and the Alamo. Three full days will be spent in the Texas metropolitan capital, Los Angeles, from which California's beaches will be visited and a barbecue luncheon will be given on the Palos Verde Estate.

Browsing Room Offers Student Variety of Reading Materials

Library Section Is Reserved For Pleasure And Enjoyment of Girl With Spare Moments

If you should browse through the Browsing Room, you might find "The Unashamed Confession of Men" on the table next to poetry by America's leading women poets. You might look upon curi into one of the low easy chairs and read chapters about the charmine men Or you might meander about the large room and see Homer's "Odessy" next to "Cai's Company" with "Twenty Years at Hull-House" beneath them. You could loll on a comfortable sofa and re-read "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" or decide between Ludwig's "Bismarck" and Hamilton on the shelf "Archy and Mehitabel."

The browsing room is arranged for the reading pleasure and enjoyment of the student with a spare afternoon. For in its eleventh year as a college convenience, the browsing room has grown from a small beginning of 125 books to something like 2800 books, contributed by the campus, on the second floor of the library, this institution of pleasure was planned when the library itself was built in 1924 and added to in 1928. However, it was in 1929 that the class of that year made the browsing room a reality by voting to leave their gift to the college $650 toward furnishing the room.

In the meantime, the first group of books was given for study to the Florida State College for Government association. 125 volumes was the initial collection which was soon added a lot of well worn light fiction once used by the Y. W. C. A. as a recreational library. When the browsing room was opened, the recreational library was discontinued.

Except for the shelving, which was built by the college, the browsing room has been completely furnished and supplied by students, faculty members and friends of the college. Among interested alumnae who have sent additions to the room is Miss Edith Everett Taylor, who gave the room its two upholstered works.

Besides books, there are in the browsing room, the latest issues of the Hobby magazine, College poems, Life, Time, Science book review section, and House and Garden. Although students cannot bring books or papers or pencils into this room, they may read anything that appeals to them for as long as they like. Since the browsing room was first removed from the Browsing room to the present site it has been a favorite.

Not only is the selection of books outstandingly original, but the furnishings furniture in this room for browsers has been made comfortable for it. When the room was built, the factories of Hunley and Carpen sent samples for the furniture to suit the room. Later they originated all the designs. The two unmodernistic comfortable pieces with no particular color scheme Footstools, chairs, and lamps under wood-laced lamps, are the essence of ease.

When books first were given to the browsing room there was no way of distinguishing them from those in the library. The committee, mentioned before, hit upon the plan of having a contest so that students could compete in drawing a book plate to be used in the front of all the browsers' books. The plate chosen was considered to be so distinctive that engraved it as being very good.

A boon to the browsing room came in 1930 when the Carnegie Corporation of New York became interested in the project and sent an inspector to investigate the possibilities of the plan. Shortly after the inspector's visit, the Carnegie donation gave $5,000 for books to be installed in the browsing room

With the gift on hand, a committee of students and faculty Hampshire, Dr. Donald Reid, was organized to select books. For two states, the Berkshires, down west- months the committee have been ern Massachusetts to New York, a salt water loop through Rhode Island, and the Appalachian trails of Pennsylvania in the east. Detroit southward are such hostels along the Rhodedendron trail in West Virginia and through North Carolina's Smokies. And So They Were Married!

Last June a dapper young University of Wisconsin alumnus of the class of 1924, back on the campus for reunion activities, looked into the Alumni Records office to inquire as to the present whereabouts of a certain former classmate. She—yes, it was a member of the opposite sex in whom he was interested—had been a pretty nice girl on the campus and he had dated her several times.

But the office know where she was living? Had she married? The office did and gave him all the vital information. She was not married, it so happened, and was living in a city not too distant from our hero's home.

Not long ago the Records office received a letter announcing forthcoming marriage of the pair with due thanks for the "cooperation" in bringing about the match.

Library Features Paintings, Music

Art and Music has been chosen as the subject of the library display for this month by Miss Annie Lee Yates, assistant librarian, who is in charge of the exhibit.

In the big center show case the Italian club has arranged a collection of paintings by Fra Angelico, an artist of the Florentine school. The Transfiguration, The Annunciation, The Coronation of the Virgin, The Resurrection, and Noli me tangere, are some of his paintings which are exhibited. In the smaller show case there are displayed paintings by Sandro Botticello, one of which is The Adoration of the Magi. There is also a small collection of Leonardo de Vinci's paintings.

In the small book case there is a collection of books pertaining to the history of art, collections of Florentine paintings and reproductions of famous painters. The big book case is filled with books for musically-minded students, among which are found such works as the History of American Music, The Paderewski Memoirs, and an autobiography of Madame Ehrmann-Heink

Campus Gets New Box

A mail box has been placed between Bryan and Reynolds halls for the convenience of the students. The mail will be taken up at the same hours as it is in the college post office.

Students Build Community Center

One hundred students in the industrial arts classes under the direction of Miss Sallie Williams are working on a community center. The buildings for the center are being constructed by the students of one class and the furniture for them is being built by another division. The work on this project, begun just a short while ago has not yet been completed.

One of the elementary classes in industrial arts under the direction of Miss Hazel Bernice Deets is at present concentrating mainly with enlarging small drawings upon a canvas and then painting them.

The class taking camp crafts is making sewing kits from a heavy hardboard material with designs on it. After the pattern is cut the kits are laced together. These sewing baskets when stained make fancy waste baskets for the girls' rooms.

Graduating Class Plants Oak Tree

Upholding a long - established tradition, seniors and sophomores planted a live oak tree in the quad north of Landis hall Tuesday night as a growing memorial to the graduating class of 1940.

Leaving Bryan at 10:30 o'clock, the class and sponsors marched with their white-clad sophomore sisters around the campus to the scene of the planting. Dr. Ralph Eyman, dean of the school of education, and Mary Ruth Schornherst, instructor in botany, spoke on the meaning of the ceremony, and then each color shoveled a spadeful of dirt on the tree while Fves songs were sung.

Sophomores were then asked to leave in order that the seniors could finish the remainder of the tradition in secret and will not be revealed at class day exercises

Speech Players Offer Dramas

Department To Present Faculty Member's Original Play

Three one-act plays will be presented this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock and tonight at 8:15 o'clock in the Augusta Conrad theatre by the speech department of the college.

"Concise Accounts," one of the plays to be presented at this time, was written by Miss Janet Kaltenbrun Smith, associate professor of clothing and textiles here. Possessing a wide background of the stage, Miss Smith has written, directed, and produced plays both as a teacher and professionally. Other plays by her consisted are "Blue Beads," and "Dusk, the Moon Boy," a fantasy by Ben F. Bussell.

Students appearing in "Concise Accounts" will be Sarah Lilley, Betty Cole, Margaret Blaine, Sarah Bryant, and Mary Small. Stage manager for the play will be Louise Clements. Director of the play will be Miss Emilie Carlson, a graduate student of speech.

Included in the cast of "Dusk the Moon Boy" will be Sara Duke Bryant, Lillian Usher, Georgia Askew, Anne Peacock, Joan Weaver, Betty Rose Scott, Anita Jaeckal, and Louise Usher. The stage director of the play will be Kathryn Marshall and the student director will be Louise Usher.

Jeanne Mankes will be student director for the Shaw play. The cast will include Mary Sue Daniel, Blake Wilson, Lucile Clements, and Lois Miller. Evelyn Cox will be stage manager, and Martha Jo Whitehurst will be in charge of the lights for all three of the plays.

Honorary Has Camp Trip

Gamma Sigma Epsilon, chemistry honorary, had its last meeting at Camp Flaschacow, Friday afternoon, in the form of a picnic. Swimming and boating were also enjoyed.

The faculty members attending were Dr. Ivey F. and Mrs. Lewis, Dr. Jennie Till, Miss Isabel McKinnell, and Dr. William Renfrow.

Freshman Week Plans Started For Next Fall

Orientation Program Will Be Similar To This Year's, Says Linn

Special Attention Given Day Students, Transfers

Freshman week and orientation next year will follow almost the same pattern as that of last fall, Elisabeth Linn, freshman adviser, announced today. The dormitories will be open on Sunday, September 8, for the freshmen and registration begins on Monday as usual.

Welcome to Be Given

Included in the program for the week are the formal welcome in the auditorium by the dean, the president's reception, the tea, and party on the same night that rush week begins, and all finishes on Friday at Camp Palstacowo.

Compulsory infirmary hours will be definitely scheduled early in the year.

Assembly tables in the dining hall will be divided according to the initials of students. Tables for students in the upperclassman dining hall, Sudduth, Mayflower and Betty Nicknacs are working on further plans for freshman tables at the present time.

Day Students Included

Day students will have compulsory seats in freshman class meetings and activities, and in informal dormitory group meetings.

Courses during the first quarter of the school year there will be presented in the conversation program to introduce freshman orientation to the upperclassmen. This period is to be adopted to instigate the interest and co-operation of the upperclassmen in the program of orientation.

Elisabeth Linn, freshman adviser, announced that all the counsellors passed their tests, and that the papers were very good as a whole.

Wainwright To Be French Club Head

Constitution Adopted At Recent Meeting

Officers of the French club for next year, elected at a meeting Friday, include Virginia Wainwright, president; Betty Kennedy, vice-president; Bertha Bond, secretary; and Helen Bennett, treasurer.

At this meeting members adopted a constitution for that organization. The accepted constitution was drawn up by a committee consisting of Virginia Wainwright, Betty Kennedy, Betty Kennedy, and Gloria Morrison. Booklets containing mimeographed copies of the constitution will be presented to the incoming members in the fall.

Plans were made for receiving the new students into the club next fall.

Included in the club's recent activities was the celebration of Mai May fete banquet given Saturday night at Leon Sunset Club. Favors and red, white, and blue May poles decorated the tables. Miss Bertha Bond was guest of the club, and about 29 members attended the dinner.

No Classes Meet Thursday

In order to give students more opportunity to study for examinations, there will be no classes next Thursday, Dr. Edward Conradi, president of the college, announced yesterday.

This privilege was granted by the executive council instead of examination week light extensions because it considered this a more good health especially imperative during that week.

Teachers are requested to be in their rooms during their class hours so that students may confer with them if they wish.

Doyle Explains Summer Credits

Hours Accepted Depend Upon Grade Average Session Before

In regard to doubts concerning the number of semester hours which will be counted for summer school credits, Dorothea Doyle, registrar, announces that students planning to attend for work done in other summer schools may not exceed the number of credit hours which they are eligible to take in the Florida State College summer school.

The ruling is that a student with a C or 1.5 average for her last semester at the state college will be credited for not more than six semester hours of work in one summer session, a 1.5 student seven hours; a 1.6 student eight hours, and a 1.7 student nine hours. Students attending two sessions of summer school will be limited number of credit hours for the second session by their grade average for the first in the same manner. Those taking more than six hours in the first semester may continue to take the extra load if they maintain a B average.

This is a rule of Florida State institutions and is similar to rulings in other universities and colleges.

Transfer students will receive credit for their grades exactly as they come from other colleges to the registrar's office and will not be further reduced nor raised at any time. Quality points received are given only for work done while the student is here in residence. No one will be required to repeat work done at other schools in order to receive quality points for it. There are no exceptions to the last two statements.

Committee Plans For Model Senate

Plans to increase the number of delegates attending the annual model senate convention in March were the topic of discussion at the first of three council meetings of this organization held on Rollins campus, New York, on May 4. Hilda Aligood, national secretary-treasurer, was in the charge of the southern division of the extensive meeting and will present the result of her investigation at the next council meeting in May. At this conference in December, invitations will be sent to the boys' schools elected.

Five colleges were represented at the meeting, Rollins, Florida, Georgetown university, Barnard, Williams, Princeton, and Florida State College for Women.

Group to Make New Religious Emphasis Plans

Committee Of 100 Meets To Discuss Revised Future Program

Religious Speakers Will Lead Four Convocations

The Religious Workers council has formed a committee of 100, representing all campus organizations, to attend an informal dinner in Reynolds dining hall tonight at 6:30 o'clock. Dr. Robert Miller of the department of philosophy and religion will introduce Dorothea Kloeppel, who will present the revised plans for religious emphasis activities next year. Discussion, criticism, revision, and adoption of the plans are scheduled.

Tentative Plan

The tentative plans to be submitted by the committee include a program to be pubished in the fall that will let special religious convocations to be held quarterly, preferably at night, with emphasis on religious discussion groups of interest to students. Each of these convocations to be followed by at least two discussion groups.

The theme of these programs will be "Religion in Life." Four of these will be scheduled, will be on September 24, Dr. William Hocking of Harvard University will speak on "Personal Religion." "Christianity and Religion in Marriage" will be the topic. "The Social Message of Religion" will be the subject on April 24, and "Religion in the Future," by Dorothea Kloeppel is the student chairman who will preside over the meeting of the first quarter of this school year. A new student chairman will be elected for the group each quarter. The chairman for the first quarter next year will be a representative of YWCA so that the recognition of the group will begin with the first program.

The list of the committee of 100 is to tie up the Youth Conference with its religious em-

Alfired Releases Historical Novel

Author Tells Story Of DeSoto Expedition

"Juan Ortiz: Gentleman of Seville" is the title of the recently completed novel by Dr. Mary Bethel Alfired, professor of English.

Set in the background of early Florida history deals with the travels of a young Spanish gentleman, companion with DeSoto's expedition in America.

Mrs. Alfirede, the first book she has attempted in the theme by delving through early Florida records for data. She would spend six or seven years in research, interviewing the native halves of Virginia, she was surprised and enchanted with Florida and its history. Especially was she caught particularly by vague references to Juan Ortiz, early Christian member of DeSoto's band, and when one of the authors suggested that he would make an interesting book. Mrs. Alfirede decided to write it.

Published by Chapman and Grimes, the novel is expected to be released in the near future.

To Address Graduates

John Temple Graves II (left), newspaperman, author, and lecturer of Birmingham will speak to approximately 136 graduates at the commencement exercises Monday morning May 27 at 10 o'clock in the college auditorium. The most Reverend Patrick Barry (right) is scheduled to address the seniors at the baccalaureate service to be held at 11 o'clock in the college auditorium Sunday, May 26.

Brown Receives Classics Trophy

Cofer To Serve as Head Of Classical Group For Next Year

Donna Will Brown, who has a 2.1 average, was awarded the trophy given by the Classical club to the freshman member having the highest average for the year. The presentation was made by Dr. Olivia N. Dorman, dean of students, on Tuesday evening at the club meeting.

Officers elected at this meeting are Frances Cofer, president; Rozilu Kelton, vice-president; Helen Davis, secretary; Jeanne McDowall, treasurer; Virginia Hamilton and Mary Elizabeth Hollis, board chairmen; and Leanora Cohen, publicity.

Guests at this meeting were Miss Edith West, sponsor of the club, and a program on Roman May festivals and their modern day parallels were features of the meeting.

The club, whose theme for this year has been Roman festivals, has in its proposed plans for next year, the presentation of scenes from Latin plays, the translations of which are to be done by the members themselves.

Putnam Will Be New AAUP Head

Mrs. Maxine Putnam, instructor in education, will be installed as president of the American Association of University Women Tuesday night at the annual meeting of the organization at the college camp.

Other officers are Dr Carmen Royer, first vice-president; Miss Barbara Morehead, corresponding secretary; Miss Winifred Hansen, recording secretary; Miss Gladys Fawley, treasurer; Miss Marian Sutton, publicity; and Miss Catherine Denbaugh, board members.

Members will have a picnic supper at 6:30 after which Dr. Irene Bolek instructor in sociology will speak on Russia. Yearly reports of the committees will be given and the installation will take place.

Spirit of Exam Week Described As 'Madhouse'

Like Fire Drill Except It Isn't Funny Says Flambeau Reporter

By ELEANOR BILLINGS

Exam Week is kinda like a madhouse, wouldn't you say? With freshmen having hysterics, and people caressing their favorite lucky charms and dropping study-reading notes to dissolve. Exam week is black and blue — black for circles under people's eyes and blue like people's mammas when they get people's report cards. Ah, me!

Have you noticed that general exams are the morning after the organized exams? The freshmen enmass troop out to the Byrnes and Reynolds and Jennie Murphree, each with two sharpened pencils and seven (?!) on floor. It would be funny like a fire drill except it is such a serious business for the little ones. But if the outside of the dormitories looks like a steady stream from Stosh's ark, the inside looks like the last days of Pompeii. Panic has just stuck a stick into. There are a few reassuring upperclassmen, but everybody rushes from one room to another and the halls are full of the cries of '43 bumping into each other, crying or fuming or putting on a little bravado. Of course there's nothing like having your five hour course and your hygiene exams on the same day.

The only really nice thing about those days last weeks is POCO, and we are congratulating ourselves that nobody at our table knows enough "Zoo" to ruin the effect of Miss Tracy's careful planning when the girl in green spots one there as a guest. Imagine treating yourself to a delectable sausage while the vast majority languish on the insides of earthworms. Usually that sort of thing hurts only one's feet, but the type that begins to worry you is the silent grin type with the air of je-ne-sais-pas-quoi-dis-ais.

But the Sweet Shop—now that's the place! To read the signs about how bad your term paper was and how much rest to be the favorite evasion of the Honor Code this exam week. Or to pick up a tip on how the next day's exam is going to be.

"I think you're generalizing. I'm probably broke a lot more than I should, but I'm not a miser."

Another.

"How about the girls who work their way through school?" I pointed out. The way one reasons with a child.

"Do they do that?" my friend open-mindedly inquired.

"Certainly," was my truculent reply.

Evidently he wasn't convinced. "Aw—what have they got that girls can't?"

"Oh—office work—typing and stuff."

"Sho-nuff?"

The tinge of sarcasm in his voice infuriated me, but a sniff of disdain was the only satisfaction I gave him. He was not so easily silenced, however, and only a moment elapsed before his lamming voice again inflamed my roaring temperament.

"What you gonna do when you get out of college—be a WPA teacher?"

"I sincerely hope not," I managed to say.

"Ar-rish—what else can you do?"

Hating myself for laying myself open to new mockery, I was stung into confiding that I hoped to do magazine feature work.

"What kind of magazines? Life? Ye Western?"

Wearily I gave him a verbal list of such magazines as a Farmer-Stockman's Commentator. Forum, and Atlantic Monthly.

"Do they pay you a lot of money?" the catechism continued.

"I don't know," I said irritably.

"Huh?"

"Gonna get rich, huh?" this devil in uniform persisted.

"Oh, I doubt it." I said crossly. "But I'll make a living." Why did I let him make that chronic doubt of mine excite me? After all, he didn't know. I determined to let it seep cool.

"Ha!" he chortled. "Livin' in the land of dreams!"

51 Graduates Placed in Jobs For Next Year

Census Shows Increase Over Placements Of Last Year

Dietitians and Teachers Top List Of Positions

Almost three times as many seniors have been placed in fields other than teaching and further study than had been placed at this time last year. Compared with 13 for the class of 1939, there have been 27 placements so far this year. The increase in teaching placements is not as spectacular, with 14 placements this year to 11 last year.

Positions in which students have been placed cover a varied field with six to be employed as secretaries, nine at student-medical technicians; two as accountants; fourteen as dietitians; fourteen as teachers; in addition to the four having received fellowships to do further study.

Locations Vary Widely

Emory university, Radcliffe, and Vanderbilt university, are among the universities which will draw Florida State graduates. Others will be drawing in such leading cities throughout the country as Detroit, Mich., Chicago, New York, Richmond, Va., and Washington, D. C.

Those who received positions or will pursue further study are: Jane Alexander, Sarasota; Wakulla Lodge, Wakulla Springs, drawing society notes to direct; Exam week is black and blue — black for circles under people's eyes and blue like people's mammas when they get people's report cards. Ah, me!

Student Says There Are Some Things Seniors Should Never Be Told Before Graduation

By BERTHA BLOODWORTH

The psychology of the mentality of college life is the lowest mental depth to which I have ever had the misfortune to ordinarily sink. If there is ever a time when he or she needs to be treated tenderly, it is during that last horrible semester, when the world is waiting with lifted boot and there is no way to turn around and go back. Such a job is the deepest desire and topmost ideal of the weary psychologists and figurative crying on forever slamming in his face There are experiments which should be spared him during this delicate period; there is knowledge which should be given him gently and slowly, it at all.

I know all this because I am "It" —the last-semester college senior. And if, on commencement day, the speaker warns me that the world is harsh, I do not promise to take the warning calmly. I have already been told A tax driver told me.

It happened like this. I was going visiting recently out into the suburbs where little homes in Tallahassee that some people call Cleaver Heights, others call Pork Chop Hill and some people call other things. It is a long way out if you have no car) from the college gates, and I was faced with the necessity of finding a means of transportation other than my own locomotor appendages. Having in my possession one lone quarter and remembering the inspiration of Tallahassee cab fares, I thought it advisable to find the bus. I wanted one that would get me to my desired destination for the least amount of myself and my belongings. I phoned each of Tallahassee's three taxi stands. The first one said thirty cents, but I haggled with him and elicited a reluctant reduction to twenty-five. I bade him goodbye and called the other two, neither of whom would undersell, even in response to my most appealing Southern drawl. So I told the last one to send a driver on—neglecting, I am afraid, to retain the so far carefully maintained sweetness in my voice.

The driver came. Our encounter was momentous, for I was immediately informed me with no evidence of uncertainty that there was a taxi street in Tallahassee as the one to which I directed him to drive me. With as much dignity as I could summon when I stepped into the taxi, I disagreed with him. It was a dead-lock, until I belatedly recalled that at one time in the past the street had possessed another name. When I mentioned this fact to light, we reached a somewhat disgruntled accord for a time, because he had to admit I was right, and I, while feeling somewhat triumphant, felt also in an inferior sort of way, that he should have known this simple fact all along. After all, in his position—I

But even this allayed peace was doomed to swift extinction. For no sooner had he started toward the disputed street than he made a sinister remark to the effect that I would be lucky to get out of it still with a single quarter clutched in my hand, experienced the horrible feeling that I was getting the price on me. Anxious to stave off such disaster I stepped into the driver's seat to admit with cool self-possession that it was a trifle too far to walk in dress shoes, so I hardly far enough to warrant a charge of two-bits—being cost for taxi fare. His reply was a disparaging look at my dress shoes, accompanied by mutterings less distinct. Curiosity impelled me to inquire politely as to what he had said, if anything. The subsequent conversation, as it recorded itself upon my soft and impressionable brain, is as follows:

"You college girls!—grumble, grumble—quarter don't mean no more to you than it does to a—mutter, grumble — millionaire — mumble, grumble—going to college—mutter, mutter—don't know what a quarter is—"

Students Visit Mexican Sights

American Student Union To Sponsor Foreign Tour During July

A group of students from all over United States interested in becoming acquainted with the fundamental struggles, institutions and problems of the Mexican people and their institutions, will tour Mexico after the national elections in July. This is the fifth successive tour of foreign travel conducted by the American Student Union.

The tour will visit oil fields, agricultural centers, fishing villages, Indian towns, Spanish refugee camps, the great metropolis of Mexico City and famous Mexican landmarks.

The group will meet famous Mexican artists, writers and students or folklore as well as student and youth leaders who fought in the struggles to achieve national independence and democracy under Presidential Candidate Mexico's experiments in cooperative farming, and worker managed railroads, as well as educational institutions will be visited.

William D. Todd, Swarthmore '25, executive secretary of the A.S.U. declared, "The Atlantic Monthly will act as leader when the group leaves New York July 10. They will return to New York August 29. The Open Road, which has administered and promoted international and international field trips for fifteen years, will administer the trip, in cooperation with Dr. Eneida Fox, one of Mexico's leading citizens. Miss Dorothy Brenner, an American resident in Mexico and a committee of government officials and intellectual leaders, headed by the Minister of Education.

Among the places the student will visit during their trip are the mining fields around San Luis Potosi, Mexico City, newer centers of modern Mexico, the national shrine at Guadalupe, the famous silver shops of Taxco, the ancient Spanish primary school at Tepotzlan, the fishing village and market of Xochimilco, the National Agricultural School in Chapingo and the "Hidden" convent of Puebla which operated behind blind walls in violation of the Reform Laws until exposed by the government.

Total cost of the trip, exclusive of incidentals, is $325. Complete details of the itinerary and any desired information, as well as registration blanks, may be obtained from the American Student Union, National Office, 112 Broadway in New York City, or William H D Hood, Jr., Student Union, 1505 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Liddell And Miller Go To Conference

Professors Are To Speak At Religious Meeting

Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell and Dr. Robert Miller of the department of philosophy and religion plan to attend the first annual convention of the newly formed Southern Association for the Philosophy of Religion. The meeting will be held at Blue Ridge college in North Carolina June 22-26.

At the conference Dr. Liddell will speak on "The Objectives of the Teaching of Religion in the Colleges." The subject of Dr. Miller's address will be "Clarification of Issues in Philosophy of Religion. With a View to Developing a Program of Thought on Parity With Other Disciplines."

Among the members of the sub-committee on teaching religion and philosophy of religion are Dr. Liddell and Miss Julia Gehan, Episcopal student secretary for this campus.

Dr. Liddell was elected president of the Florida Religious association at a meeting held at Southern College in Lakeland last week. Both Dr. Liddell and Dr. Miller attended this conference.

Signs Foretell Vacation Time

Dark glasses and pink shoulders peeping over arcade walls peel. Bermudas, and a few Dorothy Lamour tans convey the thoughts of Floridians' minds as they are planning for the summer and the prospect of glamorizing the home fires. Talent's great quantity of hair has been whacked off to fit the summer mood. In other words PEFCW lassies seem to be preparing for the swimming pool times during their vacations.

All over the campus there is the feeling that is found in the rush hour on a subway in Times Square. Students are hurrying to write term papers, finish parallel reading, complete several note-books, and make up work. Besides the addition of this extra work, there is the little item of getting up run-down correspondence that was neglected many months ago in the remembrance of Now with the thought of returning home, the hope of contact with eligible "men" seems frighetning. After a year at school, a college girl becomes the "forgotten woman," while the high school girl occupies the throne of the stag-line.

The optimistic majority of students seems to have forgotten that there is a small matter of semester exams coming up in less than a week. A survey of the library, however, gives ample proof that there are those who are spending time in preparing not only for finals, but for the work that is necessary, too.

The dining room is noticeably empty at meal times lately, due to girls who are striving to regain their wish-like figures that are so carelessly destroyed during winter months past fall. "1-2-3-4" can be heard from dormitory windows from morning on into the night. Those who haven't the willpower to miss a meal but have enough to resort to exercise.

Church Council To Install 39

Student Says Some Things Seniors Should Never Be Told Before Graduation

Pfc. Lee words came into my mind, but did not issue from my lips. I managed myself mute by uttered other mocking phrases like "land of dreams" and laughed the fiendish laugh. I was a little confused as to how this thing started, but I promised myself I'd see it through.

"What makes you think I can't make a living?" I asked coldly.

A new outburst of laughter. "Listen," he said. "I've been through the mill, I don't reckon I'm any older than you are but I've been nearly everywhere in the world and I've seen a lot. Just what he'd seen all of it still a little mysterious to me "There ain't no way to get a job."

Desperately I argued with him —just as if there were some point to it. What business did he have spoiling my life at my very beginning like this? Why couldn't I get a job?

"Look," he said. "there ain't no use in raisin' false hopes. That's why I'm telling you the truth. Now, bein' a woman, you might get a job if you handle e man the right way."

This instruction not only shocked me, but also embarrassed me so I sat back in silence and despair during the rest of the ride, while the driver's agile mind continued to wink at me and relate various experiences of his in foreign lands, where he had passed any number of things.

At last we were there. I reached for my purse and paid him—sans money, sans hope, and sans youth. The driver swayed as he had spoken. Life As It Is had been revealed to me.

"Is it true that this I came to college?" I asked myself, and echo answered, "Yes, you have thrown off that wise young taxi driver who had never been inside a college gate except to pick up passengers.

Alumnae Association Welcomes Seniors

The Alumnae association gladly welcomes you as members and is anxious that each become life members as soon as you can. We are proud of your college record and realize how strong we will be when your alumnae class is added to us. What a grand goal it would be if your class joined 100 %!

I hope that you will help furnish our new and beautiful Student-Alumnae building. Mrs. Frank Moor will continue to serve as building chairman and will be very happy to receive any donation you may be able to make. Join her "March of Dollars" and let us have the building furnished as that your first visit back to your Alma Mater will find it ready for you to enjoy fully when you return next year for the Alumnae conference. The programs are interesting and educational and seeing friends is a real pleasure. We want you and need you to help us have a real occasion.

May this Commencement Day be for you a beginning of a life full of health, prosperity and happiness.

Congratulations and best wishes from the Alumnae association to each of you.

Cordially,
Gracie P. Ashmore,
President
Alumnae Association.

Rose Will Conduct Nutrition Classes

Dr. Mary Swartz Rose, professor of nutrition at Columbia university and international authority on that subject, will be visiting professor for several short courses in home economics at Florida State College for Women during the first three weeks of the first summer session of school. Big Women On Campus Make Plans for Their Vacation Days

North Carolina Trips Rank as First Choice; Staying Home, Working, and Touring Follow

Add one day-long blue sky to a taste of warm May weather. Mix well and garnish with sun bathers. Bake in a hot class room and you will find the finished product to be a well-seasoned concoction of summer plans.

The BWOC's "Big Women on Campus" experience the call of the mountains, seashore, and a job along with the rest of the student body. North Carolina ranks as the most favored choice, while staying at home, working uncertainly, a summer school, beaches, New York City, and camps follow one another in decreasing preference.

The present and outgoing executives of C. G. A. expressed their summer desires as follows: Mary Cherry, Adam steps right out into the world at next bell for fortune on June 3 with an office position in the Florida National Savings and Loan association. Cornelia Watson, '40-41 C. G. A. head, will enjoy a month of life-to-the-country which will be followed by months as secretary-instructor at Camp Mt. Mitchell in Burnsville, N. C. Another executive Cornelia will continue her Flamingo style of living at the beach for physical fitness. This will be done in connection with her honors work.

Marjorie Jessup, ex-judiciary chairman, went to work at the New York World's fair. Carolyn Mims will work in her daddy's office, since, cook in Tarpon Springs. Beach. Former first vice-president Martha Murphy will stay at home in Miami and keep house. Mart Pierson will attend the first session of summer school at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Former treasurer Dell Elsie Maude Jones will act as counselor at Camp Juliet Lowe in Cloudmont, Ga.

Lynette Thompson will be at F. S. C. W. for the first session of summer school. Afterwards she will remain at home in Crestview. The new treasurer, Beryl Mitchell, hopes to "learn to draw" and go to New York. Freshman Sue Chaires, '40-41 C. G. A. secretary, insists she really has no definite plans except to stay home in Old Town and perhaps visit in Bradenton and Tampa.

Dorothea Kloeppel is looking forward to doing secretarial work in the promotion department of the George Washington hotel. She begins work in the middle of June, but a week in New Orleans will precede this. Trips to the beach are also included in her plans. Elizabeth Linn, present freshman advisor, will stay at home in Ft Myers and then journey up to Detroit to visit her aunt.

The former and the new class presidents and other campus officers have also sketched their summer sallies. Elisabeth Ann Webb, outgoing senior class president, expects to go "Job hunting." Pat Brandt, incoming president, will work for six weeks in a doctor's office, go to the North Carolina mountains, and play. Ann Jones, former class president, and present senior representative to Senate, will work in Miami and tend the Chi Omega convention at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and will also touch the soil of North Carolina.

Grace Hall will lista trip to Hendersonville, N. C., in June to be followed by one to Miami and then full stenographic work in Jacksonville. Mary Ellen Andrews will go to the beach. Jean Hitchcock, a Spiroga and past chief executive of the freshman will attend F. S. C. W. summer school at White Sulphur Springs, and then go to Daytona Beach to work toward working on a newspaper and wants to announce "does anyone know of a position?"

Ex-Flambeau editor, Jeannette Mullis, will hunt a job and write letters. She is also hoping to attend the National Alpha Chi Alpha convention to be held in Miami during June. Margaret Ann Bell, present editor, will be at home. Daytona Beach as a counselor at Camp Juliet Lowe in Cloudmont, Ga.

Lynette Thompson will be at F. S. C. W. for the first session of summer school. Afterwards she will remain at home in Crestview. The new treasurer, Beryl Mitchell, hopes to "learn to draw" and go to New York. Freshman Sue Chaires, '40-41 C. G. Limited Cuts Are Fe In Most Colleges

HAVERFORD, Pa. (ACP)—Although colleges and universities regulations vary in length complexity, the general trend in most is to make the subject unexcused class absences increasingly a discretionary matter between students and officials of the institution.

This is the finding of Harford College's Dean H. Tad Brown in questionnaires returned by 16 institutions.

Academic standing of the student largely determines the degree to which he will be accorded freedom, Brown reports. Honor students as he sees fit.

In this respect, half of the institutions answering the questionnaire—Bowdoin, Wesleyan, Williams, Dartmouth, Lafayette, Lehigh, and Smith—grant special privileges regarding absences to students in honor groups, as does the so-called Dean's List or Honor Roll system.

The remaining seven institutions exempt students doing honor work or have it up to the professor to determine whether or not a member of his class is imposing undue advantage standing by the rules to attend lectures.

Some of the colleges or universities apply the principle even more severely, however, grants the student an unlimited cut allowance.

Freshmen in order to qualify for a Dean's list are usually required to attain grade higher than those demanded of upperclassmen, Cutting classes immediately preceding and following a vacation without a valid excuse is forbidden by all 16 institutions. Penalties range from lowered grades to loss of standing in the course.

Monkeyshines? No, Goatshines

Initiation This Weekend Ends F Club Hazing

Solema faces peering above upsidedown, "Fs", veiled hats, and hoods and grim countenances thresholds were noticeable characteristics of F Club goating this week. Following a week of extensive goating, the prospective members will attend the final rites both formal and informal, on Saturday and Sunday at Camp Flastacowo.

Wednesday was the day for the hoods and veiled females. Thursday while Thursday the F-Club progresses dressed in hats with veils gloves, stockings, and carried handbags and suitcases. On Thursday night the goats entertained the members by singing F-Club songs. They were hanged in the dining room tonight, members requested their goats to wear evening dresses, oxfords, anklets, and horns in their hair.

At 1:30 p.m. tomorrow the goats will be seen preparing to ride in another further initiation will be held. There the goats will be required to ride a goat song, read an original "ode" to F-Club and a last will and testament and to perform a stunt of designated object. Holy smoke, look for to see something to happen, midnight madness, the last and the "Scarish Hour" are among the suggestions for wearing apparel to be worn tomorrow by goats.

Also during the F-Club's stay at camp an assistant secretary is to be elected, and publicity and social chairmen will be appointed from among the new initiates. Wednesday is the time for formal ceremony and the new members will be received by the old ones at a chicken dinner Saturday.

Brenelle Mobley, F-Club vice-president, is chairman of the goating and is in charge of goats as "goat mother." Nancy White is in charge of the hoods.

The goats are Peggy Barker, Elsie Baughn, Floread Brown, Elsie Bryan, Sara Bell Cawthon, Ford, Marian Prindley, Amelia Gordy, Louise Hall, Gwendolyn Harper, Betsy Rose Howe, Myrtle Lesque, Alice Ludlum, Helen Mitchell, Bernadine Mobley, Nolan, Nadee Overcash, Edna Patrick, Stella Valenti, Ellen Sagowe, Marian Webster, and Hazel Wilkerson.

Montgomery's Birthday Celebrated at Final Meeting of Year

The Physical Education association celebrated the birthday of Miss Katherine Montgomery, director of physical education, at the last meeting of the school year held on Tuesday night of this week, Marion Preeling, who is succeeding Margaret Clements as president of the organization was in charge of the program for the evening.

The program was one of participation interest to persons interested in sports. The Spaulding Sports Goods company's representative for the section presented two motion pictures one which showed the actual making of a basketball, and a second which showed the diamond ball ball in the making. A third picture which aroused interest was the first showing of living pictures made of several selections presented recently by the Physical education women's modern dance group under the direction miss Nelle Scott Dickinson, instructor in modern dance. Thrush the Sarband, As You Like It, and Drum Interlude were all shown. the favorite of the group seemed to a group of the dance techniques which showed Miss Dickinson in a light, colored costume surrounded by odd students in dark outfits.

After the films were over the men who accompanied the pictures gave a demonstration of the professional technique of diamondball basketball golf and a new type of basketball.

After the program and the demonstration the entire group went to the sweet shop where Miss Montgomery was presented with a present from the physical education majors. Ice cream and cake was served to all the party.

Evens Prove Victorious In Year's Struggle With Odds In Athletics

Evens Have Won in Four Sports; Odds, Three; Scores Are Very Close in Hard-Fought Games

When the total score of that celebrated, friendly feud between the Odd and Even teams is summed up there is a slight margin in favor of the Evens. The Odds won soccer, tennis, and badminton and are now leading in basketball, while the Evens came out ahead in basketball volleyball, swimming, and hockey.

The sports year started with the big annual festivities of the Odd-Even basketball and volleyball games. These took place on Thanksgiving and were as much a part of the program as the turkeys. Excellent of the Flambeau for that week were 'Evens make clean sweep of both traditional Thanksgiving games played here Thursday.' The score in basketball was 27-16 Rich man's for the game was Bernice Walton Howe with Evens points. Next was Cornelia Watson playing for the Odds. Jean Wood, Even, was third best.

Volleyball found the Evens still winning. Despite the fine efforts of Captain Brunelle Mobley and Stella Valenti, the Odds lost the game 29-20. Each time the Odds sent the ball hurling over the net, the Evens' team of Lillian Anderson or Elizabeth Enard reached out and slammed it to their opponents' court Lillian was hurh man for the Evens club Howe was high scorer on the Odd team Captain of the Evens was Connie Adams.

Color rush also created a great deal of excitement and keen spirit when it took place on the morning of the Odd-Even games. The two student leaders Nancy White and Dot Parks ran for the honor of having their colors over the door of the gymnasium and Nancy won the race for the Odds. The cherished Wescott buildins was won by Jean Wood, Even, racing Margaret Clements, Odd. The final score was 4-3 in favor of the Odds.

Badminton was won by the Odds Five games were played in the finals by Evens Meta Helms, Paulette Nolan, and Mary Medlin and Odds Minnie Hatcliff, Betty Thomas, and Cornelia Watson.

Breaking a national intercollegiate swimming record the Evens won the Odd-Even contest in this sport. Jean Wood, Virginia and Ernestine Makemson, and Dot Parks set a new record by swimming the 100-yard free style relay in 56.4 seconds. High scorer of the contest was Jean Wood Irene Premd won the third medal for Even. Betty Dillon Ecker Odd, won the divins event, and Jean Wood won the back stroke for speed

Hockey and soccer games were split by the Odds and Evens with the Odds victorious in soccer and the Evens in hockey. Captain of the Odd soccer team was Nancy White and the Even team Betty Kitty Ford. Fay Corey captured Odd honors and Catherine Kirkpatrick Even.

Spirogira Goats Will Give Hayride Feeling Members

The badminton award went to Alpha Delta Pi for the second consecutive year and the volley ball award to the Day student's organization for the second time Delta Phi Sigma won the shuffleboard trophy, and Delta Delta Delta the swimming trophy

The winning organizations will keep the trophies until this time next year.

Odds Are Winners In Tennis Matches

Odd players walloped their way to victory in tennis last week by defeating the opposing Even players in singles games with the Evens taking one doubles and two singles matches.

Scores for the singles games were 6-2, 6-1 6-4, 6-2, 6-3, and 6-4 for the Odds and 7-5, 6-0, 6-2 and 8-6 for the Evens. Doubles scores were 6-2 and 6-1 for the Odds and 6-3 and 6-4 for the Evens.

Odd racquet-wielders were Lily Moore leader Hazing Hall Mary MacKintosh, Cornelia, Watson, Nancy Lee Doggett, and Marian Hendrix. Even players were Vernie Marchessai, leader, Mary Jane Medlin, Cecelia Harper, Penelope la Rua, Therese Sullivan, and Louise Crosby.

Mortar Board Selects Officers at Last Meeting

Mortar Board elected new officers Wednesday at a joint meeting of all old and new members. Those chosen were Vice-president, Virginia Balkcom, secretary Martha Murphy, treasurer, Pat Brandt; editor, Vivian Ahlwedt; historian, Betty Nickinson. During the course of the meeting members were read from the national president bidding farewell to the old members and congratulating the new.

Leonard Talks On Planning

Conservation Is Topic Of Technician's Address Here

Mr Raymond F. Leonard of Atlanta, senior planning technician of the national resources planning board staff, gave first hand information to students and faculty members concerning the construction of our human and physical resources in the Augusta Corradi theater last night.

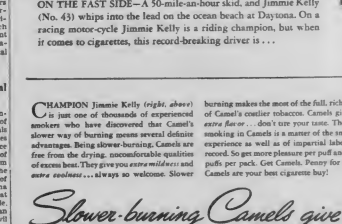
Introduced by Mr George O. Gross, executive secretary of the state planning board, Mr. Leonard spoke on "Planning." According to Mr Gross "the history of planning depends upon the interest of the general public, and he arranged the meeting in order that interested students who are to be the future leaders in the state may become more interested in the question of water conditions."

Mr. Leonard is making a statewide trip, and Tallahassee is one of the five cities on his speaking schedule.

He told the audience of the planning program in the U.S. This is according to Mr. Leonard, will spend 84 million dollars during the next year on projects of road and recreation centers, the reason for this expenditure is that New York officials have found it cheaper to institute planning system than to continue to suffer the costs caused by traffic congestion and lack of recreational centers for children and the aged, Mr Leonard stated.

The type of city planning we have now will determine the kind we will have five or ten years from now Mr. Leonard continued. Because we have had conditions planning now we can expect much worse conditions in the future, he explained.

He said further that if each person in a community would pay 36 cents a year, we could have a planned community with all necessary recreation facilities and other necessary facilities He added that the reason many people were opposed to planning was that they did not understand fully the benefits that would be derived.



In closing he said that all people really want a good playarea, large yards, and adequate parking space After these improvements are accomplished, we can to a planned future, he concluded.

Following the speech an open discussion was held.

"ON THE SLOW SIDE"—That's Jimmie Kelly's way—and the way of millions of other smokers—of saying that he prefers the slower-burning cigarette . . . Camel. "That's where the 'extras' are in cigarette pleasure and value," explains Jimmie (above).

CHAMPION Jimmie Kelly (right, above) is just one of thousands of experienced smokers who have discovered that Camel's slower way of burning means several definite advantages. Being slower-burning, Camels are free from the drying, uncomfortable qualities of excess heat. They give you extra mildness and extra coolness . . . always so welcome. Slower burning makes the most of the full, rich flavor of Camel's costlier tobaccos. Camels give you extra flavor . . . don't tire your taste. The extra smoking in Camels is a matter of the smokers experience as well as of impartial laboratory record. So get more pleasure per puff and more puffs per pack. Get Camels. Youth Takes the Vote

From now on until election day in November the atmosphere of this nation is going to term with politics. This last week with the state democratic primaries the ball started officially rolling, and with the national democratic and republican conventions in June and July respectively the battle will be in full force. For us college students, especially those who are voting for the first time this year, these activities should be of vast importance. This campus itself has several moves to acquaint the students with the political situation so that they will be better able to accept their responsibility as citizens during the next few months of grim complaining Tuesday about the long lines and the crowded conditions at the polls, there must have been a good representation from this school in the lines.

Miss Marian Irish's political science class is to be commended for the work which is presenting an unprejudiced state of candidates for last Tuesday's primaries. Miss Irish assigned a number of students to go to the polls, obtain information on the candidates running. The information was to cover age, extent and type of education, occupation, previous political experience, with a picture if possible, and was not to be partisan. The presidential elections were asked to have their wives pledged. This information was compiled and posted on the political science bulletin board with a note that those whose work not listed had been contacted but did not submit the material. A sample ballot and an explanation of the system of voting was also posted to obtain information on the candidates running. The project was planned because the ballot was so long that no one could be intelligently informed on all the candidates without impartial information. This project with other class studies, forums of political groups and the participation of our college in the recent Model Senate are most valuable aids in the education of intelligent voters.

All over the country colleges are using different methods to help the students make intelligent decisions. At Westminster College in Fulton, Mo., more than 500 delegates from colleges throughout the country met last weekend to debate their choices for presidential and vice-presidential candidates. Democratic, Republican, and Independent Liberal national student conventions are planned and a number of prominent politicians, including Postmaster General Farley, John D. M Hamilton, Wayne Coy, Alfred M. Landon, and Senator Robert A. Taft participating. Westminster gymnasiums and auditoriums became centers where halls competed in decorating flags, public address systems, gallery, and speakers.

Western Maryland college is planning another inter-collegiate student political student conference during their week Republican election to be held with nearby colleges participating, including Hood college and Maryland college for women. According to Nancy Reporter, perhaps the oldest of these model political conventions is that which takes place on the campus at Oberlin college in Ohio. Early in the century students organized this activity which has continued regularly throughout the years. Sigma Delta Chi, the professional journalism fraternity, and Delta Sigma Rho, forensics fraternity, are planning a mock political convention at the University of Minnesota this month.

Many polls will be taken this summer to find out how the students in general feel about possible candidates. At present, a survey by the Student Opinion Survey of America shows the two leading candidates as Thomas E. Dewey and Franklin D. Roosevelt, with the third place a tie between Taft, Farley, Garner, Vee, and Hull.

As the college students, fortunate among young people, we have a responsibility to take advantage of all opportunities offered to acquaint ourselves with the affairs of the nation. In this coming election there will be many watching to see if, as college women, we use our heads and not our emotions. Can we stand the scrutiny?

Is the System to Blame?

This time last week there was a feeling of disturbance and excitement on this campus that has hardly been equaled by any other student reaction this year. The cause of the disturbance was the judiciary case about which we all heard too much and knew so little. The farce, and it seems that it may rightly be called that, all began after judiciary met Wednesday and did not subside until the close session of the Saturday night. The case was given in convocation Tuesday, and seemed that the whole of the girls could, the members of judiciary, and the general student body with the feeling that they had been "thrown to the lions."

All over the campus there were tales circulating about the five girls who were finally asked to withdraw; there were more tales about the members of judiciary, and still others about certain administrative officers. It seems certain that such rumors as permeated the campus atmosphere during this trying time could certainly be nothing but detrimental to all those concerned. It is true that the present court system endeavors to protect the girl who is under suspicion, but the question that remains humming in our ears after the recent case is, "Does it?" What's the use, though, of all the heard the problems of the girls on judiciary were forced to ask ourselves just how much harm can this system do for the students, if our student court and to our effort toward real student government on this campus.

In what other country than the United States would any sort of court like the one held by the student judiciary here be tolerated by citizens of that community? In what other court in the United States could persons be indicted on the words of witnesses who failed to appear before the court for cross-examination because any practise is upheld outside the college gate is no justification, in itself, for its presence here. It is time that the entire campus should offer us a chance at working democracy by the use of it in the state as wide world. But who can see the democracy in a testimony of someone who can hide behind a screen, the decision of judiciary not protecting the witness, but doesn't the vice of this system lie in its virtue? How democratic is this protected relief that we are given? "the goods," should we be afraid to present it in the face of those we are accusing?

In what other court in the United States would such a long session at such hours as were kept during the investigations last week be called anything but a "third degree"? In the case last week it was certainly the third degree for the judiciary members as well as the defendants. It was said that the reason for keeping judiciary in session for such a long time was to keep the girls from talking to each other, and from talking to and from planning a defense. In what other court in the United States can the defendant not allowed to converse with his lawyer and plan his defense? According to our American ideal should "the system be on trial or the girls proved guilty" Could our present system not be the opposite of this?

Be it understood that we are not defending the girls in the case. Many feel that these students did a good deal to hamper the progress of such investigations by persistence on this campus than any group has for some time. Neither are we criticizing the present members of judiciary. We are merely questioning the instruments and systems that we as a student body have formulated in our constitution and hand them to therefore to fulfill. But are criticizing the system under which our campus organizations are functioning.

Carolyn Mims, chairman of judiciary, is indeed to be commended for her announcement of the case after many days of making the whole affair public and by attempting to give the students all the insight into the case that her position allowed. Her entire stand up she has certainly taken a step toward what we consider the right direction. After all the truly informed public is seldom the hysterical one.

Thanks for the Dead Day

Dr. Conradi's announcement yesterday of the decision of college council to dismiss classes Thursday afternoon, May 16, in time with the policy of many leading educational institutions, Fordham, Princeton, and Florida universities each now having recently of a week without classes before examinations, Princeton University and New York Times of April 28 announced that this study week coupled with the new policy of holding all final semester examinations in New York Times resulted in a substantial decrease in the number of students asked to withdraw from school for failures and a corresponding rise in the general grade average of the school.

Among the reasons given for this study week is the opportunity it affords students for a general organization of the semester's work. Through this organization haphazard examining is to a large extent avoided, and larger ramifications and relations are realized as well as facts learned. Moreover, the tutor system it is used to help develop individual responsibility and scholastic freedom.

When many students on this campus have regular classes presenting new material and then examinations until 4:30 of the day before they have two and sometimes three difficult examinations they have little opportunity to organize their study on a semester basis.

Students who have been lucky enough to have had examinations Thursday afternoon a few days grace at the beginning of the week have observed that a thorough review of a course is as valuable as any other aspect of the course. Teachers have also made this observation.

Thursday we shall all have such a chance to test this theory.

It seems to us that Dr. Conradi's announcement marks a great forward step toward the intellectual freedom and individual responsibility.

Of The World

Reports from the Netherlands early this morning said that the Dutch quartermaster general had announced German troops crossed the Netherlands Frontier at 3 a. m. (9 p. m. EST). At the same time Germany announced that she was taking the Netherlands and Belgium under protective custody and was moving with all her forces to forestall an "immediate" British-French thrust through the two countries toward the rich Reich of the Ruhr.

* * * *

Allied Troops Leave Norway

In the four weeks beginning with Germany's lightning attack on Norway, the Allied forces landed in the Scandinavian country and withdrew. Only in the distant northern province of Narvik, Allied operations still continue. Their chance in Norway of the Scandinavian country is that of the German Swastika. The small Allied forces broke out of the German bombing planes that attacked them by the parachutists and blew up bases and communications, the Allies were unable to land reinforcements, heavy artillery and tanks. In the face of the attack from the air and the landing, the Allied forces were withdrawn. As the forces withdrew, German planes inflicted more damage by bombing a destroyer, sinking the Allied destroyers, which were bearing the returning forces back to England.

Effect On England . . .

The withdrawal of England from Norway shook the foundation of Chamberlain's government. The Prime Minister has already added this defeat to a long list of set-backs which have greeted the Munich conference. Debate in the House of Commons has been a "tirade against the lack of confidence in Chamberlain's plans, and was a vote of no confidence of a slight majority of 81 in the House of Commons received by a national government of a two to four issue. Chamberlain has lost the confidence of the British people that he will not be allowed to remain in power much longer. He was saved this time from defeat primarily by the magic name of Winston Churchill, and by a defense by saying that the German air superiority would be met by sometime to come and would hamper Allied movements. It is understood that the general staffs had informed Chamberlain that the general staffs had informed Chamberlain that the general staffs had informed Chamberlain that the only hope of salvation for many in war would seize the Scandinavian territory, yet nothing could be done about it. The opposition to the Chamberlain government will be augmented by the fleet Sir Roger John Brownrigg Rev when he said that the Allied defeat in Norway will be because the admiralty rebuffed his plans. Lloyd George also made a devastating attack on the Chamberlain government in which he called upon Chamberlain to resign because Germany is going to win every turn, both during peace and in war.

What Next? . . .

When the Allied fleet withdrew from Narvik, it left the Norwegian waters; obviously the Allied forces in Norway could not be withdrawn. It is decided that the time has come to act. Perhaps Il Duce thinks he can bring a Nazi victory to Europe by the Allies have little hope of success, and Pope Pius XII received the Crown Prince Humbert and Queen Premier Reynaud and President Roosevelt to prevent Italy from entering the war on Nazi side. After Crown Prince Hubert's visit to the Vatican, announcement on "questions of interest to the army zone which he commands." This gave political significance to the conference of the royalty with the Pope.

All European nations this week grew more wary as they realized that the Allies were retreating from Norway. The Low countries fear a similar attack by Germany;

Or Forever Hold Your Peace . . .

In a general meeting of judiciary and the student body, the case announced Tuesday in convocation, performance was asked to withdraw from the college for none of the girls answered negative. The reasons given by the girls were not opposed to the action.

JUDICIARY

Last week the girls in the case which was announced in convocation Tuesday, were asked to withdraw would like to volunteer a word to the student body.

We would like to thank every girl on this campus for the courtesy and sympathy shown us during a trying time. We appreciate more than any gesture of friendship and trust displayed to us last week. We will always feel that the lessons we have learned valuable in that one respect.

Immediately after announcement in convocation we had no objection to the student body having access to the facts, but we did not give permission for our names given out. The reasons our names did not appear on the paper signed by two other are: we explained to the executive committee last Sunday that we were willing to withdraw and express ourselves clearly to the student body. We also said then that the facts as written by someone else and not examined by us until ready for our signatures did not express our attitudes, feelings, or personal reactions to the matter.

If we have harmed the school or you members of the student body, will you accept our heartfelt apologies?

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK

Contemporary Student Thought

In a national poll recently completed by the Student Opinion Survey of America, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Thomas E. Dewey are the leading candidates for the U. S. presidency in November. The surveys have been conducted with the cooperation of various undergraduate papers. To the question, "Which party would you favor in the national elections next November?" 47 per cent of the interviewers chose Democratic and 39 per cent Republican. Seven per cent voted for other parties and seven per cent were undecided.

Cross-tabulating the ballots geographically, it was found that New England, East Central, Pacific and the Far West place Roosevelt in the lead. Mountain and West Central states select Dewey ranks Dewey and F. D. R. in the second among students who had no party preference. John N Garner appeared fourth in student support, even though he is one of the most popular men on the file voters. Paul V. McNutt, who led in a survey last May, was reduced to ninth, even behind Socialist Norman Thomas.

Students at Texas State College have again taken up their annual lamenting in reward to the absence on the campus of any course dealing directly with marriage education. A student poll taken on the campus last year revealed that 82 per cent of the student expressed the need such a course Last week a student opinion poll revealed that 90 per cent of the present senior class expect to be married by 1942. If not sooner. Two other statements are that other nation-wide surveys indicate that three out of

Inquiring Reporter . . .

Fifty-three percent of the girls interviewed by your inquiring reporter seemed to favor the idea of a dating bureau for PSCW. However, 23% were decidedly against it, and 25% were very doubtful as to its possible success on this campus.

The girls were asked what they thought of a dating bureau for this campus and whether they would patronize it. The answers were varied.

Helen Emmanuel: The idea of a dating bureau sounds like a good idea to me. We girls at least it would be interesting to see what kind of dates we'd have with bands and else clubs."

Ann Gay: "I think having a dating bureau sounds too much like a matrimonial bureau to me. If the rumored statistics are true that "300 out of 500 Tally girls expect to be married by 1942 it would be a state of singleness," such an organization would be necessary. But it was a result of a state of panic created by Collegiate Comeback: Marriage is the aim, but not the inevitable.

Mary Vocelle: I think the dating bureau would be a good idea because some of us have such a hard time getting dates. I'm tired of "lone" if those Navy men would come.

Kathryn Camp: Sure. It's a cute idea. Everybody is.

Winifred Shine: A swell idea! But I haven't time for men in my life.

Cryse Daily: Do you mean local talent, G'Ville, or what? Could be a good idea if the whole thing were made to function successfully. How would the males feel about it? I'd sorta hate to get stuck with a lemon until high flash, and I'd surely sympathize with any male unfortunate enough to draw me from the list. Should prove interesting though. On second thought, I'm all for it—the only way I could get a date!

Mabel Hinck WONDERFUL IDEA!!!

Genevieve Hammac: It wouldn't do any good. We only have a certain number of dates a quarter and I wouldn't waste mine.

Jane Patterson Yes. It's a good chance to meet boys—new boys I'd patronize it.

Madge Overcash: Heck, no. I wouldn't patronize it! I think my dates are a wild shot to-and-fro affair. I'm for that. And secondly, there would be cheapening of prices. I should think Whisler dating would be cheaper, quicker and haphazard to me—but then I'm prejudiced. I would like to drip or something. Anyhow, I'm sure it would be a safer and more dignified level.

Betty Monahan: I don't think a dating bureau would work. It may be practical but I think other girls would be disappointed as I do. Dates can be found a dating bureau seems so mercenary.

Mary Thrasher: It would no doubt work for the minority, but the rest of us like to date. Most students of PSCW would rather meet men-friends individually and by the means of mutual friends.

Myrtle Sanders: A dating bureau for the majority I do not believe is satisfactory. There must be other ways of meeting boys and girls. I would not patronize it.

Lucy Roumillat: I don't exactly like the idea of blind dates, especially when no one knows the boy either. I don't think the dating bureau would go over in such a big way.

Maureen Thomas: It would be all right if we knew who the boys would be I think we would hesitate to put our names in a dat-

Magazine Jottings . . .

By MARLINE DALE

Waldo Frank writes against United States isolation in his article "Our Quilt in Peace" in the current issue of the New Republic. "Fortress America" must be a statement of a vision which always has existed. Nevertheless, I hope that the attempt at this may be fertile. I was always aware that men knew more than they know they know; that a good deal of our knowledge is the construction of our inertia, existence and wish," he states.

We Americans are little more than conceit and our complacence: our isolation. But what is this isolation? Is it not that our counts on now is that before it is too late we Americans may see that we love one thing better: our survival. Frank's thesis is "The war, from which we dream to immunize ourselves, is but a symptom of a breakdown of the modern state. Our roots are in the past and whose flower of life or of death is our future we share. The trend of both the sympathetic war and of the deeper revolutionary process is pressive. Fascist, because the universal inherent power in life eliminates the vitalities of men.

The revolution is not merely of a basically the form of the old conditions of social-economic life which have been so long and so barred or twisted by social relational order. It is more than that. The revolution is of man, the organisms as a whole. It is a process which is rooted in all society since the followers of Jesus and Saint Paul injected the virulent liquor of their vision into the slave-status world of Rome. Its purpose is, in the last analysis, to mean the liquidation of the modern state, of modern society since the Renaissance and the Reformation.

The Western world has a religious faith which is not an exaggerous role with that once played by decadent scholastics a reasoning religion. The religion of ours is nameless and shrink from its name. Middle class and bourgeois, sin, God. Every great religion used to be premised on myths that embodied the creative intuition of the race and of the whole man. In the race how the modern religion and the social religion of Christ are fused.

Frank's article is brilliantly intracted, eloquently deplored the lack of a religious religion in Europe. Week after week, year after year, our best intellectuals unwind the long thread of their self, with, not a glance at the causes of these humiliating conditions, but a hint that we share the results.

Fascism gained steady ground in Europe because of its positive forces there. "The reader must not assume that I am a soft foreshortening of, this paper, that I am unaware of the cunning, the brutality, the unscrupulous, the hysterical, in Fascism. As a great mass movement it organizes on refeebled bodies. Fascism attacks and batters for social organisms whose creative forces and human consciousness is poor and receives them of the strength it resist.

The war in Europe can come to my good end. If it destroys Fascism, Fascism wins, chaos wins. If Germany holds on till there is a mental rupt, a dilated Fascism and chaos will prevail for a generation, we will have come to the choice to help avert the tragedy of the west. Franklin Roosevelt will be remembered as the president with the worst foreign policy.

Madge Overcash, Hecq, no, I wouldn't patronize it! I think my dates are a wild shot to-and-fro affair. I'm for that. And secondly, there would be cheapening of prices. Seniors Shine At Last Convocation

Dr. Conradi Addresses Students on Talent

The graduating class of 1940 furnished talent for the last convocation of the year Tuesday afternoon. Elizabeth Anne Webb, president of the class, started the formal, impressive cap and gown procession. Dr. Conradi welcomed, president of the class, who spoke on talent.

Following Dr. Conradi's speech, Elizabeth Anne read the last will and testament of the graduating senior class, and Julia Rosser gave the traditional "farewell."

A skit, written and directed by Sondra Ella Hunter and Betty Jane Jacot, was presented by Senior Hall. Dot Townsend was the author of this stupendous production. As a fitting conclusion to the skit, all Senior Hall members sang "Auld Lang Syne" and the "Wandering Breeze."

Because no Senior class talent show could be complete without her, Florence "Clarabelle" Gragg gave a skit on humorous rules at other American colleges, interspersed with appropriate quips about our own school.

Miller To Speak At Last Vespers

Future Plans Announced For YWCA Members

Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock Dr. Robert Miller will be guest speaker at the last vesper service of the year. Miss Westcott announcement will be given on May 12.

A recognition service for all new members of the Young Women's Christian Association held last night marked the beginning of two weeks of emphasis on attention in YWCA activities until the close of the school year. In the afternoon preceding the services, old and new members enjoyed a picnic supper, the last for which were made by Betsy McMichael, Mary Lou Tremaine, and the second president. will begin her active work this summer by attending the Blue Ridge meeting of YWCA members in North Carolina.

Plans for next year include the Big-Little-Sister party on September 29, which will be held with this college with the YWCA cabinet of the University of Florida. This will take place October 12 at Lake Bradford's pavilion and dinner and book exchanges will again be part of the activities for the 1940-41 school years.

Music Department Plans Convention

Summer plans of the music department include an All Florida Night on June 12, as a highlight of the week's meeting, organization of the American Guild of Organists which will be held on June 12 and 13 in Atlanta, Georgia. At that time the Georgia Federation, Miss Margaret Whitney Dow, associate professor of organ music, and Florida State College, Miss Dow, organist and Evelyn Ann Doyle, Gulchrist.

Blanche Saul was unanimously elected as president of the Tallahassee campus committee by student senate.

YWCA To Open Another Book Exchange on May 22

The YWCA book exchange will be open in the Westcott building 1:30 - 4:30 o'clock, May 22-24, so that students may leave text books they w - have sold next fall.

Students are requested to place slips of paper with the price, and their name and address inside the books. No books will be sold until accepted by the buyer. Each summer the books will be stored in moth-proof boxes and carefully accounted for.

The YWCA urges all students to take advantage of this opportunity to save time and effort in selling their textbooks.

The City of Tallahassee is considered a mayor appointed by the President of the United States and a city council elected by the people.

Nancy A White is Elected Cotillion Club Treasurer

Nancy A. White was elected the new treasurer of Cotillion club on Tuesday, at the last meeting of the year. Mary Lou Atkinson resigned after appointment as chairman of the dance committee.

Amelia Gordy, former president of Cotillion Club, was presented with a gift of appreciation from Cotillion members at that time.

Newmans Install Officers Sunday

Springtime Theme Used By WAA Board Members At Annual Banquet

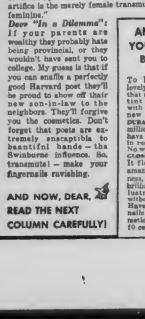
Sprinting with the theme of the annual WAA banquet which was held at the Wakulla Springs beach last Wednesday night, Betty Rice, retiring president of WAA, was the following toastmistress.

The program for the occasion was opened by a talk entitled "This Is Me" given by Betty Bassett and Jean Hitchcock. The next number was entitled "It's My Turn Now" in which time medals, engraved with the girl's name, her office held, sport, and date, were given to previous WAA officers.

Girls who won the awards are: Minnie Sailiff, Anna Frances McMullen, Mary Lou Tremaine, Jane Mobley, Florenz Brown, Martha Hopkins, Betty Rice, and Mary Marion Frisling.

Special guests invited to the banquet were Miss Katherine Montgomery, Miss Mary Settle, Miss Mary Gordon, Miss Frances Fox, Miss Rebecca Averill, and Miss Ruth Lloyd, all of the physical education department.

Mortar Board Entertains New Members with Coffee



New members of Mortar Board gave an after-dinner coffee at the Kappa Delta house Thursday night honoring active members. All honor guests were sent corsages representing gold and silver, the club's colors.

The present and former faculty advisers were invited and Dr. and Mrs. H. F. Richard.

The business meeting at 3:30 there will be a joint meeting of Mortar Board for the purpose of electing a new faculty officer and to hear and discuss plans to give helpful instruction to the new

Miss Hazel Bernice Deets, assistant professor of industrial arts, won second place with a book binding.

HOW TO WIN BOY-FRIENDS AND INFLUENCE STAG-LINES

By Dales Dorothy Clive

Dear Miss Clive: The instructor who teaches Poetry 3-A at our college is a wonderfully handsome young bachelor with a divine Harvard accent, who expresses beautiful thoughts. I've fallen in love with him though I sit in the front row, he doesn't even seem to know I'm in the room. My parents, who are wealthy but provincial, taught me never to use cosmetics, yet—I'm dieting today!—My boy friend's attitude is the merely fraternal one manifested into the ravishingly feminine." IN A DILEMMA

Dear "In a Dilemma": If your parents are wealthy they probably hate being provincial, so I wouldn't have sent you to college. But now that if you can smaffle a perfectly good Harvard prot they'll be proud to show off their new son-in-law to the neighbors. They'll forgive you the cosmetics. Don't forget that pouts are extremely unexciting to beautiful hands—the Swinburne influence. So, transmute!—make your fingernails ravishing.

AND HERE'S WHAT YOU CAN DO ABOUT BEAUTIFUL' NAILS

To have those lovely fingernails that are definitive! your nails! with the amazing new nail polish discovery, the gillions of women in recent months! No wonder—Dura-Gloss is different! It flows on with amazing smoothness, hardens to a brilliant gem-hard luster that lasts far longer; without tacking and chipping! Have the most beautiful fingernails in the world! At any cosmetic counter, buy DURA-GLOSS, 10 cents a bottle!

AND NOW, DEAR, READ THE NEXT COLUMN CAREFULLY!

SORORITIES CLIMAX YEAR OF ACTIVITIES WITH PARTIES AND FAREWELL BANQUETS

In observance of their Founders' day, the local chapter of Beta Phi Alpha will hold a formal banquet tonight at Wakulla lodge. Miss Betsy Mac Pervis will serve as toast-mistress at the occasion. A green and white theme in flowers and table decorations has been planned to lend a festive air.

At this time there will be presented to the outstanding member of the house the traveling plaque and a pledge service reward, a silver loving cup.

The Beta Phi's expect alumnae guests from Jacksonville, Pensacola, Atlanta, Tampa, and Lake Worth. Faculty and friends of the members will be entertained at a reception tomorrow afternoon at the chapter house from 4:30 until 6:30 o'clock.

Wednesday morning a special Founders' day service was held at breakfast at the house the breakfast arrangements were made by Betty Bassett.

Saturday afternoon the Try Dell backyard will be the scene of the rapid growth of the little infant to a college graduate Valentine girl when the Beta Phi's will be personified by the graduating members of the chapter. The party, in honor of the senior Try Delts, will end as a weiner roast. All members will be dressed as "kids."

The Alpha Gamma Delta chapter is wearing the sorority colors tomorrow in order to recognize the installation of the new Epsilon Delta chapter at the University of Texas in Austin, Texas. Last Wednesday afternoon the Alpha Gamma Delta's had open houses at an informal tea honoring faculty and friends.

The Alpha Delta, 26 national convention at the University of Georgia in Athens, Ga. will be attended by three delegates from the local chapter: Leota Kirkpatrick, Ann Lake, and Helen Ainley. The girls plan to be away next weekend.

Wednesday night the A. D. Pi's honored their graduating members with a banquet at the Floridan hotel. The theme of "P S C Convention" was carried out in clues and stunts. High point of the program occurred as the "PNC" at 8:30 until 8:30 o'clock appeared in a sophisticated woman with satin gown and orchids.

Guests present were Mrs. Margaret Campbell, faculty adviser, Miss Elizabeth Blanding, faculty adviser, and Mrs. Peterson, an A. D. Pi from Florida.

The Kappa Delta sorority plans to have its annual banquet on Saturday night at Cliff Dwellers. The banquet this year will be in honor of the two girls who are graduating from this sorority. They are Clifton and Martha Van Brunt, and Miss Rebecca Bowden Bolinger. Jean Webster, Carolyn Mitchell, Mary Jane Jeanette Litschgi, Harriet Kent, and Laverne Voss. May Hampton and Mary Kate Irvin are in charge of decorations, and Betty Evans and Tilda Brunt have in charge of the entertainment.

The annual Chi Omega banquet took place at the Cherokee hotel in Tallahassee Wednesday night at 6 o'clock. Presidents' Day was minutes of ceremonies. During the evening Fairfax Bates gave a reading.

The decorations were presented in a true Hawaiian style with the table covered with ti leaves with the club colors, of straw and carnival. Chapter advisers present and Nona McKeon were in charge of decorations.

Seniors of Pi Beta Phi were honored by a "cookie shine" and picnic supper at Wakulla Springs Monday night. At this time each senior made a request of an unmarried man, which was to be filled during the time specified by the senior. Such requests are traditional of this annual party.

Light Committee Asks Changes

Thirteen Members Meet Faculty Executive Council Friday

Headed by Sarah Worth, a student committee representing WSFA met with the faculty executive council last Friday at 4:30 o'clock in Dr. Edward Conradi's office, in order to discuss the recent light restriction.

During the one and a half hour meeting, the committee asked for three things: 1. Extended hours to 12:30 o'clock on both Friday and Saturday nights; 2. Reconsideration of the flexibility of the morning hours; and 3. One extra light cut per person a week. They explained that they realized life had to be regulated, and that they weren't averse to the building of good health habits, but that they would like the rule to be modified.

According to the student committee, since the passage of this ruling, few students have used their light cut privileges, so the third part of their petition would not be taken advantage of.

The faculty executive council is composed of Dr. Conradi, presidents; Dr. William Dodd, dean of the college of arts and sciences; Dr. Ralph Bynum, dean of the school of education; Dr. Margaret P. Sandels, dean of the school of home economics; Miss Ella Scoble Opperman, dean of the school of music; Dr. Orma N. Dorman, dean of students; Mr. Elmer D. Smith, secretary of the faculty; John G. Kellum, business manager; Dr. Elizabeth Gentile Andrews, director of personnel; and Mr. Simeon R. Doyle, registrar.

tune in because most girls like to know who they are going out with first I'll agin it!

Patty Talbert: A dating bureau is all right in its place but I don't believe FSCW is quite the place for it. It would be a means of getting acquainted but it puts the boy and girl concerned in rather awkward positions. Most girls would hesitate against being so obvious. I would be definitely against a dating bureau at FSCW.

Annie Shellhorse: Pretty good-ness!

Mary Isabel Thompson: Sounds good! I'd patronize it and HOW!!

Roberta Padrett: A dating bureau could be a good idea.

Virtue Ahlvieh: I doubt if I would patronize a dating bureau. I still have faith in my own ability in this line.

Sue Kelly: Thanks, but I'll go dateless.

Mary Lou Meyer: That's a good idea. In that way the girls can have more fun.

Marie Hampton: I think the dating bureau is a very good idea. There are lots of nice, attractive girls who would like to meet men but have no chance.

Bertha Bloodworth: I think a dating bureau must be desirable or there wouldn't be so much said about one. Evidently there is a group who would take advantage of the opportunities offered by such a bureau. Those who do not approve would not really be inconvenienced by its presence since (I assume) patronage would not be compulsory.

Georgiana Hamburger: I think a dating bureau would be a good idea if we could have some inkling of what we were getting. Pictures of the men would be a good idea.

Caroline Choate: If Miss Dempsey Creary, director of our Student-Alumnae building would operate with Mr Mathews, director of the Florida Union, in forming an introduction service for the benefit of Tally girls and Gville boys. It could be a good thing.

Margaret Heatin: I think it'd be nice because a lot of the girls don't know the G'ville boys, and this would provide a nice way for them to meet them.

Betsy Brady: It's a wonderful idea, but I don't think it would work First, we don't have the potential men; second, it would be a full time job which, for proper execution, should be financed by a paid employee; and third, Tallahassee doesn't offer enough dating facilities and recreations —places where we could go. In a large college town or in a co-ed school it would work much better.

Gene Parkhill and Emmett Curtis: We're all for it!

Carol Marshall: I think it's a wonderful idea. I know lots of girls who would like to know boys from Gainesville. It would be a trend towards co-education, too.

Barbara Mattison: I think it's wonderful. Just the thing for FSCW girls—give us a future.

Myra Rubin: Not bad, but what

Doubles To Get Diplomas

Two Sets of Twins Candidates For Graduation Here This Year

Music, Pre-Med, and Modern Language Are Major Studies of Rosser, Makemson Twins

The senior class at Florida State College for Women boasts two sets of twins who are candidates for graduation on May 27. They are the Rosser twins, Julia and Merryday, of Jacksonville, and the Makemson twins, Virginia and Ernestine, of Fort Lauderdale.

The Makemson twins are majoring in modern languages and expect to receive the bachelor of arts degree; while Julia Rosser is majors in public school music and violin and Merryday is a premedical student.

The two sets of twins are living on senior hall, the ruleless paradise for outstanding seniors. Although the Makemsons are living together for their fourth consecutive year at college, this is the Rossers' first year together, and as they put it, they are "getting know each other again."

Since music is her major, Julia's activities have been centered in that field. She has been concert master of the college symphony orchestra all of her four years here, has been student assistant in music, and has taught the violin class at the Demonstration school connected with the college. Julia hopes to get her master's degree in violin from the Eastman school.

Merryday Rosser has been outstanding in athletics, especially swimming and hockey, and is a member of the "F" club. Although she has not studied music here, she has played the flute in the college orchestra for four years. She is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, general scholastic honorary, and Gamma Sigma Epsilon, national chemistary honor society. Although Merryday intends to continue work on her M.D. next year, she will begin a training course at the Florida State hospital, Chattahoochee, in medical technology.

Since modern languages are the major subjects of both of the Makemson twins, they would like positions in the foreign relations field. They are both members of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Delta Pi, national Spanish honorary, and Pi Delta Phi, national French honorary. Ernestine's grades average 2.5, while Virginia's average is 2.6.

In athletics both Ernestine and Virginia are especially interested in swimming and were on the relay team that established a new national record for the women's nations: inter-collegiate 100-yard free-style relay this year. The twins have been members of the Tarzon club during their entire four years here. Ernestine is a member of the "F" club.

Entirely different from the Rosser twins, the Makemson twins are identical and always dress alike. Twins are not uncommon in their family as their mother was a twin and there were two sets of twins in her family.

Both sets of twins have earned part of their expenses while they have been in college. Besides their student assistant work, the Rosser twins held dining room scholarships for a year, while the Makemson twins have done student assistant work in phychology. Julia has earned money teaching violin to her fellow students, and, oddly enough for a girl, repairs violins.

other enemies of that cause together.

His Lordship is in the same dilemma as the Stalinist. He has to justify a policy which he himself disliked till recently. He can only do it by mental gymnastics and by jumping facts. For example, Lord Lloyd repeats the absurd fiction that Europe was saved by Poland in 1920, but omits that the Russians were defending themselves against a Polish aggression backed and financed by the British government.

Lloyd admirably expressed the real motives of Hitler's aggression, but he still thinks Hitler had an adequate excuse for everything that he did before March, 1939. It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that Hitler's real crime in the eyes of Lord Lloyd is his pact with Stalin; but for this, Lord Lloyd would forbid even that thing.

The author of "The British Case" talks a great deal about freedom but has a peculiar conception of it.

The most sinister pages in the book, according to Dell, are those singing the praises of the Italian Fascist system, which is clearly Lord Lloyd's ideal and which he declares to be fundamentally different from the German and Russian regimes. "The Italian state is neither socialistic nor capitalistic, but syndicalist."

Lloyd's redress suggest unpleasant suspicions as to the relations between the British government and Mussolini. As most people know, the French general staff wished to send an ultimatum to Mussolini at the beginning of the war to the effect that unless he broke the Alliance with Germany, France would declare war on Italy. The Halifax-Lloyd policy makes one suspect that, like the conduct of the British and the French governments in the Abyssinian affair, it was due to a desire to save Mussolini and his Catholic Fascist regime at all costs.

"In any case, it is clear that the evil sons of Lord Halifax and Lord Lloyd is to make Europe safe for clericalist Fascism. Is this also the war aim of the British government? If it is how much

Music Program Set for Sunday

Seven Student Selections To Conclude Music Concert Series

Selections by members of every division of the school of music will be presented in the final annual concert to be given Sunday night May 26, in the college auditorium. The program will consist of selections by Dorothy Bedford, organist; Louise Thrasher, soprano, accompanied by Miss Gladys Koch; Pauline Morrow, pianist; Edna Warren, pianist; Mary Sue Barnes, violincellist accompanied by Ruby Dunstan; Eleanor Mullins, mezzo-soprano, accompanied by Miss Koch; Betty Graves, pianist; Julia Rosser, violinist, accompanied by Margaret Hunter; Ruby Dunstan, pianist; and Margaret Rinck, organist.

Numbers to be given will include "Toccata from Organ Suite No 5 Boellmann; Vio che sapete (La Nozze di Figaro) by Mozart; The Little Shepherd by Debussy; Watts; Polonaise, C minor by Chopin; Impromptu, A flat major by Saleski; Invocazione di Orfeo (Euridice) by Peri; Where Corals Lie by Rogers; Prelude D flat major by Liszt; Andante from Symphonie Espagnole by Lalo; Ritual Fire Dance by De Falla; Saud Third Chorale, A minor, by Cesar Franck.

Music recitals will be continued tonight with a program by Ruby Dunstan, pianist; tomorrow night with Mary Mathews Gruppe, also a pianist; and next week through a recital on Saturday night.

Tonight Ruby's program, a senior recital, will include the following selections: Variations. F minor by Haydn; Gigue by Handel; Etude, No. 12 by Chopin; Berceuse by Chopin; Etude Op. 25, No. 12 by Chopin; Silver Cascade by Niemann; Puck by Debussy; Ritual Fire Dance by De Falla; and First Movement of Concerto in A minor by Grieg.

Miss Gruppe, a resident hall director here while doing graduate work, will present a piano recital tomorrow night. She is a pupil of Miss Mary Esther Winslow in the school of music, but her program will not be given for credit toward her graduate work. Miss Gruppe's study of piano is purely in the form of an avocation.

Numbers included on her recital are: Sonata, Op. 31, No. 2 by Beethoven; The Island Spell by Ireland; Sonetto del Petrarca, No. 104 by Liszt; Memento More (Por-trot tragico) by Castelnuovo-Tedesco, and Prelude and an Exposition by Moussorgsky.

A graduation recital will be given by Julia Rosser, violinist, on Tuesday night. She will be accompanied by Margaret Hunter, pianist. Her program includes: Sonata in C Minor, Op. 45 by Grieg; Gavotte en Rondeau from the Master Pieces by Bach; Adagio cantabile, from solo sonata No. 3 by Bach; Gigue from E Major Partita by Bach; Symphonie Espagnole by Lalo;" and Second Polonaise, Op. 21 by Wieniawski.

Betty Graves, on Thursday night, May 16, will give a graduation recital in piano. She will open her program with Toccata, C Major by Bach-Busoni. Other selections include Prelude, Op. 32, No. 13 by Rachmaninoff; Etude in D Flat Major by Liszt; Fantaisie Op. 49 by Chopin; Concert, 25 by Mendelssohn.

Next Saturday, May 18, Mary Margaret Rinck will present a graduation recital in organ. Her program follows: Prelude and Fugue in B minor by Bach; Cho-

Fremd Receives Pilot License

Frances Rogers Makes Cross Country Trip In Airplane

Of the seven girls taking the Civil Aeronautics Association's training course, Irene Fremd is the only one at present who has completed the requirements for her private pilot's license. Frances Rogers, however, has made her cross-country trip to Quincy and Monticello.

Last Saturday morning Irene climbed into the cub-trainer plane, drew a deep breath, and prepared to take her government flight test for the pilot's license. From the ground a government inspector observed her old maneuvers—consparke handings, 720's, 8's, and bankings. His answer to her, after debating for "several suspense-filled moments", was that she was now a full-fledged private pilot. This means that she is entitled to fly any single-motor plane weighing under 1,200 pounds, to any destination of her choice in the United States. She may carry passengers, but as the license is non-commercial she must do so free of charge. The license is good for one year and at the end of each year period must be renewed by re-taking the examination.

A minimum of 35 hours of solo flying plus a cross-country trip must be completed in order to take this final flight exam. When asked how she felt now that she ranked as a private pilot, Irene replied, "I don't feel a bit different!"

The flying course offered by the CAA at FSCW consists of ground training, supervised by Mr. Royal Mathews, and the flying itself, in charge of Mr. Ivan Monroe. This course is supposed to be a five-year plan and in all probability will be continued at this school next year.

The government examiner is expected again on May 14 to pass

Annual Editor Announces 60 Students Have Signed For Work on Flastacowo

The recently elected editor of the 1940-41 Flastacowo, Sonia Mitchell, reports that 60 students signed up for work on the annual next year. The names of these 60 persons must go through all of the offices required before they will be made public. Along with the announcement of position, Miss Rachel Irwin, who was the other candidate in the recent election for editor of the publication, will probably be the assistant editor.

The 1940 annuals will be out on May 15 if the present plans are carried out.

Speaker Foresees Germany's Defeat

Retired British Officer Maintains U. S. Aid Decisive Factor

Regardless of all her successes Germany is near the end of her rope, and with the aid of material from the United States England will win the European war was the statement by Colonel W. B. Thompson in a lecture Monday night.

The retired British naval officer, who is now a naturalized American citizen, was the first speaker on the summer school lecture series.

Opening his speech by saying the current world war dated with the capture of the Versailles Treaty, Captain Thompson reviewed the history of his participation in the first World War and his recent travels through England, France, Italy and Germany in his discussion of the present war situation. He stated it was his opinion that France will never capitulate to Hitler.

Ultimate hope of peace rests in the English speaking peoples having the largest armies, air forces and navies in the world so that they can dominate the rest of the world, he said.

Lang, Woodham Chosen Men Representatives To Student Council

Bettie Young, a student in social sciences, was recently elected head of the summer school student council.

Men students living on campus elected William A. Lang as their chairman for representation on the student council and James Woodham, vice chairman.

House chairmen and vice house chairmen who also make up the membership of the student council are: Bayan Ann, Verna Jenkins, chairman, and Lora Lucas, vice chairman; Broward, Lucinda Weatherly, chairman, and Aurelia Lowe, vice chairman.

Guthrie, Mary Frances Fetner, chairman, and Carolyn Gaines, vice chairman; Landis, Caroline Brown and Nancy White; West Landis, Myrtle Mae Hoffman.

Boys State Week Starts Tomorrow

200 Boys Expected Here For Practical Study In Government

Approximately 200 high school boys will arrive in Tallahassee for "Boy's State," a week-long program of study and practice in civil government. The project is sponsored by the veterans department of the American Legion.

Harvey G. Wood, member of the Claude L. Pepper club of Tallahassee will direct the program. The student leaders will conduct their own campaigns, hold regular elections of all city, county and state offices and actually carry out the duties of the offices.

William C. Booker of Tampa, past department commander of the American Legion will be the principal speaker at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the college auditorium.

Secretary of State R. A. Gray and Governor Fred Thomas are among the scheduled speakers for the week.

"Boy's State" is designed to awaken in the leaders of the state's youth a desire to study the practical operation of government and to familiarize them with the entire structure of state government.

Student-Alumnae Center Opens For First Time

The Rowena Longmire student-alumnae building was opened for the first time this summer with Mids Dempsey Crosby, graduate of the class of 1928, as director.

The building, which was named for the late Miss Rowena Longmire, long active Tallahassee member and former president of the alumnae association, is the fourth new building on the college campus this year. It was erected as a works progress administration project at a cost of approximately $150,000.

Cotterill Honored

Dr. Robert S. Cotterill, professor of history, is one of five Tallahasseeans included in the Who's Who in America for 1940-41.

Others are Roy H. Chapman, judge; James S. Rickards, educator; Elwyn Thomas, judge; and H. H. Wells.

Holiday Planned

No classes will be held Friday, July 5, Dr. Conradi announced yesterday.

According to this ruling there will be no classes from Wednesday, July 3, at 4:30 until Monday, July 8, at 8 a. m. However, classes will meet Saturday, June 29.

1040 Enrolled, Breaks Records

New Features of Session Include Workshop Reading Clinic

The second annual two-term summer session of Florida State college opened on June 10 with an enrollment of 1040, an increase of 63 over the enrollment of last summer. The co-education student body includes 74 men students.

New features of the current session include:

An educational workshop with the entire faculties of 12 Florida high schools here for consultation with educational experts from the college, state department of public instruction, and Florida teachers to discuss school problems and objectives. This program will last from June 10 to July 20 inclusive.

An elementary principals planning course, June 10-July 20 to develop program for individual schools needs;

A production committee for elementary school materials which seeks to obtain a supply to develop practices in elementary schools. This committee will be scheduled both sessions.

A production committee for health materials, June 10-July 20 which will participate in production of a new textbook to assist in the teaching of health;

A special short-term course in home economics similar to other Mary Swartz Rose, internationally recognized as the leading authorside during the first three weeks;

The reading clinic so successfully launched last summer is being continued again this session. A production committee for elementary physical education was held June 3-8.

Four dormitories are being used to house the students this summer. Landis being open for the first time. Men students are being housed in Byran.

Graham, Slade Awarded Redfern Essay Prize

Katherine Graham and Frances Slade, graduates of May 1940, tied as winners of the annual Redfern Essay contest. Dr. Katherine F. Abbey, head of the history department announced recently.

The $50 prize is offered each year by Daniel R. Redfern, Miami attorney and retiring president of the Florida Bar Association, for the best essay submitted from the social studies division on a topic of contemporary interest with a historical background.

This is the first time there has been a tie for the best essay. Katherine Graham, former president of the student government used as her subject "Unicameral Legislature in Florida" and Frances Slade's was "Child Labor Problems in Florida."

Dr. Swartz Will Speak

Dr. Mary Swartz Rose, noted educator and writer in the field of nutrition, will speak in the Auditoria Conradi Little Theater at 7:45 p. m. on Thursday, June 27. Her topic for discussion will be "World Improvements in the Field of Nutrition."

WAA Arranges Games, Trips For Students

Committee Plans For Special Outing On Saturday

The Women's Athletic association of Femelle Nelson, in charge is working on a number of recreational activities this summer for the benefit of the summer school students.

Activities ranging from tennis, croquet, ping pong, and swimming to fishing trips and other outings are being arranged.

On Tuesday and Thursday evenings beginning at 7:30 p. m. singing on the dinning room steps is planned. Wednesday's hikes to places of local interest and on Friday nights, from 8 to 10:30 p. m. play nights with swimming and games and social dancing. On this Friday night there will be American country dancing led by the folk dancing class as a special feature.

Florida Educates Her Educators

Four phases of the Florida Program for the Improvement of schools are in active progress on campus. Recently inaugurated at Florida State college the program consists of the Cooperating Schools Workshop, Elementary School Principal's Planning Conference, Elementary Bulletin Production Group, Health Materials Production Committee and Revised Education Committee for Elementary Schools.

The purposes of the Cooperating Schools Workshop are to experiment with new ways of work, to find better ways of helping in-service training of teachers, and to work with teachers in such a way as to give them ways of recognizing problems, and planning intelligently for solving them. Education courses for girls who might teach and those who must gain credit for certification together with inadequate supervision by principals have, for the most part, proved ineffective in helping teachers with their local problems which taken as a whole constitute a large portion of the state's education problem. The second objective is to enable teachers to carry on the task of recognizing and planning solutions after the workshop is over. It is no longer expected that workshops will meet every situation. New problems will be coming up and new solutions constantly needed.

The directors of this program expect to accomplish the above purposes from a set teachers a teehnique of recognizing and solving problems as well as their best ideas on possible solutions to their present problems. Through working with whole faculties of the participating schools, freedom from a set schedule, democratic discussion of problems listed by the teachers, and a spirit of guidance rather than teaching the program will develop a technique of solving problems.

The present activity is actually the second phase of the program. It was preceded by an orientation period last spring during which schools were informed of the plan and participants chosen. The actual installation of the program in the schools will take place next fall.

We believe this program in which whole school faculties work on actual local problems under the guidance of leaders in education is a sensible and direct way to bring Florida's lagging schools up to standards set by more progressive states. The Workshop and the Florida Program for the Improvement of Schools must, however, work with problems which involve Florida's low education standards for teachers and meager financial resources.

Welcome "Boy's State"

On Saturday morning 200 high school boys will arrive at Florida state college to participate in "Boys State." a week-long project planned to teach the youth of Florida about the functioning of state government.

This will be the first time that a "Boys State" has been held in Florida, and Florida state college for women is proud to have its premises used for such a worthwhile purpose.

We take pleasure in welcoming "Boys State" to our campus.

HUMID LUCIDS

The most obvious thing on campus lately has been the heat—and in the heat on the campus may be found the student body. In the student body on the hot campus may be found many types—the collegiate left-backs, map-fakers, sent-backs and throw-backs. All of them hot.

Seems as though a problem has arisen. We now have a minority question with which to quibble. And you all know what our analytical political scientists think of minority groups. Yet, the democratic principle insists that these disturbing factors be given a chance to speak. Soooo—needless to say, rapid application of this wholesomely democratic principle on campus would be welcomed—by the womanly majority group.

Although this column is not intended to be a written course in campanology, it would be a mutual infination of the egoes of both groups were there to be a—shall we say—intermingling?

As the situation stands right now, the co-eds are much like the little men who aren't here to many of the socially inclined if not bent: women.

Frustration Of The Week

A male contingent was seen sliding surreptitiously through the arcade between Bryan and Brownard. A great cranium of feminine necks eagerly awaited their stealthy progress. Ah—but not for long. 'Twas only a drink of water the men were after.

The prize award for People Who Must Be Like That goes to the conscientious proctor who turned out the lights in the local washroom when half of her bailiwick were still washing faces and brushing teeth.

Understatement Of The Week

A single professor with a comfortably cool pate was asked if he felt like being a social butterfly this season. His answer was a convincingly negative No. His reason: "I don't want to rob the cradle."

The people on campus who have a true sense of utility are those who are flitting about with double-purpose umbrellas.

For those who would have a suntan and no waistline I recommend a trek out to the gym where equipment and instruction cost nothing.

A sign on one of the dorm room doors queries "Does granddaughter know as much as grandma did?" Or should the question be reversed?

The most justifiable but dastardly crime would be the theft of an electric fan.

For sharp contrast in glee and gloom the post office sets the pace. It seems apparent that some of our co-eds have played football once and they still enjoy the game.

Hints Or Bricks

The weather is like a preview of "things to do"—there are many cars scattered about campus—and it is not very far to Wakulla, and Lake Bradford is even still closer.

MALE FROM HOME

We hear from the men who are enrolled in the summer school that it is an exciting experience to be members of such a small minority in a girls' school. They revel in the friendly attitude of the women on the campus and take delight in participating in the many activities that have been provided.

Girls Girls Girls! We hear that diamondball teams are being organized in the halls to show the visiting men that they are rank amateurs in the gentle art of "swing and sway." Don't look now, but it will look like a run on the 'Banks' when the rals see the Pox-y lad with the curly hair who holds down a place in the infield.

No mouse that ever lived ever had any siri more faster than did the young lady who absent-mindedly wandered into the men's sections of Bryan this week It's touch. isn't it. to change routes after having followed the same ones for years?

A collection of 14,000 ferns presented to the British museum is said to be the most important private collection of these plants in the world.

Magazine Jottings

In "They Write Worse and Worse" Adelia Courtney Bartlett, a member of the English department of Hunter college since 1929, tries to answer the complaint frequently heard by teachers of English in American colleges and high schools that the average college graduate cannot express himself correctly and fluently in writing. She divides those who realize this opinion into two general groups, college professors and businessmen.

In her opinion the college professor, possessing an exceptional standard of correctness in the use of the English language with little difficulty, does not realize that the greater part of his contemporaries possess only an average ability to communicate their thoughts in writing. Furthermore the author believes that the quality of the average students written expression 20 years ago was even poorer than that of the average student of today.

According to the article, the college professor who does not teach English himself seldom realizes that the English language is constantly changing in its word meanings as well as in idioms and preferred usage. He thinks that the exact one-and-cred rules he learned when in school should still be the basis for judgment of English composition. The author, one of the more liberal English teachers, finds it almost impossible to convince him that English usage changes with the times.

The businessman "wants a girl to take his dictating and incoherent dictation and effect a metamorphosis into clear and correct English," states the article. He is the most conservative type in regard to changes in English usage as often patronizes those writers because he does not have sufficient command of language to compose his own speeches and articles.

The author admits that the average student does not write correctly or fluently, but points out that many students in business have use for writing skill in their chosen careers. She proposes three aids to the improvement of the writing ability of the average student, the authors, professors and businessmen that the English language is changed since they attended school, removal of extra loads from the English teacher's schedule so that she will have time to correct themes carefully, and have individual conferences with her students and discussion of errors with each other forms of cheating in schools by showing disrespect for honest scholarship. If these three things were to happen says the author, assistance in plying for jobs would be able to write correctly and fluently.

In "The Functions of a Teacher" the internationally famed author and philosopher, Bertrand Russell, discusses the duties of the citizen of the teaching profession. To many people the conception of teaching popular in the present world is simply the instruction into the minds of children of beliefs and prejudices favorable to those in power is entirely wrong. The author states that education in the United States has become so much like that in totalitarian nations, that s is not difficult for state education to evolve into totalitarian education with similar unreasonable concepts by teachers who are little more that state-employed propagandists.

Our conduct must return immediately to the early standards of academic freedom. A feeling of intellectual independence is essential to the proper functioning of the teaching force.

Mr. Russell states, "The defense of the man in all civilized countries is quite as much in the interest of the community as in his own interest."

Not only should teachers tell the truth in their classrooms at any cost, but also they should be free to conduct discussions in any party spirit about their students as opposed to the welfare of all.

The author believes that most cruelty is the result of thwarting the good instincts of children. It is the teacher's duty to interest his pupils in constructive activities and to see that they do not become warped and embittered from an unhappy childhood. Unfortunately, many teachers are forced to be the instruments of cruelty to students because they are overburdened with the necessity for cramming them with facts.

Tolerance for others' opinions is another in Mr. Russell's opinion, the most important thing that a teacher should aim to produce in the students entrusted to him. Fanaticism is declared to be antithesis of the civilized outlook which the teacher is striving to produce.

Mr. Russell also stresses the fact that more freedom is needed in the scholastic world and that the administration of the schools should be removed from the hands of amateurs. The author thinks that complete liberty must be given to no great man so that their creative work may be the best possible. Even a highly organized society must allow freedom to some if it is to survive, and this freedom is indispensable to our teachers who are, "more than any other class the guardians of our civilization."

Cozy Canine School Develops "How to Lead a Dog's Life"

Practical Instruction in Dog Culture Based On "How to Catch Up With Your Own Tail"

Fellow Teachers," said I. B. Keen, the principal of the Cozy Canine School For Big and Little Dogs, "we must make our courses more meaningful. We must re-orient our educational program around "How to Lead a Dog's Life" but what practical instruction do we give? We must revise our curriculum."

"Oh yes," responded the entire faculty. So a committee was appointed to revise the curriculum. As anyone could see all the courses were much too general and committee quickly set the pace for a well rounded program which planned a curriculum which would cover all fields of dog culture.

Cozy Big and Little Dog before he could get his pe-digree had to take all of the courses. The required courses in "How to Catch Up With Your Own Tail," "How to Bury Your Bone," "How to Catch Flies on the fly," and "How to Use the Hand That Feeds You."

At first all the Big Dogs and Little Dogs bothered and swished their tails, but when they saw how well the new program was going to work both the students and the last day one Bad Little Dog who didn't have a tail received the practical practice in "How to Catch Up With Your Own Tail." Why he should have a tail to Catch Up With My Own Tail?"he barked, "when I don't even have a tail." However, the instructor was really interested in the individual character of his students explained that Little Dogs in a pack must have a cooperative attitude, and that even if he didn't have a tail, he should do as example to those who did. This satisfied the Little Dog and he became a perfect example.

Then a Big Dog refused to do the Bone Burying exercises. "Why should I bury my bone?" he asked. "I don't want to bury it. I want to live on it." But the instructor explained that to be fully rounded one must learn certain things. So Big Dog didn't see how burying his bone could make him rounded, but he knew the instructor was a fine fellow and couldn't lie to him.

As an outgrowth of the new program many worthwhile extra-curricular activities developed. For class in "How to Catch a Flies on the Fly" scratched in the sand a detailed chart of the structure of flies. The class in "How to Bury Your Bone," made a daily report on "My Reaction to the Problem of How to Bury a Bone." These reactions were made into a booklet the shape of a bone and buried.

Soon the school attracted so many Big Dogs and Little Dogs who wanted to become well-rounded that the classes had to be divided into sections for Dogs with Tails and Dogs without Tails. Next year the faculty is planning to extend the curriculum in order to provide fully-rounded Big Dogs and Little Dogs. The new curriculum will include such cultural courses as "The Anthropological Resemblance Between the Feline and the Skunk" "How to Find Your Right Ear Without Moving Your Left" and "How to Turn Loose Your Own Tail Once You Have Caught It."

Student Plans To Mix Career And Marriage

States College Fails To Coordinate Study Of Both Subjects

All this worry or talk about whether to choose your man or your career is rather superficial in my case. Perhaps it is luck, or some woman's intuition that made me think I wanted to spend my life with brilliant human relations and writing about them, and in the meantime get married. College has not in my case chanced this purpose. The cover of the summer issue of the Datafi' would indicate by the cap and gown that the question has become more definite and must now be faced due to the college's influence. But the training that I have received has only broadened my field of action.

When I left high school I wanted to write. But my subjects were short short stories, the vignette, the "Maudie" type of story so popular with high school youth. I have not chanced as much as broadened in subject matter. I can read such books as Steinbeck's Grapes of Wrath and see something in the widely-criticised emphasis on the worst possible conditions.

I think the fallacy with this subject of marriage and career and career is in the education leading up to the problem. Why should the student see a career so definitely apart from family life? Perhaps one of the troubles of my readers who will think I am going into an old-fashioned discussion of "woman's place is in the home." Perhaps I am.

It is certainly true that being a good home maker is not learned into a career. It is also true that to fulfill the position of mother as a girl must be intellectual as well as a good cook. It is a universal misunderstanding that one is living in the bringing up of their children. I am not blaming the state statistics on crime and go into the possibilities of crime prevention by the teaching of religion.

Rather I am saying that it takes an intellectual to answer the questions of a child. The child will ask the same questions that the intellectual is asking herself. The question has become more definite and must now be faced due to the college's influence. But the training that I have received has only broadened my field of action.

When I left high school I wanted to write. But my subjects were short short stories, the vignette, the "Maudie" type of story so popular with high school youth. I have not chanced as much as broadened in subject matter. I

I am doing the issue; I am going to have both! But why can not the average couple do likewise? The real reason is that the popular psychology is not toward any such solution. The distinction between career and marriage is definite—even in the teaching profession. The woman is not employed if the husband is also employed in a state institution. This is a law that is used whenever it suits the case, with disregard for the teacher's worth. There are many counties which do not employ married women to teach; and if a teacher gets married during a school term she is relieved of her teaching responsibilities.

The college courses are numerous which teach for professions with the inspiration of the workshop phase of the Florida Program for the Improvement of Schools the Inquiring Reporter asked persons connected with the program their opinion of the significance of the workshop to the progress of education in Florida.

William A. Lang, principal of Miami Shores School, "The Florida program for the Improvement of Schools is a definite contribution to the improvement of Florida schools.

It deals with individual problems and will acquaint those most interested with the best principles and solutions used in similar areas.

"The thinns I like most about the program are the freedom of expression and the democratic method by which we are permitted to approach solutions."

J. D. Wooten, principal of Gadsden junior high school, "This program will accomplish education faster than any other single project. One of the greatest benefits is that active educators are getting solutions to problems for which they have a felt need."

Dorr Skipper, Instructor in Education, "I think the workshop program is the most significant educational thing being done today. We are not only having the workshop in our state, but nine of the other Southern States are having them. The one unique feature of our workshop compared with the others is that we emphasize total school faculties working on school and individual problems.

"The thing to me that makes it most significant is that the teachers can work on problems related to their actual teaching and work in a manner that is consistent with their school work in their own schools."

Dr Leslie Collinson, consultant in workshop, "I believe that the total school workshop program is the most promising venture in inservice teacher training I have experienced."

Dr R. L. Goulding, principal of the Demonstration School, "I feel that the workshop idea is the best contribution to the development of educational programs by teachers in service that we have thought of in a long time. The reasons are: (1) Teachers come to the workshop and are given an opportunity to work on real problems that exist in their own schools and to attempt to solve these problems in terms of their own school situations and not consider them from theoretical or hypothetical points of view (2) Teachers come together for six weeks and working on their common problems develop a way of working together which they can continue to use when they get back to their school situations."

Ward Fletcher, critic teacher and instructor in Education, believes, "that the workshop procedure for "in-service training" of teachers is the most sensible and practical approach to the solution of teacher and school problems that has emerged to the present date. It seems that the workshop here is meeting the need of a large number of teachers in a most encouraging manner."

College credits are collected in biology so that the student will be qualified to teach, not so that she will be qualified to apply the "scientific attitude" to problems of the growing mind.

I find a lack of connection between courses. I have learned to question the worth of information, which in it self is the essential point in education, and although I lack some things that the Home Economics major has received, she is farther than I from having an education that will enable her to be an intellectual wife. The case of the Home Economics major might well be given as evidence detrimental to my statement that college does not prepare for both marriage and career, if it were not for the fact that the 'average' Home Economics student leaves college and cares less for the answers she will ever to the inquiries of the inquisitive child. Her children's stomaches will be fed by the latest scientific discovered foods, but their mind's will be

Personality Found in Food; Reflection Seen in Personality

After Four Years Of College, Student Feels Undergraduates Eat Like Vultures

BY LILLIE BERGER

Foods have personalities and these personalities reflect themselves in the people who eat. Now just about everyone eats except relative leaders of executive manner movements and plump matrons.

It is a relatively simple thing to watch people eat and then make comments about them, but a still more intriguing sport is to speculate subjectively about the concensus of their digestive tracts and try to match the contents with the expressions of their faces, their gaits the sounds of their voices and their other descriptive signs.

Magazines and newspapers abound with "before and after" ads and perhaps the foremost of these is the grapenuts one, is a breakfast food, composed of small bowls indigestible lumps which require all my energy to down in the morn. But there are other more hearty souls who eat the stuff for its alleged energy giving qualities. They rather poop themselves out with their excess pep.

Steak makes vegetarians shudder but since most humans are carnivorous by mere sound of the word steak acts as a stimulus to their salivary glands. It is practically a tradition for the young bride to broil a steak when she cooks her initial for her adoring but hungry one.

Now not everyone with the exception of vegetarians can eat steak and still maintain a certain equilibrium. For a large person with the petite complex just can't afford to be seen hacking away at chunks of animal flesh in public. But, she is merely one of many women. Other women can put it away with a great scowing of not only appetite but also grace. Most men, of course, eat it away with a great display of appetite. There is a large exception however, who although they have not seen a steak in a week, will somehow manage to look like a steak.

Buttermilk is loaded with vitamins and proteins and acads of other healthy foodlits of a chemical nature. The buttermilk expression is generally found on the faces of the pregnant eating multitudes. It is also renowned for its settlement qualities. Especially in cases of active alcoholism.

"You too can be like Popeye if you eat spinach" is the chant of the vitamin conscious mothers. However apart from the bones of Popeye admirers there is still a group of reactionaries who have eaten it for years—even B. P. (before Popeye). The limp green sandy vegetable may make hair curly but somehow a spinach expression means something vaguelp limp.

Prune juice drinkers and sardine eaters are coupled together in my mind. Infallibly they drink lemonade without sugar in the summertime. They look puckered up while they are eating and they look puckered up until they eat again.

Prot lees, humming birds tongues and other rare delicacies require sophisticated tastes and a matchingly sophisticated purse.

When the combination is found the expression defies description. Corned beef and cabbage sounds terribly plebian, but since it is true the social leader its popularity is widespread and deserved. The person who decries its plebian ban is the expression of one who rather enjoys living vicariously.

Self-denying women are hipped on melba toast.

Only chinese girls can eat everything and still retain that look of starved indifference. After four years spent in an institution of higher learning and in between meals I've felt that I speak with authority when I say if anyone accuses a college girl of eating like a bird I know he means a vulture.

It may be well for the future of society for such graduates to choose to be wives and mothers. Perhaps they can so well organize the feeding of society that my children will not suffer from insufficient food. I fear that there is a small number of students who get an education in the sense that I consider essencial for motherhood.

Summer Workshop Is Inaugurated As Experiment

Many Florida Teachers Undergo Intensive Training Course

The first educational workshop program ever held at this college was inaugurated this summer. Dr. Rogers Moon is directing the program which includes five separate activities.

Dr. Moon said the purposes of the workshop are to give experienced with new ways or wors in order to find a better way of helping in service training of teachers and to work with teachers in such a way as to give them ways of recognizing problems and ways of organizing intelligently for solving them."

The purposes are to be accomplished by helping the participating teachers with their present individual and group problems and by giving practice in planning and the best suggestions for solution of problems they may encounter this fall.

The largest group is the cooperative group headed with Mr. Joe Hail, director of certification in physical and health education from the state department of education, in charge. The schools, whose entire faculties are present to attend the workshop sessions are Fort Myers elementary and High school, Lee Geneva Elementary, Sealey Memorial Elementary school of Tallahassee and Ely Elementary school of Graceville. Centering in Tallahassee, the Leadership Havana Elementary and High school, Wewahitchka Elementary and High school, Monticello Elementary and High school, Perry Elementary and High school, Lee and Jay schools, and one Miami school.

The visual materials production committee is conducted by Miss Ruth Gavin of the Georgia department of public health. It is preparing a bulletin containing information on visual aids in the teaching of health.

Dr. Moon in charge of the elementary principals' planning course is also working on Florida schools are developing plans to meet the special needs of their schools.

A bulletin helpful to teachers in elementary schools is the work of the elementary bulletin production group, directed by Dr. W. T. Edwards of the art department of public instruction. The group meets every day this week during the second term of summer school.

Teachers participating in the schools workshop, the health materials committee or the principals' planning course will receive six hours credit for their work Twelve hours credit is given for the elementary school material

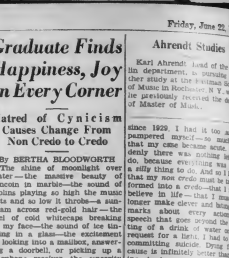
Graduate Finds Happiness, Joy In Every Corner

Hatred of Cynicism Causes Change From Non Credo to Credo



BY BERTHA BLOODWORTH

The shine of moonlight over water—the beauty of Lincoln in marble—the sound of children playing so high like wood nuts and so low it throbs—a sunbeam across red-gold hair—the feel of cold whitecaps breaking in my face—the sound of ice tinkling in a glass—the excitement of looking into a mailbox, answering a doorbell, or picking up a telephone receiver—the sincerity of laughter—the savvty of courage—the neatness of falls—pine trees catching stars in black needle lace—fiars flying—the blessedness of sleep—the pleasant feel of Benedictine in my throat—the poignancy of tears—the love my mother gives me—the look of two bread shoulders that I know—train whistles wailing through the night—

These things and more I believe in, these things and more I love. I am tired of a negative creed. I am weary of writing confessions of unfaith. I do not belie evil cynicism. I hate bitterness. I abhor this eternal mask life worthwhile on that—sneering at all that has ever made life worthwhile on this planet.

I shall stand up when "The Star Spangled Banner" is played in a news reel. I shall thrill when I see the stars and stripes waving. I shall do these things because of that my country means to me and because of what I want to make it mean to others.

Cynicism—the quality of mind which expresses itself in surliness, sarcasm, and lack of faith in disinterested motives—is not, perhaps, a disease peculiar to this age. But it has achieved a new high in popularity in the years since 1929. I had it too and pampered deeply so much that my cause became acute. Lately there was nothing left to do, because my credo was only a silly thing to do. And so I began to find my own credo—and it formed into a credo—that I believe in life—that I must no longer make clever and biting marks about every action speech that goes around the ring of a drink of water or a cigarette for a start. I had to be committing suicide. Drag the razor is infinitely better than being dead on your bed for lack of a cause.

Cynicism is, after all only mask to obscure a personality such. it is a form of unbelief. It hides ourselves, even from ourselves. It is not realism, as fondly imagine it to be. It is a stifling of the realm things in the human wid to live. Realism is another thing. realism is intelligent acting upon human nature.

I believe that people should die for lack of food; I, therefore, do not that I knowingly do to prevent it. I believe that war is wrong and cruelty and horror; I am glad that I know how to use as an individual to see that it shall cease. If these things are too big for me. There are smaller things. I believe that democracy is worth preserving; so my vested citizenry; I vote. I believe saybody knows what is going on in politics that vote is a mockery of my nation, and I shall follow that which I consider best and that which I can intelligently and honestly lead. I believe in democracy; I shall defend it and it. If I can.

These things and more I will do as a college graduate, because at last I believe. I am free of the sickness of the age I am free of an intellectual. A non conformists intellectualc. I have a credo.

Workshop Group Combines Work, Play Activities

Physical Education Work Due Monday; Music Planned Next

A leisure time activities program for teachers enrolled in the educational workshop is successfully operation at the demonstration school and the gym. The creative activities in the fields of physical recreation, music, arts and handicrafts are planned to appeal to pupils on the elementary and high school levels. By participating in these activities themselves the teachers learn how to help the students in creative work.

Miss Emily P. Wilburn and Miss Bernice Deets, professors of industrial arts at the college, will give demonstrations and assist the teachers in developing programs on Monday night and Tuesday afternoon. Activities included in the program are paper painting, drawing, painting soap carving, leather tooling, weaving and other handicrafts.

Public school music programs are planned for Monday night. Physical education activities are included for the 10:30 to 11:00 each morning and after school hours in the afternoon. Rhythms and games suitable for primary school instruction are played by the teachers.

The elementary school physical education laboratory is scheduled for Coeducation Monday. Various groups are making reports on their projects, such as health education, hygiene, physical education, and arithmetic. A demonstration lesson in the 4 of the 12 schools participating in the school workshop program is included in Monday night and offer suggestions. In addition to this, many individuals benefits by the results of each group's studies.

Three Students Publish Articles

Three Florida State college journalism students have articles in a new magazine, The American Student, the first issue of which is just out. Of the fifteen colleges and universities whose students have contributions in the publication, only Florida State and Swarthmore college are as many as three, New York University two, and no other institution more than one.

The magazine, a monthly published in Phoenix, Arizona, is devoted exclusively to the serious work of American college students.

Contributions from Florida State college were "Abounding Grace" by Sharon Padgett, who is a senior next year, Vivian Howell, and Florida State College, is one of the college editors of the publication.

Men Form Ball Team

Under the sponsorship of William Lang, captain, the men students organized a soft ball team Monday afternoon. Team will play an elemination tournament with teams to be organized from each of the units', dormitories. Practices will be held every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 4:30.

What! Men On Our Campus!

For the first time in history Florida State College for Women has 200 men residing on its campus.

The men, whose average age is 18, were brought here to study the ways of government by actually setting up their own "Boys' State" and electing their own officers.

Not to be outdone by grownup state officials, the "Boys" have conquered hearts right and left—especially among the undergrads.

At the very first, there was a weakness, especially when a group of the girls serenaded the boys with "Rock-a-Bye, Baby" at Reynolds hall where "Boys State" is quartered. But the young men retaliated the next night by singing "Anticha Aintcha Coming Out Tonight?"

The response was overwhelming.

Rose Lectures On Nutrition

Shows Change in Field From Pre-Historic Days to Present

"One of the great needs of America today is to educate children in food values," stated Dr. Mary Swartz Rose, visiting professor of nutrition, in her lecture entitled "Trends in the Field of Nutrition" in the Augusta Conrad Little Theater last night.

After pointing out the rapidity of change in the field in the last thirty years, Dr. Rose traced man's progress in the field of nutrition from pre-historic days through the discovery of electricity from lightning to the present day methods of disease, to the present efforts of the department of agriculture and the individual scientists.

"The three needs of man are good clothes, good shelter, and good food," stated the Columbia professor of nutrition. To secure the last for them the United States Nations carried on experiments showing the causes of malnutrition and plagues to be nutritional. Many studies made by the international committee of health, sponsored by the League, in Africa, India, Borneo, Hawaii, and the United States emphasized

TORREYA TRIP IS SCHEDULED FOR WEEK-END

WAA Plans All-Day Outing to Carrabelle On Holiday

A picnic will be held at Torreya Park, 50 miles west of Tallahassee, tomorrow afternoon. The group will leave at 4:30 and return after dinner. Transportation and meal will cost 75 cents.

In the park is an historic dwelling formerly an inn, and nearby are the ammunition pits on the Apalachicola river which were used during the war between the states. In a remarkable area surrounding this region the torrey tree, an old world tree from whose wood the ark was built, is found in only one spot in this nation in which it will live.

A trip to Carrabelle for a party of 20 or more is planned by the department of physical education for the 4th of July.

The Carrabelle expedition will include the drive to the port by car, crabbing in the bay, the gulf, fishing, and surf bathing at Dog island. The round trip rate will be $2.30, which covers transportation, boat, bait, and two meals, one at the hotel and on the boat. The party will leave at 9:30 a. m. and will return about 9:30 p. m.

There will be no evening hike on July 3, but the swimming party will be resumed with a hike on July 5 to Bass Lake. The group will leave Bryan at 7:30 p. m. on Wednesday, July 3.

The time of life saving classes has been changed from 5:30 to 6:30 p. m.

The WAA plans to organize a tournament of tennis and ping pong if enough players sign up for these sports. See your bulletin board.

Experimental Research Reveals It Is Better to Speak Than Not to Speak

By MABEY NIHOUL

How often we flighty young girls have been told not to speak to strangers! We cannot count all the times but what difference did it make? Sometimes when we see an interesting person with whom we would like to converse, much we would miss if we never spoke to strangers, even though it may be true we do have often been warned by our fearful parents that such action might not be good.

When walking down the street, one often sees many strang persons, some with gleams in their eyes and others without gleams. It makes an interesting psychological study to set the reactions of different persons to a mere smile and a cheerful greeting. So I decided to risk "my all" for the sake of a scientific study of people with gleaming eyes.

One nice sunny afternoon when I was feeling very carefree and happy and unfettered by work or convention. I decided to go for a walk and start my experimental research right in the heart of the business district on the main day. I just could not keep from smiling at every one I saw though all of them were strangers to me and some of them had very unpleasant gleams in their eyes.

The first person I saw a very thin tall man with a pinched face, piercing eyes, and grey hair. When I cheerly greeted him, he looked at me with surprise as if he would have if I had stuck my tongue out at him. He had not expected from the shock when I looked over my shoulder after he had passed half way down the block.

A little farther down the block I saw a poor bearer with both his legs amputated. This was a sight to sadden even my cheerful countenance but I thonsh asain and decided it would probably make the sorrowful fellow feel better to see a smile of sympathy than a tear of sympathy. So I gave him my friendliest smile and cheerliest "Hello" full force. The reaction of the beggar must have made me look a monster for at the first man whom I spoke to did. Tears sprang into his unhappy eyes and he said in a voice full of, "L-Lady." It was quite obvious he wished to speak to me further and questioned. "Yes?" He then continued, "Lady, you are the first person who has smiled at me in weeks. I appreciate your smile more than I appreciate your money. I hope the world will always smile on you as you smiled on me." I was so embarrassed by the poor man's gratitude that I could only stammer, "Thank you," as I walked on.

Just as I got in front of a large department store. I met a young well dressed business man at whom I smiled. His reaction was definitely not complimentary to me. He raised an eye brow in a very knowing manner and winked at me very insinuatingly. I decided quite rapidly I did not like

Dr. Carter Dies At New Orleans

FSCW Medallion Winner Succumbs After Long Illness

Dr. Helen M. Carter, head of the department of home economics at Louisiana State University and recipient of the Florida State College Alumni medallion in 1928, died Wednesday at a New Orleans hospital following an illness of several months.

Dr. Carter received the Bachelor of Science degree in 1913 for Florida State college and a Master's degree from Columbia the following year and also taught in Florida summer sessions. She was awarded the Ph.D degree in university administration and education in 1932 from New York University.

The educator who received the sole Alumnae Medallion award in 1938 was a member of the American Home Economics association. Phi Kappa Phi, Phi Upsilon Omicron, and Sigma Sigma Gamma, holding national offices in several of these organizations. She has published numerous articles dealing with home economics and more recently was working on a text book entitled "Pantry Experiences As Seen by Big College Girl."

The Alumnae Medallion is awarded to the college graduates who have distinguished themselves in the field of general or liberal arts, professional accomplishments or civic and social service.

Terrell Installs Boys' Governor

Legion Sponsored Boys Practice American Government Ways

Howard Warms of St. Petersburg was inaugurated governor of the Florida Boys State by Chief Justice Terrell at a general assembly in the capitol building Wednesday night. Other state officers inaugurated were Arthur McCormick of St. Petersburg, attorney general; Bill Scruggs of Monticello, secretary of State; Donald Canon of Lake City, treasurer; Eugene Hill of Orlando, comptroller; Claude Jones of Pahokee, commissioner of agriculture; Arthur Pletcher of Perry, superintendent of public instruction.

At the opening assembly of the first Florida Boys State in the college auditorium on Saturday night, Governor Harvey Wood, member of the Claude L. Sauls post of the American legion in Tallahasee, saw his dream of many years come true. Gathered together from all parts of Florida through the efforts of the Legion were almost 200 high school boys, ready to embark on a week's program of education in the American way of government.

After salutation of the flag and recitation of the preamble to the Legion Constitution by the boys, Governor Wood inaugurated unelected guests. City Auditor Ben Bridges of Tallahassee welcomed the boys on behalf of Tallahassee. Director Wood then introduced Mr. Mayo of Tampa, of Tampa, the principal speaker of the evening.

In his speech Mr. Brooker, immediate past state commander of the American Legion, said, "I doubt if Communism, Nazism, or Fascism will ever be established in this nation if the people are kept informed — vigilance is the price of liberty."

He stressed the danger to our nation if these two institutions do spread, advocating the erection of a strong bulwark of democracy and the distinction between liberty and license. Mr. Brooker concluded with the inside words for the young citizens whom he address. "Observe, remember and remember." We must observe the privileges which we as citizens of the United States enjoy, compare them with the tyranny and oppression that exist in the life of the people in totalitarian countries, and remember what it cost our forefathers to obtain these privileges for posterity.

Director of the Florida Boys State is Mr. Harvey Wood of

Hinson Will Deliver Commencement Address

Dr. M. R. Hinson, professor of education at Florida State college and first president of the newly created Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, has been invited to deliver the commencement address for the first summer session at Florida State college, Saturday, July 20.

The Association, of which he was elected president last April is a regional accrediting agency for high school, college and state departments of education and has a membership of approximately 1,257 member institutions.

Dr. Hinson has had a long record of public service in the field of education. He has had experience in a one-teacher country school; as principal in high school; the state department of public instruction in Florida; and in colleges in Florida, Tennessee, and North Carolina. He was born in Hinson, Fla.

"Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness"

Next week we will be celebrating the 4th of July—the memorial of the day on which the declaration of Independence of the United States of America was signed.

All over the nation fire-works will go off, bands will play, and flags will wave as America rejoices in her freedom, and pays tribute to the cause which made her free.

In a time when almost half the world is fighting to maintain its independence, Americans should be more deeply thankful than ever before of the heritage of America. The freedom that we love so much and yet prize so cheaply was bought at a dear price. And we will have to pay a dearer price if we are to maintain it.

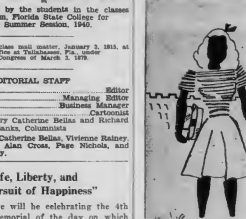
The fact that undergraduates in many college and universities all over the country are taking a stand against preparedness, because they consider it the surest way of getting us into the war, shows them to be immature and incapable of judging world events.

We consider it should be the aim and duty of every citizen of this country to help in every way possible to build up the military and economic defenses of the United States.

We must guard our liberties more closely than ever before, and build up a defense that will be able to maintain those civil liberties which Jefferson and Lincoln deemed essential to a true democracy.

"Eat, Drink, And Be Merry"

"Eat, drink and be merry for tomorrow we die." This philosophy which is characteristic of all war time is rapidly developing among college students hull sessions and study habits indicate.



Common among hull session opinions are: "Why study? We will go to war before I get out of college. Then what do I get for my years of college work—shrapnel." "What relation has Greek civilization to fighting dictators?"

College students returned to school last fall as The War started in Europe. Then we were pretty sure that the allies would win. Since, however, with increasing momentum the idea of the inevitability of our entrance in the war has come to dominate student thought. Just as rapidly students, in general, have begun to feel that it is useless to hard studying are superficial in such times as these. One feels terribly guilty sitting in class discussing "The Influence of the British Navy" while the headlines scream HITLER CONQUERS PARIS. Therefore many have decided that since we as individuals can do nothing directly to help the situation we may as well have FUN today. For tomorrow when we enter the battle we will have hell.

The line of reasoning runs somewhat like this: "You know we are going to be in the war very soon. What we learn in school will be of no use after we start fighting. We are young. The only thing to do is to live for today."

This philosophy, however, only reasons as far as on entrance into the war. No mention of after war is made. Then to fact that removes superficiality from school.

If we enter the war or not, the rebuilding of civilization will fall largely on us. We are young, some of us will live through the war. On us rests the task, as one of our professors pointed out, of gathering all the information and understanding possible in order to be more nearly fit to live for the democracy for which we are all so ready to die.

HUMID LUCIDS

The chant of the Boys State Week boys all week has been "You look just like Margy." All of which merely proves that the entire feminine student body looks like Margy.

Said one observative professor to another observative colleague as they observed an enraptured couple out at camp, "Normal, spring —only its summer now."

Cooperation

As two roommates were dropping off to sleep and deserved oblivion one said to the other, "Darling, please keep an eye open during the night. I walk in my sleep."

Come nightfall, the greatest dodge on campus is around the hedges.

A number of people with the hearts of gamblers are seriously considering starting a lottery. However, instead of horses it will be run on the basis of quantitative dating done by two or three of the harder co-eds.

May-December Accent

Boys State Week apparently has stepped up the use of date cards. It gladdens the heart to see these in still life in the old gals.

The most popular phrase out on the bailfield during the Bryan vs. the Rest of the Campus is—Whoops—I'm sorry."

Socks, when returned from the laundry have the undeniable dimensions of flattery about their drunken state.

Hitler's Blitzkrieg is slaty stuff when compared to swamp angels with flit guns.

Modern chivalry receives little or no reward, claim a few left at Dale when they have been modeling the dining room doors open. Of the approximate 200 women who thrice daily pass between the open portals only seven have deigned to murmur "thank you."

Pastoral

One of the cutter scenes on campus is the slant of a young bachinvar and his momentarily chosen one communing with nature on the smoking stand.

A dignified matron of many years standing has taken to toys for younger children. A study in retrogression, say some.

See one of the more pithily witty women professors on campus—"Hitler reminds me of the Irish—

THE OBSERVATIONS OF A CO-ED

A study in frustration—These gals who, not three weeks from home and dates, allow themselves to be picked up in droves by these high school lads. Can you realize how we must feel after two weeks of thinking, "Gee, I'd like a date with that gal but I'm scared to try to pick her up" to discover the selfsame gal being approached, and successfully I might add, by practically the entire younger generation?

A study in manners—almost every noon some of the co-eds arrive at the south entrance of the dining hall before the mob scene of strife from the upper floors of Landis and Gilchrist has cleared. The co-eds, being naturally polite proceeded to adopt the custom of holding the door open for these girls; a process sometimes taking as long as ten minutes. To pass the time and relieve our minds we decided to perform an experiment of great scientific importance. We counted the number of women who thanked us. Dear reader would you like to know our results? Well, it was 20 we hit our high—seven women thanked us. On June 26 we hit our low—no one, not even a gal we knew, thanked us. All this mind you from a collection of at least two hundred women of all ages, sizes and degrees of pulchritude.

A study of mechaniance—Us walking through Broward and Gilchrist on our way to dinner Friday I rained so hard—surrounded by thousands of women yet utterly alone.

Things we didn't know could happen till now department: There was a co-ed in Bryan hall, twenty-two and single who hasn't had a date since he has been here. For a small nurse to cover the cost of handling, dear reader, we will secure you a date with him.

A gal stood us up the other night. Can you imagine it? We couldn't. We hope she lives to regret it. The sissy.

We demand air conditioning and more manpower for the Landis hall reception room.

Things we can't figure out department: How a college decree makes a mature student. Now we could tell you some things . . .

Magazine Jottings

This week's column presents a summary of four diverse opinions of what the United States defense program should be. Magazines containing the articles reviewed are in the periodical room of the library.

From the Nation's editorial pages Freda Kirchway raises an emphatic voice advocating universal military training of United States citizens. She argues that an expanded army and navy can create a privileged caste which would mark a society of equality in this nation. Miss Kirchway thinks that if we want to preserve our democratic rights we must all join equally in offering time to avoid the growth of powerful militaristic groups.

A citizens' army raised by compulsory military training exists in democratic Switzerland. In the author's opinion we in American can also have a democratic army and preserve our constitutional rights if American progressives will support universal military training.

The navy and air force must likewise be increased in a democratic way. "The shift toward a war economy has begun," she says Miss Kirchway "and already the threats inherent in the new order are starting to materialize."

Also in the June 15 issue of the Nation is the article "Where Trade Means Safety" by Charles E. Noyes. The principal idea which Mr. Noyes conveys in his article is that, in addition to increasing her armaments, the United States must buy from Latin American countries the goods which the European war has prevented them from selling abroad. Thus Americans can help our southern neighbors avoid the necessity of being drawn into the Nazi economic orbit.

Although it may be a hardship to some American industries, the author believes that we should buy the Latin American products which Mr. Noyes conveys in his article that, in addition to increasing her armaments, the United States must buy from Latin American countries the goods which the European war has prevented them from selling abroad. Thus Americans can help our southern neighbors avoid the necessity of being drawn into the Nazi economic orbit.

Although it may be a hardship to some American industries, the author believes that we should buy the Latin American products which Mr. Noyes conveys in his article that we can with confidence expect the leadership of other nations of the western hemisphere.

The author states, "There is no government in the western hemisphere that would prefer friendly relations with Germany to friendly relations with us, though they are not all as deeply acquainted to the Monroe Doctrine as we."

Mr. Noyes says that buying the South American exports, even if they are a total financial loss, will cost much less than an expanded national defense. Continuing this same line of thought the author believes that an increase in our imports from South American nations will create an increased export trade with them in exchange.

Mr. Noyes states, "We have been pursuing a policy of economic nationalism while we were committed, under the Monroe Doctrine, to hemisphere defense. The two things can no longer be reconciled."

Nations threatened with the loss of the export the British navy has given to the Monroe Doctrine, we realize that we must change our attitude toward the other nations of the western hemisphere.

The author says, "We cannot defend the hemisphere without making such a change, and without defending the hemisphere, we cannot defend ourselves."

Mr. Noyes suggests several actions which the United States could undertake to promote the war toward economic cooperation with the Latin American nations. Military cooperation necessary for effective hemisphere defense and after economic cooperation has been successfully established in the western hemisphere.

Finally Dorothy Villard tells in Forum for June "What We Need for National Defense." She believes that we need to realize the impossibility of a United States isolated from the rest of the United States, establish civilian control over the armed forces of our country, coordinate the military forces of the western hemisphere, and prepare now at hand instead of plunging into a hurry program of hastily planned expansion, and develop and publicize definite statements of what territory we will defend against aggression.

Mr. Villard cites authorities to prove that the strongest nations of Europe at the outset of the war would prevent invasion of our hemisphere by a victorious European nation even if our navy and air forces were defeated. She says, "Given a powerful fleet, submarines, mine fields, bombardment defenses, and a mobile army—did not act as a sufficient deterrent."

The author advocates waiting before we run into preparedness expenditures so that we can observe the efficiency of equipment being tested under fire in Europe. He feels that we should be especially cautious in increasing our navy strength as new types of warships are being developed. A small, highly trained, and well-equipped mobile army seems to him more nearly the gleam in his eye as I ducked into the store, came out a side door a second later, peered from him, said wist blithely on my way.

Experimental Research Reveals Better to Speak Than Not to Speak

As Lady Luck would have it the next persons I met were a young man. I greeted him with a very friendly smile. He ares of the day (a psychological study). He smiled back in the same spirit and tipped his hat to me, he had beautiful eyes. I almost ashed with re- fief, I was so glad that he had not proved to be like the other young lads.

Soon I came to a small recrea- tion park where a great many small children were at play so three to six were playing. I stop- ped to stroll slowly through the park and greet some of the chil- dren. Their reactions were just as interesting as those of the adults. The first one was a little curly-headed girl of four who watched me coming toward her. As only children can, with frank wide open eyes. I smiled at her nodded. After a split second she smiled back and went on on my way running to her nurse as fast as her plump little legs would carry her.

The next child was a wavy haired boy of about six who greet- ed my smile with a grin ano a sheepful childish, "Hi." It predict- ed that this young man will be a "killer-diller" when he grows up. Another little man was a very shy and quiet looking boy for whom I smiled my very best. He looked at me very thoughtfully at me as if he could not decide what to do. Finally he screwed his face up and shut his eyes and cut loose with a bawl that could be heard around the block and which served in this instance only to bring me a big smile, so I made a hasty departure.

However from this brief and unscientific experimentation I have concluded that it is safe to speak to strangers if one uses an honest face or the appearance of looks at the gleam in their eyes.

It is considered unwise to speak to strangers while travelling by bus and by train have also given me an excellent lead on how to look for my psychological research. Therefore it can be said that more of value that the data secured from street greetings for in travelling one gets to talk to strangers long- er and observe them more closely.

At times the "ladies have been cursed on me" and I was spoken back in the same spirit and tipped while night a sat down in a bus beside a man who looked to be on his safe section. One was badly started to move before he turned to me with a strangely beaming eyes and asked, "Do you go to church?" I said that I did and still raised eye brows which he could not see in the dark; and then with an unlikely promptness, while I though—if this is one of those fanatical people I'll scream. Well, he was! But I did not scream because I did not want to be taken to the insane asylum at Chattahoochee, so I patiently bore his persistence and let him go to sleep. Every time I would almost doze off he would find a new question, always on the same- lement about and would use all of his long power to try to get the idea over to me and my slum- bers would be shattered for an- other half hour. When he came to its first stop, I found it convenient to change into a seat beside an elderly lady with sleep- closed eyes and try to settle down to rest.

It so happened that the next time I met up with this lady a day time and I sat beside a smartly dressed, intelligent eyed girl about twenty-five years of age. We got to talking about current events and politics and I learned that she was a Republi- lican from the north. There we were sorry to part and felt as if we had known each other for years. After each had given to the other a new angle on life which we had gained from our individual environments and associations.

The most unusual acquaintance I have ever made was a handsome man about thirty years old. I had never seen him before, looked out the window at the scenery when he stepped on the trivial conver- sation. I noticed for the first time that he had very stormy, un- happy eyes when the mood of the conversation suddenly changed and he said, "I could not tell this to any one I know, but you are a stranger whom I shall probably never see again, so I am going to talk to you if you do not mind. I have a problem to settle and

T was on a balmy clear week one of the directors jauntily swag- ot through the men's section. Coo- sideration regard to clothes and lower cold mass and and snapped out of scion. Moral of the story being that directors around these up whistling.

I want an unbiased opinion on it. ai I go not talk to some one about it a state go crazy." I blandly re- plied, "Well, I would have to know you go crazy while I am around to be stunned and that." and I heard the most pitiable story of heart break, one could imagine. in fact, I could hardly believe it myself but his sincerity was un- questionable. I could offer him no real advice so I tried to quiet him up by telling him that every cloud has a silver lining. Wasn't he changed buses, he seemed to have dropped a few of the cares of the world off his individual shoulders, but it was probably due to bringing his trouble out into the fresh air rather than the ou- tside-room "silver lining" theory.

The last persons whom I shall mention are a young pair of twins, a boy and a girl, going to a soun- thern college for their last year. They had the disease that is often common among college students which I have called "Collegia's the attitude of I-know-it-all, even though I myself am a college student. It was interesting to hear some to pose as a young business woman and watch her facial ex- pressions and informative air as their eyes sparkled with their importance. They were telling me all the things that any well- informed person ought to know and not once did they mention any current events or current lit- erature. Of course, this may have been due to the fact that both of them were mathematics majors. When they left the bus, I got a newspaper to read.

As I have already told you, I have concluded that it is safe to speak to strangers while travelling. I believe it is also safe to talk to strangers while travelling. (but I do not know about going riding with them). I also have con- cluded that this is one of the best ways to learn about different people—how they feel, what they think, and what they do—because many people will talk more freely and frankly to strangers than they will to some one whom they know very well. So if you wish to live a much more interesting life, do not miss a single chance to talk to people—strangers or not!

INQUIRING REPORTER

The question asked by the In- quiring Reporter this week was directed at the more enrolled in the summer session. The co-eds were asked for their pet like and dislike on a woman's campus.

Richard G. Banks: My pet like is some of the women and my pet dislike is some of the other wo- men.

William A. Lang: I like the phy- sical characteristics of this cam- pus. It seems to have a person- ality which is the result of the way the girls react to the presence of men on the campus. My only fault is that I can't find enough time to do all the things I would like to do.

W. Ocell Shumpert: I like the young girls and I dislike the older ones.

J. D. Wooten: I particularly like the craft activities in the workshop and I can't say that I dislike anything.

John Anderson: I like the wo- men but I don't like the interfer- ring men.

Richard P. Trogden: I like many things, especially the pleasant sur- roundings in the dining hall. How- ever I don't like the menus.

J. Alan Cross: Most of all I like the friendly attitude of the regu- lar residents on campus. Least of all do I like standing in line in the cafeteria at breakfast.

Lt. Lamar Kirby: I guess I like best the prospect of Friday, Aug- ust 23. I dislike most the high ave nerave of the women stu- dents.

Charles E. Woodham, jr.: I am crazy about the women but I do wish their stocking seams were straight on Sundays.

R. P. Edwards: Best of all I like the way the participating women and the main fault I can find is the early light flash- bc- cause of the heat, but they are interested and hard working. I like a woman's college because women as a whole respond more readily to academic life than men. They are more interested in study. Among women there are fewer lar- ge- and fewer topnotchers.

The student body as a whole is very friendly and the staff lost at Camp Plastacova the best ides.

Frank Taylor: The women. The l best looking and the best mixers are on a woman's campus but so are the extreme opposite.

Engineer Gives Building Plans

Renovation of Parts of 3 Dormitories Underway

Renovation of the south wing of the Wescott building and parts of Jennie Murphree and the replacement of steam mains in the heating system are the principle features of the summer building program, Herbert D. Mendenhall, resident engineer announced yesterday.

The bacteriology laboratory on the south wing of the Wescott building is at present being remodeled which includes the rearranging of old and installation of new laboratory equipment, improvement of the lighting system and provision of additional storage space. Rooms 304, 305, 306 and five of the music practice rooms are being renovated following the policy to renovate a portion of the south wing of the administration building each summer until all of it has been done. Hardly any improvement has been made on that part of the building for about 20 years.

To Children

To children the program includes repainting the parlors, renovating all the woodwork, and repairing and reworking dressers and tables.

The laundry in the basement of Jennie Murphree is being remodled to provide for a housekeeper's office. At the same time a concrete floor is being constructed and a short rock partition erected. Room 237 of Reynolds is to be remodeled into a suite for the social director. In Landis fire proof wire partitions have been constructed in the basement to provide for locking in trucks and storage bones during the summer. Other repairs are being constructed in Gilchrist, Jennie Murphree and Bryan basements to eliminate the necessity of hauling all trash to the kitchen incinerator.

To prevent the steam and hot water pipes of the heating system are being tested and repaired from where the new system is located near the Student-Alumni building to the distribution point near the Wescott building and to the dem-onstration school. The new mains will make the system more efficient by eliminating the deterioration pipes which consumed excessive steam.

seems more appropriate than anything else we've seen. Doesn't the college have a laundry?

Contest department: Pick the married men! The reader who first sends us the most nearly correct Bryan ball accompanied by the top of a house or a reasonable facsimile will be awarded a scrub board designed for use in Landis hall wash basins.

Have you noticed that the men on the campus have been going around with a vacant stare each Monday morning? We wonder how much of this is due to their having to fit a description of their laundry into the regular blanks used at the college.

Increased Sex Education Is Necessary, Insists Student

By ANN TOWSON

One of the eternal problems is sex. Though why after so many centuries it should remain a problem is one of the seemingly foolish human follies which there is no answer. More than ever in present times when knowledge of the purpose and functioning of sex organs is available, it is ludicrous as well as tragic that anyone, especially a person who has been exposed to public education, should be so ignorant in reference of sex facts.

Probably one reason for this ill is the fact that we are conscious-ness from early childhood. Little boys and girls are separated on playgrounds, they are taught that they must not dress and undress before each other or speak as freely in a mixed group as they do among their own sex. They are told that the little girls and boys don't share the same bath room, and brothers and sisters as they grow older are placed in separate bedrooms.

One is inclined to say, "But, of course!" to all of these, and there are often practical reasons for each of the things mentioned, however their reason for being mentioned in this paper is to point out that the consciousness created by sex attitude breeds curiosity and inhibitions at an early age which continues in proportion to the growth of the child. By the time he or she reaches high school age it is common for him to have had sexual relations either in a house of ill repute or with girls more of ill repute often still in high school, and more rarely with sweethearts.

Girls fall into three groups, the chaste virgins, the promiscuous, the girls who have had sexual relations with one boy for love or experience, and the girls who limit intimacies to petting and lesser forms of sexual expression.

In the cases of both the boys and girls education might have prevented their indulging in an act which may bring them years of regret if not actual physical disease. They are reacting to an unnatural sex - consciousness, which we in our society have developed, and they were attempting to satisfy a curiosity or find adventure in a form which cannot be condoned according to the present day standards.

If sex were allowed to be accepted as a commonplace devoid of mystery and shame it would still lose nothing of its importance or value in the proper setting and yet would lose the high emotional and foolhardy deeds by its fascination as something naughty and daring.

The results of the present perverse disease from its stigma and place it in the class of other physical ills to be treated by medical attention, has come near succeeding to make syphilis and gonorrhea as respectable words as tuberculosis. However, in spite of the increasing public recognition of these dread diseases and the increasing awareness of the ignorance among the masses of sexual facts leading to their contagion it has not yet come to public realization that public school sex education might be the best preventative and therefore the surest cure.

Such education should be begun early as the natural counterpart of a hygiene course starting at the latest a child enters school. The course in its first years could concentrate on personal cleanliness and hygiene in more detail as that by the time a child reaches the elementary school age most of the body (including the sex organs) is so familiar to him as to be taken for granted. If from the time a child first became aware of the distinction in the sexes he was accustomed to the idea so that physical differences were as commonplace as the difference in clothes and hair cut, then a large part of the shock and curiosity and feeling of the sexual awareness our traditions now foster would be eliminated.

The reaction of the conservative minded call this a advocation of free love, promiscuity, or a plea for the abolution of modesty, let them consider that enlightenment of knowledge about sex would not heighten curiosity but satisfy it, with the benefit that would come to many from the ending of sexual hysteria and the dangers of sexual diseases that would be outweigh any of its disadvantages. And so for modesty it is only false modesty that encourages conventions leading to greater sex consciousness so that we have been cursed with the most sex-conscious nation in the world.

Another subject that public education would be purely physiological and physiological and any attempt to introduce any wish attached to it could be cultivated in the home and if desired in the church or schools. But it is an obvious fact that wholesome knowledge of sex and the elements in them are the best basis for any other idealism that might be desired.

Thoughts of sex education for the young bring up to deeper thoughts as to the origin of the present sex standards and conventions. A study of history always reveals quite different thought on the subject in various stages of its growth. We find incest being tabood after its practice is found to endanger family offspring, and we find demands for polygamy in wives and outgrowth of the population problem. The low position status of fatherless children with the intended economic problem. It would seem that the reason as to how long this demand will stay in force is the disparity from having a child as a result of sex relations gives greater freedom and control to women in sex relations, saying in bull sessions, "If I were sure I wouldn't have a baby . . ." The individual sexual feeling has seem to feel that the greater harm in extra-marital relations is the advent of a child, and when this possibility is eliminated there is nothin artificial, except to their own personality as they allow it to effect them.

There is no cause for alarm among the present older generation for the rise of the girls speaking thus admit under close questioning that they couldn't get away with immoral sexual relations from their own point of view. They would be too troubled by a guilty conscience and too much in dread of society's disapproval to find love or excitement apart of their marital life. Yet the question persists how long will these patterns last.

In the final stages of sex education after a healthy understanding of the fundamentals of sex and the physiological and psychological information on birth control as a form of social progress should be given, and contraceptive devices and drugs care should be open to both boys and girls.

Deterration of the sexes for such courses should be abandoned since their value as a means of emphasizing a superficial attitude which has no place in a program aimed at lessening sex-consciousness.

An enlightened progressive movement in sex education for the masses, with less concentration on the approval of Mrs. Grundy and more on the aid it could be in removing superstitution, ignorance, shame, and poverty is a needed step in the direction of human welfare.

the important role of nutrition in health

The White House conference on Child Welfare was a representative to participate in this study. Dr. Rose pointed out that the United States has three principle needs in securing proper nutrition for the people. First the children must be educated in the value of food values and how to feed; secondly, the consumers must be educated to these values and lastly the value of milk and other cereals must be shown.

Dr. Rose, a member of the Columbia University faculty was United States representative to the League of Nations committee on nutrition. This week committee work took a turn in which she has been conducting here.

Men Are Topic Of Midnight Conversations

Men On Campus Are No Controversial Issue In Dormitories

One of the few constants about women is their amazing ability to talk. They will talk about anything, constantly and for the better the temperature they will create much time and sustained effort is required to shut them up.

So it has come to pass on the campus that women are a never stimulating proximity of the sexes an extra and choice bit of conversation. Their many names now talking a bit louder and a bit longer than they did last summer school started.

As in all controversial issues some of the comments on the 'he's' are tinged with bitterness but others are gifts of praise.

The reason for bitterness is doubtedly springs from the fact that those that there are not enough men to go around, although a few of them are busily trying hard. It has been rumored about the womanly corridors that the effects of a surplus of the men as they strive for some kind finding is a very distressing problem.

Such pithy remarks as "I'm your boy friend for the day only, and not quality" keen the conversation lively around about the dormitories By mere and diminishing many a cry now Lothario has a host of unlikable attributes of a wolf.

It is interesting to observe the perceptive comments overheard at the engagement card table at social time this week. Some of a great amount of suggestion and some of the overly drooled insistence upon his state of blessedness.

The observance of feminine etiquette condemns campus dates by the fellows' escorting of the girls to their sorority houses. If there are just the two-feeding hall an economical evening.

Yet, one fact remains. They be their men. Each and every one of the '74.

Stilwell, Daniels Direct Groups Announced By Sellers

The personnel of the summer school orchestra and chorus has just been announced by Mr. Owen P. Sellers, of the school of music.

Miss Hilda Stilwell is director of the chorus, which is composed of 30 members. Mr. Herman Daniels is the conductor of the orchestra.

Members of the chorus are: Betty Jacobi, Betty Brown, Vivienne Harper, Grace Neville, Mrs. P. Getsen, Lora Lucas, Mrs. Marie Seeger, Elizabeth Inman, Norma Porter, Mrs. Carroll Sheldon, Mrs. Edna Coutant, Mary Lou Pack, Helen Swanson, Bernice Bannerman, Alice Fernandez, Cornbel Cheatham, Ouida Lawrence, Lois Alexander, Ethel Gaynor, and Orsie Gilbert. Myrtle Mae Hoffman is accompanist.

The orchestra includes: Virginia Rouse, Opal Seville, and Mrs. S. P. Getsen, violins; Mrs. Sheldon, viola; Page Nichols, bass; Howell Hampton, ocala; Martin T. Walline, flutes; Ina Halpern, clarinet; and Myrtle Mae Hoffman, piano.

Vespers Will Feature New Chorus, Orchestra

The summer chorus and orchestra will be featured at Vespers service, July 14, in the auditorium in the Wescott building. Mrs Mary Megginson of the college orchestra faculty will sing a solo, "Before the Crucifix" by La Parre.

The chorus selections will include: "Faith, Hope, and Love" by Shelley; "Lift Thine Eyes" from "Elijah" by Mendelssohn; "Thanks Be To God" by Dickson.

The orchestra will play "On Sunday Morn" by Mackle-Beyer; "Intermezzo" by Bohnman, and "In a Monastery Garden" by Ketelbey.

Fetner Wins Quiz Quibble

Professor Quiz and Kay Kyser went into a huddle and chose William Joubert and Ruth Prather as contestants last night and came out with the right answer—Mary Frances Fetner, for the prize winner on Q's number one quiz student representated Gilchrist hall in the contest.

A fair mind crowd attended the fun which saw six contestants struggle over skull crackers produced at the Robert Bolton and Alan Cross masters of ceremonies. The race was red hot and the pile driver was declared a dead heat between Eleanor Mullins, Wirt Lands and Phoebe James for East Landis. Millicent Beck, Bryan hall standard bearer, was found followed by Don Carr for the m-n and Edna Leibovit, Conrad.

Kathleen Gruppe and Myrtle Mae Hoffman gave a two piano arrangement of many popular melodies as part of the entertainment.

Feminine Curls And Spirits Are Down with Rain

Rain may be excellent for grass and growing vegetables, but it is destructive to feminine appearances and minds.

It has come to the summer campus that the weather may have become bitter—very bitter—about the weather, they all agree that rain does keep the temperature down slightly, but not enough to justify their continuing to ravage-ing appearances and morbid outlooks.

Many girls tired of the tiresome process of setting their hair every night before they go to bed, have the carefully arranged coiffure look like hemp — straight hemp—by the time they reach breakfast table.

It is not only the unpremeditated hair-set that bothers them, however. It goes far deeper. They complain that the rain "takes the personifications of the word 'drool.'"

Another reason for their perturbed state is that books when left in purses and pocketbooks open to class are not fast color and run into pretty unattractive, tattoo ish up and down arms and dresses.

Slushy shoes, running make-up, pleated skirts without pleats, and the inevitable cold—symptoms of discomfort all add up to a distressing total.

The rain itself wouldn't be so grim, they insist, if only it were not a simple case of being doubly-crossed by a traitorous sun.

It continually amazes them how peculiar the campus looks through rain spattered sun glasses. Yet, they will sportingly, if they were to come to class bedecked in rain-proofs and other rubberized garbe rain would very likely be replaced soon by a smug, heckling sun.

Of course, some people will be found who like the rain and the weatherman reports. Probably some students from Florida State and Girl Scout indoctrination makes them walk about with an open umbrella — ready for anything.

Undoubtedly the reason for a conciousness of the weather, during the summer session, has been developed to a fine degree by the presence of men on campus.

A sustaining thought for the women is that the men look rather fimied too.

Johnson To Give Speech Recital

Original Sketches Will Be Presented

Miss Emilie Johnson, member of the summer school speech department faculty, will present the first faculty recital Thursday at 8:15 in the Augusta Conradi Little Theater.

The first half of the program will consist of Miss Johnson's original character sketches. The Minuet by Louis N. Parker, will be presented for the remainder of the program.

Miss Johnson, a recent graduate of Florida State College, did graduate study here last year and has been active in Little Theater work in Tallahassee.

Compton, Sellers Present Recital

Miss Jeanne Compton, organist, and Owen F. Sellers, cellist, gave a joint recital Tuesday evening in the auditorium. Miss Compton was assisted in an organ duet by Miss Stimmel, who received her certificate here in 1933. Miss Mary Esther Winslow was accompanist.

The program included: Pastorale (Traditional), arranged by Clokey; Sarabande (Correlli-Clokey); Pastaize and Fugue in A Minor (Bach) by Miss Compton.

Sonate, (Henri Eccles); Orientale (Cui); Kaledoscope (Cui); Chasonnette (Maurice Baron) by Owen Sellers.

Old Dutch Lullaby, arranged by Dickinson; Children's March (Grainger-Barnes); Londonderry Air, arranged by Coleman; Festival Toccata (Fletcher); The March from Ruin of Athens (Beethoven); Pantasie (Hesse), by Miss Stimmel.

Duet arrangements by Dickinson and Lockwood by Miss Compton and Miss Stimmel.

42 Candidates Will Receive Degrees Sat.

Dr. Hinson Will Deliver Commencement Address To Outgoing Class

Forty-two students will be candidates for degrees at the commencement exercises of the first summer session which will be held in the auditorium on Saturday, July 20. Dr. Murphry R. Hinson, professor of education and first Florida dean to head the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, will deliver the commencement address.

The number of candidates is about the same as the graduates of the first session last year. Candidates in the School of Education number 24; 12 candidates are enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences; three in the School of Home Economics, and two in the School of Music. Only one student, Mrs. Myrtis Tureman Kurz, expects to receive a master's degree. She is a candidate for the Master of Arts degree and the subject of her thesis.

Dr. Mark H. DeGraff, professor of education, is in charge of plans for graduation. He will be assisted by Mrs. Frances Harlow, who last year was one of the few candidates as their representative at a meeting held this week.

The candidates, according to divisions of the college are as follows:

Graduate division, Master of Arts, Myrtis Tureman Kurz, of Tallahassee.

College of Arts and Sciences, Bachelor of Arts, Jane Ann Anderson, Joan Hendrix, Mary Evelyn Skrvaksi; Bachelor of Science, Nina Elizabeth Bryant, Elizabeth Hashagen, Charlotte Laverne Kimball, Marja Ruth Pinkerton, Harriette Tobin; Bachelor of Science in Commerce, Elizabeth Joyce Dorothy Marie Marwick, Gladys Geraldine Peacock, Evelyn Bessie, Master of Science, Bachelor of Arts in Education, Betty Boose, Callie Mae Conness, Florentine Johnson Doughtry, Josephine Doughtry, Olney Teresa Ruitt, Frances Isabelle Kincaid, Jennie Davis Flood, Lilla Gilbert, Ida Larkins, Esthel Mae Hampton. Language Teachers Tell Of European Adventures

BY JAYNE MENDENHALL

The name of Europe, aside from its associations with the air raid straps, black-outs, and bomb proof cellars, always wields a mysterious fascination in the minds of our modern language department, most of whom have lived there at some point of their existence. Miss Lucy Lyons, associate professor of French, recalls her first experiences abroad with evident enjoyment. She was just nineteen years old when she crossed the Atlantic for the first time.

"Imagine," she laughs, "a Protestant girl from south Georgia who had never crossed the state line before, in a French convent in Paris!" The prejudices she carried as part of her baggage were soon lost however, and she could drink coffee from a bowl and eat hard rolls without trouble; attend the theater Sunday matinees; and understand natives, in addition to see Sarah Bernhardt; listen to Gustave Lanson lecture in Braun's Vie de Jesus without feeling her Protestant blood run cold; and even admire the audacity of the Russian Reds, who were only pale pink in those days, and their classroom disturbances.

"I felt myself fluent in French for the first time however," she reflects, "when I was called upon to represent the South in a dinner table discussion. Aided and abetted by an old gentleman whose knowledge of America was limited to James Finnemore Coop-

Propaganda Problem

"Propaganda is any organied or concerted group effort to spread particular doctrines, and information," is an acceptable definition of the stuff being fired at us from all sides.

While Europe is in the turmoil of battle and the United States is in the throes of a presidential election information is plentiful. In fact with the German Ministry of Propaganda, the British Ministry of Information, and the Democratic and Republican National Committees filling the newspapers and radios with their particular brands of information it is impossible to draw accurate conclusions.

The Republicans have already started their build up of Wendell Willkie in the usual American Success Story manner and in a few days the Democrats will begin.

Among the propaganda organs of Germany in United States is a weekly paper, "Facts in Review" issued by the German Library of Information in New York. This paper is nice propaganda for it is not hysterical and it quite effectively presents the German point of view. In a typical issue appears an interview with Hitler on his intentions in the western hemisphere, a feature on the hundredth birthday of the German Kintergarten, and the coming economic revival in Europe. In this paper one notices that there are about fourteen daily news broadcasts, nine of which are in English, from Berlin with "directional antenna to North America." Casually turning the radio on one night recently we heard a skit with a South Carolina setting and the characters praising the German background of certain South Carolina towns. The broadcast came from Berlin.

Our natural sympathies being with the British we are not so likely to notice their propaganda. But it is potent. Note the conflicting reports on casualties, air raids, victories and losses coming from the two departments of propaganda.

The failure to note the source of the information—who wrote or spoke it, who published it, where, when and WHY—often leads us to strange opinions. Opinions we would not hold if we noted the above, checked with information on the same subject from other sources, and evaluated critically. Opinions drawn thus would not make us completely susceptible to propaganda.

A Woman Vice-President?

Why not a woman for vice-president? This is the question asked by Mrs. Elizabeth Conklin, Illinois national committeewoman. Why not? We certainly have many women in public life who could capably fill this position. The very first one that comes into the minds of most Floridians is our own Ruth Bryan Rohde, who handled many jobs for the United States in a manner seldom equalled by male diplomats. Miss Perkins and others have done acceptable work so that no one can say that women cannot do it. With the more and more important part that women are taking in the business world and the world of politics, it might be well for some party to add thousands of women voters to its supporters by advancing the candidacy of a capable member of their sex. You will note in nearly all schools that the better workers, on the average, are generally women and that their general intelligence is high. Men who come into contact with this class of women are sure to see the benefits of having a woman in our second highest office. We are proud that our two parties are placing increasingly greater dependence in their women workers. Should not the next step be a woman for vice president?

Guest Editorial—Herbert Phillips.

HUMID LUCIDS

Monday morning saw a lot of faces around campus that seemed to have returned from other lands and set-ups.

Crawling with Nature

A college girl with ant hill sitting proclivities has lately taken to wondering if when she gets her degree she shouldn't go into the flea circus profession.

Verily, it gives me the screaming botts to be so constantly doublecrossed on the raincoat vs. sunglasses proposition.

Is She Matron or Mouse?

The night matron in Bryan hall is in sort of a dither. It seems as though the noblemen of nature who live there become problem children after light flash. In short—their ebullient spirits don't fizzle down and out by 11 p. m. So the matron, being a woman with a mission in life rings their floor phone—but vainly. For the perverse little boys just won't answer and they are smug in the knowledge that she won't beard them in their den.

Either the flit is getting weaker and the insects stronger or I am becoming the victim of my own morbid imagination.

One of the more skittish coeds would be on his wife's crud list if she but knew that her beloved and educated one had acquired a play mate who likes sunrises. The playmate would also be distressed to learn that her obliging little chum is not so free as he insists.

Inhibited

While the rest of the multitudes were primitively eating watermelon with their bare teeth and hands, a lone, though proper student, placidly and obviously used a spoon.

Said one dampened college girl to another of the same type: "This weather brings out the Sadie Thompson in me."

Perhaps it is the weather or an impending sense of loneliness that has made a few of our coeds want to do right by their recently

Among the Amazons

Or the Travels of Gullible through the Land of Femina Frustrata.

And we mean gullible, too.

Last week we mentioned something or another about the enormous amount of laundry waving in the breeze in the dormitory windows. This had no effect, the amounts as well as the sizes are still enormous. However, dear reader, this is not what hurts us. We saw a pair of silk hose dangling nonchalantly from a window of one of the academic buildings. Could it be that one of the lady professors had seized the opportunity to rinse out a pair of hose in the privacy of her office?

The other night we lay awake and listened to the weird rumble of the jungle drums transmitting the latest gossip from Landis to Glichrist to Broward to Bryan. Until then we had always wondered but had never known how the smallest morsel, sown one night, would be on everyone's tongue along with the morning coffee. A truly remarkable phenomenon.

In our travels over the land of Femina Frustrata we have noted a widespread feeling of unrest, insecurity, frustration, and of downright unhappiness. Why? No doubt there are numerous contributing causes about which we know nothing.

We hesitate to pass judgment based on the meagre facts at our disposal but may we suggest that government at F. S. C. W., both student and faculty, is not all that it might be? There seems to be a vague feeling of prisoner and keeper rather than one of friend and friend.

If the main objective of student government is the enforcement of strict discipline then it may be considered successful to a certain degree but if its objectives are of a broader social scope, then it cannot be said to be successful in any appreciable degree whatsoever.

Why? As we continue to travel through the land of Femina Frustrata we become more and more impressed with the mysteries of the feminine mind and with our incompetency in interpreting it, but one point does seem clear to us. The average woman, unguided, may not be trusted to sit in impartial judgment of another woman. Why this is we don't

Magazine Jottings . . .

"M-Day and the Business Man" in Harpers for July pictures the life of industrial regimentation that a business man will face if this nation goes to war. The author, Leo M. Cherne, the executive secretary of the Research Institute of America, has made a careful study of the War Department's Industrial Mobilization Plan in relation to its effect on American business.

Mr. Cherne explains that complete mobilization of a nation's economic life is as necessary in modern warfare as military mobilization. The Army and Navy have worked on the problem of industrial mobilization since the National Defense Act was passed in 1920. After surveying ten thousand industrial plants they decided the nature and quantity of essential war materials that these plants will be expetced to produce under industrial mobilization.

A system of economic control to help solve the difficulties faced by the executives of these plants which will cooperate with the government has been planned by the War and Navy Departments. These are some of the obstacles to be met by business men in essential industries: their skilled labor supply will be greatly reduced by voluntary enlistment and the draft; their raw materials will encounter transportation delays; their workers will suffer a housing shortage; their profits and the wages of their workers will be limited; housing and price control will be applied; capital may be difficult to secure; as well as other restrictions and hindrances.

But the situation of business men engaged in the production of essential goods will be more fortunate compared to that of the business man who produces or sells articles listed by the government as non-essential or luxury products. Most of these manufacturers will be forced out of business altogether unless they cao adapt their plants to the manufacture of supplies actually needed by the nation. Through rationed control of consumption and exercise of a system of priorities in transportation, labor, fuel and power, raw materials, capital, and construction, all designed to aid efficient production of required manufactures the government will be able to limit the production of all non-essentials.

A number of boards and commissions will be created to control economic life. The War Resources Administration has already been organized by the president. A War Industries Board and a War Labor Administration will attempt to adjust problems of labor and industry impartially in order to avert strikes on one hand and profiteering on the other. A War Financial Control Commission will regulate all capital investment. Prices will be pegged in harmony with the wage level by a Price Control Commission. Other agencies will further limit the business man. Altogether the American business man will certainly have cause to regret this nation's participation in a war should it materialize

Sumner S. Slichter, Harvard economic professor, makes several practical suggestions about "Paying for Armaments" in the July Atlantic. Since enormous sums must be spent for armaments within the next two years to make our military expansion program a reality, and since the federal deficit already amounts to about three billion dollars per year, we must decide in the near future how we shall pay the bill for the proposed armament expansion.

Increased taxes, government economies, and an increase in the deficit are the three means Mr. Slichter suggests. These three are to be used in combination, the proportions of each depending upon how rapidly we want to attain a state of full preparedness, and how quickly we can remedy the existing shortage of skilled labor and plant facilities.

Taxes alone cannot successfully support the three to five billion dollar increase in expenditures, states the author. Such heavy taxes would produce a drastic contraction in our national economy; the lowered standard of living would increase the number of unemployed already more than nine million. A moderate increase in taxes such as the billion dollar addition that Congress has just passed (We are feeling it now in increased luxury taxes on motion pictures and tobacco), is desirable because it lowers our standard of living only a little. The author hopes that this reduction will help decrease our consumption of some products, such as automobiles, which are manufactured in plants now needed for armaments production, and partially relieve the shortage of skilled labor and plant capacity.

Mr Slichter believes that a comprehensive revision of the American tax structure is needed in order to make the middle classes pay their fair share of expenses without discouraging industrial expansion. He suggests that skilled la-

Annual Dance Will Be Held Here Saturday

Girls Will Chase Men At Sadie Hawkins Hill Billy Dance

The annual summer school dance, which will be held tomorrow night in the gymnasium from 8:30 until 12:00, will be in the form of a Sadie Hawkins hill billy dance.

Guests are asked to dress portraying the characters of Al Capp's comic strip. Prizes will be given for the best costumes.

Yvonne Marchesseau and members of the folk dancing classes will lead folk and square dancing. Decorations will follow the hill billy theme.

Student posteress for the dance are, Bettie Young, Jeanne Webster, Myrtle Mae Hoffman, Catherine Brown, Mary Frances Fetner, Alberta Lyles, Jane Anderson, and Minna Dennis.

Special guests for the dance include, Dr. Edward Conradi, and Mrs. Ernest Ekermeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Ramon Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Kellum, Miss Anna May Tracy, Miss Olivia N. Dorman, Miss Maude Flowers, Miss Katherine Warren and Dr. Elizabeth Jacobs Gardner.

Faculty members invited to serve on the floor committee are, Dr. and Mrs. Herman Kurtz, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Eyman, and Mr. and Mrs. Owen Sellars.

All members of the faculty, staff, and student body are invited to attend.

borers contribute by accomplishing a 48 hour week instead of the 40 to 42 hours per week now required them by law.

Economies in the government through cutting public works appropriations, eliminating unnecessary personnel, ending government purchase of silver, and gradually reducing the WPA rolls are economies suggested by the author. He estimates that they might total as much as three and a half billion dollars annually.

A large increase in the national debt will have to be tolerated, but it will enable us to increase the armaments production of industry without lowering living standards. On the other hand it will be a dangerous financial condition liable to disastrous inflationary effects. The author suggests that as large a portion as possible of this deficit be financed by purchase of bonds with the increased savings of laborers and middle men.

Finally Mr. Slichter offers this consoling prospect: to increase the government revenues in the hope of lessening the deficit, the government will step in to the power to encourage private initiative and investment; for an increased of national income means increased revenue from taxes.

men's schools. In the 11 states west of the Rocky mountains, including California, Idaho, Wyoming, Utah, Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, and California, only nine women's colleges exist, seven of which are Catholic convents. These nine schools are distributed among seven states. Colorado having one convent; Oregon with one convent; and California, five women's colleges, two Catholic convents, Schripps college and Mills college. Of these 11 schools 7 have a state woman's college, but all have coeducational state universities.

In considering the entire group of states, east of the Mississippi the western half of the United States, one finds the Blue Book that out of the 22 states only two have a state woman's college, Texas with one in Denton and Oklahoma with one in Chickasha. Like the states west of the Rockies mentioned above, North and South Dakota have no women's college of any kind. Besides Colorado, Oregon, and California the states having women's colleges are: Texas with 4, two of which are denominational colleges; Louisiana with 2, one Catholic; Arkansas 1, Methodist, Mississippi 3, one Catholic; Missouri 2, all denominational, and two Catholic convents; Kansas 3 both Catholic; Iowa 1, Catholic; Minnesota 4, all Catholic.

All of these states west of the Mississippi have state-supported coeducational universities and there are two such institutions. Arkansas and Oklahoma have a university and an agriculture and mechanical school which are coeducational, while California has the University of

Tomyn Holds Lead In Tennis Match

Tomyn, Jones, Phillips Go Into Second Round

Three "coeds" swept aside opposition Thursday afternoon to lead seven other tennis players into the quarterfinal round of the Florida State College tennis tournament. Ms. Tomyn, Ms. Jones and "Swede" Phillips won rather handily.

Tomyn, East Marion coach and a former Stetson tennis team member, beat R. P. Johnson 6-4 6-4 in the best match so far. Jones, Monticello principal, defeated the only woman in the top half of the draw, 6-4, 6-6. Phillips, Monticello and A. & M. graduate, defeated number two man, had some trouble with Don Cates, Lee, before winning 8-2, 8-1. On the play so far, Tomyn rates a slight favorite to take the tourney.

Due to the rain the matches have been slow in getting under way and Edna Leibovit, who has charge of the play, asks that all first round matches be played off this week end. She also requests that players who intend to defeat her or their opponents know immediately so that the tournament will not be held up. After scores have been posted matches must be played within two days or else defaulted.

The only match left, in the top half of the draw pits John Anderson and W. O. Shumpert. The lower bracket matches follow: Martha Zewadski v. Iris Sperber, Bank of Landis. Catherine Bliss, Landis v. Louise Lorenz, Brownard, Leslie Mathis, Brevard v. Ruth Heekin, Landis; Mildred Lane v. Frances Denny, both of Landis; Nellie Cox, Monticello v. Lobs, both of Landis; Ruth Dichenmuller v. Clara Louise Smith, both of Landis; Elizabeth Brown, Bryan v. Virginia Rouse, Landis.

California at Berkely and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Next taking into consideration the states east of the Mississippi the women's colleges are found too numerous to list: however, only eight states have a state woman's college. Since two of these eight, Delaware and New Jersey have the state men's and women's college in the same town, there remain only six which have their women completely segregated. Those states are: Mississippi having Mississippi State College for Women at Monteville; Georgia, Georgia State College for Women in Milledgeville (G. M. C. in

In your opinion is the present two short summer sessions plan an improvement over the old eight weeks session? Why?

It is interesting to note that in the northeast, where women's colleges are expected to thrive, New Hampshire and Maine have no woman's college of any kind and Vermont has only one. Bennington college, established in 1932.

Of all the states mentioned so far, Florida, Delaware, and New Jersey are the only ones having state supported institutions which do not have at least one coeducational university and, as it has been pointed out, the last two states have the men's and women's college in the same city. The District of Columbia has only two women's colleges, one Catholic and one private school.

two short summer sessions are an advantage over the old eight weeks session. It gives those students who wish to get their degrees in a short length of time a chance to work all summer and receive more credits. It gives them a chance opportunity to do a little work and also have a vacation.

Alberta Lyles: Indeed I do think the present summer school plans are a great improvement over the old. It is possible for one to take more courses hence more credits than formerly. A one can go to school for a while and then enjoy a lengthy vacation. Two terms provide for two types of growths, both of which are vitally important to teacher and future classes, under her guidance. She may grow through contact with college courses in one term and still have time for a needed vacation in travel or recreation.

Elizabeth Chapman: No, because you cannot possibly get as much out of two short terms as in one 8 week session when work is crammed into so short a time. However you can get more credit.

Alice Shuler: Yes, you can get in six weeks what used to be gotten in 8 which is a decided improvement.

Eloise Steele: Yes, because in 8 weekly only 8 hours of work may be gotten while in 11 weeks 12 hours—Therefore it can be considered a decided improvement to be able to complete twice as much work in the semester.

Dr. Abbey: The system has been an improvement. That is it seems to be accomplishing its purpose—to standardize the system so that the requirements of the Florida Educational system may be met.

Dr. Raymond Bellamy: "I don't believe the six week session is sufficient to complete a semester's work. The difference in the plans lies in the difference in the students purpose in attending summer school."

Dr. Paul Shankweiler: "Six weeks is hardly time to do a whole semester's work. The result therefore is that we merely skim the surface."

Herbert Phillips: "The six weeks session is long enough for those who have been in school for nine months already. By the end of six weeks they are ready for a change of scenery."

er and the Ritz hotel. I was able to show that there were two sides to the Civil war."

After two years of student life in Paris Miss Lesser went to Hanover, Germany, where education was a primary and natural privilege. Reading aloud in German, being read to, embroidering, attending all afternoon in a beer garden listening to the music, hiking in the Hartz mountains—all this gave her an ease in the language and a foundation for the growth which she undoubtedly would not have gained in any classroom.

The two years spent in France during the World war and the year in Germany aided in the occupation of the Rhine. I made use of the language I had previously acquired acted as interpreter, translating, training servants and doing many other odd jobs that had to be done," she related. Previous foreign experience made her eligible for overseas duty. In 1921 and again in 1926 she returned to Europe to visit in the Sorbonne in Paris, Spain, Italy and England where she gained first hand information about the present state of affairs in Europe.

"That trip," she regarded, "gave me a feeling of sympathy for Henry, Henri, Heinrich and Henrequez at war."

Dr. Margie Burks, associate professor of Spanish, has likewise spent in England, France and Spain to her credit. Concerning her student at the leading universities in the three countries she exclaimed, "My but European standards of scholarship are high!" Like Miss Lesser she was a little cautious at first every time she started to say a word in French or Spanish.

"Living in private homes and associating as much as possible with the natives I began to think in the foreign language and finally all instantly word of it but my fear of making mistakes and of being laughed at. I soon learned," she stated, that not thing a foreigner never does is to laugh at one's blunders.

"I began to take a frank part in the table talk; my fellow boarders were probably surprised to learn that the American who for months had said only 'oh, oh, mes', 'Oui, madame' had some ideas and could express them intelligibly." One little Spanish lady who was dining with us for the first time exclaimed enthusiastically, 'Ein Spanish wonderful'! Even the foreigners can speak it!"

Dr. Burks' diversion were the fiestas and fetes which delight the Spanish heart. A pocket camera and a professional air often won her a place on the front row with newsreelmen at weddings, funerals, bapisms, dances, night clubs, sports nights, fairs, carnivals and bull fights—"every place the crowd went, so we went," she says.

In fact the first time she spoke Spanish without first thinking her sentence out in English was at a bullfight. She describes it glowingly.

"The man was down, the horse on top of the man, and the bull was goring the horse. Suddenly I felt my Spanish friend tugging at my skirt, exclaiming 'Sit down and do not make yourself ridiculous!' I sank into my seat, realizing that I had jumped to my feet and yelled at the top of my lungs, amidst the breathless silence of thousands. 'Salvete! Salvete!'"

Dr. Burks' recipe for really mastering a langue is "learn to laugh and play with a people and their language will follow. However, she adds that a sound knowledge of grammar, idioms and pronunciation are her for the feeling of assurance that she would say the thing correctly if not gracefully, which was a big help in overcoming the first shyness.

Miss Mildred Finnegan, French instructor, is a third who has more than a nodding acquaintance with the Sorbonne. Her stay abroad was limited to three months from the end of June to the first part of September, six weeks of which were spent living in a pension kind of French style boarding house and studying at the university. The remainder of her stay on the continent included travels in Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Holland, Belgium, and the British Isles.

"At the pension after dinner," she reflects, "everyone gathered in the salon for dancing and a sort of social hour. I remember particularly the courtesy and politeness that was the keynote everywhere. The only ones who were impolite to us were the dogs, Bobbie and Minnette, at the pension. They practically lived with us and they did snap."

With classes from 9 to 12 in the mornings at the Sorbonne and lectures in the afternoon at the Institut de Phonetique, Miss Finnegan had only her weekends to see the famous landmarks of Paris, taking the tours on which every American tourist embarks, to visit museums, monuments and historical sites. She was on hand, however, for the Fourteenth of July celebration in Paris, com-knee yet to us the fact seems crystal clear.

In strolling through history building we noticed a penciled notation on the wall written in red ink naming a two-week vacation. Coming at once to the mind of this writer, "Dictionary is cute." We don't know the gentleman but we can't help but wonder if he passed the haven. That's all right don't tell us. It would just make us feel bad.

In case a fire the college apparently expects to have a panic. While we don't mind a few hardships we do think that this isn't exactly cricket.

Perhaps in keeping the men confined to the dormitory during the drill the college had in mind sparing use the awful shock that the sight of those weird figures would certainly have caused. That is indeed a noble thought but why all we came here to be educated. Perhaps also the college figured that no good would be served by permanently turning the coeds against matrimony.

Remembering the fall of the Bastille during the revolution.

"Beginning on the thirteenth and lasting through the sixteenth everyone celebrates with private parties and dancing in the streets. The 14th festival on the fourteenth opens with displays of fireworks and a big parade down the Champs Elysees; everyone brings flowers to put on the tomb of the unknown soldier under the Arch of Triumph, from two or three days and a handful of violets to huge bouquets.' She goes on to tell of the general gaiety and feasting—and the dancing recalls an amusing incident along that line.

"One night we were dining out," she chuckles, "and we were served what would be squabs to us but, pigeons to the French. Imagine the reactions of the Americans present when they discovered two beady black eyes and a beak surmounting their dinner. The meal had been cooked with the heads on! The rest of the company reduced their heads to a mere pile of bones, but somehow our appetites were rather subdued."

Shankweiler Leaves For U of Alabama

Dr. Paul W. Shankweiler, assistant professor of sociology, will leave this weekend for the University of Alabama. He will take over the duties of the head of the department of sociology of Alabama, who is on leave.

Dr. Shankweiler will teach courses in general sociology and criminology as well as act as head of the department.

Dr. Coyle E. Moore, associate professor of sociology, will take Dr. Shankeiler's classes for the remainder of the session.

Cramming Will Start

If this coming week runs true to tradition there will be a concerted dash for the library and neglected study signs will be displayed and sibilant "sh-h-h-h" will be making its rounds.

Another factor to be considered, is mentioned only with a temporary dimse of date cards.

Richards Heads Tallahassee Defense Group

Teachers Are Prominent On Committees Of Patriotic Group

Dr. Harold P. Richards, head of the physics department and veteran of the World War, was recently elected chairman of the Tallahassee Committee for the Defense of America.

The committee of approximately 200 members representing a cross section of the population of Tallahassee is a patriotic organization "devoted to the defense of democracy and the American way of life." Membership is open to every Leon county resident.

Among the faculty members appointed to committees in the organization are: Dr. Edward Conrad, Dr. R. S. Cotterill, Mrs. L. G. Cox, Dr. Dorothy Dunn, Mrs. S. B. Doyle, Dr. R. L. Ryman, Miss Lucy Lester, Mrs. Jeffry Allriend, Mr. Earl L. Vallely, Dr. Marion J. Bayer, Dr. Paul F. Pinner, Dr. Coyle E. Moore, Lieutenant W. H. Barrows, Lieutenant Herbert D. Mendenhall, Dr. Ezra Deviney, and Mr. Royal Hamilton.

Captain Barrows now is in his second month of active duty with the army recruiting headquarters at Jacksonville. Colonel Mendenhall is serving with the army air corps with the headquarters staff at Camp Shelby, Miss., with the fourth Engineers.

Eight faculty members included one woman who served in the first World War. They include: Dr. Guy L. Maxfield, professor of English, who was with the 30th ammunition train of the 3rd Artillery Corps; Dr. R. S. Rivson, professor of education, in the 81st division of the 306th ammunition train overseas; Dr. Leland J. Lewis, head of the history department, artillery service in the Students Army Training Corps at the University of Maine a short time before the armistice was signed; Miss Lucy Lester, assistant professor of French, who was the first southern woman to get across the U. S. front lines when she was in France 18 months in the nurse corps of women's work in Saoudun base hospital center, and who went with the army of occupation into Germany; Dr. Ralph Mooney, college physician and infirmary superintendent, who served overseas 13 months of the 18 he was in service as surgeon with the 301st field artillery; Herbert Mendenhall, resident engineer, who was nearly two years as a captain in the engineering corps unit who chiefly concerned itself with building wharfs, docks and structures in line of communication; Dr. Harold R. Richards, head of the physics department, who was X-ray work at the United States base hospital at Savenay, France, Dr. W. Hudson Rogers, professor of education, served 18 of the 23 months he was in service with the American Expeditionary forces attached to the 31st French division.

Enrollment Reaches 477 For Second School Term

The total enrollment for the second session of summer school up to yesterday was 477 students. This figure is a gain of six students over the final total for the second term last summer, according to Simeon R. Doyle, registrar of the college.

Mr. Doyle also stated that he expects more students to graduate at the end of the second term than received degrees at the end of the first term, as was the case last year.

FSC Attempts Elimination Of "Drawl"

Have you heard how the speech department endeavors to eliminate those pertinacious southern drawls as so frequently encounters among students registered for speech courses? First the student reads a one-minute prose selection of his own choice, the freer the better, into the microphone of a recording machine.

Next the student's recording is played for his critical classmates, while the unfortunate student blushes and squirms in his chair as he draws from how his speech sounds to others.

After the recording is played all the students in the class criticize it in a constructive way.

If the student is enrolled in a diction class he also learns the fundamental principles of phonetics, including the phonetic alphabet and the Barrows-Dyer system, pronunciation of words according to general speech usage, exercises to develop breath control, characteristic of the various types of English speech and the factors determining the production of certain speech sounds—all in our hour a week.

Loucks Directs Play Activities

Social Dancing, Bridge Lessons Begin

Mrs. Donald Loucks, director of social and religious activities for the second session of summer school here has planned a variety of activities for the coming five weeks. She will hold office hours daily in Landis parlor for those who wish to obtain cards permits.

Lessons in social dancing and in contract bridge will be conducted the near future. Announcement of the time and place of each of these activities will be made later. Play night will be held as usual tonight from 8 to 10 at the gym.

The physical education department offers recreational activities daily from 4:30 to 5:30. Games include shuffleboard, horseshoes, table tennis, badminton, and target toss. Various table games and card tables are also available.

Bottari, Sagvold Elected Summer Council Leaders

Mary Gray Baker, Mary Lemont Elected Vice House Chairmen

The four members of the Summer School Council for the second session were elected at Landis house meetings Tuesday. They are Flora Bottari, president; Betty Sue Sagvold, secretary; Mary Lemont, and Mary Gray Bakers.

House chairmen and vice-house chairmen are as follows: Flora Bottari, house chairman of East Landis; Mary Lemont, vice-house chairman of East Landis; Betty Sue Sagvold, house chairman of West Landis; and Mary Gray Bakers, vice-house chairman of West Landis.

Opal Gray Joins Language Faculty

Thirteen More Regular Teachers Return

Miss Opal Gray of Tallahassee will be the only new faculty member for the second term of summer school. She is an instructor in modern languages and a graduate of this college (Class of '35). Miss Gray has been teaching in the Leesburg high school.

Regular members of the faculty who have returned for work during the second session are:

Dr. Dorothy D. Bettey, professor of economics and commerce; Miss Helen Cade, instructor in foods and nutrition; Dr. Lawrence Chapman, instructor in English; Dr. Mary Elizabeth Clement of sociology; Miss Sarah Herndon, instructor in history; Dr. Thomas Forbes Liddell, professor of philosophy and humanities; Mr. Royal Pettijohn, instructor in economics; Dr. Coiye E. Moore, associate professor of education; Dr. Ruth Pyburn, assistant professor of education; Dr. W. H. Rogers, professor of English and journalism; and Miss Lelia Venable, associate professor of home economics.

First Workshop Hailed Success

Hall Commends Teachers Efforts To Meet Pupils Needs

The first educational workshop conducted at the Florida State college was hailed a success at its conclusion last Friday, and Dr. R. L. Ryman, dean of the School of Education, announced plans were underway to repeat the workshop again next summer during the first summer session.

Director Joe Hall, of the state department of public instruction, called the workshop, "something teacher education has long needed" and commended the teachers for giving of their time and energy without compensation or personal gain that they might better meet the needs of the children in their own communities.

The workshop, with 165 principals and teachers from 12 accompany schools participating in cooperation with the college and state department of education, was conducted over the entire six weeks of the first summer session. Reading of the arithmetic, social studies programs, health programs, community recreation, pre-vocational training and a variety of other subjects were taken up to fit the individual needs of the various schools.

Hinson Tells Graduates, "We Need Altriusm"

Education For Security Is Topic Of Summer Graduation Talk

"Americans need more faith and less doubt; more altruism and less rugged individualism, more heroes and less materialism, and less idol breaking." Dr. M. H. Hinson, professor of education, told the first session commencement audience last Saturday.

His subject was "Education for National and Individual Security."

Beginning his address by calling attention to the war headlines in the newspapers, Dr. Hinson, himself a world war veteran, said he believed that "when the history of the present struggle is finally written, it will be shown that it was not German armed might and fifth columns that defeated the armies of France and Britain in the Great Battle of France, but the lack of unity of purpose and the gaps in the armors of Frenchmen and Englishmen."

"The sands of isolation, of neutrality, of propaganda for peace at any price, and of two-ocean security are slowly but surely being blown from under our hidden heads by the stern winds of reality, and we are being rather rudely awakened to the realisation that our security depends upon other things than isolation, neutrality, which has proven to be a farce, peace at any price, or two-ocean security," he said.

"We are already sufficiently aroused that our government has appropriated several billions of dollars to prepare a powerful force of sin outside enemy. We are also aiding in measures to protect the nation from internal fifth column aid to external danger that lies within our national security."

"Even greater danger-ous than either external armed forces or internal 'fifth column' is a 'sixth column' of disloyal, subversive, minority group insecurity and malcontents," he said.

"Unless we can have some security for the individuals that make up a nation, security for the underprivileged forgotten men that make up the discontented minority groups, then security for the nation is an impossibility if not an impossibility. If a government succeeds in providing security and contentment for the masses, it will have their confidence and their unified support, and need have little fear of attack from armed forces or even without or from fifth columns assisting them from within."

"I believe that, although our way of life at its present stage of development, is far from Utopia, it is worth dying for," he said. "There are many things worth dying for, and I have confidence that we are still virile enough to survive the emergency. I believe the democratic way of life will be preserved and many of our ideals yet developed and tried out by mankind."

"What is the role of education in this struggle for security?" he asked.

"One principle, which is basic, is that schools are supported by and given social order to perpetuate the tenets of the supporting society. In times of national peril much greater emphasis must be placed upon this function. Maintenance of social solidarity is a major task of the school in our program of national defense."

Some of the things which Dr. Hinson said the school must

Former Lower Dining Room Converted Into Home for "Oscar," the Mastadon

Skeletons of mastodons now inhabit the former lower dining room where we used to rush for a bit of breakfast with the legs of blue pajamas dangling below rakish coats.

"Florida State Geological Survey Exhibit of Fossils and Minerals" reads the sign on the entrance to the former lower dining room which formerly housed the Herman Gunter, state geologist, moved his office and museum from the lower floor of the Martin building last February.

Piece of habit strongly instilled as a freshman, who insistently rose with the breakfast bell, caused this reporter to rush past the first offices on the left of the hall down the center of the old dining hall, but "Oscar" stopped the newshound at the door of the large museum room.

"Oscar" so christened by disrespectful college girls, is the complete mounted skeleton of a mastodon in the place of honor at the left of the entrance to the exhibit. Although not the most important piece in the exhibit, Oscar, who was discovered in a bog on the Wakulla Springs near Tallahassee, is the most impressive piece. At first some fragments of tusks were found by the natives near the spring and brought to the conservation office. As there was no other place to put them they were displayed in the old public library, and when that moved they were exhibited in a store owned by T. B. Byrd. In 1907 the geological survey was organized and took them over. Nothing more happened until Mr. Christie started cleaning up Wakulla Springs as a show place.

While he was cleaning up the springs he brought up a jaw and another tusk and as he became interested he asked the geological survey to come out and try to locate the rest of the skeleton.

The huge skeleton was in the north side of the spring in about 15 or 25 feet of water, according to Mr. Gunter, which made recovering it rather difficult. Since a few of Oscar's ribs and part of a tusk could not be fished out of his slimey grave, through Mr. Gunter's efforts the American Museum of Natural History sent plaster casts of the missing members and now Oscar stands im-

Tallahassee Citizens Defend America

"The Tallahassee Committee for the Defense of America is a patriotic organization devoted to the defense of democracy and the American way of life," states paragraph one of the Articles of Organization of the Committee for Defense, headed by Dr. Harold F. Richards of the physics department.

The committee, membership in which is open to all residents of Leon county, states that it supports the objective of the National Committee to Defend America by aiding the Allies, and urges the national government to extend all possible aid short of sending an expeditionary force to those countries which are still fighting to preserve democracy.

"We endorse the national defense measures now being taken by the United States, and pledge ourselves to support a rapid and resolute pursuit of the defense program until the United States is in a position to defend itself against any power or powers in the world," reads the fourth article. In pursuance of this the committee recommends compulsory national service.

A continuous program of education to impress upon each citizen his duty to help actively and openly in spreading the principles of liberty is encouraged by the organization.

"We shall help to defend America against fifth columnists in every way," asserts the group in the fourth article. This we shall do by combating the influence of persons who abuse their right of free speech, turning over to authorities all valid evidence of subversive activities, and urging all citizens who believe they have valid evidence of activities to weaken the nation to furnish such information, giving full details to the police authorities.

All persons who sign for membership register their fingerprints with the F. B. I. in Washington and urge all citizens of the community to file fingerprints with the Department of Justice.

The membership of the committee for defense "will continuously scrutinize the policies supported by Florida senators and congressmatives, urging them to stand firm in defense of America."

The objectives of the Tallahassee Committee for the Defense of America set forth above, the prominent citizens and leaders of the community on its roles, its neutral work in organizing and unifying the people and resources of the community for protection show it to be a sane sensible organization. It is a hopeful contrast to the middle western women who have organized an anti-aircraft gun corps.

In anticipating the needs of the army and navy in case of emergency by making an inventory of resources and man power available the Committee is rendering a real service to the nation. The most important service, however, will probably be in combating fifth columnists for in "Mein Kampf" Hitler stated that his invasion of America will be by more potent weapons than planes and bombs.

The Committee evidently observed what seems to have happened in France and England and is doing its part to ensure a united, alert population working for defense of America.

In Defense Of Summer School

In spite of all our continuous unfavorable comparison of summer with winter school, there is one outstanding advantage of the former. This is that we, as young people, have the opportunity of rubbing brains with older and more experienced students than we find in our winter classes.

Through coming in contact with these mature and interesting personalities our minds are stimulated.

And here we are again, that great clan of semi-backs, comebacks, half backs, etc., and we're still hot! Lots of our pals of the first session have left for greener fields. Lots of new students have come in this week for the second session. Hooray for the ones of us who have had so much ego as to tackle BOTH of them! Especially if this weather keeps up.

There was much singing on the lower floor of the Wescott building the day grades came out. One poor thing crawled out beneath her favorite cork tree to smell the flowers and sing "I'll Never Smile Again" as she reviewed her grade sheet. Other students sang "Devil May Care"—which has its points.

We have all, at one time or another, noticed the passage so artistically inscribed above the library door. One student, while recently roaming through the stacks really got the meaning exclaiming: "The hall of knowledge is to know where to find it. Where is that book?"

Since the opening of the new and modern Landis Hall, we have been scorning the other dorms along the way. This week end of the past now that Gilchrist, Broward and Byrd have been closed and the students have to track around them in the hot sun to get to their classes.

Orchids to the little gal that was elected House Chairman the other night, and the next morning forgot and took a shower before the rising bell. 'Tis grand to know we have a human being on the police force that will make an occasional mistake too.

It's too humid for Lucids.
The humidity
Prevents Lucidity
Brings on Stupidity
Equaled by my droopidity
In desperation
By my excess preoperation
I end this diatribation
In search of Syncopation
Which will increase my pressperation
Until in desperation
I shall wonder at the sensation
Of enjoying a summer vacation

Among the Amazons

"Maniver sished for what is not

Here's to the girls on this campus that make you feel that you are at least an average man and that she isn't just taking the best she can get but she can get much better at home or during the regular session. The latter type of female is my pet peeve. Another is the one that hates the C. W. with a vengeance and puts the fact that she can get an education within her means here below the fact that the social life is not up to that of some of the costlier schools. And to those that take pride that the college has in the "toughness" of its grading and you have no illusions that at least one of the 74 detests.

Last summer the Flambeau ran a feature article in which the poor males on the campus were cried down as "ugly, uninteresting, cheap" and the general impression given was that the grounds were filled with beautiful females pursued by a few ape-like men who would have brought the "Beauty and the Beast" was playing to the capacity audiences in Tallahassee. The fact of the matter is and was that the average man looks as good, perhaps better, than the average summer school woman. After all the soap box and rag publicity about the degraded status of men, I did not see any of the men as violent in their pursuits as were a few of the so-called females. In "A Counterblast Against Garlic" the poet ends by wishing that the garlic eater would be killed by his own foul breath. I will not wish such a fate on that unique female creature. I'm glad to say they are a minority women. I can think of none worse than that they should continue to think themselves the last bit of feminine pulchritude on this orb, and an epitome of perfection, and still remain as they are. Most of them had better thank their stars if they get a male of any description here for they have been in this world for a good many years and haven't been successful in really getting one yet! One reason that Florida has such good athletic teams is that the boys stay in school and don't graduate running from the college "strik".

I seem to recall some book (I'll bet you don't know what color it is) in which it said, "Learning is fun but finding yourself before you get learning." I had thought that the real reason that 2,000 women found their way to Tallahassee each year was to get knowledge from teachers, libraries, et al. Instead it seems that they are sent here by harsh parents, cruel teachers, made A, B, C but she didn't like me and now I have

Torreya Park Outing Planned For Tomorrow

An outing to Torreya Park is planned for tomorrow afternoon. Cars will leave the campus at 3:30 and drive to the noted locale of the torreya tree, which produces the kind of wood from which the Ark was constructed.

Miss Katherine Montgomery, director of physical education, is in charge of the trip.

Magazine Jottings

"Youth Crusade" relates the foundation and growth of the Junior Statesmen of America movement. Written by Frederick R. Bechdolt and published in the July issue of Current History and Forum, this article tells how over five years ago 20 idealistic boys in a California private school decided to do something to improve American political conditions. Aided by their school president, Mr. E. A. Rogers, the boys expanded their system of student government already in operation in their school into a genuine municipal government.

The members of the first chapter of the Junior Statesmen determined to spread their organization throughout California. To accomplish this aim they began by speaking in the high schools, organizing similar units of Junior Government at many of them. Conference on American problems were also sponsored by the groups. At California convention was held in 1936, and the chapters of the Junior Statesmen in California high schools were united into a Junior State.

Since that year semi-annual legislative sessions have been held. During these one-week sessions elected representatives of the high school chapters conduct a junior state legislature, introducing bills, working on them in committees, and making laws. A governor, a lieutenant governor, and an attorney general perform the functions of actual officials.

Each chapter of the Junior Statesmen forms a governmental unit. The work of that unit—city, county, or state—is studied in detail and imitated by the high school students as part of the school program. Some of these units have been successful in getting projects they originated and approved in their junior government adopted by local councils.

The Junior Statesmen organization has always refused to affiliate or merge with any other political group. Although the Statesmen elected speakers of the Junior Territorial Government, the present substitute for a national government.

Today the Junior Statesmen of America has given more than 8,000 young people experience in practical statesmanship in an effort to "train young citizens to understand and, in the future, it hopes to spread its influence for better government over the entire United States

"Wars and revolutions may come and pass, world powers change hands, social classes realign themselves, but mankind will always need art, and there will always be children to dress and be fed, flowers to be planted and arranged and homes to be made," Dorothy Thomas, commentator on world affairs, writes in the June issue of Modern Home.

To the critics of the petty discussions of women's clubs Miss Thompson replies that "however trivial the discussions may be, the club and the home is a more civilized place, and the American countryside is a deal more sightly, partly because a great many women's clubs have awards for the best papers on home decoration and enthusiastically cultivated gardens and organized garden clubs besides." Women's clubs are better organized at this moment than there have ever been and the world's greatest poets and philosophers, when dreams the world's greatest dreams, have added new kind to cultivate their gardens.

She observes that "It can be rather futile to work yourself into a nervous state of mind over problems that one cannot possibly solve." But it is never futile to grow sweet peas or arrange the flowers in a beautiful manner around more than one Joan of Arc at a time, but it can do with almost unlimited number of good cooks."

The world commentator culminates her article entitled "It's a Woman's World," by saying "I doubt whether all the papers read in all the women's clubs could stop men from killing one another in war, but women's clubs could help women themselves, their husbands and their children from killing themselves and one another by reckless driving on the highroads. Anything that increases consideration for human life helps toward the eventual abolishing of war; anything that makes life more beautiful makes it more tolerable and whatever develops resources inside ourselves adds to human courage."

"I am afraid that I think that there is so much superficial discussion of these world problems, and not enough attention paid to the matter of making everyday life more attractive" is the crux of the editorial.

In closing he said: "I am not pessimistic as to what democratic America will do in the present crisis. I believe we will survive as a free people . . . I have hope that this great crisis will weld us closer together than ever before . . . perhaps this is only the dark hour which precedes the breaking of a new day."

"Is Individual Responsible For Group?" Student Asks

BY BERTHA BLOODWORTH

Recently, in a college which likes to call itself progressive, I overheard a casual conversation concerning the recent movie, "Grapes of Wrath." Somebody commented on the terrible conditions portrayed in the movie. "What can you do about people like that?" she asked. "I don't know," one collegiate young thing shrugged: "It's not MY problem," and she launched into a discussion of her newest nail polish.

I got mad. I turned away, feeling a little choked. "Whose problem IS it?" I thought. I had seen the movie too.

The incident stayed with me. After a little while I could think of it calmly, and it made me sad. I thought of it as an indictment of youth—an admission of all the inadequacies of our college-trained "individualists." It shocked me to realize that, after all, our prized "individualism" is only selfishness. We are quite conscious of our rights, but we don't even suspect that we have any duties.

Bertrand Russell, in his article called "What Shall We Educate For?" in Harper's for April, 1936, listed the four qualities for which he thought we should educate. They were vitality, courage, sensitiveness, and intelligence. Under the head of "sensitiveness" he mentions sympathy, which he says must be extended in two ways: (1) so that the child may feel sympathy for suffering even when it is being undergone by those who are not objects of his special affection or love; and (3) so that the child will sympathize with suffering which is not actually present but is merely known to exist.

It is in this last respect that education has failed us, if it has failed us in no other way. It is because we have not been educated and boys in college can shrug their eq for sensitiveness that little girls shoulders at the world's vital problems and shove them away. If we were really sensitive, they would be OUR problems. Problems always belong to those who are perplexed by them.

In accusing my own generation of being selfish, I do not at all mean to exempt the older generation. I am bored with people who divide the human race into sections and distinguish between "youth" and "people," as if the young were a different species. We are not. We merely have longer to live, in the normal course of events. It is because of that fact that I have wholly accepted the worn idea that we are the hope of humanity and so concentrate my evangelical zeal on those who might live long enough to heed it.

I have not studied methods of education. I have talked with those who have. None of them have shown me WHY we are not educated for sensitiveness. The phrases in the education books sound all right to me, but obviously they don't mean anything. That leaves me free to theorize.

The American state seems to have been founded on the theory of the integrity of the individual. But individuals do not live alone, and it is necessary to add "in relation to other individuals" on to the phrase. Out of our omission of this has grown our so-called "rugged individualism," with its ruthless exploitation of humanity. Out of its has grown our preoccupation with movie stars, nail polish, and dinner-at-eight. Out of it has grown our forgetfulness that temperature exists for millions beside ourselves, that headaches are not exclusively our own, that weariness visits countless millions perhaps more often than it has visited us, that not only we but others two blocks away and half derstood—in a word, that humanthe world away are often misunity has common ills and must seek a common remedy.

Nobody more than I has exalted individual liberty. I think nobody ever will. But when individual liberty converts itself into selfish ambition, I think it should change its name.

My theory as to why we have not been educated for sensitiveness is that we have not been educated by sensitive people. If I were a pessimist, I should follow up that idea with another—that we cannot in such case educate our own children for sensitiveness, and the world will go on until the end in this hard and hopeless condition. But I am not a pessimist, and so I argue with those who are on the basis that every rule has exceptions, or that no generalization is really true.

It is not true that all of us are insensitive. For some reason—perhaps because they were born with greater capacity and perhaps because they have met with sensitive people—there are young people who are aware of and alive to the world in which they live. Likewise, there are older people who feel the problems and joys of life in a broad sense. It is for these people to make themselves heard that I am waiting. We cannot pull ourselves ont of any hole by our bootstraps. Those who know our need must take a hand.

And that is where courage comes in—and vitality—and intelligence. Many of us have latent intelligence and most of us dissipated vitality. If education has denied us sensitiveness and courage, we ought to be able to work it up for ourselves. Medical men know that the will to live is the deciding factor in the bringing back to health of many desperately ill persons. And so, from a spiritual point of view, its own will to live or not to live will decide the fate of humanity.

I read a poem somewhere, called "Would You End War?". It was written by James Oppenheim. I think, and it kept repeating:

"Woud you end war?
Create Great Peace."

Somewhere in it were these lines:

"As surely as vile living brings disease,
So surely shall your selfishness
Bring war."

That means us. While this article is not specifically about war and its prevention, Mr. Oppenheim's thought is pertinent. I think It will soon be the task of my generation to build this Great Peace—or whatever we want to build.

We can build whatever we try to build, or we can just let things alone. It is to be hoped that we won't keep on shrugging our shoulders and saying, "It's not MY problem!" It sounds too much like, "Am I my brother's keeper?" Maybe we ARE responsible for each other after all.

INQUIRING REPORTER

The results of this week's inquiring reporter caused the editor a bit of a surprise and slight embarrassment. Last week, the day before graduation, the editor was accosted by a group of indignant graduating students demanding that something be done about the college laundry which they said gave deplorable service.

In asking students to evaluate the service of the college laundry we learned that this opinion does not apply to the whole of the student body, although it is common talk in gripe sessions.

When asked to evaluate the college laundry the students answered as follows:

Ruth Barker: Considering the fee we pay I think the laundry is quite efficient, however, I wish they would convert some of their surplus starch into food for the hungry instead of making my frocks resemble straight jackets.

Mary Louise Burns: I think that the college laundry is a convenience to the students and I believe that most of the students find it satisfactory.

Rosalee Malphurs: The laundry fee is about the only one we really should have. Considering all, it is quite efficient — but, button, button, who has our buttons?

Flo Bottari: For $6 we get sufficient and unlimited service, what more could be asked for a nickel? It is not without faults but it surpasses many commercial laundries.

Carolyn Klarer: Not so good. Not so bad. After all, for every dress that is ripped or shrunk, there are a dozen others that are still wearable. But how do they always manage to pick your favorite frock for mangle fodder?

Velma Pate: The college laundry in spite of the abundance of starch and lack of buttons is one of the most efficient agencies on campus. In proportion to the fee we pay the service we get is excellent.

I have been very fortunate in having nothing of mine mangled by the laundry. I think the service is excellent for the price that is paid, but why shouldn't we pay more and see that no one's clothing is ruined?

Student Claims Cut Fine Heavy

BY MERLE TAYLOR

Any problem is good conversation, but it is only when a problem comes close to the individual that she takes the energy to discuss it at length. This omnipresent question of cutting classes is at times smoothed-over, and other times raging. The privilege of cutting goes in cycles from very scant to very liberal measures. Right now the measures are fairly liberal ones in comparison to those of the recent past.

But there are those students who are dissatisfied. Some of the complaints are just that—complaints. But in these criticisms are a few factual ideas. It will readily be agreed that an overcut in a course is singularly unfortunate for a senior—or for any student, in fact. The half-hour credit, deducted in the registrar's office for one over-cut in a three posingly above our heads and the other exhibits.

Besides mastodons in the vertebrae group there is a display showing the early horse and its evolution into the modern animal, the rhino and camel, as well as the tooth of the ferocious sabretoothed tiger. In the same section with the mastodon is exhibited the large skeleton of the dugong, a seagoing animal on the order of a manatee or sea-cow.

As the negro janitor gingerly dusted the Vero skull which reposes next to the skull of a modern Indian, your reporter gazed in awe at the difference between the two specimens.

An exhibit of minerals fills most of the other show cases. Specimens in this collection have come from a wide variety of sources. The phosphate mining industry has opened particularly valuable findings to the scientists with its exposals of interesting rock and stone deposits and rare fossils. Material has been gathered from private diggings in the hard rock phosphate fields and from contributions by private collectors.

On the north side of the room near the door, the showcases are filled with artifacts of early American Indians among which are specimens tracing the development of the arrow and awl and personal ornaments which are not so different from some modern costume jewelry. Everything is labeled so that a guide is not needed although the staff enjoys making kindly explanations to laymen.

That strange odor near the exit is J. Clarence Simpson, museum assistant, in the workroom to the left, "manufacturing some ribs for Oscar's playmates."

Kenly Mourns Fate of Cranes In Recalling Residence There

BY GENEVIEVE KENLY

France as a conquered nation reminds me so vividly of the France I knew in 1936 and the people who have made an art out of getting the most out of life.

It was a pleasure to stroll through the shops, to linger in the Luxembourg gardens where students met and happy children played, and to have tea beside the lake in the Bois de Boulogne.

At every turn in Paris there is a symbolical contrast: broad avenues and narrow Latin quarters. The winding Seine gives a spacious perspective and divides the city into two distinct parts, the right and left banks.

No view in the world can surpass the one through the Arc de Carrousel, the Tuileries gardens down the one and a quarter miles of Avenue Champs Elysees, to the Arc de Triomphe, sheltering the tomb of the unknown soldier of whose head burns the never extinguished flame of remembrance. It seems a sacrilege for Hitler's troops to march through this arch which has so much meaning for both the French and Americans.

Notre Dame, which is on an island in the Seine, is an epitome of the history of a nation. A pagan temple existed on this site in the first century. On August the 15, 1936, I attended a service, "The Feast of the Virgin," where thousands of people from all countries came to worship. The candle lit from the holy fire glowing inside transformed the interior into a place of beauty. I pictured the scene of Napoleon and Josephine's coronation in the presence of Pope Pius that was painted so realistically by David; the wedding of beautiful Mary, Queen of Scots; the funeral of Marshall Foch.

The Dome of the Invalides, the resting place of Napoleon, has an altar of Flemish oak with a design similar to Saint-Peter's in Rome. Jerome Bonaparte, the only Bonaparte who died on French soil, married Elizabeth Patterson of Baltimore. Hitler, who is an admirer of Napoleon, recently stood before the tomb in silent meditation.

I do not like to think of the elusive artistry of the priceless works of art. Here I spent weeks studying the different schools of artists. At night, I saw the statues illuminated with colored lights and heard lectures on their merits.

The American embassy, facing the Place de la Concorde, is a compliment to the French architect Gabriel. The embassy home of our American ambassador, Mr. William Bullitt, was the scene of a tea which I had the honor of attending. I met interesting French people and visitors, one of whom was Iron Hall Salmon of Isle of Man, England.

The American University Club, where I made my home, was on the left bank, in the Latin quarter. The club was organized in 1922 by Margaret Reid, wife of a former American ambassador to France. Its main building is three hundred years old and is said to have been the hunting lodge of Count Chevreuse, for whom the street was named. Since 1938, the American Association of University Women has been working on a plan to take over the club.

Near the University Club, on Montparnasse, are the sidewalk cafes of the Dome and the Cupopo, where the visitor feels the true atmosphere of the student quarter. While he has drinks at the sidewalk tables, he may have his portrait sketched by an artist, be serenaded by a musician, or buy wares from a peddler.

At the opera house in Paris, the most beautiful in the world, I could head my favorite operas at a price far less than we pay in our own country. The opera house is owned by the government so even the poor can gain culture by hearing the best music.

The buildings of the Sarbonne seem very old in comparison with the modern American universities. A number of the residents at the American University Club were taking courses there and at the Alliance Francoise, on Boulevard Raspail, near the club.

I like to think of France as not being changed by the march of Hitlerism. I hope to go back some day and visit again the Palace of Versailles, where the fountains play in the Basin of Apollo; to go again to Malmaison, the summer home of Napoleon, where Bizet wrote Carmen and Josephine planted the cedar of Lebanon to commemorate Napoleon's victory; to stand again in the Taple of Love, at Trianon, where Monet played his immortal music; to see again the rustic hamlet of Marie Antoinette which has been restored by John. Rockefeller; to view again the magnificent palace of Fontainbleau.

I want to know more intimately the happy French people, in all stations of life, from the French maid, who serves you at coffee au lait, before I arise each morning, to the French officials who attended me at the Sorbonne during their culture and philosophy and to how they have made living an art.

Cutting is a heavy penalty not easily paid. In the case of a required course, the situation is more complicated. It was not that the student missed so completely the point of the course, and that she missed so much that it was impossible to make up the work. It was that the student passed the established red line. The practice of "cutting" a few hours for this misdemeanor is not to be condoned. Does the not the college catalogue omit any such agreement between college and student? Then the situation has arisen the student can only appeal to the cut committee, which can not make too many exceptions for fear of losing student respect for the rule. Before deducting of credit leaves the student with a feeling of being cheated, with a sense of unjust treatment of the situation.

Is the extreme measure is often demanded by the less thoughtful student. "Unlimited cuts" is the cry of the dissatisfied. They are no minority group. Few, confronted with the question, would hesitate to agree to unlimited cuts, but many would add the remark, "We won't use the privilege. It's just the principle of the thing. Being required to attend classes arouses a rebellious reaction." These students want the continued presence of the same names on the unlimited-cut list as a push on their side. They say that students who have unlimited-cuts will not use the privilege to excess. They say that the extra-curricular classes are well attended even though no rolls are taken. They say that unlimited-cuts would require the teachers to make their classes interesting or have no class. In each there is a fallacy.

First, it can be noted that any student who makes a "B" average one semester is very likely to continue to do so. This is fundamentally a process of application of energy from one high-school grade of few students vary in any noticeable degree from one teacher to another, with disregard to the question of cuts. Also this group of students represents a small the exception rather than the usual. They represent only about 10 per cent of the student body. The process of democratic education is experimental to use the individual group, but on the average student. Since the high-averaged students are the exceptional part of the student group, their reactions to the cut points is not typical of what an entire student body would do with unlimited cuts. Chances—there are those students who will not cut classes just for the sake of laziness. But also there is this specific individual of the following type with which she will have to deal.

An honor student, with the privilege of unlimited cuts once granted to honor students, attended her classes only when she knew that the teacher "would check any absentee out her first class." Or, in other words, the teacher kept a record of the number of absences and when the end of the semester consulted the record when giving out grades. The student, knowing that she was a teacher's pet and, continuously cut a class up to within the number of the to-day record of the number of her cuts. The first of the two fallacies appears here. In a factual course, in which its benefits were measured by frequent correct-answer examinations. The intellectual person could have learned by herself the material to be covered to be reproduced at the proper time. But in the case of the second course the subject matter dealt not with factual materials, but with the social points of view. The purpose of the course was to make the student conscious of existing social problems and to create a public opinion parallel readings. Thus one fallacy is brought to bear upon the incidental assumption that lectures are wisely used by the high-averaged student.

With the ability to pass factual examinations as a measure of intelligence, and with a vague philosophy will make possible unlimited cuts for the college freshman. With the belief that each of two thousand students enrolled has a chance for a furthered interest in life, it is less possible. There is the assumption that with unlimited cuts the college would become a college of fewer and better students, an assumption that of the two thousand students there are some two hundred who will want an education. But also there is the corresponding assumption that every individual in a democracy has the right to be shown how to want the broader views of an intellectual.

But with this calm and collected view of matters unfavorable situations exist. Only a few students have the privilege of an extra day in the case of funerals and marriages. Seniors find them-

Drs. Heinlein and Heinlein Test Clairvoyant Power of Students

Do you have "feminine intuition?" Are you clairvoyant?

Now you can find out if you are one of the women who "just know" intuitively or if you are one of those you know by common sense. The clairvyance panel, located in the bookstore, is the means of testing your ability.

Dr. Julia H. Heinlein and Dr. Christian Paul Heinlein, experimental psychologists, are taking this excellent opportunity to find out to what extent this power really exists among college women.

The word "clairvoyance" the experimenters use to mean each college student's personal ability to tell the nature of objects at some position in space and time without letting her see, hear, taste, or feel the objects. Instruction sheets at the panel note that the subject of the experiment, which everyone is asked to become, must take as much or as little time as he likes to peruse without physical stimuli what the panel contains and describe these objects on the instruction sheet on which the subject also writes his name and the time required to do the task.

To perceive an object clairvoyantly, the experimenters believe, the subject should be able to describe the characteristics of the thing distinct without being told beforehand the form of the object.

Drs. Heinlein are using this test for the second time in an effort to prove the college student's clairvoyant powers on lack of them. The first time the test was used was at the Phiricia Academy of Science meeting here last fall. The scientists have tested this alleged power of women over a period of years by means of various tests among which was an ESP card test of college girls' extra-sensory perception of words in the sixpointe vocabulary printed in capitals on bond paper and concealed in sealed opaques.

As yet the experimenters have found no convincing evidence of clairvoyance among students of Florida State college.

to go to summer school or engage school experience. Finally it is terrible—I might as well be in a concentration camp. Even though I am a man I still see no reason why men should not be allowed to participate in the process. At most of the six new schools I attended this evening here I believe that members of the other sex detracted from the getting any experience. Finally it is the best place to park, how to handle the buzz, and how and to kiss a girl when you take her out. Or maybe that is the kind of education that "they" want.

My last—the colleges prize is tough grading—how will that affect law lines. All my life I have listened to P. S. C. W. brags about how many Phi Beta Kappa keys study has to be done and all the rest. Barrows Takes First Mobile Army Station

Recruiting Trailers Are Designed To Serve Small Towns

Dr. W. M. Barrows, assistant professor of physics, has accepted first of the 18 mobile recruiting stations for the army.

Dr. Barrows, a captain in the army's coast artillery reserve, is the first commanding officer of mobile units at Bradenton. Others are expected to be completed by August 27 and the two will be exhibited at the New York and San Francisco fairs.

The stations are designed similar to pullman cars and are equipped with loud speakers and an 8-wire radio receiver. Hauled behind trucks, the trailers are about 18 feet long. Sleeping accommodations for five persons, a kitchenette and facilities for office quarters are also included.

Mobile stations are designed to serve small communities. Captain Barrows now is in his second month of active duty with the army recruiting headquarters in Jacksonville.

Refugee Denied Frat Membership

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—ACP—A refugee student at Rutgers University was denied membership in Alpha Zeta, national honorary agricultural fraternity, because it admits white students only.

He is Martin L. Colnastaedt, enrolled in the college of agriculture, whose father was a principal editor of the Frankfurter Zeitung before the Nazis took power in 1933.

When I came to this country months ago," Colnastaedt said in a letter to the fraternity, "my greatest desire was to serve the country of my choice to give everything I have in return for the willingness to open the doors to me.

But how are we to serve the cause of democracy in this country, if we lose what we esteem best."

NYU Leader Gives Education Theory

NEW YORK CITY—ACP—In democratic state, universities and colleges must provide an extensive degree of education for each level of intelligence as well as perform the job of training leaders.

This is a candid opinion of Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, chancellor of New York University, who recently made his annual report to the university council.

"Higher education in America," Dr. Chase declared in his report, "has been learning to live with a new set of facts and outlooks with which it has not as yet elsewhere come to terms fundamentally our thinking has had to be conditioned by the enormously increased size of our group of what we are about and a seriously mixed attitude it is."

Feminine Touch Appears in Field of National Politics as Elliott Opposes Hitler Policy

Miss Harriet W. Elliott, only woman member of President Roosevelt's Defense Commission, believes that in a total defense program, human welfare is equally important with tanks and airplanes. This point of view is very significant to students of Florida State College who may wonder what innovations women have made in national politics.

The problem which Miss Elliott has been called to solve is that of how the people in the United States may spend millions on a gigantic military program without having to go hungry as a result. Her plan is to insure adequate food supplies at proper prices to every family in America in the direct antitheses of Hitler's famous slogan "Guns before Butter."

The appointment of the Dean of Women of the University of North Carolina to serve on a National Defense Commission along with Edward Stettinius, William Knudson, and other leading industrialists and economists was a great a surprise to her as to anyone else, although the greater portion of her extracurricular time has been spent dealing with people and politics. From 1933 to 1935 she served on the North Carolina Relief Administration Commission, and as president of the State Conference of Social Service she recently presented a program on health needs in North Carolina. She has worked under all of the seven or eight governors who have held office since sh has lived in the state.

One of the first tasks which Miss Elliott must perform is that of watching costs to make certain that the great orders for products to be used in defense do not skyrocket the prices of household necessities of millions of consumers. Through the medium of publicity she expects to control unwarranted price flurries of such staples as bread, sugar, etc. Miss Elliott has great faith in the good sense of producers, retailers and consumers. In case such persuasive tactics fail, however, the department of Justice will be called in to set up citizens' boards for the hearing of complaints and for reviewing local conditions.

In order to notify the public of changes in prices or other conditions Miss Elliott proposes to set up a two-way information service with consumer organizations, producers, and advertisers. She hopes also to use this opportunity to enlist all citizens in a nation-wide crusade to improve the consumption of the 40,000,000 farm, rural, and ill-housed in this country. Community action of families for the unemployed people, idle plants, rotting foodstuffs are to be carried on with the aid of the fifty existing Federal agencies working on social and economic problems, and the research and statistics unit which is serving the Commission.

Despite Miss Elliott's eagerness to serve her country, she is also looking forward to the time when she can return to her campus at Chapel Hill, N. C. She is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, and while a student she Third Largest Women's college in the country.

Chicago Professor Denounces Schools

Claims Education Is Confusing in Practice

CHICAGO, Ill.—ACP—Modern education, with its great emphasis on the study of contemporary problems is superficial in theory and confusing in practice.

Asked his opinion of Dr. Mortimer J. Adler, professor of philosophy on new at University of Chicago and here are his arguments to uphold his position:

"Practical aim has become so absorbed with the study of the contemporary world that it forgets human culture has traditional root. It has substituted information for understanding and science for wisdom. It has mistaken license for liberty for that is what freedom is when unaccompanied by discipline."

"If the doctors of the nation spent as much time worrying about democracy as the educators, I would greatly fear for the health of the nation. The progressive system, with its confusion of authority and its emphasis on political democracy, has put a false responsibility on all teachers in attempting to solve social and economic problems."

"If our educators have the solution for these problems they ought to leave the education system and run for public office. In any event they should stop using the education system to propagandize their own particular beliefs. If they would forget these liberties and take care of

Hugh Fellows To Appear Tomorrow In Monologues

"This Passing Show" Is Title Of Readings, Impersonations

Hugh Fellows, actor, author and college professor will appear here at 8 o'clock tomorrow night in a program of impersonations and readings entitled "this passing show." The program will be held in the Augusta Conradi Little Theatre, and is as follows:

Impersonations in costume from the plays of Shakespeare will be Jacques from "As You Like It," Shylock from "The Merchant of Venice" Hamlet from "Hamlet, Prince of Denmark," Richard, Duke of Gloucester from "King Henry VI," Richard II from "The Tragedy of King Richard II," and Falstaff from "The Merry Wives of Windsor." An intermission of five minutes duration will follow.

Next Mr. Fellows will give a reading, Eve and That Snake, from "Ol' Man Adam and His Children," by R. Bradford. Then the accomplished Floridian will recite four dramatic monologues. One of these monologues, "Matrimony Today, Tomorrow, and the Day After," was written by Mr. Fellows himself. The other three are entitled "A Cheerful Little Earful" by M. Moffatt, "Solitary Confinement" by R. Benchley, and "Small Town Philosopher," by N. Corwin.

Complete changes in costume and make-up are accomplished in less than five minutes, Mr. Fellows who has attained a reputation for facility of impersonation in both oral and written language.

Mr. Fellows is a warm champion of the lasting interest to be found in the works of Shakespeare. He says, "You can accuse the Bard of Avon of innumerable unmannerly, obscene, and dishonest with a fair amount of truth, but you cannot accuse him of being dull. It is the collete professors who teach him who are, in a number of instances, dull, and who blame their inability to fathom the Bard's quick wit on the man himself."

Autographed copies of Mr. Fellow's book are on sale at the college book store. Townspeople are welcome to attend the performance tomorrow for which there is no charge.

Welfare Exam Set For August 31

Claude Arrington, chairman of welfare district two has urged all those interested to make applications to file their application by August 14 for an examination. Blanks may be obtained from the merit system committee room in the Canal-Industrial building, Jacksonville. State-wide examinations will be held August 31 in convenient centers throughout the state.

To fill vacancies in social staff it is the policy of district welfare board to give preference to local residents," Arrington said.

Positions to be filled from registrars established by the examination are district welfare visitor district welfare director, state welfare supervisor, director of public assistance, child welfare worker state child welfare supervisor and director of child welfare.

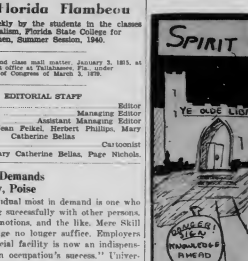
Employer Demands Personality, Poise

"The individual most in demand is one who can get along successfully with other persons, control his emotions, and the like. Mere Skill and Knowledge no longer suffice. Employers insist that social facility is now an indispensable factor in occupation's success." University of Wisconsin's Professor A. H. Edgerton, vocational guidance expert, urges college students to become versatile and adaptable.

The best, long hours in class and library, laboratory work, term papers and grim determination to make A's make the requirements other than knowledge fade into oblivion among Florida State college summer students. Perhaps it is because a large proportion of the student body work during the winter that the attitude of grim determination seems so prevalent. Again perhaps it is an unconscious temporary lapse in evaluations.

It is admitted that we attend school t learn, but such continuous application to th task of learning from books that we studi every minute of the time, even at meal time in the dining room, may be preventing us from learning much of value from our fellow students, the faculty, and social activities.

However great one's knowledge may be and however excellent one's quality point average, should superintendents and welfare board examiners take into consideration personality and poise. If one is through lack chance able to get a job without these qualities the school children in the public and welfare aid recipitants are not insensible to the lack of social facilities and adaptability which Mr. Edgerton with other prominent vocational guidance experts say employers demand.



What Would Plato Think?

How many times have you, as college students, been asked to use your respective intelligences to think about any problem, large or small, whiche has aroused your enriosity? How would you feel if, upon entering a classroom, your professor told you that you were to spend an hour and a half--90 minutes--thinking?

There is something vitally wrong with our system of education when enlege graduates can make the statement--and it is being made--that they have completed four years at Florida State College without once exhibiting any curiosity or honest skepticism over any statement made by any of their teachers.

If a college degree is to consist of the memorization and absorption of a great assortment of soon-to-be-forgotten facts, isn't it rather unnecessary to provide tried walls and degree-bealden urofessors to the purpose of inculeating such knowledge? It seems that in such case the money of the state could be better spent for the enlargement of the public library so that every citizen could in a shorter time avail himself of the benefits of "higher education."

If education is to cause progress in the ability of mankind to solve his problems, we must erect some system whereby the average college student will be inspired to learn its use that most precious of all his possessions--his brain.

HERE WE ARE AGAIN

First of all, may I get in my two-bits worth about this subject of the men and women on this summer school campus. Our honored writer of the Amason column "What does he call it?) does himself proud with his sparkling wit, to say nothing of the bright sarcasm that flows from his mighty pen. My only criticism is ... he seems to have a one track mind! Now he's fussing at us because we have set up a mild form of hero-worship. Isn't that a silly subject for a grown man to be bickering about. But as long as I'm on the subject, I may as well ask: "Have you ever been or heard a member of the so. Theu yelling and dancing are a man as she passes in a car?" Perhaps you can't live with it, but oh men! you can't live without us!

Could this be a slam at our sheet? In the periodical room of the library (the hall of knowledge) there are some 700 current magazines and newspapers. The Flambeau is not one of them ... Wednesday at noon was the half way mark for the last session, not that you haven't already found it out. It was the 75% mark if you are here for both sessions. If you came during the regular year and both summer sessions it was 15-16 and so on. You can figure out the combination that fits you, or have you time? Many of the students who have been frequenting the dating corners and habit flash hill will now be found in the campus "hot spot," the library ... The power of suggestion--the day that this column bemoaned the fact that there was but one fan at playnight, there was NONE ...

Since the column (?) doesn't want to slight any teacher (in a sense they are "coeds" too) I want to put in my two cents worth: There are about 3,000 instructors at the University of Minnesota, but on the day of graduation the editor of the Daily made the statement that there was just one male on the staff that could be classified as a man. We are certainly in luck here I can mention several but the two that I would mention today are Dr. Hoshi (Yes? No?) Waskon and Dr R L. (Prof to me) Goulding. Most administration should come to R L. for the way that he handles the students that come to him at the end of the session to "kiss him goodbye" as our graduate students put it. Dr. R. L. and the column agree on one thing, namely, that there is too much bull in education. Hats off to these two, too.

... I frequent the halls of Wescott (Administration except to those that appreciate the money gift) at odd moments, and I heard that all the girls rush there to get their mail ... therefore it is forgotten--to those having nothing to do with playnight. Those who come, come to dance and not to country or folk dance ...

Then there is the group of summer school students that were here when the legislature tried to pass a bill making the girls wear uniforms. My, my! and I thought that you all just loved a uniform

"I believe we shall have to do something besides hope for victory and sell second-hand ships to Great Britain on a strictly cash basis. I believe that, much as we hate war, we shall have to fight, and the sooner we get ready for it the better," Arnold Whitridge, professor of English at Yale, writes in giving his stand on American foreign policy.

The above statement concludes Where Do You Stand?" An Open Letter to American Democrats (Atlantic, August) in which Mr. Whitridge criticizes the policies of the democratic institutions especially newspapers, in American schools. He censures their expressions of unwillingness to go to war under any circumstances except invasion of our country, and deplores their lack of idealism.

The author dismisses the students' objective point of view as idealistic, criticizing the signatures and petitions that college students have sent to the government to prevent American aid to Britain and France. He does not think that many students are conscientious objectors to war and believes that a few of them actually hope for a German victory because they have been taught to admire success, no matter how unscrupulously it has been achieved.

The explanation some undergraduates give for their anti-British attitude is that they always oppose America's entry into a European war. Since the United States would fight only in an Allied side these collegians try to magnify the faults of the Allies and condone Germany's acts to keep American public opinion from flowing too into the conflict.

The author's opinion of these students is "why you are very ready to criticize the meaningful diplomacy of Chamberlain and Daladier you seem to be heading us in exactly the same direction."

He says to American college students: "If we are soundly disappointed by the war you are certainly in good company, for you can say that most of the presidential candidates, but I am convinced that your disappointment and cure arises from such very different causes that we disagree more than our generation realizes in any fundamental way." In general, I do not see my appeal that is not founded on misinformation.

Referring to fears of Communists hiding under the New Deal, Whitridge says that older statesmen have had. Mr. Whitridge tells American youth: "I believe that you look under the bed every night for Communists." Though you pride yourself in being able to reconsider it, I believe that your mind is nothing that you dread so much."

Whitridge's plea to the students of youth to defend the spiritual values of the world. He author makes his choice between a passive acceptance of Hitler's domination and an active resistance to it by war. He believes that there is no alternative such as hoping for victory because, he must fight if we are to preserve the American way of life.

"Inept, slow preparation is our military policy today," states H. Thomas, in an article on "Our Army Whitouth Arms" (August Atlantic. What we need is not so much military preparation as industrial preparation to speed up the production of arms, according to Mr. Thomas.

The American public has been kept in the dark concerning the facts in the present crisis. The President Roosevelt expanded the Navy in 5 years 1933-37 our Army became more backward in modern equipment than that of any of the great European powers, even fallinc behind Czechoslovakia. Although it has been hampered by lack of a formulated opinion in favor of a preparedness program our Army has made a second effort to regain its supremacy.

When the war facts in Europe grew worse war lust spring the Administration suggested huge appropriations for armaments with which the Army materially increased in the next years 420. The results have been a bolstered Army and Navy, although the author points out that existing industries are not able to manufacture certain essential defense goods.

At present, says Mr. Roosevelt, a national Fireside Chat of May 26 (in which he promised complete equipment of all of the Army and preparedness complete equipment of the National Defense by the end of this year), the lack of modern arms and equipment is crippling the effectiveness of our military forces and we must do all we can to do so for some time to come. In his article Mr. Thomas discusses in detail the types of weapons that our military forces need.

Legislation is needed, the author believes, in order to coordinate the defense industries and conduct a general registration of the manufacturing power. Industrial qualification of American workers must be registered so that there will be no diversion of essential skilled labor into nonessential service.

The public is inclined to be an inferior piece

Canoecade Leads Week-End Events

Grace Fox, Life Guards Plan Flastacowo Trip For Tomorrow

Canoecade and the theme of lakes, starting from the dock at Camp Flastacowo on Lake Bradford, is planned for tomorrow afternoon.

The party will leave at 3:30 from Landis-Gilchrist arcade, and return to the dock in time for dinner. If students drive out private cars, however, they will be able to take picnic supplies with them and return later in the evening.

The first three lakes in the chain are now navigable because the recent heavy rains. And the flotilla may also have time enough to admire the peace of the Cathedral.

Miss Grace Fox, instructor in physical education, will be in charge of the trip. She will be assisted by three senior life guards.

NYA Program Makes Change

An alteration in requirement for work on the national youth administration program has been announced recently by Ralph Studebaker, district NYA supervisor.

Under a federal appropriations act, youths now are eligible for certification if they are "in need of employment, work experience and training."

Recently the age limit for work on the program was dropped from 21 to 17 years. Now 16 years maximum as upper level.

Prior to the change, youths were given work assignments on the basis of family need, with reference to needy families.

Major General Haskell also said, 'If we cannot have equipment before the fight almost all as well not have it at all, in my opinion, because I think that before that time the fate for America will come'

The truth is that Hitler is not going to delay the execution of his Latin American policy until we have equipped. He will. The blame for our unenviable military situation at the present time rests squarely on the national character and especially on the character of President Roosevelt as the head of our country, declares the author with an unmediate awakening of our national energies under proper direction he believes that we can overcome our complacency and arm ourselves before 1941.

education, then democracy would take care of itself."

"With but very few exceptions, we have had no truly great teachers in this century. It is up to us, as good teachers, not as great teachers, to train our students to read, write, and speak so that they will be able to read the teachings of the great teachers —the classicists—and learn their philosophy not for the past's sake but for the sake of the present and the future. If we do this, if we confine ourselves solely to education, then we will create men and women who will have a place in our society and who will be better equipped to serve and preserve our democracy."

INQUIRING REPORTER

In relation to the recent expansion of the NYA to include those who need employment for training and experience as well as financial aid the inquiring reporter this week asked: "Do you think student employment offers a real one's chances for successful employment after graduation?"

Joan Thomas: "Yes. It gives valuable experience which will be a great help in securing positions later."

Thelma Johns: "Yes. It is very valuable for securing a later position as it gives one a good experience in his work."

Cordele Bawyer: "Yes. It gives opportunities for social and business contacts which are valuable in later years."

Mary Louise Robbins: "Yes, student work is definitely valuable because it gives him an opportunity to prove his capabilities to himself and to his employer."

Nancy White: "I think that student employment very definitely increases one's chances of employment. Not only does it give one the much needed experience of carrying out orders, being efficient, punctual and the like, but it also develops those personal qualities in a person which count so much in securing and holding a position—dignity, poise, neatness, a sense of responsibility and many others."

Johnnymae Wright: "By all means, student employment increases chances of successful employment after leaving college. Employers of all types demand poise, sense of responsibility and common sense in their employees. A student who carries out her duties in student employment with the above qualities plus acquiring a few technical skills will surely find greater success after college days are over."

Frances Edna Smart: "Yes I do Student employment helps one to become more patient, polite, and also to mix with people of all ages. It helps to know a variety of characters and many more people As a whole it is very helpful to students to earn a little on their own and receive half of the hard knocks of the world."

Etta Ruth Nelson: "Not necessarily. Success in employment depends on the individual and student employment does not change the individual characteristics which make for success. My observation of graduates does not show that those who were employed while in college have shown a greater degree of success than those who did not."

Harriet Kent: "I believe student employment increases one's chances of employment after graduation not only because it gives practical experience in one's work but also because it introduces one to those people who are in a position to recommend candidates for worthwhile jobs after graduation.

SEVEN SEA RAIDER MYSTERY

CAROLE LANDIS HENRY WILCOXON

Student Denounces "Flickers" And Their Repetition of Tricks

By JEAN STEFFEE

The other day, in an unguarded moment, I admitted that I liked the ending of the book Rebecca better than I would have liked the ending of the picture of the same name. My reply was not apologetic as I could, but my listener still gave me that wary, apprehensive look saved for radicals and other queer people. I've almost come to saying anything whatsoever about movies and popular music, but now and then I slip.

I'm not sure when I consciously started disliking the "flickers." I think it was the time I saw five in three days. Now that's nothing compared to the four-and-five orgies of some addicts of double features. I had never seen many all together before at one time, and I think I began to be impressed with the formula.

What I object to is not the continued use of the old plots, heaven knows there are only a few plots anyway, but what I get tired of is the repetition of tricks. I want to see somebody have to look for a telephone, not just reach behind him and pick it up. I'm tired of watching people back between seconds of light cigarettes. (I suspect that tobacco companies have something to do with that). Movie heroines interest me somewhat, however. I fing it diverting to go to a movie and watch to see if the heroine will laugh when the hero makes a stale, girls like with a beer bottle, or falls downstairs in a drunk. Savage seizes of hilarity must amuse me, even after having in a boarding college in which students amuse themselves by pouring water on people, throwing beds, and making pie fights.

In small doses the time-wasting done in movies could be amusing. All too often in a short story it blows up into a long tear-jerker. I suppose I should vaunt at the repeated declamation of the moral of the tale, such as Rhett Butler's speech delivered at regular intervals during the burning of Atlanta, "You're seeing the end of an empire."

The lowest rib is hit by the musical shows. The music is the same; the dancing looks all alike; the gags are boney; sometimes the setting is a little different, though mirrors still dominate the scene. In the case of Eleanor Powell's being the best female tap dancer in the world, I still think she looks static. Perhaps I don't know enough about tap to appreciate her.

Of late I've found two safe aspects of movies to talk about: photography and music. If I go and watch how the scenes are "framed" and listen to the symphony music and see how it covers up mistakes, actors make and does much of their acting for them, I have a fairly good time. Such home-brewing is comparable to reading a book for its pretty binding or typography.

Survey Shows 'Best Girl Is Not Beautiful'

"Beautiful But Dumb" Slogan No Longer Popular With Men

PORTALES, N. M. (ACP)—Whether or not it is true, as some one has written, that "women are making gladios, lounge lizards and dress-maller models of men," it is nevertheless a general truism that both men and women at New Mexico Military Institute, college men who are mannerly. This is the conclusion drawn from a recently survey of likes and dislike of students enrolled in general psychology courses conducted by Mrs. Lou Berkness.

Each student checked 30 personality traits of a person liked and disliked, both of their own sex and the opposite. Women voted one hundred per cent for "men who were friendly, honest, and courteous." Cheerfulness is a necessary trait for men and women, but 75 per cent of the men students in indicator of preference, and certainly the "beautiful but dumb" maid is not the popular one for the men.

Eighty-five per cent of the men like an intelligent girl and fifty per cent admit that the best girl to be beautiful.

Men are almost unanimous in their choice of the girl who is entertaining, generous, and loyal. While men prefer women who are cheerful, they also demand the same quality among friends of their sex. Women demand one hundred per cent loyalty from their sex.

Neither men nor women like one who is rude, the survey showed.

Simmons Deplores "Bad English"

BOSTON Mass. (ACP)—Bad English must go.

That is the decree of a faculty committee of Simmons College, which found that about 12 per cent of upper class students do not know or use satisfactory English.

Although student use of English has improved in a number of many colleges and universities throughout the country, including the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Amherst and Williams, the discrepancy remains significant, according to the committee's report, in that it aims to be "a college of liberal arts" by setting a standard of literary excellence.

To that end the group has prepared a manual on reading and writing English for use in every instructors alike, the effect of which will be to give a true picture of the situation with respect to English usage and to furnish a basis for remedial work.

The manual, to be distributed in September, contains basic rules for punctuation, capitalization, spelling, and the like, symbols to be used in correcting questions, prepared reports, and theses, footnotes and compiling bibliographies.

War Brings Pang of Regret To Friend of Rosy Dutchlings

By GENEVIEVE KENLY

I could write of Holland's loyal queen Wilhelmina, who celebrated her fortieth year as their ruler, in 1938, at her palace, "The House in the Woods," which was built for her by her people in 1898. I could describe the Peace Palace, an international court of justice in the Hague, with cost ten million dollars. I might take you in fancy with me to the Scheveningen seashore resort of Scheveningen, only one hundred and fifty miles across the North Sea from England, or to Rijk's Museum at Amsterdam, with its famous collection of Rembrandt's paintings —but instead, I want to tell you of the children of Holland among whom some of my happiest memories are centered.

In no other country, beside America, have I loved the children more than the little roundfaced, blue-eyed, blonde-haired boys and girls of Holland. Never have I seen more natural examples of childhood than they. In contrast with the French children, who are small in statue, the Dutch children are large, robust and healthy. Their clothes are unintened cows that are so well cared for by the Dutch are a joy to behold, for the cleanliness of their homes and cities.

On the Island of Marken, which has been inhabited for 800 years, we see Dutch men keep chanse their customs and habits. There they dress in their native costume, the boys dressing like the girls until they are seven years of age. The children have become quite adept at modeling their costumes, for they build up their hands for coins and cause much joy with a starter.

At Volendam, beside the sea, we saw a fancier costume, a skirt made of black velvet hung pleated skirt of many colored stripe and over this a black satin apron bordered with a flowered material. The pretty lace cap a la Dutch is needed to make the little girls irresistible. The hats in their long loose pantaloons are equally attractive. Their wooden shoes keep up a happy rhythm as the cobbler stones as they walk hand in hand.

When our two year old baby went to Dutch camp we had to dress him in the baby parade of the Sons of Scita Festival, in Scitsota, last spring I was reminded of the nownfall of Holland me and her grandchildren, little Princess Juliana and her grandchildren, little Princess Juliana and her daughter, Princess Beatrix. Her baby was safe and secure behind the dikes, but we must go taken away from her country of the wooden shoes.

At a party we see a little Dutch costume, a dainty Dutch cap, a little wooden shoe, that I will not invent. In my memory I see that that I spent in the picturesque countryside of Holland, in the tulips, windmills, and tulips, and in my happy associations with the Dutch children and their friendly children.

Trips To Orient Will Be Prizes

Essay Contest to Mark Japan's 2600th Year

Three trips to Japan are offered as prizes in an essay contest announced here today by the International Cultural Relations of Tokyo, commemorating the 2600th anniversary of the founding of the Japanese empire. Cash prizes and gifts are also offered up to three-month visits in Japan accompany the prizes.

The essays, to be interpretative in nature, not more than 4000 words in length, and must deal with one of the following subjects: the characteristics of Japanese culture, the relation between Japan and foreign countries, or the position of Japanese culture in the world. Conditions, to be mailed by Sept. 30, must be typewritten but the contestant's name is to appear only on a separate envelope accompanying the manuscript.

Full information on the contest is available at the Japanese Institute 630 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Final announcement of the winners will be made on April 29, 1941.

7 New Members Appointed To Faculty, Staff

Will Take Positions Vacated by Members On Leave, Resigned

Seventeen new faculty and staff members have been appointed for the 1940-41 school term to take the places of members who will be on leave or who have resigned.

Prominent among the appointments are those of Miss Lucretia Tiley, assistant professor of political science; Miss Ruth Blank, assistant professor of speech work; and Miss Edith Holt, assistant professor of institution economics.

Miss Tiley holds her B.A. degree from Mount Holyoke college, her Master's and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Illinois where she received the latter in 1939. She studied at the London school of Illinois one year and a fellowship there another year. She has travelled in Great Britain, France and Switzerland; is a member of the American political science association and Phi Beta Kappa; and has published articles in political science. Her experience includes research work at Harvard, Northwestern university, and Yale; and teaching at Monticello college, Godfrey, Ill. and Hunter college in New York City.

Miss Blank has a bachelor's degree from the University of Minnesota and Master's degree in the Smith-Hughes school for Social Work.

She has had wide experience as a case worker and relief investigator in Minnesota and Illinois. She is a member of the American Association of Social Workers.

Miss Holt is a graduate of Louisiana Polytechnic Institute and has a master's degree from the State college, Tennessee Polytechnic institute and is active in the American Dietetic association.

Other appointments include:

Miss Rachel Black, instructor in Spanish and French, who holds degrees from the College of William and Mary and Middlebury college, and who has studied in Spain and France, and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. She served as interpreter at the International Convention of Insurance Brokers in Paris and has taught at Stratford college, Danville, Va., for several years.

William M. Carlton, of Ocala and Wauchula, instructor of botany, a graduate of Miami university, Oxford, Ohio, in 1938, and Alumnae from out of town are guests of the college these same meals.

No guest privileges are extended to any graduates who have not been boarding in the Dining Hall.

ANNA M. TRACY,
Dietitian.

Survey Shows Rich Are Poor Students

A recent survey made by Lawrence Whistler, head of the research department at the University of Southwestern Louisiana, students from families with wealthy backgrounds are, in the main, maladjusted to college life. In a test given to all last fall entrants, Mr. Whistler points out that families that are prosperous and successful are very likely to furnish more than their quota of immature students whose relation to the college is half-hearted. Students who choose college for purpose in life, he found, are more than likely from a small town in the country, from a large family, and board at college. Here's his summary of the type that is immature in purpose: "He has no definite purpose in life to work, make long-time work plans, he does not finish the work he starts, but is not decided what he is doing and do something else, work is tolerated as a means to an end, he is not enjoyed for his own sake, and he expressed non-realistic goals of success, of thrills, romance, wealth and luck. Maladjustment of purpose goes with frequent movie attendance."

Registrar Lists 456 Students On Approbation Roll

Two Lead With 9 Hours A, Eight Make 7 or More Hours of A

Simeon R. Doyle, registrar, announces yesterday that 456 students made a "B" average or above for the first session of summer school. This is a striking figure as compared to 368 for the fall semester and 397 for the spring semester when approximately 1926 students were enrolled.

Two students lead the list making nine hours of A and eight hours of A or more hours of A.

To be eligible for the approbation list in summer school a student must make 5 or more hours with an average grade of B or above.

Just Give Me A Husband!

When the Williams college boys asked the following question at the Smith and Vassar girls they got startling different results: "If it were a matter of choice, would you rather have your husband imprisoned for conscientious objection or' killed in Europe?" The Smith girls said, "We would rather be killed ourselves." The Vassar coward because we can always get another." The Smith girls said "Any husband is better than no husband at all."

The Vassar girl is what the Florida State college girls say.

"Just give me a husband. I have a husband. I really don't know whether he is living or dead. He is imprisoned or shot. Do you mind if I get one and then make a decision?"

Mary Wilder: "If I had a husband I'd probably be proud of him either way."

Betty Sarvoid: "Provided I had a husband I'd be very much concerned for neither. He could probably get along very well without me."

Elisabeth Taylor: "I rather have

"Wishing Will Make It So," Graduation Aspirant Hopes as the End Draws Near

By MARY GLENN GRIMES

"Wishing will make it so. When I wish upon a star Life is a wish and wishing is never over."

I wish for a full moon, a confetti-like sky of twinkling stars, the smell of bacon frying and the feel of sand between my toes. For that nostalgic scent of orange blossoms, a job—kiss—and an A.

"Star light, star bright, first star I see tonight. I wish I may, I wish I might have the wish I wish tonight." Lucky number, sweet music, no American war . . . salty sea breezes, a pooper for Gulf, the feel of mastery as I press an accelerator—a successful career for Brother B.

"If you wish long enough, wish strong enough, wishes will make it so"—warm sun on a bare back, ten strikes in a bowling game, fifteen pounds less weight, a reputable by line . . . a sizzling steak, long, curly lashes, chrysalis knees.

We live in our imaginations. We are of such stuff as dreams are made of; as we wish and hope and pray, so we are. A boy, a girl, a tall, bronze man, little tot-headed children . . . authorship of a Pulitzer prize novel . . . gay laughter, few Indigo moods. I long to be into court early in April morning, to hear the zing of a tennis ball as I serve, racquet in hand . . . to assimilate down lover's lane . . . to land a Tarpon, the Silver King . . . to lay my head in Mother's lap.

I want to be capable of thinking for myself, to have a mind of my own, my prejudices, to be able to speak Hawaii and the ermine one, to carry a tune . . . to find a man I can trust . . . to have lots of fun . . . to find a home I should welcome off.

I wish for a diamond, for a gun and my shoulder and a game bag slapping my hip . . . dignity and poise . . . a carton of Camels, an inspiring bit of poetry, ten hours sleep, a diploma . . . a stag line all my own.

I crave chicken, a stylish-like figure, the throbbing beat of a drum . . . soft, deep cushions, long winter nights before a glowing fire . . . curly hair, high heeled shoes. I want a home and a maid to wash the dishes . . . to kill a deer, to slide down curved bannisters, to climb big-limbed trees, to broil steaks over a campfire, to bake a chocolate ice-cream cake, to bid and make seven no-trump, to win an argument with my father, to feel the throb of engines on an ocean liner . . . a misty wedding veil.

Desires overwhelm me as I meditate. All my hopeful longings will never materialize and yet I continue to wish and dream each night when day is done and I rest between the sheets and live in an umberland of nebulous sensation as I close my eyes and shut out reality for a few blissful moments before I lapse into dreamless sleep.

I want a Sigma Nu fraternity pin . . . an academic dress, a curved fingernails . . . a cheese sandwich . . . an allied victory. never to lose track of my closest college pals . . . no more German Reich, a carnage of orchids . . . a green hill to roll down, engraved stationery . . . to see snow, the restoration of Poland and Finland, to live in a house with tall, stately columns . . . ice appeal legs.

I want, I want, I want. I want to Graduate!

Students Taught To Stay Healthy

AMHERST, Mass. (ACP)—An increased awareness of how to stay in good health is demonstrated by students of Massachusetts State college under a system of allowing each student a maximum of seven days in the college infirmary, according to Dr. Ernest J. Radcliffe, college physician.

Fewer bed patients were accommodated in the infirmary each year than in the year previous, he reported, while the attendance in the outpatient department was considerably greater.

Dr. Radcliffe interprets these figures to mean that "our students are slowly coming to the idea of having their diseases in an early stage."

Without altering definite conclusions, Dr. Radcliffe points out that the removal of the fear of medical expense has led students to report sicknesses in earlier stages. He says the case with which the system in effect prior to 1937 when students were charged infirmary fees for each day as a bed patient.

Forty - Eight Students Are Candidates For Graduation

Forty-eight students are candidates for degrees to be given at the graduation exercises Saturday, August 24. The degrees will be presented by President Edward Conradi at 9 o'clock in the auditorium.

Dr Kathryn T Abbey head of the department of history, geography, and political science will give the commencement address. She will be the first woman ever to speak here at graduation.

Gordon Epperson, a senior at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, will play a violincello solo and Miss Jeanne Crenshaw will play the traditional organ marches for the processional and the recessional.

In the graduate division there are six candidates for the degree Master of Arts and three for Master of Science. The college of arts and sciences has the candidates for the degree of Bachelor of Arts, two for the Bachelor of Science, and two for the Bachelor of Science in Commerce. Two students are candidates for the Bachelor of Science in Home Economics degree. In the school of education 26 students are candidates for the degree of B.S. in Education and two for Bachelor of Science in Education.

Candidates for degrees in the graduate division are:

Master of Arts, Lula Dee Keblinger, Mary Lizeth Hatchett-son, Mamie Lee Ayers Mackey, Pearle Rose Main, Gwendolyn McReynolds, and Mary Schornherst.

Master of Science, Marion Stearns Barclay, Nina Mae S Wilson, and Ruth Ann Wilson.

Who To Educate?

It's traditional for all college editors to write farewell editorials stating sublime opinions on trivia. We are not ones to break vital traditions but we are ones to question their validity.

As our last editorial we propose to question, no condemn, several summer school traditions.

Perhaps first on the list should be the widespread idea that summer school students are below winter school students in intellectual capacity. Many "college girls" defended their intellectuals lethargy this summer by saying "the swamp angels offer no competition." The evidence as revealed by the approbation list announced by the registrars office points in the opposite direction. The 456 students listed on the first session's honor list is more than twice the number normally on approbation, in proportion to the size of the student body, in the winter term.

We are not questioning the weather, but why concentrate on it? It happens every summer, in school or out. Even euthusiastic lectures sound better without the clank of fans and "gosh ain't it hot"?

We question the value of the Flambeau in the summer school program. It is our mission to "entertain, inform, and stimulate" been in vain because of our lethargy or the general preoccenpation with the important things in life—thesis, renewal of certification and Traditions Again

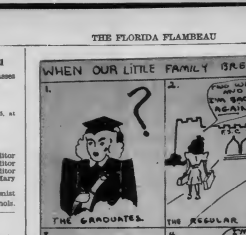
"Perhaps the most frightening aspect of modern war is the intellectual blackout which it creates. One does not have to subscribe to H. G. Wells' grim prophecy that mankind, which began in a cave and behind a windbreak, will end in the disease-soaked ruins of a slum;' but certainly the night in Europe cannot be long continued without the sacrifice of cultural values on a vast scale that the chance of an enlightened and gracious life, not alone for this generation in Europe but for the children and grandchildren of the generation, will be irretrievably lost." Rockefeller Foundation's President Raymond B. Fosdiek voices fears over the war's cultural destruction.

ACP



War And Culture—

"If an institution cultivates the policy of critical inquiry, of intellectual responsibility and integrity—as I believe is obligatory—it follows as a matter of course that controversial questions should be freely discussed. Young men and women are going to discuss the different social ideologies and theories, whether in or out of class. Why shouldn't they?" Antioch College's President Algo D. Henderson urges free college discussion of all "issus."

ACP

Free Discussion—

"Half the persons put through the courses in United States schools cannot absorb instruction. Another ten percent doesn't know what to do with the information when it is absorbed." Dr. E. A. Hooton, Harvard anthropologist, expresses concern over what he terms senseless multiplication of humanity without economic or social use or reason.

HUMID LUCIDS

Among the Amazons

The calm that surrounds this going home business is astonishing. To me it is the highlight of summer school. There were a few girls, however, that were heard singing . . "One more week and two more days!"

Joke of the week!

"And what are you going to do with your vacation?" "Oh, I think I'll rest the first sixteen days . . and then I think I'll go north for a while." Yeah, north alright, north Florida . . and "School days, school days . . ."

It's a beautiful life if you don't weaken . . and a wonderful one if you do.

One of the professors on this campus (you don't mind if I quote you, do you, Doc?) has a pet theory that is quite astounding. He thinks that if you want somethling bad enough you should go and get it. Therefore because millions of women all over the world are expressing a desire for pink cheeks and red lips everyday that they put on make-up, eventually we will become a race of pink cheeked and red lipped women . . . oh, say in a few thousand years. What is going to happen to us if we keep on desiring sun tans every summer, will we slowly change into the darker skinned variety of people? Food for thought!

If anyone is looking for activity around this campus they can find it most any day or night, up in the Journalism room. You know term papers? There's going to be a lot of celebrating going on around here about next Monday, when all the blessed topics will be safe in teacher's hands.

This being the last roundup, the orders from the ed were to make this "good and long." I could perhaps make it long but there is some doubt about making it good . . Six people, exclusive of me and my family, read the column last week If it keeps on that (that is the very last) I may better quit, which is Sonny Boy Jones' record . . The "bad mouth" that Hamid (not you so long!) put on me last week really was very gratifying. Another reader I know last how it is, has been hard up for copy, too, but not so hard up that I would read her column. There must be a line drawn somewhere . .

Hats off to the Amerians. They took me up very quickly on my no too broad statements about their periodical room. It seems that there are only 543 magazines and the Pegasus has to do. Two statements I made—two were wrong. One is not a "good" and is not "on a stick".

Vacation of a whole week is almost here. How will you spend yours? The writer, after five summer sessions in a row, will attend coaching SCHOOL. The postman's holiday has nothing on me .

Grades will soon go in. Remember that the best methods of apple polishing are somewhat as follows: Moore—dogs, football marriage; George — Gainesville; Rogers—Browning, especially the thing said the black and others for a price . . .

Best shutup of the year: One playnight there were not many boys there due to exams in Gainesville; it was not exam week here. One girl mentioned the time rush that a boy was getting. He, being polite, said that he really were rather hard up for term (all particular night). She — Boy, you know it!" . . Aug. 29 is the date for the ceremony that will rob the campus of its most eligible young bachelor, at least it will rob Miss Mary Bannerman-Donaldson on that date. Myrtle Mae Hoffman follows two days later . . .

There must be quite a few "small town" folk here. Even the tongue wagging on the sidelines at playnight . . Teaching all the dear high school journalism that all "dirt" columns are bad newspaper does not keep me from having to do this . . One of the affairs of note around the campus this half involved the musical addition of the second session

Dorothy Thompson has entitled her latest column in the September Ladies' Home Journal "To Youth and Middle Age." Speaking to young people between the ages of 18 and 24, Miss Thompson tells them why she considers they should insist on compulsory military training for only for the preservation of our country through effective defense but also guarantees of personal freedom. Miss Thompson believes American youth should be willing to participate in universal military service.

In the author's opinion, military training of the majority of our populace would prevent any chance of an armed dictatorship by a military caste. Miss Thompson states: "Universal service is the only way by which you, as individuals have a chance on the earth as it is today to preserve your personal freedom."

Miss Thompson then launches into a similar argument of the necessity of universal military training to our national defense. She intimates that American pacifist groups are largely composed of Nazi German and Red Russian sympathizers plotting the downfall of the democratic system in the United States. Our riches are depicted as an incentive for the humiliated tyrant from Europe and Asia, who will be quick to take advantage of our inadequate defenses. This country is rich enough and strong enough to be free and depocratic forever, provided, not only provided, that it is defended in everybody's life by universal service and by immense weight of arms.

Finally, Miss Thompson blames the citizens of the United States for the decline of two things: Following up the World War by backing with our influential national prestige a policy of collective security for Europe, or providing adequate national defense for this country if the nation did not want to become involved in European affairs.

The prominent American woman journalist closes her discussion bold as follows: "I know that either the world must be reorganized completely into a real co-operative commonwealth or it must remain limited, with a common police force not a common economic program, or every nation must be prepared to defend itself alone or by temporary alliances for the actions of similar interests."

In "Hull Against Hitler" just off in the "Hull the Miracle Man" the August 10 Willard R. Espy hails the victory of Secretary of State Cordell Hull over the dictatorial attitude which the Latin American nations showed when the Havana Conference opened.

The Axis powers and the nations had set their European markets. They were in the midst of a business slump. The business men and politicians were listening mouths watering to German trade proposals and delivery guarantees," writes Mr Espy from Havana.

The Latin American countries wanted trade, if not with the United States then with Germany. Their situation called for speedy action on the part of American statesmen, but they were harassed by domestic difficulties and by the coming election. isolationist politicians and the narrowmindedness of American businessmen, who would not accept competitive imports from South America. Beside these obstacles, some of the Latin American nations were afraid to antagonize the Nazi orbit, and the countries lacked a land route from the United States to South America.

In spite of the persistent efforts of Argentina to nullify the accomplishment of the Conference, Espy declares distrust by the United States among her sister nations, Secretary Hull succeeded in winning over the hesitant Latin nations to his plan for inter-American good will. The confidence he restored to the delegates led to the unanimous Act of Havana.

This declaration, a step toward close collaboration among the American nations, sanctioning the seizure of European possessions in the western hemisphere should they become dangerous to the security of any of the 21 nations participating in the Conference Act said to

Eyman Speaks On Teacher Training Program In State

Internships, Workshops Are Principal Phases Of Long-Time Plan

Dr. R. L. Eyman, dean of the school of education, in a speech on the "Teacher Training Program in Our State" Tuesday at 2:45 in the Augusta Conrad Little Theater told what can be expected in teacher education if the present plans have five or six years to develop.

The program which has been planned through a period of four years by the cooperation of the State Department of Education and all the teacher training institutions in Florida consists of two principal parts, the in service program and the internship program.

The in service training program taking the form of the workshop was inaugurated at the University of Florida last summer and is held on the campus for the first time this summer. Dr. Eyman said, "The workshop is formulated as it was felt that academic summer work did not do much to make better teachers whereas the workshop whole school faculties will attend summer school together and work cooperatively with experts on actual problems, be assisted out."

"In this way" he emphasized, "We hope to bring about a democratic spirit in the schools, create a new professional spirit and a new spirit of professional growth which will in new day in education."

The second phase of the teacher training program in teacher education for beginning teachers. This program is the internship in which all teacher training institutions in the state will participate will consist of each student working in the field in a public school under the supervision of a teacher. Dr. Eyman explained. Twelve semester hour stories are to be governed temporarily by the Inter-American Commission until they are prepared to assume self government or can be safely restored to their former status.

Two other resolutions advocate joint conferences of the 21 American republics should any of them be menaced by aggression and any limitation of the diplomatic privileges of non-American diplomats serving in American nations. The foundations were laid by consideration later of such economic plans for a united hemisphere as a trade cartel, a customs union, and a common currency.

The United States, however, must do her part to keep alive this increased optimism and friendliness shown by her South-ern neighbors. Mr. Espy thinks that we can help by donating the services of our educators for the purpose of teaching modern political social, and economic theories to the Latin Americans, by seeing that the Pan American highway is completed with all possible speed, by increasing our purchases of Latin American exports, by aiding in the development of production of commodities such as rubber and tin which we import from the Dutch East Indies now dominated by Japan, and by governments subsidies if necessary to encourage American business to trade with other nations of the western hemisphere.

The author concludes, "There are knotty problems ahead. But the Conference of Foreign Ministers at Havana, the culmination of many years of patient work has brought the vision of Pan American integration a long step nearer realization."

From Other Colleges

Sixteen American authors, editors, and critics are included on the staff and list of lecturers for Middlebury College Bread Loaf Writers Conference, which opened Wednesday. The two-week conference writers and aspiring writers study and confer with authorities in all literary fields. Robert Frost, Louis Untermeyer, Edith Mirrielees and John Marquand are among the 16.

DePaul University's placement bureau reports 40 per cent more placements than in 1939.

"Information Please" for principals is the latest innovation at Bates College Summer School at Lewiston, Me. The idea is to give school principals a chance to get together in an informal group and present their individual problems of teaching and administration to a board of experts. Four summer school instructors each of whom is a leader in his particular phase of the educational field. The program is informal and for men only.

A new Student Union Building is the latest of the long projects on the campus at the University of Minnesota. One of the many projects on the "Minnesota Daily" reports the following anecdote concerning the fund for the carpet in the housepainters union contributed to the fund for the "new union on campus." "It's a fine thing," he said. "We want to see that the boys have a union."

Registration at New York City College in summer session reached 6,660 students, the largest enrollment in the session's 24-year history.

A questionnaire survey conducted by Pennsylvania, State's Dean of Women Dean Ethel E. Ray, indicates that about one-third of the women graduates of Penn State marry Penn State men whom they met during undergraduate days on campus.

The survey which covers the period 1925 to 1939 inclusive, also shows that one-third of graduates are unmarried, one-third married Penn State men, and one-third married men met away from campus.

About two-thirds of the married alumni have children with the largest family reported by the class of '24 with 1.8 children per family.

Of the married women 17.61 per cent hold jobs outside the home.

Dr S Winston Cram of Emporia State Teachers College has recently come out in the open and forbidden students to take his name in vain—he says there is to be no cramming for Cram exams. He even goes so far as to encourage students to use ponies because he says an exam is essentially a worthwhile review program and memory work has little part in it.

A recent news item describing an insurance program begun by credit, as plans are now, will be given for this work. To be eligible the student must be a senior and have had observation first.

Dr. Eyman concluded by pointing out that this is a long time program and that those who are teaching 25 years from now can look back at this, the inception and inauguration of a plan which will give Florida a first rank position in education.

Next Winter Session To Begin September 9

Florida State College will begin its next winter session Monday, September 9, with annual Freshman days.

More than 1,900 students including those who are upperclassmen are expected to be registered when classes start the following Monday, September 16.

The college experienced the largest winter registration in history last term when a total of 2,048 attended. This figure included those registering in the fall and additional ones coming in late in the year.

Two enterprising students at Emory University in Georgia makes it possible for students to insure passing a course. Premiums are computed on the basis of the student's average grades made previously under the teacher, and the number of flunks and "A's" given by the teacher.

A survey at the University of Michiesn shows that 55 per cent of men and 44 per cent of women would like more dates.

INQUIRING REPORTER

The inquiring reporter this week asked students if summer school is worth the time, effort and money put into it. Here are the answers:

Luther King: "Do you think I'd be here if I didn't think so? This isn't the place one would come to spend eleven pleasant weeks to get away from the heat."

Alice Wright: "Yes, what I'm doing is trying out College, so that by next fall I'll be an old grad."

Lillian Rudd: "I think that it's worth while because you get some of the hours worked off that you don't want."

Pauline Menser: "I do think summer school is worth the time and money. It's cheaper for your education because you can make more hours in the length of time."

Willie Lee Moore: "I do think it's worth while because it puts you nearer graduation, and you keep up with the modern trends in education."

Mrs. George Bean: "Yes, you put in such a lot of work in the short time you are here that you get almost as much done as you do in winter school."

Dot McCown: "I can't say what I think because the faculty might see it."

Virginia Barfield: "Yes, I do, but it's just too hot."

Flournoy Moore. "Certainly I do. Summer school is planning forward. A teacher naturally needs to keep up with recent efforts."

Kathleen Lennon: "I think it's worth while. If I weren't here, I'd be home spending more money than I spend here and getting nothing but a good time."

Mrs. Ray Bedsole: "I realize more and more that summer school pays because we get the things we need the most. Courses in education have helped me more than any other."

Gisele Bozart: "I think it's really all right. I'm having a good time."

Bonnie Craig: "I think its a good thing. It gives you a chance to work off your credits and have some fun to boot."

Beverly Haile: "Yes, because you can get credits in a shorter time. It is a great help to those who teach and have to earn money to come to school."

Mary Davis: "Yes, because it gives us new ideas and incentives to go ahead and teach next fall."

Mrs. Powers: "I've been several. I do appreciate summer school. If it weren't for summer school many people wouldn't have a college education."

Miss Hancock: "Yes, of course for myself. For some people it isn't. I believe it is a very individual matter."

Dr. Liddell: "I think that the money that goes toward my salary is eminently worthwhile. Whether the time spent is worthwhile, ask my students."

Helen Merrin: "It's hot. I think it's worthwhile for the credits you get, but I don't think you learn an awful lot."

Carolyn Klaver: "I think it's all right if you want it, but I don't want any more of it."

Landis To Give Informal Party

The students of Landis hall are giving an informal tea on Wednesday, August 21 from 4:30 to 5:30 in Landis parlors. Members of the Summer School Council, Flo Bozart, Betty Jane Reznick, Mary Lemont, and Mary Grey Bakers, are to be the hostesses. Miss Maude Flowers, director of residences, will receive the guests. Miss Georgia McCorkleand Mrs. Margaret Seynor, social directors of Landis hall, are to pour.

Dr. Liddell Will Speak

Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, professor of philosophy, will speak at the last vespers of the summer session in the Augusta Conrad theater at 7:30 Sunday night. Her topic will be "Has Christianity Failed?"

Miss Preddie Le Suhr will play a violin solo accompanied by Lois Carlos at the piano.

Vassar Girls Understand

(ACP)—Due to some diligent investigations by Williams College students a few salient facts have been discovered concerning the attitude of Smith and Vassar girls. The Smith lasses were recently queried on the question, "If it were a matter of choice, would you rather have your husband imprisoned for conscientious objection or killed in Europe?", and returned a verdict in favor of the latter alternative.

Evidently possessing much of the Medusan Delilah in their cold-blooded little hearts, the young ladies felt that a "hero dead" would be preferable to a "coward alive." Of course, the traditional Smith feeling that "you can always get another" may have in part prompted this display of pseudo self-sacrifice on the altar of their country, but we are more inclines to credit it to their well-styled "dashing love of adventure."

Vassar, on the other hand, offers an understanding heart to the youth who refuses to fight in a senseless combat. The lad who expects to be a conscientious objector in the event that the United States is drawn into foreign entanglements had best spend some week-end prospecting tours to Poughkeepsie, for the adopted daughters at Matthew Vassar would prefer a husband in irons to a husband unmanned, any husband being better than no husband.

Consequently, the lover of the home and fireside, who has no illusions about the glory of war, will find a more sympathetic companion at Poughkeepsie than he can hope to find by currying favor of some damsel at Northampton.

Mendenhall Returns From Army Camp in Mississippi

Herbert Mendenhall, resident engineer, has just returned from Camp Shelby near Hattiesburg, Miss., where he spent 28 days with about 400 regular army officers preparing the camp for occupation by national guardsmen.

Mr. Mendenhall holds the rank of lieutenant colonel with the 307th engineers, a reserve regiment in the 82nd division.

SUMMER SCHOOL COUNCIL

The following statement is made at the earnest request of a large majority of the student body who have observed considerable cheating in their classes. It is hoped that this warning will be sufficient to eradicate this dishonesty without any further action on the part of the summer school council and those students who wish to maintain the high standards of Florida State college.

We, as fellow students, are united in maintaining these standards of conduct

Honesty

Responsibility

Loyalty.

The above is a statement of the standards which are essential for the well-being of each student and the college as announced by the Judiciary of the college government association in the student handbook last fall. This honor code includes every phase of college life—social, academic, and college government.

The summer school council completely subscribes to this code. If any student is unable to respect this tradition of the college the student is failing himself and the college and will not be allowed to jeopardize our tradition of honesty.

Signed:
Summer School Council.

Swarthmore Group Studies Marriage

(NSFA)—The activities of a well-rounded and alert student council are extremely broad in scope, particularly should they be guided by vox popuil. At Swarthmore, in response to popular demand, a marriage course was developed by the student council. After the course was given, the council prepared a report advocating certain revisions, such as special meetings for men and women on certain topics. The council also investigated the possibility of getting Wasserman tests for students.

Washington Offers New Consumer Course

George Washington University is offering a new course. Ten students of sociology will participate in a course which provides practical, immediate experience in work. This work, which will be supplemented by lectures, will consist of house-to-house canvassing by which student will attempt to form consumers' groups, and buying groups, as well as offering some experience in the actual operation of buying clubs. (NSFA).

Students View Free Show

A feature motion picture, "The Crusades," was presented free to students of the college last night at 7:45 p. m. in the auditorium theater at the same time that the Gaieties presented "Aqua Rhythm" was shown, "Aqua Rhythm," which was scheduled for play during the Florida State Club's famed mermaids swimming in Wakulla Springs. The trip to Wakulla planned for tomorrow has been cancelled.

"Little Paris" Ain't What It Used to Be

By GENEVIEVE KENLY

We who have known Belgium and her people cannot fail to have a great sympathy for them in the recent invasion of their country. Especially the Belgian capital, dates back to the tenth century and is called "Little Paris" Kim Stanley Robinson says of the city which boasts of a royal square, the finest architecture of all time.

In the foreground of its many buildings, there was a statue representing youth, old age and middle age. We viewed the statue spot in the shooting gallery when 35 Brutilians were shot by German soldiers during the World War. Remember the Lusitania?

Again the brave Belgians have been driven from their homes and robbed of their possessions by the German conquerors. This is the World War stripped this country of everything they could make or take. Even the bedding in the house which had stood for centuries as well was part of Belgium. The same walnut trees were used in making stocks for rifles to shoot the Belgians who fought for their liberty

Furnishing of Longmire Building Continues At Fast Pace

Dempsey Creary Explains Regulations for Building

Furnishing of the newly opened Rowena Longmire Student Alumnae building is continuing as rapidly as possible, according to Miss Dempsey Creary, director of the building.

As school opened last week, students were quick to find and to use the completed soda bar and game room on the ground floor. Conference and meeting rooms will be available at all times, for the use of faculty and students as soon as the needs of such groups can be determined.

New Equipment

Additional equipment will be installed as long as funds permit, as the $8,000 retained in last year's drive by the alumnae association will not be sufficient to complete the furnishing of the five floors. The officials hope that alumnae, alumnae, and friends of the college will contribute their interest in and financial support of the building.

Facilities of the modern fireproof building include an elevator from the ground floor to the fourth floor. On the ground floor is located the soda bar and game room with a dickelodeon, piano, ping-pong, and card game tables, and club furniture. The room is open from 8 o'clock in the morning until first light flies. On the same floor is the post office where a complete line of fountain drinks, candies, and cigarettes which will open at 9 o'clock and close at first light flies. The use of the post office is given over to the Day student house the Flambeau offices the Major Phoenix offices, the kitchen, and pay telephone stations for the convenience of visitors.

On the main floor the lounge, with its attractive furniture, will be reserved for teas, receptions, and more formal uses. The library, across the hall, is to be used for purposes of studying, writing and general lounging by both faculty and students. Also located on the same floor is the information desk, the offices of the director of publicity, and of the director of the building.

Drama Students Plan Four Plays

'Dear Octopus' Will Open Speech Department Yearly Series

Four plays will be offered on the season ticket by the speech department of Florida State college for women, Miss Dempsey Martin Moore play director. The first, starting in October is "Dear Octopus" a serious comedy in which the "octopus" represents the chief character's family and from demands on him.

In the early spring "The School for Scandal" by Richard Sheridan will be produced. An Ibsen-Strindberg drama "Ghosts" and a documentary play to be selected later complete the season's plans.

Scenes from the season ticket will be reproduced and the plays will be presented early in the year. The plays to be acted and directed by PSCW students, will be taken from children's literature and will include "Sentimental Tommy" and "Polly Patchwork" by Rachel Fields, author of the best-seller "All This and Heaven Too."

The Christmas play, usually left to the public, will be the third in a series of four plays. Christmas plays given here and are impressive and late Renaissance period. The first was a York Nativity play, and the second was a Spanish Christmas play. Both belongs is for the benefit of church groups. Each year the plays definite conceptions of four different periods of dramatic seasonal

The plays presented by the speech department are fully equipped and are acted by speech majors and directed by Miss Dempsey. The director was born in Boerne, Texas, daughter of a small stockman's plantation.

Information Please?

"Can you tell me where the 'Y' room is?" asks Frances Palmer of Miss Dempsey Creary, director of the Student-Alumnae building. This and similar inquiries are answered every day at the information desk in the new building. Miss Creary, who is a new member of the college staff, lives in the building and sees to the many details of keeping organization and recreation rooms running smoothly. Other features of the Rowena Longmire building are the reception room, a small auditorium, and facilities for bousing college guests.

Kellum Reports Beautification Plan for Campus

New Sidewalks, Lights, Heating Lines Are Among Features

Among the latest projects for further beautification of the campus are plans for concrete sidewalks to be laid from the dormitories Kings, two Lords, two Knights, and one Duke. Three other "celebrities" on campus are Jean Austin and Betsy Davis (not related), and Georgianna Hamburger.

Prune Mystery Finally Solved

The mystery of the prune experiment has at last been solved.

The solution occurred began last week when at breakfast in the cafeteria one morning a sign appeared saying, "Take prunes and the other fruit, or prunes and fruit juice." The plot thickened and reached its climax late in the week when the rumor spread that all prune eating was part of an important experiment being conducted by Miss Anna May Tracy head dietitian of the college.

Immediately a reporter from the Tallahassee Daily Democrat arranged an interview with Miss Tracy so that he might get scientific and dietetic details of the investigation.

He began to feel chemical, scientific, but Miss Tracy, however, when the head dietitian was convulsed with laughter. The reporter found that the new signs at breakfast were neither part of a great secret experiment or a conspiracy that everyone should eat prunes. Miss Tracy explained that the placards merely were an arrangement whereby girls would be persuaded not to carry off the entire fruit counter, and yet would feel free to take only enough fruit as they wanted them.

"Pull of prunes?" inquired one of the dietitians. "Well, I would rather not say so. You girls eat 25 pounds a day."

Seven Register For Honors Work

Girls Will Specialize In Field of Choices

Seven girls seeking distinction in their special fields have applied for honors works during the coming year, according to the personnel office.

The applicants and the subjects in which they expect to receive honors upon graduation are: Julie Miller, Panama City, Social Science, speech; Joan Weaver, Miami, Social Science education; Margaret Christy Harrison, political science; and Anne Gaylord, English.

Two plans of honors work are offered the girls. The student can results in a degree "with great honors" and requires that a 2.5 average be maintained through out the college years. The second plan requires a 2.5 average in addition in special fields and tests elected by the applicants this year.

Local Students Become Interns

Political Science Majors Employed by State For Coming Year

Following last year's precedent two students who are majoring in political science will serve as interns in state offices this year.

Margaret Christie Harrison has received a research internship in the department of research and statistics in the Florida department of agriculture under the direction of Mr. Frederick Smith.

Pat Brandt has been given an internship in the office of the Secretary of State R A Gray, while Margaret Christie Harrison (left) has started work in the department of research and statistics in the Florida department of agriculture under the direction of Mr. Frederick Smith. Both girls are seniors and are enrolled in advanced political science classes.

Pat Brandt (right) has been given an internship in he office of the Secretary of State R A Gray, while Margaret Christie Harrison (left) has started work in the department of research and statistics in the Florida department of agriculture under the direction of Mr. Frederick Smith. Both girls are seniors and are enrolled in advanced political science classes.

Margaret and Pat, seniors and enrolled in the advanced public administration course are under the supervision of Dr. Marion Irish, associate professor of political science.

Last year marked the first time an internship in local government had ever been arranged through the college. Lis Anne Webb was awarded this internship. A Florida state graduate, Ruth Rogers, not held an internship at the National Institute of Public Affairs in Washington, D. C.

Personnel Staff Holds Interviews

Upperclassmen Record Information About Freshmen

The freshman interview schedule, arranged by the personnel office under the direction of Dr. Elizabeth Gordon Andrews, opened yesterday. Upperclassmen serve as interviewers, each taking care of approximately 36 freshmen each day.

As stated by Dr. Andrews, complete records are filled out during interviews and are kept up to date during the student's entire college career. The office furnishes information whenever special guidance is needed or employment is requested.

All interviewers are pledged to keep information secret and any information divulged during the course of an interview in the personnel office is held in strict confidence.

The upperclassman will assist the freshman in any problems she may have and help plan her

Hinson Will Head Graduate School

State Board of Control Establishes Office For First Time

Dr. M. R. Hinson, professor of education, has recently been appointed by the state board of control as director of the graduate division of Florida State College for Women, according to Dr. Edward Conrad, president.

In addition to this office, Dr. Hinson will also continue his regular duties as professor of education. He is a former member of the state department of education and is president of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, one of the first Florida men to achieve the latter honor.

This is the first time such an office has been established although PSCW has been offered graduate training in all four divisions of the college for a number of years. Degrees of Master of Arts and Master of Science are given in both the College of Arts and Sciences and School of Education, and that of Master of Science in the School of Home Economics. Graduate instruction is also offered in the school of music which grants a graduate diploma.

Practice House Will Open Today

Home Economics Groups To Learn Management By Experience

Today marks the opening of the home management house, in which 24 home economics majors must live for at least four weeks in the practice house in connection from their school.

The practice house at the house, located near the demonstration school, the girls must be satisfied to live under the responsibility of seven major duties for at least four weeks. These duties include: manager, housekeeper, assistant housekeeper, food buyer, cook, hostess, and guest. Miss Leila Venable, assistant professor of home economics, supervises every group.

During each residence period the student will receive a final dinner to which certain members of the faculty will be invited. Those comprising the first group will also sponsor the annual tea for all freshmen and home economics

Included in the first group, which will start September 30 and continue until Nov. 26 are Mirian Bushnell, Mary Louise Burns, Margaret Deese, Virginia Loughnot, Barbara Lane, Velora Manning, and Tybell Wiltenstein.

Composing the second group which begins October 28 and continues through November 26, are Catherine Harris, Marjorie Harris, Frances Jordan, Mary Martin, Anna Pfeiffer, Dorothy Rhodes, Dorothy Swanson.

In the third group, starting November 30 and ending December 30, them continuing after Christmas from January 6 to January 16, are Irene Cone, Mary Frances Cone, Mary Frances Gluher, Vivian Guagliardo, Mary Elizabeth Rivers, and Eleanor Shinholser.

After 10:30 each morning, the house will be open for visitors.

Talks Supplant Religious Week

Religious Convocation Inaugurates Series Tuesday Night

A religious program featuring the theme "Religion in Life" will replace the usual Religious Emphasis week this year according to Dr. Robert Miller, president of the religious worker's council.

Special events will be scheduled for each quarter of the 1940-41 term and will be divided into four general subjects: Personal Religion, Religion in Marriage, Religion in the Social Order, and Religion of the Future.

Inaugurating the year's religious calendar will be a convocation on September 24 with Dr. Wyatt Aiken Stuart of Emory University theological school as the featured speaker. This program will be combined with the annual YWCA recognition services.

The religious workers' council includes the religious counselors and ministers in addition to various faculty members. The council will be assisted by a "Committee of 100" which includes a representative section of student leaders, faculty members, social directors, sorority girls, and campus leaders.

Members of the Religious Workers' Council are the following: Dr. Edward Conradi; Dr. Olivia V. Dorman, dean of students; Dr. Elisabeth Andrews, director of personnel; Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, professor of philosophy; Dr. Robert Miller, assistant professor of philosophy and religion; Dr. W. N. Caldwell; Dr. Max Eichenborn; Father Joseph O'Neill; Rabbi Gerald Culbertson; Rev. Mr. Jeffry Aitken; Rev. Mr. Theodore Otto; Rev. Mr. Jack Anderson; Miss Frances Hall, Methodist student secretary; Miss Billie Ruth Curtin, Baptist student secretary; Miss Helen Wilson, Presbyterian student secretary; Miss Julia Stevens, Episcopal student secretary.

Faculty representatives on the Committee of One Hundred are: Dr. Jennie Wise Brevard of psychological chemistry and nutrition; Mr. Henry Odum, associate professor of geography; Dr. Paul Pinner, professor of psychology; Miss Edith Flynn, instructor in physics; Prof. Walter Cowles, professor of dancing and director of the orchestra; Dr. Raymond Mahaney, professor of sociology; Miss Mary Settle, instructor in physical education; Miss Etta Robertson, associate professor of voice and director of the glee club; Miss Sarah Comstock, instructor of speech; Miss Margaret Whitney Dow, associate professor of organ and theory.

Five New Additions to Florida State College Faculty For 1940-41 Term

Dr. Edward Conradi

Ten permanent new faculty members have been appointed to fill positions at Florida State College. Five of these who are pictured above are, from right to left, Miss Grace Sasse, instructor in botany and bacteriology; Miss Lucretia L. Hay, professor of political science, Miss Ruth Gaskin, assistant professor of social work; Miss Rachel Black, instructor in Spanish and French; and Miss Edith Holt, assistant professor of institution economics. The other five, not pictured here, include: Mrs. Edris L. Butler, assistant professor and assistant teacher trainer in home economics; Miss Ruth Prather, instructor in geography; Miss Margaret Holway, supervisor at the Student-Union; Mrs. Frances Mary Hughes, part time instructor in theory and sight singing; and Mrs. Ruth D. Ferguson, instructor in home economics. Five other teachers have been appointed to fill the place of those members of the faculty who are on leave at absence.

School Grows Larger As Tuition Is Removed

Enrollment in the junior high and high school of the demonstration school has increased from 290 to 332 pupils this year, and tuition in the high school has been eliminated, and tuition for all grades is expected to be done away with after this year, Dr. Robert Lee Goulding, superintendent, stated. This, we feel, will give us a more normal student body than we would get under the system."

Bookkeeping has been added to the curriculum this year, and English and social studies are taught by the same teacher in a block system. Miss Ruth Lanier has been made in the faculty to teach girls' physical training, the former teacher of kindergarten, Miss Ruth Lanier, who resigned to accept a position in New England.

Contest Announced

A cash prize of $2 will be awarded to the student submitting the best name for the new soda fountain shop in the Student-Union building.

Deadline for turning in names is October 1.

Entries may be addressed to Miss Dempsey Creary, director of the Student-Alumnae building.

New Photography Program Enlarged Program Expande

Practical photography, a new program developed by the physics department two years ago, is now being expanded, according to Dr. Harold P. Richards, professor of physics.

Equipment has recently been made available for comparing the performance for several very fine photographic lenses and for studying the enlargement principle with an enlarging apparatus constructed by Dr. William M. Barrows, Jr., assistant professor of physics. This apparatus is for testing the accuracy of lenses and speeds to determine whether or not the negative agrees with the specs which are marked on the camera.

Zandstra Takes Barrow's Place

Taking the place of Dr. William M. Barrows, Jr., assistant professor of physics, on leave of absence for a year, is Dr. Thomas Zandstra, until recently instructor in engineering mathematics at the University of Cincinnati.

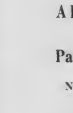
Dr. Zandstra, who received his Ph.D. degree from New York university, was awarded membership in Sigma Pi, general scientific honorary, in recognition of original scientific research, including studies of disintegration of the nuclei of atoms by means of ultrahigh voltage produced by a Van De Graaff high voltage generator.

He has recently done specialized work at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the field of spectroscopic analysis of both visible and invisible light. It is expected that he will use a spectroscope which is suitable for work in the ultra violet field.

Replacing Miss Gertrude Verplillion, instructor in chemistry on leave at Barnard, Dr. Zandstra is a member of Sigma Pi, scientific honorary, and also a member of Iota Sigma Pi, chemistry honorary, and Phi Beta Kappa, scholastic honorary.

Courses in Religion Show Increase Roll

Liddell Thinks Interest Due to World Crisis



The number of students enrolled for Old Testament history and English Bible has increased at FSCW, says Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, head of the department of Philosophy and Religion. Interest in ethics have also shown an increase. Dr. Liddell believes that interest promoted by world conditions.

Religious interest increased in outstanding colleges in the United States last year, he stated, basing on the ground floor only—in the soda shop, game room, and the Day students' lounge; dances at all times in the game room except on Sunday; no girls to be worn in the game room in the evenings; students must not congregate to meet dates in the buildings.

All such engagements must be properly arranged and signed out for in the office; and the girl or men who have signed out for dates with students are to be allowed in the recreation rooms for soda bar and game room or for the use of the student body, and not the general public.

All organizations on campus will soon receive blanks from Miss Creary to be filled out indicating the needs of their group. It is to the advantage of these groups to fill the blanks carefully filled out, for their demands will be on the second floor, with rooms for the YWCA, the College Government association, the Council and the Flaslacovo. Here also is the Student-Union library and room to seat 300 persons. This hall can be used by any group on campus for dances or for conferences if proper arrangements are made with the director. The club room on the southwest corner will be for general use by the student organizations who need room for lectures, programs meetings, informal social affairs, and facilities for serving light refreshments. Reservation of the room must be made with the director of the building a week early. The floor also has a formal committee room.

The third floor has bedrooms and storage space. Eight bedrooms will be available for the use of guests of the college visiting alumnae, mothers of students enrolled in the college.

The dramatic costume room, and club and conference rooms are on the fourth floor. All conferences and club rooms in the building are available at all times for the use of the faculty and the student body. Reservations may be placed at the information desk.

Policies for the supervision of the building are for the present purely tentative, stated the director. The building is to be primarily for the use of the students, and the directors wish to lay down as few restrictions as possible, she said. It will hardly be necessary she thinks, for more than remind the students of their responsibility to avoid abuse and damaging any of the beautiful furnishings.

Thus the policies of the building, in line with the policies of the college, will be similar to those ruling on the ground floor only—in the soda shop, game room, and the Day students' lounge; dances at all times in the game room except on Sunday; no girls to be worn in the game room in the evenings; students must not congregate to meet dates in the buildings.

All such engagements must be properly arranged and signed out for in the office; and the girl or men who have signed out for dates with students are to be allowed in the recreation rooms for soda bar and game room or for the use of the student body, and not the general public.

Students Help Earn Expenses

Approximately 400 students of Florida State college will help earn their own expenses this year according to percentage of office figures compiled this week. The National Youth Administration, providing jobs for 178 girls, will form the largest source of employment, followed by the college dining hall with 115 employees.

Besides dining room and NYA work 66 girls will be departmental assistants; 10 will work in tea rooms; and 33 will occupy miscellaneous positions.

The 178 NYA students make up about 8.47 per cent of the total enrollment. They are allowed to work from 40 to 60 hours a month at 30 cents an hour, with freshmen limited to 40 hours until their first semester grades are known.

NYA students are selected on a basis of scholarship, financial need, and character. Age limits are from 16 to 24, and each student must be a citizen of the United States, and take an oath of allegiance.

Positions include clerical work, library service, research, secretarial leadership, and other types of employment. Any student who has been a "C" average or do satisfactory work may be dropped from the NYA rolls.

Senate Holds First Of Year's Meetings

Louise Burger Is Named Chairman of Ushers

Student senate, in its first meeting of the year yesterday, nominated Louise Burger chairman of the usher committee. Belle Young Polly Simons, Jean Wood and Mary Celeste Hardee were nominated for membership on the all-campus committee and Marion Webster, Sarah Kline, Margaret Booth and Elaine Hunderman for the handbook committee.

The appointment of Vicky Wood as vice-house chairman of Broward hall was approved and accepted.

Senate also authorized the creation of a purchasing committee to act as a clearing house in purchasing agent for furniture for the student organizations that receive funds from the student activities fees. The committee is to be composed of a representative from each of the organizations and the chairman of the senate budget committee. Miss Beatrice Beyer Williams, director of art, will be the faculty advisor.

It was decided that senate should meet every other Wednesday at 4:30 until a more appropriate time could be arranged.

"Customs and Traditions" Will Open Forum Series

Customs and traditions at Florida State College for Women will be the main topic for discussion at the first meeting of the student forum on October 1, according to Mary Pinchard Bryan, president of the organization.

The forum formerly the NSFA, meeting every Tuesday night at the freshmen hall, will be held in the week-night, instead of the building to too great an extent.

Miss Creary's duties as director of the building include the preservation of the usage and supervision of the building and equipment. She says she will in no way interfere with the activities of any group, unless their activities begin to encroach on the general college policies.

Carleton graduated from Cornell university at Oxford, Ohio in 1938. Last year he received his master's degree from Louisiana State university in Baton Rouge. The subject of Mr. Carleton's thesis was "Studies on the Red Rot Disease of Sugar Cane." Mr. Carleton's wife, Edith McLeroth, is also a graduate of Florida State college.

Director Creary Asks Contact With Clubs

Will the president, of all departmental clubs, campus organizations, honoraries, and sororities please leave their names and addresses with Miss Creary, director of the Student-Alumnae building, immediately. This is especially important: if the group desires the use of any of the rooms in the Student-Alumnae building during the school year.

Signed:
DEMPSEY CREARY.

F Club Begins Its Activities

When F Club members wear their white outfits with big yellow letters showing prominently last Friday, they were met with many a curious question from freshmen. Speculation as to what the letters meant ran from the guess that the wearers were cheerleaders, or physical education majors to the hope that letters were given to all students.

The first meeting of the F club will be held in the dining room tonight at 6:30. All members dressed in white and gold will be present for the 1940 season room. After dinner the club will hold a sing in front of the dining hall. F. C. Club members will wear their letters every Friday.

Nancy Wiley, president of the club, announces that the first business meeting will be held Monday night. New members are to be tapped in the near future.

Dr. Wilbur Smith Wirth McLendon of Tampa is instructor of chemistry and physical science here for the summer. She has her bachelor's, master's, and Ph.D. degrees, all from the University of Iowa. She is a member of Iota Sigma Pi, Phi Beta Kappa, and Sigma Xi honor societies. Dr. McLendon has taught in high school in Minnesota and in Kansas City, Mo.

Miss Isabel Fernandez, of Starke is instructor in modern languages, graduated from Florida State college in 1829 and has taught in Starke and also in Havana, Cuba. She has studied in Madrid and traveled extensively in Europe.

Miss Marjorie Carter of Palatka, instructor in English, who is a graduate of Florida State college, has taught three years at Florida high school here and the last two years at Havana, Cuba. She has done graduate work in Mexico City.

Also appointed was Miss Margaret Rogers of Winter Park, as a director in the residence halls. She has a bachelor's degree from Rollins college and has done graduate work at Boston University and as soon as the schedules of all first year students are secured by the personnel staff.

Illinois Students Are "Two-Timed"

CHAMPAIGN-URBANA, Ill.—(ACP)—Dismissed students at the University of Illinois felt they were being "two-timed" as their rival twin cities waged their battle of sixty minutes.

The trouble began when Champaign decided to ao on daylight saving time. Urbana refused to follow suit.

Hardest hit were U. of I. summer students living in Urbana. Although situated in that town, the university elected to go on daylight saving time with Champaign.

The shift made it necessary for those living off campus in Urbana to arise at 7, Urbana time, to make 8 o'clock Champaign time classes. Students living on campus had little difficulty, however, unless they attended some affair in Urbana which started on that time.

Battle Presents Championship Cup

Delta Phi Epsilon Wins In Sports Contest

The annual cup for the champion of intramural sports was presented to the Delta Phi Epsilon sorority at convocation Wednesday night. The champions had a total of 1435 points, while the runners up for the cup, the Alpha Delta Pi's had the Chi Omega's, had 1364 and 1350 points respectively. The sports which the organizations entered were golf, volley ball, basketball, tennis, shuffleboard, swimming, archery, and badminton. Frances Battle, senior intramural manager, made the presentation

Swimming is the first intramural sport to take place for the coming year. The competition will start in about two weeks. All organizations that wish to take part in intramural sports for the year are asked to send their managers to the Landis on or before Monday if possible.

Students Play in New Building

Four ping-pong tables have been placed in the recreation room of the new student Alumnae building, so that students may now enjoy a friendly game whenever they like. Other facilities for amusement include a shuffleboard and space for dancing, card sabes, and comfortable sofas. These are all available at any hour of the day.

A national photo contest paying more than $1500 for the best pictures taken "during leisure" awaits every colleges camera fan as they return to school today. Sponsored by Ralph Hall Weeley, president emeritus of Mt. Holyoke college, and Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, "Youth in Focus" is open to persons under 26 years of age.

Liberal arts students especially to amateur photographers whether they own dollar Brownies or expensive Leicas, are urged to enter, announced that, "The subject, story, and skill determine the winners; technical ability will be entirely incidental." College students have unusually good subject material on their campuses and college communities. Interesting pictures of students in classrooms, dining halls, fraternity houses, at football games and "bull sessions" will form an important part of the photographic document "Youth In Focus" will produce.

Through the classification "Youth at School" in both the rural and urban groups, college students are in a favored position to enter the contest. Pictures which are offered in that category exclusively as well as a chance in the first prize of $500 for the best picture in the entire contest. Other classifications in both the urban and rural groups, in which college students may also enter pictures are, Youth and Work, Youth at Play, Youth at Home, Youth and Religion, Youth In Marriage and Youth—the Citizen. Each contestant may enter as many pictures as he wishes.

In addition to the 281 cash prizes, "Youth in Focus" will reward contestants by publishing a weekly page of pictures in Friday magazine, by publishing a book of the prize-winning pictures, and by arranging a traveling exhibit which will tour the country. The contest closes November 30, 1940, and winners will be announced January 1, 1941.

Six outstanding people in the field of photography will judge the entries. They are: Margaret Bourke-White, head photographer of P.M., formerly for Life Magazine; Daniel S. Gillmor, publisher of Friday Magazine; Beaumont Newhall, president Association of Documentary Film Producers; Steven Kanin, director-producer, RKO Pictures; Rockwell Kent, outstanding artist, president, United American Artists; Roy E. Stryker, chief historical section, Farm Security administration.

Last Figures Show Enrollment Lag

Student List Increased By Only Fifteen

Latest enrollment figures show the total registration for the third of the same date last year, according to Simeon R. Doyle, registrar.

On September 18, 1939, a total of 1211 students had completed registration, whereas the same date this year 1226 had also having enrolled an increase of only fifteen.

Of these 1226 students, 620 are freshmen, 86 are transfers, and 11 are graduates who do not carry a full load. That leaves 1211 upperclassmen and graduate students who have returned this year.

Full information regarding transfers has not been compiled as yet, but will be issued in the near future.

study schedule. Each personal interview will be recorded.

Record cards which are filled out with data secured by the interviewer are compiled. The information includes name; date of birth; sex; nationality; name, address, occupation, education, religion of mother; father, brothers and sisters; high school record; experience in vocational and social activities; health record; and hobbies; financial aid; extra-curricular activities; health record; personal qualities; disciplinary action; academic record established; personality sketch; and a photograph of the student taken as a freshman.

The students chosen to act as interviewers for the next several weeks until freshman interviews are completed are: Virginia Ballinger, Patricia Brandt, Pierrod Brown, Gene Bryan, Marguerite Bunker, Ann Jones, Elizabeth Linn, Carolyn Mims, Betty Nickinson, Mart Pierson, Miriam Stuckey, Mildred Tyler, Pearle Tyler, Cornelia Watson.

The complete freshman guidance program, featuring the assignment of a faculty adviser to each freshman, will be formulated as soon as the schedules of all first year students are secured by the personnel staff.

Newmans Meet Freshmen

Kathleen McCarthy, president of the Newman club, welcomed into the organization about 35 freshmen at a meeting last Sunday morning in Broward lounge.

Preceding the meeting the Newman club attended church in a body, and were later served breakfast at Landis dining hall.

The date for initiation of new members will be announced later. Plans are being made for a week end trip to Camp Flastacowo, as well as numerous other social activities.

Harvard university's $143,000,000 endowment makes it America's richest educational institution.

Council Girls Show Freshmen College Life

First Week Still Lives In Memories Of Upperclassmen

No upperclassman can ever quite forget freshman week. Seeing those same green-capped freshmen lead by the girls in white and blue, makes the memory of one's own days as a freshman come so far in the past after all. One thinks of the long, bewildering days when places of meeting seemed to disappear from the campus, only to be found again at the direction of some more poised upperclassman. Especially does one remember one's first meeting with the trials and tribulations—the Sophomore council girls.

There are thirty-seven of these girls this year, and all but two of second generation. Carmen Butterfly." In which Hiu Koyri, a Japanese diary Butterfly. She is hailed as the most celebrated interpreter of this role and has made a great reputation for herself since being brought to this country by a missionary to play operatic roles.

Writers Contribute To New Publication

Ahlsweh To Assist With National Magazine

Three of the journalism students of Florida State college contributed to the first issue of a new college magazine, the All-American Student, the first issue of which was published in Phoenix, Arizona, early in the summer.

Among the 15 colleges represented in the initial number of this monthly devoted to the serious work of American college and university students were the New York university, which had two articles published in the first number college, which contributed three articles. One of these articles had more than one article in the publication.

The three contributions from Florida State were "Phone Propaganda Works," by Robert Padgett, a senior this year; "For the Lost and Found Column," by Bertha Dodsworth, graduate of 1940; and "Abounding Joy," by Alma Warren, graduate of 1939. Vivian Ahlsweh, editor of the Daily staff for this year, is a college editor of the All-American Student.

Events Mark Summer School

Appearance of Fellows Is Feature of Term

Activities of t'e summer sessions, 1940. included almost every phase of extra-curricular events in effect during the winter terms.

Play nights and classes in folk and social dancing were the features of this were at the gym with exhibitions of work accomplished by the dancing classes being given.

Dr W. H. Rogers, professor of English, conducted a weekly poetry hour for all those interested. Hugh Fellows, famed actor, former humanities and college professor gave a performance for the students in summer school. Mary Frances Palmer was proclaimed winner of a Professor Quiz program held on the campus.

Summer school enrollment showed an increase of 63 over the 1939 session with a total of 1049 students. Of these 200 were men. Additional statistics reveal that the approbation list for summer school graduates totals 84 which is a larger number than that of the honor roll list for the second term of the regular session.

The Florida Flambeau was published several times during both summer sessions with Velma Pate acting as editor. Other staff members included Wolf Kinzey, managing editor; Charlotte Mole, business manager; Jeanne Pelot, cartoonist; Lillie Berger and Mary Catherine Bellas, columnists; and Vivienne Raines, Herbert Phillips, Alan Cross, Page Nichols, Mary Catherine Bellas, and Chloe Mobley, reporters.

Forty-two candidates for degrees heard Dr. M H Hinson speak at commencement at the end of the first session of summer school. The second session closed with exercises for graduates. Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, professor of history, delivered the commencement address.

Alabama Sociology Head Replaced by Schankweiler For Second Summer Term

Dr. Paul Shankweiler, assistant professor of sociology, replaced the head of the sociology department at the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa, Alabama, for the second term of the summer session. Dr. Shankweiler was a graduate student.

Dr. Shankweiler also participated in a joint project with the director of community welfare in an investigation of delinquency tendencies in the rural areas surrounding Tuscaloosa. The project was carried out in relation to other studies in various parts of the South. Findings proved that the conditions of many families had been existant for generations.

And We're At College

"Bombs Let Heavy Damage in London."
"... Signs Draft Bill." "Another Night-ir Raid." "British Bombers Pay Re-
... Visits to Berlin"—bold, squirming
... that will not let us forget the turmoil world. Confusion, destruction, death.
A world at war. Before our befuddled eyes the things we were so sure of have dissolved.
The world we knew even last term is a memory now. No longer can we say security and sincerely believe there is such a thing.

And yet in the world of confusion we are at college. Here in Tallahassee the skies are still blue; the hills still roll; the sunshine and smile through rusk week; thrilled freshmen still taste campus life for the first time; student senate still meets to elect new officers.
All goes on as normal. The old things are still here. We are at college. No air raid warnings. No long nights in shelters deep in the ground. No breathless terror at the thunder of guns. We are at peace.

Varsity, the college news magazine, has printed a splendid editorial in one of its late issues. The editorial, "Challenge to Youth," by Elliott Marshinin, editorial director of the Michigan Daily, U. of Michigan, tells in simple words the task that is before us. The task that will be our proving ground.

"Student America is faced today with the stiffest challenge it has ever been compelled to meet. No other college generation in this country has ever been confronted with the grave responsibilities that have fallen upon the generation of the forties.

"In Europe the war machines are locked in frightful battle and there is no one commands will be given that will send hundreds of thousands of men unflinchingly to a bloody end. Lost in a holocaust of death and destruction will be the institutions and ideals that the world will have to rebuild ing for forty centuries. Down the drain will disappear freedom and learning and democracy. Lost, too, are the physical bases for future for the European student. The continent is covered with the shadow of impending doom and disaster. Hope has disappeared from the hearts of men.

"We here in America are blessed: we are not at war. We are still in a position to pursue the cherished goals of life, liberty, and happiness. We can continue to work at our jobs and study in the schools of learning.
No giant bombers hover over our cities, no armies march at night in our streets. For the American student, lies the task of entering into the peaceful and constructive current of American life.

"The challenge confronting us is simple and bold: do we have the capacity, the intelligence, the loyalty and the courage to preserve our democratic and peaceful way of life. Do we have enough confidence in America, in the distinctive character of American life to preserve the task of making America a haven of sanity and freedom in a war-mad world?

Stated in other terms, I think the answer of American collegiate youth is clear: Yes, we do have confidence in America and the American people. Our energies, our pioneer-neering one, enhabited on the frontiers against the encroachments of our liberties. Besides the inhuman and barbaric forces that have been let loose in Europe there are other forces at work—the forces symbolized by science, by rapid communication and ease of travel, by ecommerce and productive industry. Against the might of these forces, the totalitarian structive philosophies that have swept Europe into war haven't got a chance.

"All of these and similar elements are being awakened to a new consciousness of American life. Not since the days when the pioneers crossed the mountains has there been such a flowering of interest in the forms and achievements of American life, of American art, science, and education. If the closing of the physical frontier signified the end of one epoch in American history, the opening of the new decade has signalized the emergence of new frontiers and new horizons. Young America is on the verge of discovery. We go forth to seek, and in seeking find."

It's All In A Lifetime

Peacetime military conscription of the nation's young men for the purpose of bolstering the national defense is about to go into action. Whether college men 21 years of age and over like the idea or not, they now face compulsory registration which for some will lead to service in the nation's armed forces.

Today we are told that military women throughout the country are as strongly opposed to the program as are the men, and Florida State College's 1900-odd femme fatales add their voices to the protest. Perhaps if we sit down and think the whole thing through, we would be forced to give our approval to this defense measure, but how can we be logical with visions of many a dateless week-end marching before our eyes. It should be enough for us to have to endure the weeks minus young men and dates and dances and corsages without Uncle Sam trying to make our week-ends mankiss too! We can't think of a gloomier picture than the roads leading to Tally devoid of orange rat-caps, thumbs pointing north and smooth convertables adorned with Tater stickers.

As is to be expected, campus support throughout the country for the Burke-Wadsworth bill has lagged considerably behind the support given the measure by the nation's press as a whole. A recent tabulation of press polls showed that 66 percent of America's adult voting population favored conscription. Unfortunately, collegiate opinion up to now has not been reported as extensively as that of the general public. But it is a safe bet that an objective sampling, following the methods of Dr. Gallup's Institute of Public Opinion, would find college students voting considerably less than two-thirds in favor of compulsory military training.

Nevertheless there have been straws in the wind these last few weeks indicating that even the students themselves are beginning to realize that America must call its manpower to the alert. Undergraduate and faculty groups and individuals in many communities have recorded that some sort of a draft is necessary. As much as Florida State deplores the idea of losing its male students to the armed forces, messengers of death. Perhaps the Florida State realizes it is a fact that until the time when he has certain assurance that he will not be called the Royal Air Force is powerful no longer. Or perhaps he is waiting for the Nazi hordes to land on the English, as they huddle in air raid shelters and cry:

"There'll always be an England,
While there's a country land
That shelters one fair rose,
And beside a field of grain,
There'll always be an England
And freedom's sky is blue
If England means as much to me"

Instead the time of decision is at hand.

National Defense At Home

On the opening day of classes in September, the Congress of the United States, after the fall of France in its history passed a bill drafting men for military service during peacetime. Never before in the entire fight both on the floor of the Congress and among the people there will tell what results will occur from the measure.

The bill provided an amendment to the bill proposing a 60-day waiting during which conscientious objectors permitted to enter service and extending the age limit from 21 to 31, to 18 to 45. The bill was signed by the president, however, with the decision to extend the period and sets the age limit from 21 to 35, placing it 18-to-45 bracket. Registration to be registered on October 16. It is thought that about 16,000,000 men will be called within the next twelve months. The conscription bill in peace time Congress has taken a drastic step—one that has never been taken in any country similar to the episode occurring in the Senate between Senator Bennett Champ Clark, opposed to draft, and Vincent, pro-conscription.

Another move for defense on the part of the United States was the secured control of the eight British base sites (Newfoundland, Bermuda, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Antigua, St. Lucia, Trinidad, British Guiana) in the Atlantic and Caribbean waters. This will complete a United States defense ring around the Caribbean area. The bases will outposts against attack from Atlantic Ocean, most important of all, the possession of the bases by the United States will prevent Germany from securing them and to protect the United States from the Caribbean area. Possession of the states from one of these sites of the protective bases still must be equipped.

Tests at Massachusetts Institute of Technology show that molasses bends the list of iron-ming foods with about 6.1 usable parts per 100,000, by weight. Beef liver and oatmeal are second and third.

BY MARY CELESTE HARDEE

As millions of children entered schools across the United States for the first year of World war II came to an end—a year in which the armies of the German Reich devoured nearly all of continental Europe and began the death struggle with England. At the beginning of the second year of the bitterest war in all history, the world waits terrified with the question on its lips: Will Germany Invade England?

For many weeks the expected invasion has been imminent, but the English, keyed up to a point where surprise and destruction are commonplace, wait for the time when Adolf Hitler will strike. Perhaps the English people have a plan to continue his "wearing down" tactics of bombings until 1941 since the feasible time for a land attack is almost upon us. No one knows. Winston Churchill warned his people this week that invasion will be terrible as ever. Perhaps Adolf Hitler wants bad weather so over-cast conditions not perhaps from the channel but from Berlin to Rome to New York. He is using his air forces to demoralize the masses, which in turn will cause the capitulation of the empire, for unless the people are behind their leaders, cannot long stand up against Germany.

In order to break down, to desert, to shatter the people's courier's air fury has been released on Britain. Incessantly the bombing rush have been attacking, blasting, hammering, upon the peoples of a small island. Since the first days there were the raids on London at one time the rumor that German Air Force would have had to have had four times as many fighters to keep all the enemy at bay. Robot Raids have been continuously grim in the sky, bringing with them death and destruction in ever increasing amounts. But no part of the British Isles is free from the messengers of death. Perhaps the most terrifying of all is the tactic until the time when he has certain assurance that he will not be the English, as they huddle in air raid shelters and cry:

"There'll always be an England,
While there's a country land
That shelters one fair rose,
And beside a field of grain,
There'll always be an England
And freedom's sky is blue
If England means as much to me"

As England means to me."

Instead the time of decision is at hand.

Magazine Jottings . . . .

By MARLENE DALE

During the past twenty years a series of experimental colleges have grown, up in the United States. Harper's has printed a good deal about these schools and is so conditioned to do it again with Hubert Herring's "Education at Bennington," appearing to the date of the issue.

When Bennington college began ed its doors in the fall of 1932, it engaged the lively attention of those who were dissatisfied with traditional education. Indeed, it was a gnawing sense that reality had been buried in routine, that the colleges did not meet the needs of the individual or respond to the spirit of the times.

Bennington college had been talked about and planned since 1923. But the ground was broken for a few buildings, and a year later the college opened with a freshman class of 86, a faculty of 18, a large endowment of enlistment. Now, after eight years there are 250 students, 46 teachers, and the enthusiasm is undiminished.

This institution has a well-defined creed which it believes is well adjusted to the present and to the future. A few sentences of this creed read, "the test of education is preparation for meeting and learning through life; that the only learning that sticks is learning which is active; that it is high time educational institutions abandoned their false standards as marks, prizes, and decisive examinations; that one learns by doing; that the line between "curricular" and "extra-curricular" activities must be done away with, and that true education must relate the individual to the world in which he lives.

Students Plentiful

Bennington has not had to beg for students. Each year there is who have a record of intelligent work with a promise of creative ability. The school does not care whether a girl's ardor is kindled in the arts, the sciences, or the social sciences.

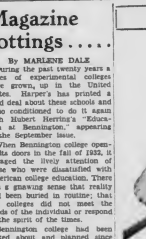
The college has a notion that a girl of 17 has only the haziest ideas as to what she wants and that it is the job of the staff of the college must reckon with that fact. Hence, Bennington dismisses itself the luxury of playing destiny, but sets itself the more modest task of helping each girl discover her own destiny.

The new college has founded no set of required courses. Instead she is assigned to conferences with the faculty up and down and talks. At the end of the week she picks her field major. Now a student may not choose a definite major subject by the end of two years, she must choose it by the end of two more institutions of higher learning.

There were no rules at Bennington at the start except for a set of student regulations, a set of self-imposed regulations, were worn up by the student body.

From the turning of the first spade by the first class in Commonwick, President Robert Leigh has watched and guided the experiment. Yet he disclaims any credit. His consistency in the democratic ideal prompted him to protect Bennington against its president. Leigh wrote into the rules that the president was to be appointed for a five-year term at the end of which the trustees would "confer" to bring in outside educators to advise the trustees. The trustees retire, for a year at least, at the end of seven years on the board.

A teacher has a stiff assignment at Bennington. Instead of counseling together. There counseling is the heart of the student scheme.



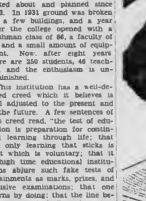
Bennington has been accused of many things—of being a rich woman's college, being irreligious, and of being a girls' school founded with money; but if a college can have money enough to pay its bills, never mind about building expires; if it can keep its cooperative spirit and its faith in the regularities and the pedants —then it might be a pioneer. Here's a great opportunity who would resist all deadening counsel "to do as to Bennington" and, instead, stay up all night." as one gangling 16-year-old expressed her educational ambitions.

Asa Arbor Hysteria

"Asa Arbor Hysteria." by S. R. Kyle is an article in the September 14 issue of the Nation. The newspaperman and former student of the University of Arbor tells a setting of the college of students who were refused readmission for the University's conservative activities.

In the academic world the occupational hazards of left-wing political activity are frequently severe. In most places student "radicals" are suppressed after they have indulged in some sharp defiance, but at Ann Arbor severe punishment has been meted out to a group guilty of no record striking provocation. Twelve students have been "denied readmission" and four others have been

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK



Tain't So!

Inquiring Reporter . . .

Are you in favor of the conscription act just signed by the president? Do you feel that it is the best way to cope with the nations military problem?

Elizabeth Linn: I suppose conscription is the easiest way to get an end, a feeling of protection. However, it is a little hasty in the integrity of our freedom, especially at this time during a time of peace in our country.

Nanette Dale: Yes. I am in favor of the bill as passed. However, I believe that some provision should be made to train the women of the nation so that they will be able to take an equally important part in the defense of our country.

Mary Jane Medlin: Yes, I think it is a good thing because the bill is set up in such a way that there is no loss in a material way to people affected. Their jobs are insured for them by the government and they can secure a position of their service for a good reason. The age range is about right. I think that if in the earliest age at which young men should be taken into the army.

Kathleen McCarthy: Yes, I am in favor of it. I think it is best method of defense. Military training is a good thing, even in peace time.

Carmen Alvares: I definitely do favor the conscription bill. If I were a man I would be willing to serve, and I would be much better for them if they had military training and a chance to become acquainted with the duties.

Frances Ecklund: I am in favor of the bill. I think it is very good. There's nothing like being prepared.

Marianna Boardman: In general I am in favor of the present conscription bill. However, I think the age limits were changed to if to 60, fewer men needed for vital national issues would be taken from their jobs. I think that the training will be of great physical help to the men drafted.

Peggy Hunter: Personally, I dislike conscription, but in these guns, war, and men being used as cannon fodder. However, perhaps preparation is the only way our country can avert disaster. Conscription may be a good plan though it does not fit in with my ideas.

Mary Fields: I think the conscription bill is the best way to solve the nation's enormous unemployment problem, but I do not think college boys should be included.

Jane Tellford: No, I'm not in favor of the conscription bill. In the first place the country is not equipped to adequately train that number of men at once. Secondly, I think volunteer enlistment should be given a chance first. Third, I have no belief before a 21 years old.

Katherine Young: I feel that conscription is necessary for our protection from invasion. I think the college boys should be exempt, however.

Jessie Reese: No, I am not in favor of conscription because war is not so near at hand as to require a draft bill. It is not exactly constitutional or democratic to force men to train when an adequate army may be had by other measures.

Jewell Slaughter: I am very much in favor of the conscription act. To me it is the most sensible

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK

Collegiate Comebacks

Being in a humanitarian mood, we decided to declare a Kindness to Freshman year. We aren't going to tell any freshmen how to act, well, not unless a good one turns up.

However, we're not above mentioning the fact that the Student Council girl who came up to a lone straggler in the back of the auditorium with one of those "let's-all-be-little - buddies - together" affairs, and politely asked the lonesome soul if she wouldn't like to meet some of the other freshmen. We aren't certain, but we imagine she was rather taken back by the fact that her freshman was a faculty member who had been here al along.

Isn't much of any way to fit it into a morning, but we did hear an adaptation of an old proverb that was certainly too clever to our hopeful ears. Quoting one of our campus wits, "Only the young die early."

After being wakened at about 2:00 A. M. to close our windows during a rainstorm in the middle of night for the past three years, it seems pretty darn futile to have all three doors above the conflagration of last Sunday night without even being awakened by little tinkle of an alarm. Maybe we and we wouldn't be at all surprised that the fire bells don't ring before last flight flash.

Our morning 60 or so past dash has begun again. It always happens the same way. We have a furious spurt to the dining room just in time to have a closed door appear between us and the food. We've tried and failed to find any accurate times on the clock in the center—but we're still hoping and if we do, we're going to write to the one convinced that the famous Pearl Gates are a cinch.

Then there's the G'ville freshman who thought that the Civic Hall much to the amusement of the student all but the joke was because he was so confused he couldn't stop him. The poor man was so confused that his remarks like, "Yes, the rooms keep getting more and more filled" that is that the future brain trust couldn't be stopped until he reached the Dean of Women who finally persuaded to try the registrar's office.

Freshman story doesn't begin to compare with G'ville student who should prove something of the difficulty of registering. Anyhow, we can easily see how anyone might think that. Even the upperclassmen have a closed set around and thought one Saturday night when we left this vale of tears for parts unknown.

Note to Nature Lovers

Mary Mary, quite contrary,
How does your garden grow?
With silver Bells and Cockleshells
And dame bulbs!

Maybe our psych professor could explain this and make it perfectly obvious.

One of our more romantic profs sat down the other night for the prescribed eight hours of study and immediately recorded reverie. He dreamed he was in love, he dreamed he was seen him, she dreamed him back and absent-mindedly yanked his hair from out of the mirror. Growing gory she wore the next day a hat pulled over what she's girls' school can have on one equilibrium.

Inquiring Reporter . . .

way to cope with the nation's military problem.

Ann Cassidy: Conscription seems to be necessary now but would not be if our military policy were more clear to the people as it should have.

Jessie Lee Hillman: The conscription act seems a good way to aid in our national defense program.

Anne Safay: I am definitely in favor of conscription because if we had to wait for volunteers we'd never have an army of sufficient size.

Sara Frances Dorsey: I am not in favor of the present conscription bill that has just been signed by the president. I do feel that in order to train the people for the period of confusion and uncertainty in the world it is going through at the time, preparedness is essential. I think that our conscription bill should be done right thing in passing the ever-increasing call for physical sacrifices from many of us but the safety of the nation should be of primary importance to all of us.

Headquarters of the International Labor office have been transferred from Geneva to Montreal, Switzerland, to McGill university, Montreal.

Educators Attend Meet

Dr Edward Conradi, Dean Emeritus, and Dr. Robert L. Goulding left Wednesday and returned today from a meeting in DeLand of representatives of the institutions of higher learning in the state.

Dean Eyman said. "These representatives met to make out final working plans for a state-wide program of internship teacher training. We hope to make a beginning with the program next year."

Social Director Passes

Miss Elsa (Rose) Denham, 24 years social director at Florida State college for women, died on July 19 of a heart attack at the home of her sister, Mrs. E. B. Bailey in Monticello.

Miss Rose is survived by a brother, T. P. Denham of Jacksonville, and her sister, Mrs. Bailey, Tallahassee survivors include B. W. Partridge and Miss Sarah W. Partridge.

Miss Rose, a native of Monticello, came here in 1916. She was first social director of Bryan, then of Jennie Murphree, and last year she was appointed director of Sandels. Most of her time was spent in Jennie Murphree where all acquaintances learned to love and respect her.

Miss Rose passed away suddenly and unexpectedly. In the morning she visited sick friends and later went to see her minister who took her home. After dinner she was taken with a severe pain in her chest. The doctor attack causing her death.

Many students, faculty members, and residents of Tallahassee were present at the funeral to pay her tribute.

RESOLUTIONS ON THE DEATH OF PROFESSOR ALBAN STEWART

The early evening hours of May 31, 1940, four days after the close of the college year, marked the death, of Dr. Alban Stewart, professor and head of the department of physics and bacteriology of the Florida State College for Women.

Doctor Stewart was born at Wellington, Missouri, January 14, 1875. He received the bachelor of arts degree from the University of Kansas in 1897 and the master of arts degree the same in addition in 1899; his doctorate was conferred on him By Harvard in 1911.

His early work lay in the field of bacteriology. From 1900 to 1907-1909, he worked in his original university for four years, 1900-1904, in the United States museum. Although his later activities were in the broad field of biology, particularly botany and bacteriology, he nevertheless maintained a lively interest in the reconstruction of prehistoric animals, with which his earlier museum experience was concerned. Within the area of botany he developed a marked proficiency in several fields, particularly in number of papers on the plant anatomy of insect and fungus galls. In 1905-1909 he served as botanist of the expedition of the California Academy of Sciences to the Galapagos islands. His reports on the flora of the Galapagos islands and those islands are for many years the standard work in the field. Before coming to the Florida State College for Women, he taught two years at the University of Kansas (1897-1899), a year in Penn college of Iowa (1908-1909), another year in the University of New Hampshire (1908-1910), and five years in the University of Wisconsin (1911-1916).

Dr. Stewart's connection with the college began in 1916 and continued for 24 years until his death. After coming to the Florida State College for Women his energy was largely expended in developing his department and in teaching. At first confining his efforts to general botany, Dr. Stewart soon answered the demand for courses in bacteriology, the later years of his service being devoted entirely to classes in this field. He was recently instrumental in securing the cooperation of the medical staff of the state hospital in Chattahoochee and the college in the training of students in medical laboratory technique.

An outstanding trait of Dr. Stewart's life and service on the campus was his friendly interest in his students and close colleagues and his desire to be helpful to them and to the institution in whatever problems arose. A strict adherence to fairness characterized Dr. Stewart in all his dealings with colleagues and students. In his thinking and acting he represented the scientist and the teacher, and, above these, as a person, of solid integrity and worth he contributed to the sanity and nobility of life by a straightforwardness that was also no pretense.

Therefore be it resolved: That we, the faculty and staff of the Florida State College for Women express our feeling and personal sorrow in the loss of a valued colleague and friend, and that we extend our sincere sympathy to his family and transmit a copy of these resolutions to them; that we send a copy to the press, and file one with the minutes of the general faculty.

Respectfully submitted,

PAUL F FINNER,

Infinger Elected Mascot At "Boys' State" Meeting

Even while in the summer session of school, Florida State girls blossom forth into the headlines. During the American Legion "Boys' State" which convened in Tallahassee in June, Mary Infinger became mascot to the delegates.

The "Boys' State" was a convention to which boys from all over the state were sent by their local American Legion Posts to handle the state government for the week of June 12 to June 16. During this week the boys elected a governor and other necessary officials. Prior to the election there were political rallies and a parade at which Mary, the mascot of the convention, participated.

Final ceremony of the week found Mary acting as the governor's wife at the inauguration of that official.

IRC, Delta Epsilon Alpha Will Sponsor Tea Today

The International Relations club and Delta Epsilon Alpha, debate honorary have invited all students who are interested in their organizations to tea this afternoon from 4:30 to 6:00 in Reynolds parlor. The two clubs will soon begin their yearly campaign activities.

At the tea, the receiving line will consist of Dr. Edna Rood, professor of political science and sponsor of IRC; Miss Sadie Young, dean of women; Dorothy Sapp, sponsor of Delta Epsilon Alpha; and Miss Margaret Wytz, professor of speech and sponsor of the debate honorary.

Johnnymae Wright, president of IRC and Joan Wesver, chairman of the membership drive, will act as hostesses and will pour teas. In charge of the arrangements for the affair are Nora Erwin and Mabel Mihoul.

President's Reception Is First Freshman Function

First in the series of functions given to honor the freshman class this year was the President's annual reception held in the sunken gardens of Bryan and Reynolds halls last Tuesday night. At the reception Dr. Edward Conradi presided over the receiving line, assisted by Dean Olivia Dorman and Dr. Elizabeth Andrews. Dormitory directors Miss Rebecca Rowan, Miss Ann Pope and Miss Margaret Kyle were members of the line. Cornelia aWlson, Carolyn Morris, and Elizabeth Linn, College Government officials introduced each freshman to the line.

Acting as honorary hostesses at reception were officers of College Government. Refreshments were being served to nazly 600 guests, enchanted music was played by Mr. Owen Sellers, Professor Earl Ahrendt and Miss Mary Winslow of the music department.

Kathryn Camp, social chairman, was in charge of the reception. Assisting her was a committee composed of Betty Evans, Mary Augusta Huggins, Helen Hamlin, Mary Lee Kline, and Mary Lou Atkinson together with Martha Folsom, Edna Bari Reeins, Laurice Wilkins and Jane Welach.

The term "Americanism" is said to have been first used by John Witherspoon, president of Princeton university, in 1781.

Mrs. W. T. Hendry Is New Housemother for Local Alpha Chi Omega Chapter

Alpha Chi Omega members have selected Mrs. W. T. Hendry as their housemother. Mrs. Hendry is from Perry, Florida, and recently moved to Jacksonville to live with her daughter, the former Marion Hendry, who is a graduate of this college and was a member of the Alpha Chi Omega chapter here.

The new house mother is well acquainted with the college and she frequently visited Tallahassee with her husband who was formerly attorney and a member of the state legislature for several terms.

Mrs. Hendry has been active in Alpha Chi Omega circles in Jacksonville. Interested in community, church, and social activities, she was president of the Perry Missionary society and of the Woman's club there. In Jacksonville she served as an active member in the Woman's club and Junior League.

Following her graduation from Peabody college, Nashville, Tennessee, Mrs. Hendry taught school two years at Taylor county high school.

The Alpha Chi Omega chapter is having a formal reception for Mrs. Hendry in the near future.

Bryan Proves That Tally Girls Have Glamor, Too

It seems that college education doesn't affect, and maybe aids, the glamour girls. Port Genevieve Bryan, Florida State college junior, walked off with the title of "Queen of the Life Guards" at Daytona Beach this summer while adding to her vacation tan.

The Daytona lifeguards chose these queens after a series of dances for which two girls acted as sponsors at each dance. At the end of the season one of the girls was selected by popular vote as queen and feted at the final ball of the summer.

Genevieve was honor guest at the ball held at the El Patio on the Boardwalk at Daytona Beach and was presented with a silver bracelet engraved with her name. As queen of the lifeguards she also was given a corsage of orchids.

The "Queen of the Life Guards" is a student in the school of music at Florida State college.

Among Genevieve's competitors for the crown were Virginia Bond and Noreen McKee. Tallahassee students.

YWCA Big Sisters Give Party for New Students

YWCA big sisters entertained their little sisters (freshmen and transfers) with a party in the open air theatre on September 11.

Miss Anne Forbes Liddell, sponsor of YWCA, and Mary Lois Thomas, president, gave addresses of welcome.

Following the addresses Mary Greenleaf sang "I'm Stepping Out With a Memory Tonight," and, as an encore, "I'll Never Smile Again." Beth Blair gave two readings, and Pearl Tyler played two numbers on the xylophone.

In conclusion, Florsel Brown led the guests in an "Everybody Sing" while YW members gave each peppermint sticks.

Joan Wesver, chairman of the YWCA social committee, was in charge of the party.

U of C Students Undergo Test For Balanced Diet

DAVIS, Calif.—(ACP)—Students at the University of California Agricultural college are undergoing a unique "vitamin A" test to see if they are getting a properly balanced diet.

Three hundred students were asked to volunteer to have their tests conducted by the home economics department.

Each of the respondents are measured under a "regenometer" which measures adaptation of the eye to darkened vision.

Behind the test is the theory of "visual purple," a fluid substance living around the outside of the retina which adjusts the vision to darkness. Inadequacy of "visual purple" causes "night-blindness" a factor which highway safety engineers say causes many traffic accidents.

PLEDGE BANQUETS AND CELEBRATIONS KEEP FRESHMEN IN SOCIAL WHIRL

After the excitement of rush and week sorority pledges are being kept in the social swim by the banquets and suppers given in their honor by their sorority chapters.

Both formal and informal functions have complimented the new members. Among the first of the sororities to be pledged was the Kappa Alpha Theta. Monday night, just after pledging, the Thetas held a banquet at the Florida hotel. Decorations for the tables were predominantly gold and black, the sorority colors. Black and gold kitis served as menus and placecards. At each pledge's place, also, pocketbooks initialed with K. A. T. served as favors.

Both formal and informal celebration after pledging was observed Monday night by the Pi Beta Phis who held supper at their house. Following supper the actives and pledges sang Pi phi songs.

Phi Mu sorority entertained their pledges at a formal banquet at Wakulla Springs hotel the night following pledging. Pledges were honored by favors and were presented with stationery monogrammed in Greek letters.

Alpha Chamma Deltas held a pledge banquet Wednesday night at the Florida hotel. Pledges were presented with gifts of gold Alpha Gam identification bracelets.

Kappa Delta and Alpha Delta Phi also held their pledges last night. The K. D.'s entertained at a banquet at the Floridan hotel using their sorority colors of green and white for decorations. The A. D. F.'s featured white dahlias and chrysanthemums with blue candles in their decoration at their banquet held in the Wakulla Springs hotel.

Just the theme "Hitch Your Wagon to a Star," the Sigma Kappas of the Florida state college for women will be in college during their banquet Friday night at the Floridan hotel.

The Alpha Chi Omega will entertain bright and early at a breakfast in the Dutch Kitchen. Pledges are to be complimented on toasts given by the chapter president and the faculty advisor, Miss Kathryn Abbey. The breakfast has as its motif "Sunrise Serenade."

Mamie Hogan is in charge of the Alpha Xi Delta cocktails supper tomorrow. The floor show will feature the La Conga and tap routine by Dot Mayer and Mary McGee. Bridge and dancing will provide entertainment.

The Delta Phi Epsilons will entertain their pledges tomorrow night at a banquet.

Delta Delta Delta's twenty new pledges will be complimented tomorrow night at a banquet at the Floridan hotel. Patty Walker, social chairman, is in charge of arrangements for the affair.

Three Europeans Will Speak Here

Five Programs Scheduled For Lecture Series In Coming Year

Five outstanding speakers will lecture at FSC during the coming session. The annual lecture series is again in charge of Dr. Elizabeth G. Andrews, director of personnel.

Only three speakers have been tentatively selected. Dr. S. K. Ratcliff, from an English newspaper, is expected, here November 15-16. He will speak on England and several other subjects. Dr. Ratcliff lectured here four years ago and, according to Dr. Andrews, is one of the most popular speakers who has appeared on the campus.

Dr. Louis [illegible]ann, former professor of economics at the University of Geneva, will talk on economics about November 7. Donald Grant, University of Edinburgh graduate, will lecture on international affairs sometime in early January.

As in previous years, no admission will be charged.

The student lecture series committee for this year has been named as follows: Sara L. Worth, Margaret Christie Harrison, Lucille Walker, and Louise Burger, alternate.

Library Presented With Rare Volumes

Social Work Books Given By Fort Pierce Woman

Mrs. Nellie Strouder Gleason, of Fort Pierce, former superintendent of a children's home in Muncie, Indiana, recently donated to the college library a set of 31 rare volumes representing the annual proceedings of the National Conference of Social Work from 1887 to 1918.

Mrs. Gleason presented the books to Mrs. Margaret C. Bristol, assistant professor of sociology, last month. Mrs. Bristol was in Fort Pierce at that time making a report on the Blue Ridge Institute for Social Work Executives which she attended in North Carolina with her husband, Loyle Bristol, district director of the state welfare board.

The library now lacks only the copy of the 1919 report to complete the proceedings from 1887 to 1940.

Rogers Appointed New Dorm Director

Two Infirmary Nurses, Housekeeper, Added

Dormitory and infirmary staffs boast several new additions this semester.

Miss Margaret Rogers of Winter Park, takes over duties in Jennie Murphree as new social director. A graduate of Rollins College, Miss Rogers has done graduate work at Boston university, has served as social director in Murfin House, Boston university and taught for four years in the Latin American Institute, Tampa. In addition she has lived for two years in Yokohama, Japan, where she taught English at the Doremus school.

Completing the student administration staff, as announced by Dean Olivia Dorman, is Mrs. Mary Grace Tyler, new director of housekeeping and maintenance.

Two new graduate nurses, Miss Ruth Daniel and Miss Ruth Browning, have been added to the staff of the college infirmary. Dr. F. Clifton Moore is continuing with his duties as the attending physician again this year.

Balkom Will Head Senior Hall Group

Jocelyn Juniper to Fill Office of Secretary

Virginia Balkcom will serve as chairman of senior hall, having been elected at the first meeting of that body this week Jocelyn Juniper will be the secretary-treasurer.

These two girls will head the group of seniors who live in a special section of Landis hall where they are expected to preserve the honor of the college yet are under no restrictions and are free to come and go as they please, so long as they do not disregard college policies.

The faculty committee on student affairs and the executive council of the College Government association work together on plans for senior hall.

Girls who have been invited to live on the hall this year are: Hilda Alarcod, Virginia Balkcom, Frances Battle, Lillian Bowness, Florence Brown, Gene Bryan, Kathryn Camp, Margaret Clements, Linnie Lou Cassiter, Marjorie Harris, Mary Henry, Patricia Holbert, Peggy Hunter, Jocelyn Juniper, Elizabeth Linn, Kathleen McCarthy, Carolyn Mims, Beryl Mitchell, Sonia Mitchell, Martha Murphy, Dorothy Nickerson, Sara Mooney, Frances Palmer, Louise Patterson, Minnie Ratliffe, Ola Belle Tillman, Lucille Walker, Cornelia Watson, Joan Weaver, Nancy W White, Martha Whitehurst, and Edith Williams.

All students interested in debate activities are invited to attend the first meeting of the debate club next Thursday in 303 Westcott building at 4:30.

Ahlsweh Sets Up Magazine Plans

Articles to be Exchanged With U. of Florida In New Distaff

The Distaff will feature many new ideas this year, among them exchanged articles with the University of Florida, Vivian Ahlsweh, editor of the literary quarterly has announced. The articles will be selected by editors of both publications. They will give to the readers a better outlook on the thoughts and viewpoints of both men and women.

Short stories, plays, poems, critical articles, and human interest stories will be found on the pages of the magazine. The four departments: People on these pages, about the authors; All Wool, a collection of short humorous poems and essays; A Yard Wide, books and music; and Home and Homespun, the editorial section, will appear as in the past.

Any student may submit articles to the Distaff. The only specifications are that the manuscript be typed and bear the name and address of the writer.

This year the staff of the Distaff will endeavor to raise the standards of creative writing. The staff includes, besides the editor: Mary Dennis, assistant editor; Frances Rushing and Edith Williams, art editors; Elizabeth Carter, reporter; Mary Elizabeth Bond, copy editor; Marguerite Dial, Mary Lou McCraw, Jeanne Mendenhall, Della Montero, Norma Pennoyer, Lucille Richardson, Carolyn Stowell, May Wellner, and Sarah Worth, editorial staff members. Business staff of the magazine includes: business manager, Dorothy Mitchell; assistants, Nellie Boyles, Monterey Whittlesey and Martha Ann Mattox.

The Distaff has been a member of the National Scholastic press association for several years. It has received a rating of first class honors.

Graduate Students Top List of Grades

Campus Leaders Present Next Highest Average

According to figures compiled by the personnel office and based on grade averages for the second semester of 1939-40 graduate students lead all other groups with a 2.28 average. The group designated as campus leaders follows closely with 2.062.

This study of last semester's grades reports the seniors topping the remaining divisions by a 1.940 average.

Completing the survey the dining room scholarship students follow with 1.785; the N. Y. A. students, with 1.675, the sorority houses with 1.630; the junior class with 1.618; the sorority average of 1.488; the sophomore class with 1.467; residence halls, with 1.447; non-sorority average of 1.431; day students, 1.274, and freshmen, with 1.213. The average for the college as a whole was 1.458.

Convocation Notice

Students who are working or practice teaching during convocation, 1:30 to 2:30 o'clock on Tuesdays, are asked to go to the C. G. A. office in the new Student-Alumnae building from 11:30 to 12:30 o'clock tomorrow or next Tuesday to get cards excusing them from convocation. All students not getting these cards and having them signed by critic teachers or persons under whom they work, will be fined for overcutting.

CAA Cancels Cours In Women's College

Instructors Needed In Defense Preparations

The Civil Aeronautics association Training course which was offered at PSCW the past year, will not be a part of the college curriculum in 1940-41, due to the fact that there is a shortage of qualified flying instructors necessary to train many United States men as pilots.

Ivan Munroe who is in charge of the Tallahassee airport, has been officially notified of the discontinuance of the training course here. There will be no CAA training course given in any United States women's colleges this year.

The CAA proerram was first established in the summer year 1939-40. Mr. Munroe, CAA instructor at that airport, has coached seven college girls who received their private pilot's licenses at the end of the year. This license enables them to take up passengers but prevents them from charging for the flights.

Florida State college was one of the four women's colleges in the country employing the CAA course last year. It was also the first Florida college to have a WPA aviation course several years ago.

4-H Scholarships Given

The loan scholarships given annually to 4-H club girls by the state council of senior home demonstration work go to Frances Palmer and Tot Strickland this year.

Four to Train As Dietitians

Home Economics Grads Will Study Here

To obtain training as student dietitians four home economic graduates have recently come to Florida State college for women for the next nine months.

The student dietitians and colleges from which they come are: Miss Eleanor Kurth, of Belle Plain, Iowa, Iowa State college; Miss Helen D. Buck, of Columbus, Georgia, the University of Georgia; Miss Frances Plemmons, of Hot Springs, Arkansas, Texas State college for women; and Miss Meadow Brown, of Decatur, Georgia, from the University of Tennessee.

Under the direction of the American Dietetic association, Florida State college is one of the first colleges or universities in the country to offer this type of training and the only institution in the South to do so. The home economics graduates receive practical experience in the college dining hall which is similar to homemaking done by medical students, after they have received their doctor's degree.

More than 30 young women from all over the country have taken advantage of this opportunity here in the past few years and they now have positions in commercial restaurants, college food units, department store dining rooms, and school cafeterias throughout the United States.

Miss Anna May Tracy is director of the student dietetic program and dietitians of Florida State college. She was formerly president of the American Dietetic association.

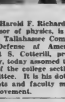
Enrollment Gains New High for Fall

1967 Students Register At Doyle's Office

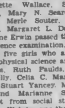
Setting a new high for enrollment figures at Florida State college for the first year in the present total number of students has regularly enrolled in classes, according to Simeon E. Doyle, registrar.

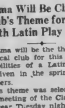
At the latest counting, 1967 students were known to have completed registration, as compared to 1866 of last fall. Several other students are expected to enroll in the semester.

The number registered for the second year of the 1939-40 school year, 1636, another new high.



Chairman





Dr. Harold F. Richards, (above) professor of physics, is chairman of the Tallahassee Committee for the Defense of America. Dr. Robert S. Cotterill, professor of English and history is leader-ship of the college section of this committee. It is his duty to inform students and faculty members in the movement.

26 Pass Test For Exemption

Freshman Is Excused From Three Courses Through Exams

Twenty-six students have passed exemption examinations in integrated courses, freshman English and humanities according to the registrar's office.

The tests were given last week by the departments offering the above courses. Students who have passed one or more of the examinations on required courses are able to use the hours gained from exemption in subjects to take electives.

A freshman, Marianne Smith, passed three examinations: English, biological science and social studies Margaret Ellen Barfield also passed the English examination test, Anne H Moon, Ruth Sloan, Jeannette Wallace, Susan Wight, Mary N. Searcy, Julia Weed, Marie Souter, Marianne Smith, Margaret L. Duffin, and Suzanne Erwin passed the biological science examination.

The five girls who are exempt from physical science are Evelyn Haynes, Ruth Pasco, Kathryn Donnelly, Celia C. Mangels, and Mary Stuart Tarver. Hattie Souter and Marianne Smith are exempt in the hours gained in 102. Marian Webster was the only student to pass the examination in social studies 102.

The following girls were exempt from Spanish 201: Florence Ludvici, Minnetta Matthews, Lucille Miller, Miriam Telford, Gloria Watters and Jane Upthan. She also passed the examination in humanities.

Drama Will Be Classical Club's Theme for Season With Latin Play Planned

Drama will be the theme of the Classical club for this year, with possibilities of a Latin play being given in the spring by club members.

This theme was selected at the first meeting of the Classical club this year Tuesday night in Byran Parlor. Plans for welcoming new members were also discussed at this time.

Cotterill Leads Campaign for Membership

Defense Committee Supports Material Help for England

Acting under an appointment made by Secretary of State R. A. Gray, chairman of the membership committee of the Tallahassee Committee for the Defense of America, Dr. R. S. Cotterill, professor of history, today assumed the chairmanship of the college section of this committee and is welcoming volunteer from both faculty and students to help enlarge the membership of this country-wide patriotic organization and thus bring increased support to the nine-point program adopted by the TCDA on the summer at a Tallahassee mass meeting.

Organization meetings will probably be arranged for the campus after the campus membership drive is completed, Dr. Cotterill stated. During the membership campaign, faculty volunteers for service on his committee will invite other faculty members to join, and student volunteers will work among students in the two groups organized for educational discussion meetings as may be arranged.

Sponsored by the Tallahassee Committee for the Defense of America by Aiding the American defense policy, all possible aid to Great Britain short of war is the keynote of the movement, a continuous program of education and support to maintain the American security by making a deal to assure Britain's warships abroad. TCDA is affiliated with the national William Allen White Committee to Defend America by Aiding Great Britain.

Many faculty members have already been active in the work of TCDA, which was formed in Tallahassee this summer, and has carried out several projects, including educational mass meetings, public fingerprinting, assistance in the U. S. army's local recruit-

Social Committee Is Seeking To Raise School's Standards

New Regulations Will Provide "Finishing" Touch To Make Ladylike Feminae Perfectae

Tally girls will have a chance to show off their manners, "Society" manners or more than just the first day of the week with the social standards committee planning to set a new high for ladylike students this year.

According to standards drawn up by the committee headed by Katherine Camp, students will be expected to dress for dinner on Wednesday night and Sunday noon. "No students is to appear at the dining halls wearing socks or school clothes at these times Sunday dresses and stockings must be worn."

This new regulation has gone into effect and will begin immediately because the committee made up of students believed the two groups mentioned constituted some of the "finishing" touches to refine all girls for college.

Dining room behavior will be stressed this year, Katherine says, and a new hostess plan has been arranged to facilitate this. A hostess is to be set up at each table, a group of eight girls to act as the head of the table. She will serve in that capacity for one semester at the end of which time another hostess will be selected.

The function of the hostess will be to offer those sitting at her table of the standards which have been set up for the dining halls. She shall be responsible for maintaining the standards at her table. It is hoped that the ladylike young girls who persistently fail to live up to the standards. Other duties of the hostess will fall upon her.

General procedures for dining hall conduct are as follows: dismissal in dinner will be by tables; the bell is expected to call lunch and dinner in her assigned dining hall except on weekend. E. Pay day night through Sunday night; after the banding has been passed

Advisors Named For Freshmen

Guidance Committee Announces List Of Teachers

The faculty guidance committee for freshmen Tuesday appointed faculty advisors for all freshmen. Lists of these advisors have been submitted to the personnel office by freshman counsellors.

Faculty members of the guidance committee are: Dr. Margie Burks, Miss Mary Noka Hood, Miss Mary Clendon, Miss Margaret S. Scarborough, and Miss Esther Winslow. Dr. Elizabeth G. Kennedy is chairman of the committee and is the chairman. All arrangements for faculty advisors are made through her office.

The committee tries to select an advisor in whose class the particular freshman is enrolled. The duties of a faculty sponsor are to guide the student not only in her freshman year but also throughout her college life and to help her on any problems, particularly those pertaining to educational matters.

Upon being notified of their advisor, freshmen are asked to contact the teacher and arrange for a conference at some definite hour.

Press Club Will Install New Officers Tuesday

Installation of new Press club officers will be held Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the Tri Delta house.

Officers to be installed at this time include Sara Nooney, president; Belle Yonge, vice-president; Norma Pennoyer, secretary; Eleanor Roberts, treasurer; and Pauline Dale, publicity chairman.

Dr. Dorothy Disher, faculty sponsor, for freshman journalism students, will be given a week from next Tuesday.

Defeatists Get Real Publicity

Defeated Candidates Club, organized last December following the general election, was resuscitated up in the August issue of Mademoiselle in the column, Extra-Curricular Activities. The club was organized by Ottilie Van Brugh, Betty Lang and Kitty Jo Hickman. The article said:

"Organized in from Florida's State College for Women by spray from mental gymnastics and give headlong into self-reflection by the Defeated Candidates Club. This dour sounding frustration is the most blissfully gay club in America. It was organized by three freshmen in 1939 who had run for office and been defeated. Dropping the idea as soon got to defeated political aspirants for membership. They meet on the thirteenth of the month, pay initiation fees of ten and fifty behind the colors—black and blue. All presidential candidates are automatically members, and presidents serve in that capacity and preside with severity over hearty and useful. The motto "All for an office and an office for all." Twenty-five girls are the original fifty that are in the black list because of an election or candidacy to an honorary society."

French Club Plans Meeting At Camp

Members Will Combine Trip with Business

Combining business with pleasure, French club members will meet for the first time this year Thursday night at the Camp Flastacowo today. Among other activities the club plans to have a French film to be shown this fall and the two annual banquets for the Diplomas and Matriculation, the May Fete.

The only requirements for membership in the club is enrollment in French classes, and all interested former members will be welcome to join seats this year.

Methodist Council Selects 25 Girls

The Senior Council of Methodist students met Tuesday night. Colleges last week selected 25 upperclassmen to participate as members of the Junior Council for the school year.

'Flambeau Reporter' To Review Campus News Over WTAL

Other College Programs Planned for Broadcasts

At 8:15 o'clock this afternoon the first of a weekly series of college programs will be broadcast over WTAL local radio station. Midge Scott, editor of the Flambeau, will present the first student program of the series, the "Flambeau Reporter." This broadcast will be a 15 minute program of campus news and comment and will be broadcast from the campus studio of the publicity office on campus.

Varied Programs

Another Florida State college feature will be heard every Monday evening at 8 o'clock, when the "P.S.C.W. Forum" goes on the air. The first program will be a discussion conducted by the officers of COA. Heads of the various departments of COA will conduct subsequent programs.

Vivian Ahlmeyer, editor of the Distaff, will conduct a program on alternate Wednesdays at 8:15 o'clock. On these days she will give book reviews on "Today's Book." The book she will discuss next Wednesday is Van Wyck Mason's "Stars and the Sea."

Also on the program will be Mildred Williams of WTAL, who is in charge of all the college programs, and who has completed the broadcasts by faculty members during the first week of the C.O.A. Several faculty members have already been scheduled for broadcasts to speak on opportunities for careers in the fields which they represent. This complete list of speakers will be announced later. Tentative plans have also been made by Miss Williams and Dr. Ella Opperman, dean of the school of music, to present several broadcasts.

Smart Lectures Are Recognition

Professor Opens Series Of Religious Talks To Students

Dr. W. A. Smart, professor of theology at Emory university, told students assembling the Tuesday evening convocation in the auditorium that his own personal belief was "So far as I have been able to find there is nothing on the earth to believe in with the abandon with which I can believe in Jesus Christ."

Dr. Smart spoke to the assembled students and faculty on the first of the four convocations planned for Religious Emphasis. The program was combined with the Young Women's Christian Association reception service. Members of the YWCA board and its faculty sponsor sat on the stage with Dr. Smart.

"We all believe in something whether we formulate a creed or not," said Dr. Smart. "We all must choose a path to take across the meadow of life. We can't stand in an eternal ball session; we must get across. We choose the path that we think will give us the greatest returns. The cynic and pessimist have a creed as does the man of faith."

Dr. Smart said that when people think of religion today they think in terms of 2,000 years ago and apply nothing of that time to now.

"I am looking," said Dr. Smart, "for something that I can believe in spontaneously as that which confronted by it I can not refuse to believe in because it challenges all questions."

"One reason that I believe in Jesus Christ is that he makes me believe in myself."

Dr. Smart painted a forceful picture of Christ's life. He showed how Christ put the finest spiritual values in human life and dealt with the broken remnants of life, and of men about it. He was amazing to see what divine qualities he found in people. Dr. Smart noted that wherever the Christian tradition is not known human life is cheap. Where the Christian tradition is known and has touched it it has taken on a new and higher meaning.

"I believe in Jesus too," said Dr. Smart, "because he offers the only hope of solution to the social debacle today. He saw the basic fundamentals for life."

In speaking of the war today Dr. Smart showed that people of other ages did not think of war as horrible but said that to be taken in the course of life. "When Jesus came and brought the value of cooperative living and when we have watched and thought that thing for centuriers we become insufferable. How are we going to avoid it?"

"I'm interested in all pieces of mechanics which offer one to work" but just as long as raw ma- work of their choice.

Dr. W. A. Smart, professor of theology at Emory university, spoke to students in the Tuesday evening convocation on the Life of Christ. Mary Lois Thomas, president of the YWCA on campus, led the reception service which followed the talk.

Scrapes at YWCA Recognition

terial for war is in us and we nurture hatred as a respectable form of human mechanism we can not find peace. We can find an appreciation of the brotherhood of Jesus."

Dr. Smart described the social problems today as the ideals of Jesus versus the desires of man.

"Jesus makes it easier for me to believe in God. When I get confused I love to go to Jesus. I need to accept, but I love to find what Christ found on the mountain side."

Dr. Smart summed up with the concluding statement that, "when I am confronted face to face with Jesus, I can not help believing he is the most utterly divine thing that ever was on earth. This is my personal belief. You don't need to accept, but I love to find for what it is worth. So far as I have been able to find, there is nothing on this earth to believe in with the abandon with which I can believe in Jesus Christ."

At the conclusion of Dr. Smart's talk 147 girls became recognized members of the YWCA. Mary Lois Thomas, president of the organization, spoke on campus regulations and the vows. After this she dressed in white, and carrying candles, filed out and formed a huge "friendship" circle around the fountain in front of the Westcott building where they sang "Follow The Gleam" until all candles were lighted.

Elizabeth Miller led the invocation. A quartet and group sang "The Lord Is In His Holy Temple".

Six Methodists Go to Retreat

Delegates to Attend Annual Conference In DeLand

Six Methodist representatives left Tallahassee early this morning to motor to DeLand where they will attend the Methodist state retreat held annually for religious workers. Seminary students, students, and pastors of churches in college communities will be here. Jack Anderson, pastor of the Tallahassee Methodist church, and Miss Frances Adams, church secretary, will be accompanied by Dr. Raymond Bellamy, professor of sociology, and Dr. Murphy R. Hinson, professor of education. Student representatives are Miss Ruth McClain and Cleta Griffin.

The purpose of the retreat is to provide a unified program for all Methodist students in Florida as well as to enrich local Methodist programs on Florida campuses. The Rev. Mr. Anderson, Dr. Bellamy, Dr. Hinson, and Dr. Bellamy will participate in the program of the retreat. The party plans to return to Tallahassee Saturday afternoon.

Students Hurt By Vote Laws

Cumbersome Absentee Rulings Affect Collegiates

FULTON, Mo., (ACP)—Thousands of American college students are virtually disenfranchised because of "cumbersome" absentee voting laws, it is pointed out by Dr. Franz L. McCluer, president of Westminster College.

His conclusions are based on a survey by the college's institute of public affairs.

Dr. McCluer said more than 100,000 students of voting age "are guaranteed or actually forbidden to exercise their voting franchise."

The survey discovered little conformity in statutes. Missouri and Oklahoma specify that absentee voting is possible only within state boundaries, while Rhode Island and Virginia limit it to cases where the voter is outside the boundaries.

Citing varied restrictions in Pennsylvania alone, Dr. McCluer concludes:

"This situation is particularly undemocratic and senseless. Collage boys and girls of voting age, presumably studying to become better citizens, have neither the inclination nor the encouragement to cut through the red tape of absentee voting."

Souvenirs of New York Fair Color College Girls' Rooms

Floridans Take In Sights of Nation's Big City And Grover Whalen's Enterprise

New York World's Fair! Magical word! Shout them in capital syllables and immediately they will cast a spell of enthusiasm over certain inhabitants of the Florida State College for Women. Students and faculty members who visited the fair this summer added a colorful assortment of souvenirs and experiences to their memory collections.

Souvenirs ranged everything from a tin whistle to Vermont marble. Experiences at the fair themselves ranged from broadcasting to being greeted by the Florida four-footed mascot, General Sherman Futurama, the Florida exhibit and the Fashion Building were the Fair-favorites of the sightseers from this college.

Compacts, jewelry, vases from the Dutch building, and an ash tray constituted Dorothy Hamilton's souvenirs. Her most unusual gift, however, was a half-pint whiskey flask on which was the picture of a drunken man. A leather case also accompanied the bottle. Marguerite classed the Florida building as the most beautiful, enjoyed the Futurama the most, and spent one whole night going through the aquacade.

Miss Mary Boatwright's fair souvenirs were a miniature of the Consumers' Guide and some Vermont maple sugar. Her experiences consisted of the aquacade, Sweden's casting, and meeting some Georgians. Ashley Cole's souvenir building each national society was a miniature of the Fair. At the time of Miss Boatwright's visit her sorority, Alpha Chi Omega, was in the process of building and is one of the five official hostesses. She also took part in the radio program, "Here's Looking at You," which was broadcast from the Florida building, and was featured in the New Jersey building.

The building of Miss Russell Hollister, her 1939 favorite, Miss Boatwright preferred the Hall of Nations and the Court of Peace. Miss Jaquelyn Jubbs' she saw no particular favor in the Florida exhibit, but she did tour the grounds once with Miss Helen Cole, home economics instructor, and Beverly Brown, a former student. Due to the fact that Miss Brown is a Georgia boy they discovered they had mutual friends.

Vivian Ahlewelt's Fair remembrances are a total of a fold-in chair, a cane, and three dolls. She won a Charlie McCarthy doll at the Florida exhibit, a cowboy and another when she succeeded in knocking down a row of wooden milk bottles with one throw of a baseball. "People were always nice when she saw a former FSCW Vivian. The barker for the baseball game even offered to let her use of five balls instead of the customary four.

Her most surprising experience occurred at the Florida exhibit, when she saw a former FSCW Shop soda-jerker dishing out orange sherbet. Vivian lost money playing games at the Midway. Like Magno the Man and Electro the Girl. Miss Ahlewelt also thoroughly carried a red sweater in her dress during her entire visit.

Jane Schultz, freshman, claims a tin whistle as her only souvenir of the world of experience. She went by herself five times before the Fair opened. Interviews, she says, were scared to death by the airplane swings, was disappointed in the Futurama, and most applause at the American Jubilee, and in the Florida building and the Hall of Science the best. After hearing her voice recorded at the Communications, Jane decided to major in radio.

Catholic Club Will Initiate Freshmen

First Meeting Attended By Nearly 50 Members

On October 1 the new members of the Newman club, dressed entirely in white, will attend initiation ceremonies at 6 o'clock in the morning in Broward lounge. Following the ceremonies the club will go in a group to church and later to a breakfast in honor of initiates.

At its regular meeting Wednesday night the club voted to hold its meetings at 1:30 o'clock Thursday afternoons instead of on Wednesday evenings for the convenience of the many girls unable to attend on Wednesday.

About 50 members were present at the meeting which was presided over by Jimmie Ferguson with the officers of the club and five Duns some idea about the business and its income. Kathryn Dunnely in charge of entertainment introduced Jeanne Reese, Betty Ann Marron, Phi Mannon, and Lucy Neville who presented a panel discussion about the duties of the hub of mass. its origin, its altar, and the vestments of its priests.

World Turmoil Affects Enrollment

German Classes Show Decline in Size

GENEVA N. Y. (ACP)—Interesting effects of recent world developments on the choice of courses by college students are noted at Hobart and William Smith colleges.

Language departments report sudden declines in enrollment in German, French, and Italian with increases in Spanish, Greek, and Latin.

Both faculty members and students were invited to interpret the phenomenal increase in Greek and Latin enrollments.

Adding to the mystery is the fact that, while girls have heretofore been the chief butt of the Latin classes, there are almost none in this year's classes. The greater decrease in popularity of Italian as against French and German is explained as a representation of continued respect for French culture and a still high demand for German in scientific fields.

"The faculty members will not urge students to join TCDA," said Dr. Cotterill. "I hope that all students and faculty will at least study the principles and the policy with a view to supporting them. If America is not to go the way of Europe it must be united morally as well as physically. We must make certain that the American liberties are not going to be lost while we are busy in actual defeat. It does not cost a cent to join TCDA, and yet every person who signs an application is openly supports them is helping to make Florida contribute to the national defense."

Freshmen Class Hears Warren

Assistant Dean Gives Prime Requisites Of Citizenship

Miss Katherine Warren, assistant dean of students, addressed the freshman class at their first meeting of freshman week held yesterday in the auditorium. She spoke on "College Citizenship."

Elizabeth Linn, freshman adviser, first introduced Miss Margaret Whitney Dow, associate professor of organ and theory, explaining briefly her selection and describing the organ and some of its parts. Miss Dow played "Adagio" from Guilmant's Fifth Symphony.

In her speech, Miss Warren stressed the fact that in order to succeed, it is essential for the freshmen to understand and abide by all that is expected of them.

"The prime requisites of good citizenship are clear thinking, the developing of the receptive senses to a maximum degree, and contributing cooperatively to group life," she said.

She said that the first obligations of the class are to respect constituted laws, to assume the responsibility of maturity, and to develop self-discipline.

In closing, Miss Warren explained the part honor plays in character and expressed the desire that the faculty and the students might all strive together toward the fulfillment of everyone's hopes.

The first class meeting will be held September 10, at which time representatives of Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi, two scholastic fraternities on campus, will be the guest speakers.

Modern Dancers Will Reorganize

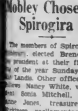
Experience Unnecessary Under New Program, Says Dickenson

Under the direction of Miss Mildred Dickinson, instructor in modern dance, try-outs for the new co-curricular modern dance class were held Monday and Tuesday of this week at the gym. The group will be organized on different basis this year. Instead of selecting only those girls who are familiar with the dance technique, Miss Dickinson plans to have classes on Monday and Wednesday afternoons from now until Thanksgiving for all students interested in modern dance regardless of previous experience. Miss Dickinson hopes to be able to select the girls more intelligently after observing their progress over this period of time.

Those who participate in the dance program will work on future dance programs. Due to the change in the organization of the dance group, there will be no dance program at Thanksgiving this year. There will be a lecture program on modern dance based on the semester with the selected dance unit as part.

Miss Dickinson said that she hopes to improve on skill girls interested in modern dance that are invited to attend these classes. She said that this is a pre-dance season and that the girls in this group may still try out Monday or Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 in the physical education building. Miss Dickinson added that points toward the three of the WAA may be earned by coming out for dance.

Athletic Calendar Arranged by WAA



The program of extra-curricular sports this year was made up at the meeting of the Women's Athletic Association, Tuesday night. Volleyball and basketball will have already begun and all sports will continue until December 16 when the two teams meet for the big contest of the year on Thanksgiving day. Heads of each sports are Hilda Battle and Brenelle Mobley. Field leaders are Jean Wood and Jo Heine.

From December 2 to February 1 swimming and swimmerette classes will be held. Soccer and hockey will be played during the last quarter which will last from January 10 and March 29; and softball games will be played from March 31 to May 10.

Mobley Chosen Spirogira Head

The members of Spirogira, odd group, elected Brenelle Mobley president at their first meeting of the year Sunday night in the Sandels dorm offices. Other officers were Nancy White, vice president; Ruth Mitchell, secretary; Jane Jones, treasurer. Betty Jones, parliamentarian.

Other members of Spirogira are: Pearl Brandt, Gene Bryan, Beryl Bundy, Dorothy Mitchell, Louise Johnson, Minnie Ratliff, Dorothy Parker, Jean Hitchcock, Margaret Ann Herkl, Frances Battle, Sadie Scott, Elizabeth Linn, Mildred Devaney, Olivia N. Dorman, Maude Flowers, Charlotte Holmes, Elizabeth Thomson, Annie May Tracy, Edith West, Madelyn Duncan, Mrs. Pearl Weaver, and Mrs. Marion Hay.

By Dalea Dorothy Clix

Dear Miss Clix: I'm going to ask you to look into my very soul, because I need all the help your wisdom can give me. I am considered the "wholesome" type, because I'm a good basketball player, mix well with people, and make Phi Beta in my Junior year. But oh, Miss Clix, I'd rather be a "femme fatale," and to hell with that "wholesome" stuff! How can I make the change—one look, that is—realize I'm just a daughter of Eve? Hoping soon to hear from you, YEARNING

Dear "Yearning": Let me tell you right from the heart I mouth, "femmes fatales" are born not, made. If here you, I'd give up the idea. Also, by the time you've learned all the femme fatale tricks, it'll be time to teach 'em to your grand-daughter. Better to make yourself practically attractive in ways anybody can learn. You play basket-ball. Well, have you got "basket-ball hands"? Start there—make your hands, your fingernails, well-groomed, attractive, alluring.

AND NOW, DEAR, READ THE NEXT COLUMN CAREFULLY!

Frances Cushing's Silhouette Brightens Poetry Book Cover

By PAULINE DALE

"Tee, but—oh dear, that wasn't very important," stammered Frances Cushing in an embarrassed reply to a question about her silhouette on the cover of a children's book of poetry which has recently been published in Boston, Mass., her aunt was the one who wrote the book."

The image of modesty, Frances made a quick little gesture with her hands as she shyly perked it up from beneath her long black lashes. Looking like a little girl herself, with her red-cheeked face, her wide hazel eyes, her thick, naturally curved eyebrows, and her delicately uptilted nose, she seemed to us to be a most fitting subject for the cover of a book written especially for children.

The silhouette, copied from a photograph of Frances when she was five years old, is printed upon an orange background The original was cut out by Frances' mother, whose hobby is art, and who teaches art in the community arranging their home at Gainesville.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cushing Taylor, "Aunt Betty" to Frances wrote the book and had it published herself this year. Entitled "Happiness to Share," the collection of poems was inspired by childhood experiences of the author, and often centers about youthful playmates and members of the family. Having lived in New England for a number of years, Mrs. Taylor took much of her material from that part of the country and wrote about such simple, refreshing subjects as the weathervane on the roof of the barn, chickadees, trees, falling apples, and robins. One of her poems, entitled "What I Found" relates her joy in discovering a nest in bed:

"A dear little tree in the orchard
Has low branches close to the ground.
Although it is too young for apples
It has something else I have found.

For as I was walking this way
I found a wee nest in that tree.
On tiptoe I stood to look in it
And oh shining eyes looked at me.

I love every tree in the orchard,
But now one seems quite the best.
For although it hasn't an apple,
It has three small birds in a nest."

Frances says that she can see clearly the roof of the barn and the apples growing on the tree in some of her aunt's poems. She maintains that most of the poems are too childish for her, but that she does think some of them are "nice." She likes, especially, a short poem called "Blue":

"There are bluebells and bluebirds
And sweet blue violets,
In summer we have the bluebarries for pie,
And something else blue is my dolly's eye."

Until last spring, Frances had not seen her aunt since she was 12 years old, at which time she had spent the summer at her aunt's home in Westford, Mass., near Lowell. "But she used to write to us a lot," added Frances. "And ever so often she would send us a poem, which she had written about us or about something at her house."

Most of her early poetry was written for her nieces and nephews and for Sunday school papers. I remember, too, that she also used to give lectures at club meetings, and read some of her poetry at those times. It was not until later that she decided to publish a book of poetry."

Some of the poems printed in the book are the same ones which were sent in old letters for the younger members of the Cushing family. Others have been reprinted from such periodicals as "The Mayflower," printed by the Pilgrim Press; "The Picture Story Paper;" by the Methodist Episcopal Church South; "Stories for Primary Children," by the Presbyterian church; and "Boys and Girls," by the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Typical of most of the poems in the book is this one, which shows the childish affection of a little girl for her father:

"When Father Comes"

"Sometimes my father comes upstairs
To tuck me into bed.
We always talk and play a while Before my prayers are said.

Perhaps he'll make a donkey's head

Freeling Leads PEA Meeting

New Physical Education Majors And Minors Are Introduced

The Physical Education association, the professional organization for physical education majors and minors, held its first meeting in the club room of the gymnasium Wednesday night at 8 o'clock. President Marion Freeling presided.

The main object of the meeting was to acquaint the new majors and transfer students with the members of the physical education staff and students on this campus. Each new member of the association was assigned a big sister from the physical education department, who brought her to the meeting and acquainted her with customs and programs of the club. There are 22 freshman majors and 8 transfers.

Miss Katherine Montgomery made a short talk concerning the new addition which will be added to the gymnasium within the next year. She illustrated her talk with the actual blue prints that call for bowling alleys, dance studios, a work shop for the club, two recreational leadership classes, and a big auditorium for volley ball courts.

Several important business matters were brought up. Mary Jane Medlin resigned as vice-president of the association; Gwendolyn Stevenson was elected for the end of the year.

Frances Belle, senior intramural manager, then took charge of the meeting, and Mary Jo Dugger, intramural managers for the various sports of the year were elected.

Play Night Theme Is Frolic Tonight

Floread Brown Reveals Novelty Dance Plans

General fun and frolic will be the keynote at the gymnasium tonight as Play Night begins at 8 o'clock. No formal program or entertainment has been decided but games, dancing and sports will be offered.

Floread Brown, in charge of Play Night programs for the year, announces that the evening holds a novelty dance with decorations and refreshments to be featured. Play nights. At other Play Nights, the evenings will be devoted to games and sports.

Arrangements for next week's "Shipboard Hop" are underway. Ruth Torres, chairman of decorations, and Nancy Doggett, chairman of entertainment, intend to have elaborate nautical decorations in the gymnasium, and a complete student talent floor show. Beautiful dresses will be in costume for the evening. Admission is handing publicity for the dance.

Beside me on the wall:
I set my hand in my mouth
But it won't bite at all.

His fingers make the ears that move
He makes a large bird, too.
But just a very little bird
Is all that I can do.

And when it's time to say my prayers
My father jumps me in:
He pulls the sheet and blanket up
And tucks them 'neath by chin.

Then through the hall and down the stairs
I hear my father go.
But which of us had the best fun
I really do not know."

"I don' think Aunt Betty ever sat down with the specific intention of writing a poem," mused Frances. "She usually wrote as she worked. I suppose that is why she called her book "Happiness to Share." too, because she wanted to share her thoughts with others —to make others children especially, happy."

Exciting Fire Harms Nothing

A few smudges of soot and frayed nerves are the only traces of the Alpha Gamma Delta fire which brought two fire engines outside and awakened sated firemen inside the house Tuesday night. The fact that the flame was caused by a defect in the hot water system, which operates in the basement, caused great excitement. A first-rate explosion was expected at any moment.

Despite smoke pouring from the upstairs and downstairs ventilators, and soot belching from the living-room fireplace, Grace Ball could not be ruffled. Pire or no fire, Grace just would not be seen in an undignified fashion. So the fire had to wait while she put on her clothes and make-up and walked sedately downstairs. Margery Richardson and Sara Margaret Geiger could not wait for the explosion outside; they showed a true spirit of adventure when they rushed to the basement door if the tank was actually going to blow up! Lucky for them, it didn't!

PE Department Sponsors Lake Bradford Trip

Last Wednesday afternoon, 23 out-door minded college girls piled into the outdoor bus and left the campus for Camp Pistacowo where they were given canoe and boating lessons on Lake Bradford.

The truck departed from the Primary Training School at 4:30 and returned at 6 o'clock there being a Tech student was requested to bring 10 cents.

A similar trip to Camp Pistacowo has been planned for girls who wish bectaining or advanced instruction in canoeing and sailing. The date for the second outing is October 1. Girls may make reservations for either trip at the Aquatic bulletin board in the gymnasium. The Physical Education department is sponsoring these excursions.

Sorority Girl Is Portrayed

Survey Shows She Comes In Assorted Sizes And Heights

Some of the conclusions follow:

"She comes in assorted heights, dressed and shaped according to latest fashion. Her well-curled hair is becoming, and the veil seldom cover it with a hat; but just let a wind blow, a light appear and she wads it up under a bandana and looks like someone who should be in Bertie in Russian wheat fields.

"In spite of her 12-hour study average weekly she keeps her grades well above the campus level, makes more B's than C's, and inspires all kinds of tales of epileptic fits in her less successful male.

"She thinks about men almost as much as they like to think she does, but her thoughts are not always to their credit. Rather often she has more dates than she wants, because she has only way she can be sure to have the ones she really does want.

"Two or three nights a week she has a more or less formal satisfactory-to-moderate, definite-destination date. In between times she has lunch or go for rides or hamburs drop in. Certainly she spends hours on end "jellying," which the Navy men go for; coke-party a waste of time, jellying—a campus term meaning an insurmountable date, usually several hours sitting in a restaurant over a soda or chain of ice cream."

"She has an allowance and usually buys her own lunch at the school cafeteria or an off-campus restaurant.

"She may look frivolous, but there's a fifty-fifty chance she has held down a paying job at some time or other; she may even be the one girl in a hundred who's working her way through college with a full-time job. She's more apt to be the one sorority girl in 10 who earns her spending money by working about seven hours a week.

"In general she's a happy girl, fairly well satisfied with her share of life."

Can You Tell Them Apart?

Danger! Freshmen Lie in Wait Disguised as Faculty Members

Marjorie Carter, New Spanish Instructor, Knows What It Is To Be "Just a Freshman"

There is a mystery woman on the campus. No one can figure out exactly who she is, how old she is, or what she does. Small in stature, she looks like a girl, walks like a girl, and gestures like a girl. Invariably, the anonymous noticee her she is automatically classified as a "very young miss in her teens."

Upon arriving in Tallahassee she was immediately taken to be a freshman by students, taxi-drivers, and everyone. The taxi-driver, who merely looked at her and offered to carry her bags out of consolation offered to freshmen when she asked about her trunk. The taxi-driver was kind and helpful in profering his help if I wanted to ask any questions."

But she is not a freshman. Neither is she a sophomore, a junior, or even a senior. She is a member of the faculty of Florida State college for women. To be more explicit, she is Miss Marjorie Carter one of the new Spanish teachers.

Amusing incidents fill her life. One of the most recent "experiences" occurred in Gilchrist hall. Visiting the dormitory to see her sister who is a student at Florida State, Miss Carter asked another student about the elevator. Plunging her answer behind her as she hurried down the hall, she said, "Thanks, I'll go on and walk up the steps. It will do you good."

Ahhh, during registration her motives for wanting to enter the gymnasium were questioned. A careful explanation of faculty authority was necessary before she could get in without having to present her registration card first.

Yes, Miss Carter's eyes might sparkle like a little girl's, but it has been nearly ten years since she was really a freshman —at Florida State college for women.

Battle Outlines Intramural Plan

New Leaders Are Named To Supervise Nine Sports for Year

Intramural managers for competitive games were announced this week by Frances Battle, intramural chairman. Practices for Odd-Even demonstrations in basketball and volleyball has already begun with Even practice on Mondays and Wednesdays at 4:30 o'clock and Odd practice on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Leaders for intramurals listed, according to individual sports are swimming — Dempsy Ecker and Irene Proctor; tennis, Starling Hall; basketball, Myrtice Loucks, badminton, Dottie McCown, shuffleboard, Waysie Wood, archery, Sue Irwin, softball, Stella Valenti, golf, Margaret Carter, table tennis, Ruth Pierce.

A tentative schedule has been announced as follows: October 4, swimming meet; October, golf; November-December, table tennis and swimming; February-March, basketball; March-April, tennis and badminton; April-May, volleyball.

The committee on intramurals sports has also given the two new rules. The first states that any team that defaults and does not let the sentinel intramural manager or sports leader know by noon of the day of the game, will have 50 points deducted from its total score.

The second says that any player who has played in Odd-Even games for any particular sport, or is a physical education major, may not participate in that sport in intramurals.

All intramural managers of each organization are asked to help give Frances Battle at the Kappa Delta house their names so that she may contact them for future announcements concerning intramurals.

The late Dr. Francis H. Herrick, professor emeritus of biology at Western Reserve university, is widely known for his study of American eagles.

He could have been "The Man Most Likely to Succeed" but indifference, like using a faulty pen, kept him behind the 8-Ball

Harry had everything, except a sense of discrimination. Perhaps he leaned too heavily on his natural gifts. Anyway he never added to them in college, but laughed things off—like the times his old-fashioned pen ran dry in classes and exams. Our bright chance is out in the world today—a man who could have given orders, he is taking them.

Sure, it seems far-fetched, but you'll be surprised what a great big difference it makes in your grades to carry a sure-fire pen like the Parker Duofold Vacumatic.

It's the world-famous streamlined Beauty that never runs dry unless you let it. For its useless Television barrel holds nearly twice as much ink as our old type, and it lets you SEE days ahead if it's running low.

It's the only Style that looks like circlets of shimmering velvet—ring upon ring of lustrous Permanent Pearl and Jet. The One-Hand useless filler with the "lubricated" Point of extra fine-gumined 14K Gold, cuts resistance—tipped with Osmiridium that writes "as smooth as oil."

It's the college favorite by nearly 2 to 1—so it rates one "in the Know" to carry the genuine.

Be sure to look for Parker's Five Thing Dimension—it means Guaranteed for Life. Avoid all substitutes—then you'll have no regrets.

What Can The Women Do

With the conscription bill a known fact, with President Roosevelt calling out more volume of the national guard, with thousands of men volunteering for the army and navy, and with appropriations of billions of dollars being made for national defense it seems time to say a word about the women.

Although the part women will take in the defense has not been emphasized it is interesting for us as college women to speculate on the possibilities that will be open for us. Both Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Hoover seem to be in sympathy with compulsory training for young women, along such lines of non-military service as would benefit the country and for which they are best adapted.

Under Mrs. Roosevelt's program, every woman in a community would work on a share basis, helping her in cooking, planning diets, buying in large quantities, serving in a cafeteria board or helping nurses in hospitals would be included in the training period.

Harriet Elliot, only woman member of the National Defense Commission and Dean of Women in the University of North Carolina, in a special statement for Independent Woman, said, "One of the most important contributions we have to make in the present world and now being done by women in local communities and to do that work thoroughly and effectively, health, nutrition, child welfare, and social well-being are vital to total defense. I believe that women have an unusual opportunity and a great responsibility to assist in evaluating community conditions in terms of efficient defense and in every possible way to contribute to the attainment of standards of living where they are low."

The defense commission is considering pushing a few women to work in the field of essential war industry in order to provide a "handful" of trained workers if men are called to war.

Already women are at work in a great many spots in the Native Army. It would make vital, licensed women pilots in the United States have more than doubled since the first of the year and a few of the newcomers are already at work. Ola Rather, 20 year old girl, is training men to fly and being paid $75 a week.

Women are helping make pursuit planes by sewing fabric on the steel plane elevators. Others are trained in the factories to operate the gyros so essential to planes and ships.

Ruth Nichols, noted woman aviator and executive assistant of Relief Wings, Inc., a civilian organization to promote the use of airplanes for aid in war and peacetime disasters, and Jacqueline Cochran, winner of the 1938 Bendix Trophy race, urge the use of women flyers to relieve men flyers in time of war for ferrying planes.

"Women aviators in Europe have made names for themselves since the war began," said Miss Nichols in an interview published in the September issue of Independent Woman. "In Germany, Hannah Reitsch has trained 500 men pilots, and in England women ferry planes back of the lines. We know that in the last war more men died from want of hospital care than were killed outright. We men aviators could fly them to hospitals where the most things they could do in the air and in the industry end of aviation."

Whatever part the defense commission decides for women to take in the preparations, the college graduates of the next three and six years, will be given an important part. Backed by four years of college they will be expected to be leaders among the other women. There force stop and look at your education critically —look at yourself critically and see if you are getting from your education the training you need — the ability to think and to speak, the ability to take and give orders, firmness, courage, generosity, kindness, and the ability to see the things your self realizes should give you if it is to prepare you for the world in which you will live.

A Word From The Ushers

It's the same old story. Perhaps it's all due to human nature or maybe to the college tradition of gripping about the dining room. Whatever the cause may be, the trouble has already become evident this year. Be it the same old story, this year the "girls in green," or the dining hall "stool pigeons," one freshman termed us, have decided to rise to defend themselves—or at least try to explain their position.

In years past there have been grumblings about what we do when we "rough house," and "hard hearted-Hannahs." Well, we can't answer for the girls in years past. They might have been guilty of that. We can't be our own stepmother, or a drunken father. But since we are here to speak for ourselves, believe us when we say that the unjust and unkind crimes we commit against the student body are not expressions of our personal prejudice against the way you part your hair, disliked our little brother, or tint your finger nails. No, most of the things we ask of you are not for our personal feelings, but from the requirements for an efficiently operated dining room.

I'll start off with the most trivial breakfast proposition with you. From the very first day there had seemed to be a feeling of resentment from the students that it might be to get short 2,000 people fed before their 8:30's and still dismiss your help, which is mainly the girls in the dining room, in time to get to their 8:30's too? That's exactly what the dining hall staff has to do. In order to carry out this sort of program, the dietitians have set up a certain routine for the ushers to carry out in the most orderly fashion sense when you once see the need behind it.

It is indeed necessary to set aside certain hours for certain groups to eat. If you have ever waited in line when too many people came to breakfast too early or too late, you'll be able to understand the need. If you can't understand the need better if you had been behind a cafeteria counter waiting in vain for customers? If you have ever seen a line suddenly been swamped with a gang of girls who adjust till the very last minute. When anything upsets the routine, it is something to hound in on wrong. And usually it's both the student body and the dining room girls who get it in the neck. The ushers are usually placed at hastily set tables after holding their line up for a few minutes. The dining room girls are late to their first class.

And when it comes to these reserved tables, please be patient with the staff, knowing that it has been able to seat everyone so far, turns up with about eight more requests than there are tables. There's got to be a table somewhere. As soon as the lists have been checked for duplication, and every girl is sitting at one table instead of a dozen, it is quite likely that the difficulty over table shortage will disappear.

Now please let us beg you not to deal too harshly with us. We're really human, believe it or not, and we sympathize with all the "girls in green" as horses, just stop to think what would happen to your nerves if time and again you were confronted with a long line before the blessing with a mob of hungry-eyed students demanding places, when all the time you knew you had only 15 minutes.

We don't like this line shifting, table moving, and daily lock-out any better than you do, but to get those 2,000 people their bacon and eggs in 40 minutes, some things just "have to be did."

Speak Your Piece

A whisper through the dorm an undercurrent through the classroom—the students are talking. They'll always talk. There are things they have to say, things they like to say, things they approve of, and things they dislike. The average student, like the average human, is never satisfied with all the things that make up her life. She complains to her friends, sometimes, and what they say are something she could do about affairs but—she doesn't try.

In Tallahassee's long practiced the habit of giving freedom of speech to all comers. Throw the hat in the ring and there is the floor. A number of years ago the National Student Federation of America was established on this campus for just that purpose. It was planned to catch the hats and give the floor. Somehow the real purpose of this organ of the people has failed in the past here. Perhaps the blame lay with the organization and perhaps it didn't. Perhaps the blame lay with the students themselves. Perhaps it was apathy, the old feeling of let the other girl worry, was nesin the root of the evil. Whatever it was, it has been there. Let's find a solution or what use is there to bother with it.

The opening of the year is the time to throw the hat in the ring. It is the time for the student body to a new sense of democracy. The student forum will open for the first time next week with a program on social regulations. If there are customs and practices that aren't clear, reasons that don't make sense, this is the time to have them out. There will be speakers who will explain the whys and wherefores to the best of their ability, and if there are those who don't see things the way the speakers do, it is up to them to pipe up and tell why. It should be spunk now or forever hold your peace.

Of The World

Outside News

The presidential campaigns of President Franklin Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie are at present in full swing, with election about six weeks away. Willkie speaking at Coffeyville, Kansas, in his first major speech after his acceptance address, brought out the point that "The fundamental issue of this election is the preservation of democracy itself," which, according to Willkie, is being destroyed by the president. This "first preservation of democracy" will doubtless be the main theme used by the Republicans in their campaign. In addition, a speech delivered Saturday by Willkie on the Kansas farm he inherited Roosevelt with aiding in bringing on the present war. Willkie declared, "As Mussolini has said, not the only man able to attend to his own business but the second of the mistakes he considered the president had made in foreign relations, principally the cancellation of the London Economic conference.

President Roosevelt has also begun his offensive in the campaign, for in his address to the twenty-seventh annual convention of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Masters Stablemen, and Helpers, he declared that the party in power has "fostered their progress to date" thereby appealing to labor for support. This act, unusual, caused its support to Roosevelt. From the standpoint of labor, Roosevelt's additional support, when Mayor Hillman's "As Matter of Fact" column in the Nation, "for it is even rumored that if all the notes eastern states will go to the east coast, thereby on account of the increase in the cost of defense plans.

War

Joachim von Ribbentrop, the Futhrer's foreign minister and Mussolini held conferences this week, but nothing concerning the secret, Perhaps Germany has given up the idea of attacking the British Isles and of building a colonial empire in other parts of the globe. Italy may be considering an invasion of Egypt to gain control of the Mediterranean or perhaps drive from Syria to Iraq, threatening Britain's oil supply. Greece will be attacked. Or perhaps this is a part of Britain's plan to bomb the Isles off guard thus insuring greater success for his Blitzkrieg action. It has been reported that the conference was held to divide the spoils of war that seem to us to be far from over.

But as Von Ribbentrop and Mussolini sat and decided the fate of thousands, London's casualty list numbered 6,334 for the first night of the wave of German bombers fly over Britain's skies. The first half of September 2,000 civilians died, 3,000 killed and 2,000 injured, most of the casualties occurring in London. No one can be quite sure just how much damage has been done to the empire or what losses have been inflicted on the Germans by the RAF in the attacks.

England began Tuesday her first offensive move of the war since France capitulated, when she opened her attack on Dakar, a French African naval base. Although the attack failed it was necessary to capture the port it is important that Churchill, in protecting part of the English navy which had been forced to keep close by to the shoreline of the Isles to ward off attack, seems to be attempting the "Line of Action is past."

THE FUNCTIONS OF A TEACHER

BERTRAND RUSSELL

Teaching has been transformed during the past hundred years more than any other profession. The profession has a great and honorable tradition, but any teacher in the modern world who allows himself to be inspired by the ideals of his predecessors is likely to be sharply aware of the fact that it is not his function to teach what he chooses, but to instill such beliefs and prejudices as are thought useful to his employers.

In former days a teacher was expected to be a man of exceptional wisdom. The teachers of antiquity were not an independent profession, and no control was exercised over them. It is true that they were often punished for their subversive doctrines. But any man who has the given impulses of the teacher will be more anxious to survive in his books than in the flesh; a feeling of independence is essential to the proper fulfillment of the teacher's functions.

Antiquity, the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, all had their types of education and their problems. In the nineteenth century, however, we face a new problem. The teacher has become, in a vast majority of cases, a civil servant obliged to carry out the behests of men who, as a rule, have had little to do with education. The result is that the independence is essential to the proper fulfillment of the teacher's functions.

Australia, the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, all had their types of education and their problems. In the nineteenth century, however, we face a new problem. The teacher has become, in a vast majority of cases, a civil servant obliged to carry out the behests of men who, as a rule, have had little to do with education. State education is obviously necessary but as obviously introduces a danger, namely that which there ought to be safeguards. Such safeguards existed in their full magnitude in Germany, Russia, Italy, and Japan. In England, the safeguard of classical nationalism is that which is most conspicuous.

Perhaps the first requisite of teachers in democratic countries, where suppression has not been reached such proportions, is a sense of the dangers to which education is exposed.

The imparting of definite, uncontroversial information is one of the most valuable functions of citizens. It is obvious that organized education is one of the greatest dangers of our time. It should be the business of teachers to stand outside the strife of parties and endeavor to instill into the young the habit of impartial curiosity, leading them to judge issues on their merits. It is to this safeguard against accepting ex parte statements at their face value. Without it, the whole future of civilization is and desirous of controversial opinions believed by their pupils.

The state can be a good teacher unless he has a genuine desire to impart to his pupils what he believes to be true. But in this he should be one of the functions of the teacher of the future.

Or Forever Hold Your Peace . . .

Who the Hell writes the editorials for the Flambeau? Surrounded them with the atmosphere of City college still hovering around. I have been reading the weekly intellectualized idealism and the meaningless generalities of the past week. "And We're At College"—imagine wasting all those pices on that. Is that what college is for? Nonsense.

What's so completely decadent about the American educational system is having its last fevered death's kick. Is there any more positive force there working for the future? Then the editorial page as Shaunessy. It says: "the future depends on the means of communication, etc." What the Hell does that mean? It says nothing has all those and in as highly developed a state, but just those things are the causes of present ills.

What does the political situation in America really and concretely warrant any hope on your part that you're doing anything used for the people? What's happening to the W.P.A.? Nothing—that hasn't been lessened. Lynchings still go on. Labor unrest continue on the trek to and from California. What are we that we should be exempted? We've got a housing problem, so we're all going to live in the subways or in the barracks. We cut the WPA to balance the budget, but the lost count of the billions we're spending for "national defense." Roosevelt and Willkie ask for "sacrifices" and "tears" from the workers. Name one sacrifice the ruling class is making with the exception of giving up the Riviera this year.

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK

Inquiring Reporter . . .

If special concessions were given to college students here, as in Rollins town, in the form of reduced movie rates, would you go to the theatre often? Do you feel that you get a worth while amount of entertainment for the money you spend?

There seems to be no doubt in a student's mind that the rates should be reduced for shows in Tallahassee. A few persons believe that they would not have time to go to any more than they attend already, but the majority of the students interviewed this week believe that they would attend shows more often if the rates were lower, and they do at present if prices were reduced.

Patty Palmer: Practically every girl in Tallahassee lives on a budget. Consequently we can't afford her best to stay within its limits. I definitely believe that if special concessions were given to college students their patronage would equal and possibly excel the present amount. More students would be able to attend them if by means to go to the show once or twice a week.

Onalee Hoxie: Yes, I certainly would attend the show more often. I think the patronage would equal more than the amount it does now, because I would go more often myself.

Ines Merryday: If the movie rates were reduced I would certainly go more often and it would be better spent. I would rather spend at the present time for picture shows.

Geraline Wimberly: Even though I am the meek and lowly freshman, I take the privilege that more students would patronize the local theaters if prices were lowered. I would afford to go more often and this would help keep down the box office receipts.

Mary Reddish: If and when rates are lowered you will surely find me there. I would probably go more often That would naturally increase the amount I pay out but it would be well worth the pleasure.

Mary Alice Goldfish: If show rates were reduced for the college girls, I'm sure that the patronage would increase. From my standpoint I wouldn't have to dash down town in the hot sun at six o'clock so I could save a nickel. I'm Scotch and everything counts.

Ovelia Linton: If night rates were reduced I would be able to attend the evening shows more often this would be a splendid opportunity to go. I sincerely feel that the reduced rate would more than pay for itself.

Mary Jane Dews: Yes it rates were lower I'm sure I would be able to go more often. My allowance now stretches only as far as one show a week. If the rates were lower I'd be able to go at least twice which would certainly pay for itself

Margaret Davidson: Yes, definitely, I would go to the theatre more often. My pocketbook would equal and might even exceed the present amount if the rates were reduced. The entertainment would be greater for the price of one show a week as now I can't afford to go for the price of two shows at present prices. The simple reason that 26 cents is not considered as such a large sap in a dollar as it was a year ago.

Frances McClure: In the matter of reduced rates on movies to be given college students as mentioned in the foregoing statement, I am very much in favor of it. It seems to me that in other colleges town conditions similar to ours in such cases. Why can't the same consideration be given Florida State students? It isn't the fact that I could afford to attend paying, but it is the 40 cents for ordinary series and the added amount for special movies we make now. I'm against it in every respect. Lower prices from now on!

Jennie Spivey: Students attend theatres for the amusement they receive. Reduced rates would mean more hours of such amusements on the amount the budget allows.

Ruth Thomas: I'm not so sure whether girls will be able to attend more movies because that is very valuable around here. However, I believe the prices should be reduced.

Ruth Smith: In my opinion the movie prices in Tallahassee are entirely too high for a college town. The entertainment is not worth more enjoyable if my allowance permitted more than one show a week.

Bertha Lee Hoffman: Since the University of Miami administered which has caused an undercurrent of rebellious feeling here on the campus for some time, has at last come to the surface for which reason I am glad to express my opinions in the hope that it may help other students more conscious of this state of affairs. We all know that the boys in Dandelion realized that they were paying too much for movie entertainment with respect to prices charted for college students in other college towns of the state and began a boycott of pictures. The boys, united as they were, had the opportunity to stay away from the pictures until prices came down to a reasonable level. They achieved their purpose. If the boys can do it, we can't after all we have more here are Sparks' theatres as it is but a little cheaper than other Sparks' theatres. Why make? I believe that if they would cut prices down from 44 to 28 cents many more of the students here at FSCW would go to the movies and everyone would benefit by going often. I don't see how the management could lose on that. I for one will say that I definitely detested that we do not object to the Sparks' as a unit of trade willing to pay this tax on the price of the movie in order to help the government and its programs. But we do not believe that the Sparks' theatres are justified in charging the high admission prices that they are now for the same movies that others are showing at approximately half the price.

Mary Marie Whury: I believe that if the reduced rates were given at the theatre if special prices were given to the students here at school, it would be worth trying I should give more girls the opportunity to go to the theatre more often than they would otherwise be able to do.

Reid Pussell: When we take into consideration the number of girls who attend the Tallahassee theatres each week, it hardly seems that if the local theatres to raise the prices as low as two we return cash full. This course of lower prices for college students is given in other towns, and it has proved successful.

Marge Ingram: With my pocketbook and mental capacity I'm sure I would go to movies more often if prices were reduced. I'm not sure how and so do have a definite opinion as to what I can do. With a reduced price I'd attend both movies at the thought . . . oh, happy day.

Roberta Marks: Many girls here, who do not have an opportunity for many recreational purposes, have only the movies to fall back on, but as 40 cents is the usual price for one of the best of small allowances, the pleasure is not as frequent as it could be

By ISABELL DAY and THERESA SULLIVAN

We heard of a very enthusiastic freshman from G'ville who sighed with pleasure upon seeing a "Fly" dressed his neat letter to "Flambeau State Owners" as "Dear Boys who Count." We had no idea we were that good.

The cute girls are heading for Gainesville this week-end for the first of us can always dress for dinner Wednesday nights and have some wishful thinking.

And while we're discussing dress-for-dinner. We'd add, nights, we might mention a few of the comments we overheard last night.

1. So this looking scornfully at a "made-it-myself" dish what I struggled into for-entertainment point, question mark.

2. Looks like a bunch of freshmen babies to me! (This from a transfer from a co-ed school.)

3. I feel like dashing back my room and putting a bandeau on my head to keep all this hair back too, but it's perfect.

4. This is the last time I dress this!

Oh well, maybe we just don't know constructive people.

And then there's a freshman who has good eats at the table and told she had a young man waiting in the parlor asked would she please come to her dorm as soon as class was over. Of course our glammer girl wasted no time in doing that very thing. And upon arriving breathless at the office the child was slightly disillusioned to learn that while we were gone was an insurance salesman.

Doesn't this weather make you feel stiff? There's nothing we enjoy more than a good game of tackle, cold mornings and to the accompaniment of shouting and throwing, and to watch the play of neighbors tossing our bronze boots and golf clubs around. Nothing like providing we can punch the bum on our partner and then stand up back to sleep while our team mate closes the windows and turns off the radiator. Ah, that's the coast. In fact, it inspires us to start that white we were getting our knee-length socks (which we believe always look better) and permitted only on freshmen) and wondering if our middle-aged contervalism will ever look enough for us to wear them one or two we borrowed a poem in the gentle breezes.

Blow, gentle breezes, and what do I care?

If you take all the bobby pins out of my hair!

Blow, Baby Hurricane, blow on, I said.

Surely you won't make "waves" ing so much.

For my little white girdle just must stay on my head.

When she eats a way she really will play—or so sees the trend of thought of a cynical friend of ours. Which is quite true.

Her one and only, from whom she has been getting letters for other tender missals, called her from Gainesville last night one morning. Now, nothing could be sweeter than to be wakened to talk to one's heart's delight, but what's the big hi date say, "Hello," too. Which said date did in a rather confused tone, adding quickly that she was trying to help him to find his shoes and socks which he when Deb Juan ended with, "Oh, I'm so sorry, I didn't mean to have to come to an end somewhere or other."

And from a college where they obviously have a sense of humor a bit of pointed advice. No explanations needed.

"—Just remember that beans and potatoes over twice a day will make you constipated and fat."

Then there's a sunshine-and-happiness girl on campus who struck up one of those Brother-and-Sister relationships with an extremely attractive young Collegiate.

Her only comment on the situation now that the Gainesville weekends have started is, "Now it's nice, but it, getting too damn platonic."

One of our professors, whom we'll call Dr. Jones, reminds of a heart mentioned in class the other day in the form of "the glad tidings of great joy" manner that there was to be an assembly with uniforms and everything on it, in town. We also heard there are to be a few airplanes there too. Here's hoping they won't have to have them on the field at the same time. We can just picture hundreds of broad-shouldered uniformed men standing in the pleasant at the gym (Cons) We mean the Physical Education Building).

munists and other anti-war Americans signify an awakening "to a new and unfamiliar thought can Life"? Is it not rather war hysteria? Are we not endeavoring to lead the lambs to the slaughter, to fill the money bags of the financiers, to line the dollar sign on the American flag?

And the conscription editorial in the Flambeau is not necessarily opposition than the prospect of being drafted myself. Why write the thing anyway? I don't know whether it was publication since what but Senator Wheeler's position was completely distorted. His main point, besides that conscription would destroy democracy, was that this immense military machine would be used to capture by force if necessary the economic markets of South America and those of the British Empire that England cannot capture, while the point was not that Hitler has no bad intentions toward us, but that it is impossible to invade the United States. In that he is backed by people like Bernard Buster, Major Eliot, and by the reports given by the generals published, by the army and naval committee, no less.

as "a glandular disturbance." The truth is that cases of "endocrine imbalance" are so few as to constitute only a minute percentage of the subject overweight.

The first need served by food is its provision of fuel which the human engine burns to obtain energy. The second is its provision of building materials for the growth and replacement of tissue. A third need is to provide the chemicals which enable the body to carry on its other functions. Fat is primarily kept to hydrates and proteins. Building materials is obtained from proteins and minerals. Chemicals are provided by minerals and vitamins.

Reducing is a perfectly rational process. It requires only a little opportunism to avoid diet—holding the intake of food to a minimum which will provide a simple supplies of building materials and chemicals and the gradual offered day after day until the desired number of pounds have melted away.

This is the principal of reducing diets and the basis of most of its practice new. What is new is a drastic downward revision of the amount of food introduced within the past few years by Drs Wilder and Evans and James H. Strang at Western Pennsylvania hospital. Pittsburgh. Some people can get much as 12 to 14 pounds monthly by using the low-calorie diet system.

Various medicants have been tried as "reducing" substances. Physical exercises have been tried, but are often dangerous to those whose heart and blood system are already overloaded by the demand of too much flesh. The only safe way to reduce fatness is to reduce the intake of fattening foods.

Kurz Host at Steak Fry Given in Honor of New Instructor in Of Botany

Dr. and Mrs. Herman Kurz entertained a group of F. S. C. W. faculty members at a steak supper at Alum Bluff, September 22, in honor of the new professors of the Botony and Zoology, Mr. C. M. Goethart and Miss Grace C. Madson.

The party motored to the Bluff, which is along the banks of the Appalachicola river and one of the beauty spots of Florida. From here may be seen one of the finest stands of river birch timber in this country. Not only is the place noted for its beauty, but also for the historic interests there. Many o fthe earthworks of Civil War days, when Confederate soldiers defended warehouses farther down the river, may be found there.

A botanical survey was made of the area, and specimens of very rare plants, found only in this region, the Florida Yew and the Torreya, also the Florida cane, rare trees and scrubs may be located there. The bluffs and the banks of the river are the delight of those interested in studying botany.

Dr. and Mrs. Kurz entertained their guests a steak supper cooked over a grill in the woods.

Those enjoying the occasion were, Mrs. Louise Richardson, Dr. Rachel Allen Stevenson, Dr. E. M. Devitey, Dr. Mildred Bolles, Mrs. Ruth Bolles, and Mrs. Carlton and Miss Mary Hood.

"The American Way is complex," says George L. G. Daffers, a German transfer student at Louisiana State university. Prior to the World War II, Daffers was in Hamburg, Germany, where his father was engaged in the American diplomatic service. He was sent to France two days before the outbreak of the war and remained there only a short while, there are few who believe that it is unlikely that the political sentiments believe that the bill is unconstitutional. They are skeptical in fearing that it will upset the economic world in the United States and general opinion in favor of conscription were that men on reserve would be called, but they are already on government pay; a man with children and married at least a year before the bill went through in order to be exempt. Also it will cause an increase of marriage as means to escaping the draft. The general opinion voiced most that "it is tragic that affairs force us to go into an unnecessary war and conscription, but it must be so, for preparedness is the only thing that you stop to think that we are dealing with a dictator mania—one who have our spot on the world map marked for the next war."

The possibility of public trials of conscientious objectors before the District Court and a public announcement of the dismissal of such cases was also proposed by the justices of the court at Louisiana State university. This proposal, however, was discussed by the court of public opinion before the name of a student being dismissed from the University of Chicago proposed indicated was a probationary period extending throughout a student's college career. SUITS — ALWAYS GOOD

Get a load of the Butcher Boy jacket that makes this suit the smartest bet for this season's favorite. Large pockets, leather buttons, colors in green, brown, wine, and rust. If you don't like them sloppy, try the next fitted type. We have those too. While you're in the Sport Shop, glance at the velveteen suits styled by Lynn Gray. You'll look twice! Especially at the belted backs and gold buttons . . . Why not consider a Gotham sweater-cardigan—short-sleeved or sleeveless—to go with that suit, too? They're just what you've been wanting.

This was probably written to succeed "Sierra Sue."

"Love Is" and "Little Boy Blue" are two numbers that are coming field . . . possibly they won't make the top three of the nation, but they're nice to lend an ear to . . . Glenn Miller's arrangement of "Sunrise Serenade" and "Frenesie" is at the top of the list in anybody's dance orchestra class. . . . Johnny Long's arrangement of the oldster, "Blue Skies" . . . is worth your nickel on any

Musically Speaking

Why, oh, why does everyone passing by the practice rooms receive as badly at us as we pursue our "calling" . . . with a look as if to say, "I hope none of my children ever turn to be such music majors" . . . in fact, lots of students think of all music majors as being a cross between a pathological case-study and the well-known caricaturesque conception of a wild-eyed, bushy haired conductor who slings a stick around in one hand and uses the other hand to keep his foot-deep eyebrows from obscuring his vision of the score.

Of course, even we admit that the noise from the practice room of the Westcott building is rather terrifying at times . . . with all sorts of instruments being either "saved" or "blown" . . . all sorts of different voices in different keys on as many different types of music . . . scales and finger-work, someone's friend carrying on a conversation with an occupant of the bottom room, and the whole thing it on at the top of each individual set of hunds. And the "The Rites of Spring" one of Stravinsky's more individualistic pieces . . . individualistic in the sense that no one else would put up many dollars to hear the piece or composition . . . this being played on the phonograph in the music appreciation classes . . . and you have what makes people stop and ask: Oh, what a life it all in the training . . . I hope. And then there's the time when a pianist is pounding out a rhapsody on the stage in the auditorium or an organist is doing a triumphal march with all doors and hoses open and windows out . . . that's the time when every one has to walk through the balcony, open doors in the back of the auditorium, or investigate something indefinite back stage.

Understand, we're not discussing curiority or interest . . . we're merely making excuses for some of the queer things that we are sometimes accused of doing . . . or saying. Such as the four-year student who walked in-to class twenty minutes late. The professor said "You should have been here at 8:30, Miss Whatchamacallit" . . . to which the student interested and remarked . . . "Why, what happened?"

The glee club is benefiting his practicing this week. Many new voices have been added bringing the total enlistment up to approximately 85. As is the custom, the group is working to-ward the Christmas program of the semester . . . an entirely new item is being carried out for the program this year. We think you'll like it.

The orchestra is also tuning-up for its fall program . . . almost any Tuesday now you can hear the full symphony group.

Speaking of tunes of course maybe "Sunrise Serenade" . . . we hereby venture to predict that the tune will climb to the top of the hit parade. It has that certain "oomph" that catches your ear . . . and kids of "Pierre of the Saskatchewan" is another new number that you'll probably be hearing . . . the tune is from Saskatchewan and has a nice la-la-la-la thing on the end of the piece that adds the finishing touch. This was probably written to succeed "Sierra Sue."

"Love Is" and "Little Boy Blue" are two numbers that are coming field . . . possibly they won't make the top three of the nation, but they're nice to lend an ear to . . . Glenn Miller's arrangement of "Sunrise Serenade" and "Frenesie" is at the top of the list in anybody's dance orchestra class. . . . Johnny Long's arrangement of the oldster, "Blue Skies" . . . is worth your nickel on any

Feminity Went Out With Days Of Chivalry

Order Reverses As Girls Take Up Techniques Of Courting

By PAULINE DALE

When Hugh Hefner inaugurated the final bud of chivalry, the angelic sweetness of feminity began to wilt. Hefner's club was the first corker root of mankind began to look for something to keep the lowly civilization and deemed it wiser to cloak her natural heritages and etherealness charms in an armor of masculinity and independence. She immediately left the realm of traditionalized environment and dared to challenge the strongest in the battle for supremacy.

For woman has changed Her attitudes and habits—her desires are no longer those of the gentle, submissive, home-loving, subservient matron of the household. They have become those of the aggressive, ambitious, and independent woman of the business world. They have been accentuated by the desire for recognition, for power for self-gratification, for success in the world and in the family.

Her tactics have changed. No longer does she employ her feminine wiles to ensnare the minds of the heads and hearts of simple man. Time was when a mere bit of feminine flattery would cause his helmet—could inspire a man to bow—would cause a man's heart to take a lace handkerchief full of cloth and risk stocking to move him. White Welcomes F Club Members

Group Adopts Official Garnet Blazer For Letter Winners

The F Club of Florida State College for Women had the honor of being the first organization on campus to use the club room of the Student-Alumnae building at its first business meeting of the current year Monday night. Nancy White, president, called the meeting to order with a welcome for all members.

The "goats" of last spring presented a present to their "goat mother," Brenelle Mobley, in token of their appreciation of her guidance through their period of trial as "goats." Florend Brown, chairman of the "goats," made the presentation, which was an official F Club pin and a Mother Goose book.

The first business of the year concerned the blazers which the club is adopting as official blazers for the wearers of the F. The blazer is of garnet wool or flannel and trimmed with gold cord. The club emblem, designed by Beryl Mitchell, is printed on the pocket. A committee of three was appointed to be responsible for the blazers. The members of the committee are Nelle Loylee, Stella Valentil, and Merle Andrews. The official club pin and also dismissed and a motion was passed that no one but F Club members, or persons who have permission from the F Club will be allowed to buy an F pin from the bookstore.

The Club voted to supply all the Odd-Even sports leaders with uniform roll books for each sport so that the confusion of who has reported to practice and how many times may be avoided by WAA and F Club.

After a discussion of tapping the meeting was adjourned.

Outing Leaders Announce Plans

All Students Are Urged To Enter Into All Club Activities

As special projects this year, the Outing club will draw up maps of camping places around Tallahassee and compile a number of camp menus available to prospective campers. Frances Mc-Kay, chairman of the club.

Among the outings on the program are a moonlight horseback ride, a hayride, a trip to Wakulla Springs, a bicycle ride, a moonlight hike and supper, a trip to St. Marks, week-ends at camp, canoe races on Lake Bradford and a canoecade.

The executive council urges members of the student body to make any suggestions they wish. Every student is eligible for membership in the Outing club and is invited to participate in all the club's activities. However, as the number in the club who can go on each outing is limited, those who sign up first will go.

Further announcements of the first outing, to be given on October 5, will be placed on the bulletin board in the lower floor of the Westcott building.

Members of the Outing club committee are Peaches McKay, chairman, Mary Gray Holderman, Marion Webster, Sarah Murphy, Jane Telford, Martha Twitty, Elizabeth Jefferes, Betty Sue Seawell, Tommie Larrick, Ethel Brown, Ginger Orme, and Charlotte Cooper. Miss Rebecca Averill is faculty sponsor of the group.

Cracked ice will emit glows and flashes of light if cold enough, according to Frances O. Wick of Vassar college.

College Girl Crosses the Ocean With Cherokee Indian Students

Mary France- Oven Shares Cabin With "True Native American"

When I discovered that I was to cross the Atlantic Ocean with a full-blooded Cherokee Indian as my cabinmate, I felt a trifle unnervous. Unfortunately I was under the impression, an inspresion which for many Americans share today, that Indians are vicious, crafty people who are not to be trusted in any great extent. I even had mental pictures of my waking up some night to find a tommyhawk being thrust menacingly at my innocent head. However, as soon as I met seventeen year old Sally Thompson, I remembered my manners and friendly. I was amazed at Sally's easy personality and fine ever-present poise, for I had supposed that all Indians were shy and reserved. During the first two days of the voyage, Sally showed signs of being a bit ill, but I was concerned since she was the only Indian in a party of six girls, but when we became acquainted with each other, this feeling seemed to disappear entirely.

As a cabinmate I found Sally to be most congenial. Since we kept all our baggage in the stateroom with us, we had very little space in which to move around freely. Sally was very careful not to crowd me, and frequently apologized when she thought she was doing so. Her clothes were not given a second thought, but combine never were, so neither of us felt ill at ease. Formalists.

Because our boat was an English liner, most of the perfumes, souvenirs, and candies sold on it were made in England. Sally was particularly fond of a certain kind of chocolate which contained raisins and nuts, and ate it frequently, too frequently in fact. At first I thought it rather amusing the way she would come into the cabin several times each day and bring me little her bunk to munch on the candy which she loved so well. She would sometimes eat as many as three bars at one time.

However, when Sally began to miss meals because of eating too much chocolate, I no longer saw humor in the situation, but began to worry about her health instead. I could endure the growing anxiety no longer when Sally ate neither lunch nor dinner one day and then told me sheepishly not to worry about her being hungry because she had already eaten eight bars of her favorite candy and a father large apple. Our chaperone hard of this, and immediately summoned Sally for a combined lecture and scolding on the subject of th.. value of eating proper meals. After this lecture my little Indian friend did not abandon her chocolate entirely, but her daily supply of it decreased considerably.

Sally was a very good conversationalist, and was usually surrounded by a group of people who enjoyed her company very much. I liked to wait up on the deck at night with my cabinmate until the rest of our party had retired and then talk to her about herself and her people. We pushed our deck chairs together, and while we both looked out over the water, Sally would tell me many interesting things I had never heard about the Indians. She described the wealthy ones in Oklahoma, how they would buy beautiful new houses, and after having lived in them several months, would pitch tepees in the front yard and move into them. Sally was not one of this group, however, as I soon found I learned. When she was ten years old her father was murdered, and Sally's mother, left with no means to support all five children, Sally was sent to an orphan's home. I noticed an element of bitterness in Sally's voice as she spoke of her father's death. He was shot and robbed one Saturday night as he was coming home from town. Sally, the oldest child in her family, related to Mrs. Thompson that night when her father failed to come home. She told me that she sensed something wrong had happened to her father, and was not very surprised when an ambulance brought hi' body home early the next morning. Someone attempted to kill him once before." Sally told me calmly. "We think we know who it was, but we can fturnish any definite proof. Anyway I was sent to a home for orphans a few days later, and I've lived there ever since."

The morning after this conversation with Sally, our chaperone informed me that living in an atmosphere of poverty had caused Sally to miss learning the value of money. She knew the exact pieces of money as being nickels, dimes, etc., but she did not know how much each was worth. A feeling of pity touched me as I looked at a heard my seventeen year old Indian friend tell the purser, "I want five dimes for these letters, please. How many nickels will that take?"

she wants my position, she'll have to put me out first. And you can bet your bane sweet life she won't have an easy job doing it."

But the little woman won't be discouraged. She dismissed with a snap of her fingers and a haughty toss of her head the entire superiority of man and dies in with tooth and nail—the latter being real and painted.

Sophomore Tickets Go On Sale Tuesday

Sophomore picture tickets for the Flastacoma will go on sale Tuesday, October 1, in the lower floor of the Westcott building. Two weeks later junior pictures will be sold. There will be no ticket sale after Christmas.

There has been some misunderstanding concerning what students should wear to have their annual pictures taken.

Wear a dark dress of a solid color.

Don't:

Wear a figured dress.

Wear an ordinary washable shirt.

Wear a sweater.

Wear jewelry.

The studio will have to send girls home to change if you are not wearing a dark dress. Wear a dress that could be considered dress parade borrow one.

Thank you.

Linn Announces Sophomore Aides

Appointees to Help Junior Counselors

Sophomore assistants, who will aid in the freshman orientation program now in progress, have been chosen for each junior counselor, according to Elisabeth Linn, freshman adviser.

In addition to helping the present counselors, these assistants are also being trained so that they will be able to perform their duties better next year if they should be named those selected to be junior counselors.

Chosen From Council

These sophomores were chosen from the Sophomore council, and from nominations made by last year's counselors. All students were approved by the dean's office.

Other duties of the assistant include helping with the freshman activities projects, conducting one of the regular group meetings and taking role at the special freshman class meetings. The first meeting since freshmen arrived was held yesterday at 1:30 in the auditorium.

The new assistants for the 1940-41 school year include: Mary Angus, Annette McParlin, Helen Benton; Betty Sue Kirkland, Mary Lils Bibb; Dot Nodine, Percy Cook Bibb Rogers, Peggy Thorton; Ruth Trott, Norma Lee McCree; Diana Vergvee, Elisabeth Ann Nancy Thomas, Jane Godby; Frances Fosdick, Audrey Bolton; Gertrude Hendrix, Nona Zewadski; Marie Manley, Clara Bassett; Joan Miller, Margaret Thomas.

ina that womanhood as formerly idealized (spirit of the hearth, spirit of the home) is the spirit of healing comfort, motherhood, sisterhood, neighborliness, kindness, charity) is forever gone?

It used to be that a man took the trouble to court a woman and to overcome every obstacle to win her. He would travel miles—all kinds of weather—to get to see the girl of his heart and to take her some token of his love.

Today, it is the woman who chases the man and bombards him with invitations and attentions. She calls for him in her car and brings him home, and even foots the bills.

This reversal of relationship is tending to rob each sex of its instinctive role. The man loses his importance—and the woman is just being naive to herself and to mankind when she wants to feel that she can behave "just like a man" and get away with it. What she really gets away with is all of her womanly charm and allure.

And she certainly stands less chance of attaining married. Everyone you just see a man falling in love with a female economists driver, or a physician, or an absent inventor, or a judge, or a juror, or a member of research or a scientist, or a financier, or a wonderful female athlete, or a police woman? Undoubtedly such a woman would be able to provide a large share of the family income, but who would want to live up to her more exacting demands?

The life of an American woman of four centuries ago might have been narrow, according to present-day standards. It was wide enough at that, to open up is heaven on earth. Then, mothers were mothers, and daughters were "sweet young things" who were guarded by chaperons whether they needed them or not. Daughter maintained her beauty and her social position even if mother secretly had to take in washing or scrub her own floors. And the head of the house could no more do without his spouse than he could without his jug of beer on Saturday night.

Today the daughter gets out and makes her own way, her own living, her own reputation—even though he be a three-cent piece of rotten reputation. And hubby? Well poor hubby gets along the best he can while mother is out in the world, late and soon, getting and spending, and laying waste her powers.

It has been due partly to education that this new status for woman has evolved. Through it many gateways have been opened unto women and new activities following the realization of their importance in relationship to community affairs, have invited participation. IRC Announces Theme For Year

Speakers, Discussions, Planned For Programs

International relations and their effect upon the United States of America, will be the general theme of the International Relations club discussions for the coming year. This was decided at the meeting Tuesday for old members.

Important outside speakers on pertinent subjects, round table discussion, book reviews, and magazine articles will be featured in the study of this problem of our country, Marie Manley, program chairman for the year, announced.

On September 30 there will be a meeting for all students who wish to join the IRC. This year every member who wishes to remain in good standing must not be absent from more than three of the meetings or more than six meetings during the entire year. All members are also required to pay their dues by a certain time.

intellectual and occupational activity, and have acquired a high degree of discrimination than was formerly exercised by them. Today, woman is not completely satisfied with a husband, a home and a horde of children. She wants a car, radio, a maid or three, and plenty of time to tend to her own affairs. If smothered, she leaves; if spoiled she's bored, she wants the bright lights of society. Certainly, neither she makes a very companionable helpmate.

On the other hand, masculine laxity in this matter, perhaps has made it easy for the unrestrained rushing for the supposedly golden mine of "equal rights" so anything else. And in the end, man may find that the hand which he so generously extended has been completely chewed off.

For women are not adventurers They are organizers. Women are the intermediators. They are the potential perpetuators of civilizations. They represent what

Campus Project Begins Drive To Aid Britain

'Bundles For Britain' Will Gather Money And Clothing

YWCA Will Open Classes For Volunteer Knitters

At the first group meeting last Tuesday, the campus "Bundles for Britain" drive, represented by students, faculty members, and alumnae, made plans to gather money and recondition clothing as well as to knit new articles.

Dr. Marion Hay, college chairman, has arranged to have the classroom on the third floor of the Student-Alumnae building kept open from 4:30 to 6:30 o'clock Monday through Saturday of each week, beginning next Wednesday. In this room, all those interested will be able to gather, knit, and mend used clothing. The YWCA will take charge of the latter.

Knitting Classes Begin

Those who cannot knit will be instructed by alumnae. Needles and yarn will be furnished, but it is hoped that girls will bring their own. Those who wish to give clothing are asked to bring their contributions to the work room between 3:30 and 6:30 o'clock or to go to Mrs. Collins' 205 education building. Money gifts will be accepted in the committee which will turn them over to the organization to buy yarn at cost.

In outlining plans for aid to Britain, Dr. Hay explained that we do not intend to conflict in any way with any local welfare drives, but that "Bundles for Britain" was more of a supplementary service which claimed attention in addition to local measures.

Her statement which was made at the initial campus meeting of the drive, indicated that the majority of the students will welcome an opportunity to contribute an hour or two of time each week to aid the immediate victims of war in Great Britain. The association of alumnae and students in such a worthwhile undertaking will be to the best mutually beneficial and engrossing.

Dean of Music Announces Opening of Record Room

The record room in 133 West-test building, containing files of Florida state symphonies from early radio broadcasts to more recent will be opened to students again this year, Miss Ruth Bampton Baker, dean of the school of music, announced in convocation Tuesday.

The record room is scheduled to be open on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock. Mary Reddick will be in charge of these evenings and will play whatever numbers those present prefer to hear. Students are also welcome tomorrow from 3 to 4 o'clock, when the first session will be open on Saturday afternoon hereafter will be decided by attendance.

Chairman

Dr. Marion Hay, professor of education, is collier chairman of the "Bundles for Britain" drive. Under her direction the grass will radius student and faculty aid in gathering money, reconditioning clothing, and knitting new articles.

Class Approves Aiding Britain

Six In Group of 24 Fear Germans Will Invade United States

If one class is at all typical of student opinion on this campus, Britain has the sympathy of the majority of the Florida State collegiates

In a questionnaire filled out in a junior class composed of 24 members, 21 of the group expressed approval of a program offering aid to Great Britain short of war. Three of these favored military aid to the island kingdom.

Only six of the group considered aid inadvisable. All of the United States a real danger, although 11 thought Nazi propaganda and Nazi sympathy in United States especially hazardous to American democracy.

Sixteen of the girls said that they were not willing to sacrifice themselves of their desc ones for the cause England represents. The only pacifistical banner still flew high with 11 of the group upholding the sweeping remote from European affairs.

Only two of the group favored using the American navy to stop Japanese expansion in the Far East, while 18 girls took the stand that the United States should not all means short of war to resist Japanese expansion in the Far East

Glamour Speeds In on "Red" As Freshmen Parade New Fads

Glamour has hit the campus full force—1946 different brands of cosmetics are on sale in typical of salesmanship behind it to push it over.

Freshman will please not read the following statement: The general consensus of opinion seems to be that we have an exceptionally glamorous group of freshmen this year.

There seems to be no end to the color combinations to be seen. Everywhere one looks, she is invariably "struck" by a new fad combination. The most vivid siren red combined with a far from desirable yellow particularly, seems to have gained wide favor for campus wear. And of course all good college girls now that it's practically one of the cardinal sins to wear colors which clash or harmonize.

And the shoe styles—why, my dear there's simply no limit. so long as they are gathered about the bosoms with long, full sleeves. It also seems that a great many of the students came prepared for cool weather or are trying to protect the remains of their coveted summer tans, for perhaps they've heard they are pretty knees (though we doubt that); nevertheless, knee-length socks are being worn in various colors which are far from drab.

Then there's the grandest array of jewelry—ranging from a Tom Thumb size rocket to the latest fads of spoons which have spoons on the wrist or ankle. The costume jewelry this year seems to be very few requirements: it must be large, heavy, ornate, and at least be noisy enough to distract the professors' attention long enough to make them lose their trains of thought twice during every class period Intricate cry out for the dare of silence in the nature of bands miniature knitting needles with balls of yarn

Liddell Publishes Latin Translation

Philosophy of Nicholas Is Subject of Book

"De Docta Ignorantia," a translation of the fifteenth century Latin of Nicholas of Cusa, will be published by Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, head of the department of philosophy and religion. The book is one of a series to be brought out by the Marquette university press. The translation has been sent to the press but is not due to be out before several months yet.

The philosophy of Nicholas bridges the apparent gap between the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. Dr. Liddell said about the significance of the book. "The distinguishing feature of medieval philosophy is the grounding of all knowledge in authority, whereas, of course, the Renaissance movement of the period distinctly marks the rise of the principle of authority and the freedom of research."

Dr. Liddell stated that Nicholas was a devout and active churchman, who had implicit religious faith in reason in such a way that he opened the way for the development of learning in science and the development of man in full freedom.

Speaker

Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, professor of history, will be speaker at sneak investiture, October 23, at this time sophomores dressed in white carry the caps of their seniors. Seniors and Council places these mortar boards on the heads of the seniors as they cross the stage.

Browsing Room Opens Programs

Informal Discussions Will Be Feature Of New Plan

Special programs in the browsing room on Friday evenings will be an innovation in the library this year, according to the committee of librarians in charge, Miss Sara Graham, Dr. Linda Gordan and Miss Velma Oaten.

In order to stimulate interest in the browsing room, short talks, book discussions, and reviews will be given weekly. The room is open for recreational reading Friday from 4:30 to 6 o'clock and 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock; Saturday from 1:30 to 6 o'clock; Sunday from 1:30 to 6 o'clock.

An informal open house tonight will inaugurate the series of Friday night informals.

Everything in the room was a gift. Classes have given money for all the furniture and 1939 for books. The class of 1939 gave the first furnishings and in 1938 the CCA gave $200, the first gift for books. This voluntary interest on the part of the students is suited in a gift of $5,000 from the Carnegie corporation for books.

In the collection are illustrated editions of favorites and new fresh copies of new books to colorful bindings.

Which? Career Or Marriage

Are girls less interested in marriage and the family in the past few years? Is the career now the "thing" or is the home the ultimate goal of every college girl's hopes and fears?

In a recent poll it was found that 38 per cent of the girls in the United States entered college to prepare themselves for marriage; in the graduating class of Florida State college in 1938 61.5 per cent of the seniors had taken the course Marriage and the Family taught by Dr. Coyle Moore.

This year, 18 juniors and 27 seniors plan to take the same course. Last year there were as many as 70 students registered; the year before 115 were interested. Evidently college girls are becoming more interested in careers than in marriage, or they already know all about marriage and the family

In addition to working on family budgets, the class discusses bases and characteristics on which selections are made in husbands mates. The things a man wants his wife to possess and characteristics a woman wants in a husband are often points of controversy Problems of courtship and early and early adjustments in marriages are discussed. Parenthood problems, home duties, relations with grandparenthood, are other questions studied.

Sophomore Council Plans Party

Thirty-eight sophomore council girls attended a hamburger fry held in Gaines Woods on September 26 Starting at Odd senior at 5:30 o'clock, entertainment. Ella Maude Jones, sponsor of the council, was present. Jane Waltz was in charge of the outing.

Which Is Your Favored Man, F. Roosevelt or W. Willkie?

Flambeau Initiates Straw Poll To Discover How Political Wind Is Blowing On Campus

Whom do you want for president of the United States? Do you support Roosevelt or do you support Willkie? With November 4 drawing nigh, the Flambeau editors want to know the pulse of student political thought.

It is not that a poll of this campus would mean much to the outside world, not that Roosevelt or Willkie could lean back with a sigh of relief if a majority of this student body cast a straw vote for him. not that as Florida State goes—so goes the nation; it is just that it would be interesting to know how the ball is rolling here.

The reader will find in this issue a ballot on which the reader only check her preference of the presidential candidates. This ballot is to be filled out and dropped into the Flambeau box in the Westcott building before Thursday. Results will be compiled and published in next week's Flambeau.

This method of balloting leaves much to be desired, perhaps, as to voter. There will be no possible check on the validity of the ballot. The blind method used on ballots in the slot for Roosevelt, while for Willkie the government can do the same for him. Yet, as this is only a straw vote there is no percentage in such foul play.

The Flambeau editors hope this poll will receive the support of the student body because they plan a series of such polls on subjects of equal importance. Should the venture face the fate of the Literary Digest polls, they will feel imperative to withdraw from competition with Dr. Gallup.

This poll on presidential candidates is planned now, according to the editors, because whereas other college news items regarding Willkie and Roosevelt clubs, etc., is in no way of value as comparative strength of the two candidates on this campus.

County Welfare Conducts Drive

Lynn Has Charge of Work Of Solicitation On Campus

With a goal of $18,000, the Leon County Welfare association ends its annual drive for funds Wednesday year tomorrow. The drive follows Webster week.

Representatives from all civic, religious and philanthropic organizations have been working during their share in soliciting funds for the week. This year they say they would rather see a great number of people contributing dimes in a large sum from a few individuals.

Miss Elizabeth Lynn is in charge of the drive on the campus. It is stated that during the first day of the drive over $1,000 had been received. Other faculty members working for the drive's association are: Mr. J. O. Kellum, Miss Eleanor Mizelle, Miss Sarah Herron, Dr. Harry DeGraff, and Miss Georgia McCorkle and Miss Esther H. Rodek.

The money is used for providing food, clothing, medicine, medical aid and hospitalization for needy residents of L...n county. Emergency cases help will be given to transients.

Chemistry Group Hears McClendon

Gamma Sigma Epsilon Makes Year's Plans

The first meeting of the Beta Gamma chapter of Gamma Sigma Epsilon, national chemistry honorary, featured as principal speaker Dr. Vernon Smith McClendon, instructor of chemistry and physical science. Dr. McClendon described 7,238, a recent discovery of modern chemistry which is said to be extremely important in the industrial and chemical world.

Other business presided over by the president of the local chapter, Lester Howe, included plans for a joint meeting with the Gamma Sigma Epsilon chapter at the University of Florida as well as plans for the tapping of new members soon.

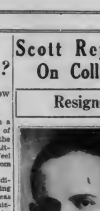
Members attending the meeting yesterday afternoon at the Sigma Kappa house were Dr. Lallah Lewis, professor of chemistry and head of the department; Virginia Horne, Margarete Winter, Mary Elizabeth Case, Ruth Williams, and Linnie Lou Gautier.

Students Discuss Professors In Secrecy of Bull Sessions

Investigation Reveals Qualities Pupils Want to Find In Their College Teachers

"Don't they think we ever have anything else to do?" This most common complaint heard frequently in bull sessions is the key which opens wide the floodgate of criticism on four hundred professors upon the college professors, as students express their attitudes toward their courses.

What have they done to deserve such a great amount of this question may easily be followed by another: What haven't they done?



To answer to careful questioning regarding this issue students demand that teachers give something more than just formal classroom attention. Both of them sometimes seem to have the idea that as soon as the bell of dismissal rings their relations with each other cease. Students are beginning to realize that complete cooperation cannot exist without some mutual understanding. This understanding can be developed only through a mutual berkground brought about by carrying interest over from the classroom to campus life. "For how else can problems be understood and discussed when one side is entirely ignorant of the issue," they ask.

Such a great many "gripes" are continually being voiced about Florida State's profs that it is to be noted that FSCW students do not permit outsiders this privilege. Is it possible in become a part of an institution without feeling a certain degree of pride for it and for what it stands? Teachers who apparently neglect personal acquaintance desire and sense of pride in the minds of many. They insist that the professional teach-

The astronomy club will hold its first fall meeting next Wednesday night at 9 o'clock in 104 Westcott. All students who are interested are invited to attend.

Miss Elizabeth Lynn, faculty adviser, states that the only requirements for membership are an interest in the organization and a willingness to subscribe to some reputable astronomical magazine.

There are two meetings a month, one of which is devoted to observation of the work and the other to planned programs.

Governor Cone Appoints Another Live Oak Man To Office

Suwanee Editor Resigns Under Rush of Business

T. T. Scott of Live Oak will replace Charles P. Helfenstein, also of Live Oak, on the board of control, according to word received today from the Governor's office.

Scott was appointed by Governor Fred P. Cone on Monday and, according to the state of officials, has accepted the post, although the commissioner has not as yet been drawn up.

Helfenstein Resigns

The resignation last week of Charles P. Helfenstein, who has served on the board for the last three years and whose term was not to expire until June, came as a surprise to most students and faculty members. He gave as his reason for resignation, a rush of business such that it was impossible for him to attend board meetings.

Editor Well-Known

Helfenstein is well - known among students of this campus as a frequent visitor to Journalism classes. He is also the Suwanee Democrat, it was he who introduced Walter B. Pitkin, author of "Life Begins at 40," when he spoke here last year.

The board of control serves the institutions of University of Florida, FSCW, Florida State School for Boys and Florida State College for Negroes. The personnel of the board will take place on the first Monday after the first of this month.

This board is the controlling body of the institutions, passes on scholarships, awards, budgets, personal salaries, and other matters.

R. J. Ashe of Jacksonville is chairman of the group. Other members of the board are: W. K. Palmer, of Ocala; R. H. Gore of Ft. Lauderdale, and N. B. Jordan of Quincy.

Phi Alpha Theta Plans Announced

Programs Will Feature Well-Known Speakers

Plans for the year were discussed at the first meeting of Phi Alpha Theta, national history honorary, last Thursday night.

The program for this year, according to Betty Hollenbeck, president, will include several well-known speakers from Tallahassee and from out of town.

During the meeting a resolution was passed to affiliate with the honorary debate society by planning for a debate which tournament.

Phi Alpha Theta plans to subscribe to two history magazines, The Historian and Amer-Asia, which will be placed in the library for the benefit of all students.

Special committees for the year have been chosen. These include Miss Tryon and Betty Hollenbeck, program; Miss Pike, Muriel Boyles, program; Selma Cohen, Mary Ann Anderson, freshman tea; and Margaret Marie Sparkman and Betty Wilkinson, revision of the initiation service.

Guest speakers for the monthly programs and plans for moving into the Alumnae building next semester will be the only history honorary during the year. On November 7 Alpha Theta will honor the outstanding students in freshman and sophomore history classes with a tradicional tea.

Those present at the meeting were: Dr. Annie M. Popper, assistant professor of history; Miss Florence R. Tryon, instructor in history; Mrs. Herman Kurz, Selma Cohen, Margaret Marie Sparkman, Muriel Boyles, Betty Hollenbeck, Betty Wilkinson, and Patsy Holbert.

Harvard Man Interned

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—(ACP)—At least one Harvard graduate is in a Canadian prison camp. He is Ernst (Putzi) Hanfstaengl, former Nazi foreign affairs chief and friend of Hitler, who at the outbreak of war was interned in Montreal, where he was taken the week of his whereabouts has been revealed by his son, Egon Hanfstaengl, now a Harvard sophomore.

YWCA to Show Fall Fashions

Students Model Campus Togs Next Thursday In Little Theater

A fashion show of campus togs from Vogue dress shop will be the main attraction on the program of the first YWCA meeting of the fall next Thursday at 5 o'clock in the Augusta Conradi theatre. Sara Duke Bryant and Mary Lou Atkinson will describe the personal appearance of the 16 student models.

Members and friends of the YMCA are invited to attend. Music and other arrangements are being handled by Tillie Van Brunt and Edith Pfarr.

With the adoption of a three-point program for the year, the YWCA, under the leadership of Mary Lois Thomas, is preparing for one of the most extensive years in its history. The three general aims of the organization are: to develop college vespers; to cooperate with the Red Cross; to encourage social service in this country.

Through the courtesy of radio station WTAL, Mary Lois Thomas and another officer will discuss the history, activities, and future plans of the organization October 14 from 3:15 o'clock in a special campus broadcast.

This year the annual retreat of the cabinet will be a joint retreat with the YMCA council of the University of Florida. On October 12 both groups will arrive at Camp Flaherty and begin a series of conferences and round table discussions. Upon the close of the program Sunday afternoon, the Gainesville group will return to Tallahassee with the YWCA cabinet, and the boys will conduct the weekly college vesper service on campus. The YWCA cabinet is led by Ann Leopold, president.

A special service of organ music will be the program of the Vespers this Sunday. Polly Venable and Mary Frances Ann in charge of arrangements.

Cotterill Asked To Sponsor Debating

Council Plans Program For Radio Broadcast

Dr. Robert S. Cotterill, professor of history, was chosen the new sponsor for the debate council to replace Dr. Vivian Richards, former assistant professor of history and political science. Miss Ruth Young, assistant professor of economics, has been authorized to act as chairman of the board with advisors for debating.

October 14, the debate council will present a half hour radio program at a round table discussion of the season's national question. Should the western hemisphere form a permanent alliance or union for defense against foreign aggression.

During the year the bi-monthly meetings of the club will include informal discussions, faculty speakers, and impromptu debates. Also the council will participate in a clash debate on a convocation program in conjunction with the Twenty-one club.

There are some mighty striking beams of light blazing from rinestoners of left hands this year—could it be that the conscription bill has hastened the engagements of so many of our fair number? Or is it perhaps that it just helps somehow to talk about an insurance dream man while all the time you know that Mother and Dad were going to give you a diamond for graduation on your birthday.

The general trend of hair-styling seems to cline to the long straight mode of previous seasons, though of course the top curl must be drastically rearranged every few days. The majority of hair ribbons and bows are of moderate size, but a few "mere bows" have appeared at times.

Do Florida Girls Want Roosevelt or Willkie for President?

Florida Flambeau seeks the answer to the question, "Who will preside over the destinies of the United States of America for the next four years?" Until this week-end, we have little with which to judge the sentiment on the campus over Florida State college girls would prefer in the White House. The poll will end before Thursday, October 10, in time for next week's issue of the Flambeau.

Advisory Body Meets Weekly For Check-Up

This year marks the first time that the orientation committee has held group meetings at regular bi-weekly intervals.

The purpose of this committee, consisting of 11 students appointed by Elizabeth Bird, is to hear complaints and criticisms, to check up on the work of the freshman counselors, to coordinate the entire orientation program in order that they may know what the chairmen are doing, and to maintain the general morale.

Composing the committee are Avis Tucker, chairman of the student orientation, who directs the day student council and helps with their program; Blanche Saul, chairman of off campus orientation, who directs the off campus council and all social and formal meetings; Mary Carlton, chairman of transfer orientation, who directs the entire transfer program; Kathleen Mallory, who, aided by Katherine Camp, is in charge of freshman letter; Kitty Jo Hickman, who will conduct the freshman election which will take place December 3-10; and Betty Nicholson, who has charge of selecting sophomore assistants and compiling a list of their duties. Lenore Pruitt, who is secretary of orientation.

Other members include Gene Brown, chairman of attendance, who makes the seating arrangements for freshman convocation and checks to see that all attend these meetings. Elaine Hundley, mark, who is in charge of the literature having helped compile the freshman bulletin and who will help revise the freshman counselors' manual; Edith Williams, who is in charge of keeping the orientation groups constant, by keeping track of all who have moved, withdrawn, and registered late. Mona Bess, who is the social chairman, keeping accounts of freshman activity pouns. Freshmen are allowed to enter only those activity so that more students may participate in extra-curricular activities.

Records Bring Home to Girls

"I sang this song in church this morning, and now I'm going to sing it for you," were the words spoken in her mother's familiar voice which thrilled Harriet Benson one cool autumn day, as she set her victrola needle to the first of the thin white records she received by mail.

"This recording was made in the Benson studio, and the 34-321" added the voice of the announcer, "is number 11. It is especially dedicated to my sister, Miss Harriet Benson, business manager of the Flambeau at Florida State college for women."

How would you like to have your family intimately conversing and laughing for you in your college bedroom? No doubt, you would be as excited as Harriett it all happened this way—

Marjorie Benson, alumna of the class of '38, and Harriet's sister, sent the Benson family a recording from California in which she told them it was her first record and asked them to make some. So the Bensons did. As a result, Daddy Benson made a record like Harriet, her mother sang a special hymn, and her sister Betty, 8, sang a couple of favorites. Duplicate sets of records will be recorded equally well, and of course the work of Mr. Benson's studio in Lakeland is not complete without its announcer "Brother Bill" and its accompanist, Grandmother Benson.

The records are small, white discs, about 8 inches in diameter. There are six in all, and each is labeled as to selection.

From the store, "Tubby's" mother tells her experience of winning two prizes at that store's anniversary sale. She made the record to send a background of clatter in the place of business.

Mohr Describes Canal Danger

In the international light, a letter from the Panama Canal Zone from Judy Mohr, sophomore last year, came like a small time bomb.

Judy wrote to Louise Burger to mention the fact that she can't come back to Florida State college. She is remaining in Panama, Judy has taken and passed a Civil Service examination and hopes to been working for the government. Concerning the war and the atmosphere in Panama, we print in part, Judy's letter:

"I suppose it's not in Tallahassee now, but not half as hot as it is here. It's what you call a case of hot—what do you think of the war? Horrible, isn't it? Do you think we still rumors going around that we'll have to get out of here soon. The government is making air raid stations and tunnels to store ammunition and other necessary precautions. If we get in this war, I'm going to be one of the wilds of Darien and stay there thinland must hold out. But it looks bad.

"The refugee ship 'Rangitiki,' was here. Some of the children on board bound for New Zealand. We drove down to see them. I went on the ship and ended up by taking a bunch of the children for a ride. Their fathers were in the RAF."

Deviney Given New Alligator

Miss Edza May Deviney, professor of zoology has added to her collection of "pickled beasts" a real Florida alligator The alligator was given to Miss Deviney by Miss Rachel Pitchford, publicity secretary

Miss Pitchford, Miss Olive Cross, and Miss Lucretia Ilsley were on their way for a cool dip in Lake Bradford when about two miles from camp Miss Pitchford spied a dead alligator on the side of the road. She immediately stopped to look over the situation. After careful contemplation the beast was brought back for Miss Deviney to pickle.

Miss Deviney now has a three foot long alligator in a round wooden box in the zoology room. But it's hard to get a look at it as Miss Deviney says the scene is none too sweet as yet

Psychologist Claim IQ Papa Could Class Son

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—(ACP)— Like father, like son—that's the pet theory of Dr. Walter B. Pillsbury, University of Michigan psychologist, who says the father's IQ could be used for the son's college entrance examination.

The psychologist found in a statistical study that the difference between the father's grades and his son's marks is comparable to the relative scholastic achievements of the son in high school and college.

Dr. Pillsbury also found that brothers and sisters of the same family generally make the same grades, and he attributes the similarities to inheritance and not environment.

He concludes that the government should give financial aid to intelligent couples so that they might produce intelligent offsprings.

Iowa Pupils Get Lessons By Listening to Radio

AMES, Iowa—(ACP)—Going to school by radio no longer is a fantasy to Iowa high school students.

Hundreds of them put aside their books every Monday afternoon for radio classwork. The series, "It's Your Future," is being broadcast from WOI, Iowa State college station, by the department of vocational education.

Its purpose is to acquaint high school students with vocational opportunities. Vocational guidance speakers, leaders in their fields, are interviewed by Prof. A. H. Hausrath.

Utah Commissioners Favor Wider Training

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah— (ACP)—The Utah association of civil service commissioners believes colleges and universities in the state should offer training courses for policemen and firemen.

Their basis for this conclusion is that such public servants receive larger salaries than teachers.

F Club Chooses Thirteen Goats

Forty-Eight Girls Now Included In Group

The F club, athletic honorary, which is chosen from girls who have been awarded an "F" by WAA, has recently tapped 13 new members. This will bring the total membership to 48.

F club goats tapped last Friday during the noon hour are: Ethel Crown, Jane Dibble, Denora Ecker, Mary Gray Holderman, Mary Alice Kirschner, Ovelia Linton, Betty Lang, Bett Oxer, Pat Patterson, Minnie Ratliff, Ann Sanders, Marion Swanson, and Suzanne Wilson.

Any girl is eligible for the organization who can meet the requirements and standards set by the F club, which include sportsmanship, cooperation, self-control, and perseverance A point requirement and a C average are other requisites necessary for active membership.

A student must automatically gain a total of 26 points to be awarded an "F." Points are allotted as follows: Twelve practice points on the basis of two a week for six weeks and may not be made up. A girl must attend eight practice periods to be eligible for Odd-Even or class teams. Class games shall count one point and Odd-Even two points regardless of placing in tournament. Six of the 26 points must accumulate from actual play in games—one Odd-Even game and one class game in each of two sports combined. For participation in a game, a C average is required, and A health.

Points may be carried over from one sport to another until "F" is won. A person may engage in two sports in the same semester but not in the same season. A girl who participates in the major and minor exhibitions of extra-curricular modern dance for one semester shall receive one-half the necessary points for obtaining an "F"

Old members of F club include: Merle Andrews, Peggy Barker, Frances Battle, Kitty Lou Baughn, Floread Brown, Gene Bryan, Margaret Clements, Anette Cone, Frances Eckland, Elizabeth Ezzard Marion Freeling, Starling Hall, Cecelia Harper, Meta Helms, Betsy Ross Howe Myrtis Louque, Nellie Loyless, Alice Ludlam, Peaches McKay, Mary Jane Medlin, Josephine Miles, Beryl Mitchell, Brenelle Mobley, Elizabeth Moore, Paulette Nolan, Madge Overcash, Avis Tucker, Stella Valenti, Diana Versowe, Lucile Walker, Bernice Walton, Cornelia Watson, Marion Webster, Janet Wells, Nancy W. Good Ship Gym Sails Tonight

Ship Ahoy! Avast, ya landlubbers! Anyone pining for a salty sea cruise should make an appearance at the S. S. Gymnasium tonight at 8 o'clock. Travelers may register for the voyage in the purser's office, which was once the lobby of the gymnasium.

The regular Play Night has been literally "carried out to sea." An elaborate floor show has been planned for the entertainment of the voyagers, and the remainder of the cruise will be devoted to dancing, badminton on the upper deck (the little gym), ping pong in the lounge, (the lobby) and other sports throughout the ship (gymnasium).

Red and blue lighting under the balcony will add to the gaiety of the evening, as time arrives for the "moonlight dance." Then lights will be dimmed and a spotlight will play over the couples.

The nautical theme in the decorations of the auditorium will be carried out in iron anchors and hemp rope along the balcony sides, a platform roped off with a ship's helm at the announcer's place, life preservers and a set of bells to signal each dance.

The entertainment program includes several exhibition dances and musical numbers highlighted by songs by Martha Stroberg. Hostesses on deck are to be members of the Play Night committee, headed by Floread Brown. Ruth Torres is supervising the decorations and Nancy Lee Doggett is in charge of entertainment.

Those who will serve as hostesses are: Carese Brown, Minnie Ratliff, Mary Lou King, Margaret Carter, Pearle Tyler, Louise Crosby, Suetta Blanding, Sarah McIntosh, Jean Wood, Paulette Nolan, Tam Thomas, Virginia Greene, Doris Knowles, Nina Pearl Bush, Eda Stitch, Virginia Dunn, Charlotte Cooper, Mary Frances Adamo, Betty Lang, Marion Freeling, Virginia Monroe, Ruth Torres, and Vivian Adamo.

Dr A. O. DeWeese, director of university health service, said steady improvement has been indicated for 12 years.

Student Dietitions

Girls Learn To Sail At Flastocowo

Class Open To Students Who Like Boating

The physical education department is now offering a course in canoeing and sailing to anyone interested in learning either of these sports. The class goes to Camp Flastacowo the first and third Wednesdays and the second and fourth Tuesdays of the month at 4:30 o'clock. A fee of ten cents is charged for the truck and driver.

Anyone interested in taking canoeing adn sailing instruction should sign up on the swimming bulletin board in the basement of the gym not later than the Saturday preceding the week she wishes to go. The classes last until 6 o'clock.

The beginning canoeing class is taught by Denora Ecker, the advanced canoeing by Irene Premd, and sailing by Kitty Lou Baughn. About 40 girls have reported for the lessons so far.

University of Pennsylvania's first three football games in 1941 are against the Big Three: Harvard, Yale and Princeton.

Outing Club Postnones Trip to College Camp

The Outing club wil postpone its first outing, scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, until Sunday afternoon, Peaches McKay, chairman of the club, announced yesterday

Students who wish to attend the outing, and also those who wish to attend the moonlight hike and supper planned for October 18, may sign on the club bulletin board in the lower floor of the Westcott building.

Nine Minnows Join Tarpons

Swimmers Will Perform At University Homecoming

Nine minnows have been added to the Tarpon club after two weeks of tryouts. The new minnows are: Betty Bentschner, Laura Foote, Ann Peck, Celia Mangles, Irene Hoke, Emilie Gilbert, Nora Murphy, Dotty Mae Anderson and Ruth Boyd.

The minnows were chosen from approximately 120 girls who competed in the front crawl, the back crawl, the breast stroke, surface dives, and rhythm swimming.

Regular members of the club graded the girls on the form and proficiency of each stroke and dive Eliminations were made accordingly and final tryouts were held last Wednesday afternoon.

The club has accepted an invitation to give an exhibition at the annual University of Florida homecoming on Saturday morning, October 19. Katherine Rawls, famous swimming and diving champion and a former member of the club, will be present.

Members of the club who will take part in the exhibition are: Jean Hitchcock, Marcy MacIntosh, Nancy Lee Doggett, Mary Armes, Vivian Adamo, Denora Ecker, Irene Premd, Edna Earle Wilson, Patty Holbert, Frances Battle, Frances Eckland, Mildred Anderson, Marian Swanson, Betsy McMichael, Peggy Barker, Nancy Kulp, and Ruth Smith.

The exhibition will include a number of new formations which will be led by Frances Battle, Pat Holbert, and Nancy Lee Doggett. The formations are being kept secret as they will be used in the annual water pageant.

The formations committee composed of Frances Battle, Nancy Lee Doggett, Patty Holbert, and Miss Marjorie Mayer met on Wednesday night to discuss formations for the trip to Gainesville and for the Thanksgiving water pageant.

The theme of the pageant is traditionally kept secret until its performance for the parents on Thanksgiving night. Practices on these formations will begin next week, with a general practice on Tuesday at 4:30 o'clock, a special practice on Wednesday night at 8 o'clock, and a practice for minnows only on Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Lost! O Lost!

"Lost! O Lost!" No term better describes the college youth today than the plaintive, pitiful theme song of Thomas Wolfe.

And we are lost. We, the generation which has been looked to as the eternally effervescent spring of zestful thinking and cool, intellectual analysis, are wandering around aimlessly and apathetically in this strife-torn world, waiting for a stone, a leaf, a door" to be opened for us into the storeroom where life's mysteries are neatly filed away in metal cabinets.

After more than a decade of post-war, anti-propaganda propoganda, of vitriolic lessons in materialism, with concrete examples showing us how the Idealistic youth was duped in the last war, we are like a one-year-old contemplating his first step. Holding on to a nursery chair, we are afraid to step this way or that, fearing that we may be laughed at for our immature judgement. But even the baby has two advantages over us: his eagerness and his nursery chair.

Better we should be compared to the amoeba's spineless, jerking mass of protoplasm. Periodically from some of the braver points of our organism we extend a pseudopodia, only to draw it quickly for fear that we will be caught and pointed to as an example of stupid, emotional, idealistic youth.

So far this year the Flambeau has carried several editorials on the present-day situation in Europe—or should we say, in the the world. But any reader can easily see that these bits of student thought express no energetic belief in one thing or another. We don't want war, but we certainly aren't ardent pacifists. We don't like the idea of conscription, but not knowing exactly why, we neither fight it or support it. We laugh at the ideals for which some people say the United States was founded, but again we don't know why—that's just what the best authors, historians, and professors of the age have taught us in preparing us for our place in this wise "pre-war" generation. We gripe about the capitalist, but not hard enough to become communists. We gripe about race problems, but not hard enough to join forces and seek equal justice for the Negro, Jew, or Jap. We gripe about a lot of things, but never hard enough to stir us from our cozy chair next to the fire place.

Some of our older professors and friends, whom we have considered leaders in our ideal debunking education are now becoming alarmed to find that we are lost — without aim, without purpose, without ideals. They are surprised to find that "The Ramparts We Watch" either put some of us to sleep, made us walk out disgustedly, muttering, 'Ah! Such bosh!" or made some of us a little angry, in our characteristically languid manner, when we thought that "they're trying to put that same old stuff over on us."

Perhaps a few of us did faintly suspect that the movie had its point, that perhaps the United States—mess that it is—may soon become the last stronghold of some worthwhile ideals, but we were afraid to admit our hunches to ourselves, let alone our fellow students. And perhaps a few of us felt queer sensations traveling the length of our spine when the senator spoke his piece about the American ideals or when some scene was accompanied with rolling drums and a national anthem. But we who did feel those chills were sure to reprimand ourselves with "You little fool!" and resume our characteristically supine position.

—Sarah Worth.

Here's Work For You

It is with regret that the student body, especially the journalism majors who at various times have had contacts with the Live Oak editor, has heard of the resignation of Charles P. Helfenstein from the Board of Control. College girls have often learned the rudiments of newspaper work while subbing summers in the office of his Suwannee Democrat. His dry wit has charmed many students. We sincerely hate to see him sever this close connection with our school.

As the majority of the students will be unable to vote in the presidential election next month because of their age, the Flambeau has printed a ballot in this issue in an effort to give them an opportunity to indicate their choice between Democratic Roosevelt and Republican Willkie.

The poll is being conducted in an effort to see how Florida State college for women stands in the matter and it can only be effective if over three-fourths of the student body vote.

Therefore we urge you to give the five minutes of your time that it will take for you to cast your vote and drop it in the Flambeau box on the lower floor of the Westcott building.

Let's make it a 100 per cent vote.

"Bundles for Britain" committee will actually get under way knitting and mending Wednesday afternoon in the rooms set aside for the work on the top floor of the Student-Alumnae building. Now here is something concrete that students can do to help the suffering peoples of England. No student will be asked to give more than one hour of her time during the week, so there can be no real strain on anyone. A little from every one will add up to much.

As Dr. Marion J. Hay, college chairman of the work, says, "Bundles for Britain" is not competing with other relief organizations, only supplementing them. In one basic respect it differs from the Red Cross. The Red Cross relief is offered to all war-torn countries, while "Bundles for Britain," is expressly for the Britons.

Whether you can knit or not makes little difference. There will be experienced knitters in the work rooms at all times to teach the beginners, and they will show them how to make 12-inch squares which can later be joined for blankets. More experienced knitters will make sweaters, skull caps, etc. There is work for all, so don't hold back because you are afraid you are not skilled enough.

Red Cross work is also open for students. They, too, want clothing, work, and money. But besides this relief work, they are playing a large part in the preparation of the individual for national defense. With conscription now under way, our brothers and friends are discovering that army life is neither all work nor all play. There will be calls for instructors in swimming and the skills of life saving. For many years the Red Cross has been qualifying college students here and elsewhere as instructors in these subjects. There also will be calls for first aid instructors. That subject, too, has been a Red Cross course for many years among college students and others.

In this connection, a recent announcement by the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, U. S. navy, calls attention to the fact that individuals holding Red Cross standard first aid certificates may qualify in the Naval Reserve as hospital apprentices, first class; those holding advanced certificates may qualify as pharmacist's mate, third class; while holders of instructor's certificates from the Red Cross will be eligible for petty officer ratings as high as chief pharmacist's mate.

At present every effort is being bent to increase the Red Cross Nurses' Reserve so that, in case of need, naval and military hospitals will not be understaffed. At the same time there must be a great increase in the number of young women trained in home care of the sick and methods of preventing illness and its spread. In case of emergency, such as confronted this country during the great influenza epidemic of 1918, the services of these trained women may prove a most important factor in guarding our national health and wellbeing. In the Red Cross course in home hygiene and care of the sick, college women will find a valuable adjunct, not only in their desire to be of service to their country but in their later home and family life.

Still another field exists where the Red Cross and America's colleges and universities can work together to great advantage in national defense preparations. That is the field of volunteer service. For the past year a army of volunteers, now numbering more than half a million, has been at work producing garments and surgical dressings for use in European war zones. In case of national emergency affecting this country, this volunteer effort must be greatly expanded.

The inherent strength in a vast volunteer army, is beyond calculation. It is to the colleges and universities that the Red Cross looks for leaders in this great mobilization of humanitarian effort and all who have the ability owe it to their country, their Red Cross and themselves to offer their services for this important phase of national defense.

There are 3,721 Red Cross chapters. Each of these sponsors volunteer services and each offers free instruction in first aid, swimming and life saving, and home care of the sick. From November 11 to November 30 these chapters will conduct their annual Roll Call of members for the coming year. Chapters located in other college and university towns will make every effort to interest students not only in affiliating with the organization, but in those Red Cross activities that will help strengthen our country to meet any possible emergency.

America Threatened?

Japan this week has signed an alliance with Germany and Italy—an alliance which may be interpreted as a threat to the United States, intending to slow down the sending of aid to Britain. It is plain that the alliance means that if the United States becomes involved with any of the Axis powers, the three nations will stand together against her. If aid to Britain is increased so that the decision of the war is at stake, the members of the alliance may term it reason for a state of war between them and the United States. However, as long as Britain is fighting, Germany, Italy, and Japan wish to keep the United States neutral. If Britain fails, though, it will be a different story. If this were to happen there is a strong possibility that Japan would engage the United States in activity on the Pacific, leaving the Atlantic open to German attack. Hence the clamor for the two-ocean navy, resulting yesterday in the announcement of the plans for the organization of a naval force in the Atlantic, to be composed of 125 ships, to be commanded by Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis. This will be in addition to the present big fleet guarding the Pacific. England's navy has heretofore patrolled the Atlantic, but the time has come when the United States must depend on no one but herself for the protection of her shores.

The alliance also came to a decision about Russia: what areas she is to control and what areas will be under the control of the Axis powers, including an agreement on the disputed borders. It is believed that Russia has given her consent to this, but officially Moscow is silent.

When Winter Comes

During the month of August, 1,075 people were killed and 1,261 injured in London; in September there were 5,000 persons killed and 8,000 wounded. Winter is almost upon London, a city where increased and relentless air raids send men, women, and children scurrying to overcrowded air raid shelters to remain there in unsanitary surroundings for the better part of the night and finally to return — many of them — to what was once their home but now is a mass of broken, shattered stone and wood. "Join the army and avoid the war" is a frequent comment by London civilians.

But England is not sitting by doing nothing, for the best brains of the empire are united in the common purpose of alleviating the sufferings of her people. Plans to protect the civilians against the monstrous savage aerial warfare include the appointment of Ad-

Or Forever Hold Your Peace . . .

I want to ask the student body to look ahead ten years. I want to ask them to see FSCW as it will be then. An FSCW in which the social committee and other groups have completely oriented the students to their place on campus.

Everyone comes to the dining room in neat groups of ten, wearing hose and pumps, two meals a day, always neat and exact. Everyone speaks softly at the tables all is sweet and lovely. Students work as smoothly as machinery in all they do. No one is ever late, no one ever disturbed, no one ever controversial.

It's pretty, isn't it? All you can see is glass, smooth and clear, a surface so lacking in imperfections that the amazed outsider declares he has found a veritable sea of feminine pulchritude.

But can you see something else with me Can you see a student body so barren of ideas, of original thoughts, of worthwhile discussions that they are not women but robots? Can you see a forum group that does nothing but sit and smile at each other over the lovely job they've done?

If you can see it, you will look back with me, too. You will see a place where students talked and thought, their eyes brightening with new ideas, questions, exchanging of thoughts. You will see a place where students flocked 300 strong to listen, to talk, to argue, to propound. You will see a place where no one cared about hair-dos and hose on Wednesday because there was something else something vital, electric.

If you can see all this with me you can be sad with me. I do not say a rule causing us to wear hose on Wednesday nights will make mechanical dolls of us. But I do say that when we are not allowed to gripe about wearing hose on Wednesday night at a forum meeting we are started on the road to a mechanical doll student body, a mechanical campus. Only one brain will be needed there. That's the one that makes the rulings. We'll be the dolls that act them out

We can't help noting the original political button worn by one of our Willkie rooters. Does the pin say "Willkie for President"? Nope, it merely advises the world—in red, white, and blue—to "Make Roosevelt Ex-President."

And on the other side of the fence is the exchange that subscribes to calling the Republican candidate, "Dwindle Willkie."

Well, at least we didn't take sides.

A professor on campus has informed her classes that they shouldn't study from 4:30 to 6:30 o'clock in the afternoon and that any studying done after 10 o'clock at night is useless.

Maybe the studying is useless. We can't disagree with her there, and it sounds like a wonderful idea, but personally, we'd be trudging home to papa healthy, but not so happy, if we took her excellent advice.

We understand that the Florida Review is going to be the spittin' (and we do mean "spittin'") image of the Yellow Jacket. This makes us very unhappy—particularly when a friend of ours tells us of a freshman who said in a horror-stricken tone, "Did you see that damn in Collegiate Comebacks?"

Either way you look at it, modern youth is going to the dogs.

And a bunch of orchids to us all from the Mississippi State college reflector — we quote in full; it deserves it:

"Ye Old Ed had the privilege of visiting the campus of Florida State college for women tha past week-end and boy was I impressed with the set-up. Beautiful women, magnificent buildings and the beauty of the surrounding grounds go to make up one of America's number one college for women."

Now doesn't that sound appealing?

In one of our courses the other day we were comparing the nutritive value of milk and fountain drinks. Disregarding the vitamin's involved, we found both had more calories than we like to think about. We brooded on the subject, coming to the conclusion that,

Paper cups of Coke or milk—
Or anything one sips—
May be pleasant to the taste
But end up on the hips.

Maybe it's the new effort we're making this year to stay alert and so forth in classes, but we're continually being surprised by great and profound statements issuing from our professors. For example, "The girls entering college this year are coming here under entirely different circumstances than you (seniors present) did." "Check!" we say, "It rained our whole freshman year."

At Lehigh university the student gavel pounders are dubbed "The Cyanide Squad." On this campus one of our own BWOC'ers murmurs "A soft lie turneth away inquiry."

Comment on Careers for Women by Brilliant but Practical Alums

"Even my best friends tell me I shouldn't waste my talent by working in an office with fifty or so other typists—but really I prefer eating even three rather skimpy meals a day to starving in the process of setting the world on fire"—

Cynical words, but them's our sentiments, too.

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK

Doubly Locked

Contemporary Student Thought . . .

University of Kentucky at Lexington is the first college in the United States to have a building designed especially for the testing of air-craft motors. The only other similar laboratory, at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is designed principally for general automobile motors.

Axel Wenner-Gren, Swedish armaments millionaire industrialist, heads the Viking foundation which is financing the construction of the $80,000 building. Mawen Motor company of New York city will finance the operation of the laboratory. Testing will not be restricted to Mawen Motor company, however. All types of internal combustion and aviation motors ranging in size from 100 to 2,000 horsepower will also be included.

All equipment for the sound proof, air-conditioned building must be especially built. A single recording instrument will cost $6,000. Observers will be allowed to look through windows separating a 16 foot wide observation corridor from the research rooms.

The three research rooms for motor range in horsepower from 100 to 400 (ordinary training planes) and one large test room for engines from 400 to 2,000 horsepower.

The laboratory will be operated by a staff of 24 persons, and approximately eight junior and senior students from the mechanical and electrical engineering department will be employed for supplementary work on four hour shifts. Regular test classes will also be conducted in the laboratory.

Due to the international crisis and necessity of speedy home defense measures the construction will probably be completed and ready for occupancy by early December.

In a recent tabulation of press polls America's adult voting population favored conscription by 66 per cent. General opinion of those "in the know" believe, however, that if a similar tabulation were taken among college students, considerably less than two thirds would favor compulsory military training.

Lawson Robertson, Pennsylvania and Olympic track coach, does not believe that young men of today are ready for a war "They have the initiative, but not the endurance for fighting."

Burton K Wheeler, one of the principal senate opponents to the conscription and Montana's isolationist, probably influenced the thinking of many students with his two principal objections: "that conscription would destroy democracy in the United States, and that Hitler has no military designs on the United States."

Question: What topics would you like to have discussed in National Student Forum of America meetings this year?

In response to the above question, approximately 60 girls expressed varied opinions. Co-education leads the list as the most popular topic for N. S. F. A. discussion, with campus and world problems following in second and third places, respectively. Several students expressed desires to hear debates on "dressing-for-dinner," extra-curricula activities, love, and examinations The subject of allowing students to possess cars while in college was advocated by one girl, while another is hoping that student-faculty relations will be explained.

Lucy Cole is the donor of the latter topic. Suggestions for beautification of the campus, particularly the section behind Landis, and the value of extra-curricula activities are her other choices for NSFA discussion

Jean Cheyney: "Coeducation and dressing for dinner on Friday or Saturday nights instead of Wednesday are my choices for student consideration."

Jane Maguire: "Love, politics, and coeducation."

Lucille Walker: "I'd like to hear what the young people have to say about going to war. Do they want to? The legislatures have indirectly decided that we are going to war, but American youth have had nothing to say in the matter. What do the young people want along this line?"

Mary Jane Lambeth: "Coeducation."

Jean Hitchcolk: "Let's have a discussion on teaching the freshmen more about the traditions of Florida State college for women and less about its rules."

Frances Compton: "I think coeducation would be the most progressive topic to discuss."

Betty Davis: "Politics, the conscription bill, and the place women are expected to play in the U. S. defense program. We've heard about man's duty in his country's re-armament program, but what is woman's duty?"

Laura Bryan: "Coeducation."

Nellie Loyless: "Lately students and faculty members who want to use the school tennis courts have been forced to wait an inconveniently long time to obtain the courts for playing due to the fact that the townspeople are using them. I think college students and faculty members should be given first preference in regard to usage of the courts. Perhaps a committee could be arranged that would eliminate this hindrance either by directly asking the people to give up the courts when they are needed or by indirectly making some agreement with Tallahassee tennis fans as to specific hours when they might use the courts."

Betty Stark: "Something ought to be done or said about the abusive way in which girls treat the campus, such as writing on the walls in Landis telephone booths. I think this is worse than riding in a car without permission!"

Louise de Jarnette: "I'd like to discuss the lowering of the scholastic requirements necessary for a student to have unlimited cuts. The minimum for the unlimited cuts privilege used to be a 2.0 average but it has since been raised to 2.3. Why was this change made?"

Virginia H Jones: "That the social system which entails dressing for dinner on Wednesday nights should be changed to Friday or Saturday nights—that is the subject NSFA might debate."

Kitty Jo Hickman: "I think NSFA should talk about approaching legislation in the col-

"Where Do You Stand," is an open letter to American undergraduates, in the August Atlantic Monthly, written by Arnold Whitridge, professor of English at Yale university.

"During the past six months something has been happening on the campus that many of us who graduated 25 or 30 years ago cannot understand. You may not be startled by this discovery, but I assure you that we are, since we have always prided ourselves on being able to understand you a good deal better than our parents understood us. Now we are baffled. We want to know why it is that the undergraduates of Dartmouth, Yale, Harvard, Cornell, and other colleges as well, have petitioned the President not to intervene in Europe.

"The Daily Dartmouth warns its readers against the dangers of helping Finland. The Harvard Crimson, 'frankly determined to have peace at any price' raps Presidents Conant and Seymour over the knuckles for having spoken 'so soon and so early the words that may send to distruction the lives of their charges.' The Yale News surveys the conflict in Europe with Olympian detachment and on September 29, 1939, found that 'there is no preponderance of good or evil on either side.'

"Some students are Christian pacifist. But unfortunately a good many students, inspired by hysterical timidity, have rallied under your banner who do not belong there. A few, but only a few, are actually hoping for a German victory.

"You students say you are ready to defend America if and when we are attacked, but that in the meantime America's opportunity lies in remaining completely apart. Some one has told you that we were hoodwinked into the last war by a stealthy combination of munitions makers, Wall Street magnates, and British propaganda

"If you are morally bewildered by the war, you are certainly in good company, for you have with you most of the presidential candidates; but I am surprised that your bewilderment and mine spring from such different sources.

"The fact that the last war or to be more exact, the last peace did not make the world free for democracy has proven to you the terrible fallacy of all idealism. Forgive me if I have mistaken your position, but your distrust of ideals frightens me. If it is true it is our fault even more than yours. Our teaching, or at least the emphasis of our teaching must have been all wrong.

"I could sympathize with you in your present dilemma if you were merely shying away from the principles of supporting the Allies up to the belt and still insisting on our neutrality. Judging by your college papers, I can't see that your pacifism is founded on any rock principle. Most of you by your own admission, are not conscientious objectors. You seem to be suffering from a sluggish imagination and inverted skepticism. You think there is something noble in defying horror and enduring the rending of the heart has escaped you.

"If the way of life we have evolved in America is worth preserving—and we have taken it for granted so long that we forget how much we love it—I believe we shall have to do something besides build hopes for victory and sell secondhand ships to Great Britain on a strictly cash basis. I believe that, as much as we hate war, we shall have to fight, and the sooner we get ready the better."

"The indignation and consternation that so many younger citizens should oppose American intervention is a sentiment with which we have become very familiar in the last few months. But our efforts to weather this storm of protest have been reenforced by the knowledge that we of the ivied walls are in agreement with the great majority of Americans of all ages. Why hasn't Whitridge questioned the ideals and courage of his contemporary opponents?

"As Mr. Whitridge noted, people of our age are reluctant to parade their ideals in public. This is partly because we know the inadequacy of words and have seen righteous phrases often used to hide selfish expediency or to mask quide sincerity.

The basis of our beliefs is a regard for the value of human beings and a respect for their inherent dignity. We think that man is an end in himself. The rest of our political and social beliefs are built on this estimate of the individual We believe in the institution of democracy because it permits all to take part in shaping the common destiny.

'Angel' Tri Deltas to Revel In 'Heaven' at Formal Dance

"Delta Heaven" is the chosen theme for the Tri Deltas' formal dance Saturday night, and the ballroom of the house will be transformed into a heavenly setting with small clouds and stars simplifying the "Heaven." The "Den of Iniquity," as the dance room will be titled, is to be open to red and white evening gowns, tuxedos, and other "hellish" attire.

Guests may choose between "heaven" and "hell" for the dance. Preceding the formal dance, the Tri Deltas will have a buffet supper tomorrow afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. Sunday night, the members and their dates are to have a picnic.

General chairman for the dance is Polly Walker. Anne Pridgen and Cobi Miller are in charge of decorations; Polly Rose is planning the Sunday picnic; and Jeanne Collins is responsible for the decorations for the supper dance.

On the guest list are:

Reception Given Thursday For Alpha Gam Inspector

A reception honoring the Alpha Gamma Delta national inspector, Mrs. Edna Mae Robinson was given at the Alpha Gam house Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Robinson, a graduate of George Washington university, came here from Ingston university in Texas. She was entertained at an informal after-dinner coffee on Wednesday evening when the pledges acted as hostesses.

In charge of the reception yesterday were Virginia Munroe, social chairman, and Peggy Shaller. Grace Ball took charge of the invitations.

In the receiving line were Peggy Shaller, Mrs. Rosabelle Gillen, and Dr. Anna Pearl Keller.

Invited to meet Mrs. Robinson were the faculty and sorority president sand representatives.

which has been dedicated to these beliefs from its origin. This conviction as well as our sense of allegiance, compules us to put the United States first on our lecord.

We acknowledge the challenges to defend America in the Americas as the last of our patriotism and courage. But we can by no standard accept the defense of England as the automatic measure only to American ideals. Our idealism does not permit us to betray the principles themselves merely for the thrill in what Mr. Whitridge calls 'defying horror and enduring the rending of heart.' We reject the glorification of war itself.

"Here essentially is the question at issue: Can we best preserve our American ideals by entering the war abroad? Whatever the answer, the prospect is not pleasant. There are the consequences of total war and the consequences of a German victory in Europe. And what are the things we should be fighting for? Democracy and freedom have obviously been scuttled, and most of all intervention seems a less democratic proposition.

"We do not fight. It means that we shall be stripped of our outposts in Europe and shall have to keep out of Europe and the Far East. Yet we choose this course. By non-intervention. At least it offers a chance for the maintenance of all the things we care about in America.

We insist that American make itself strong enough to repel any invader who might attack. We are against the spirit of a greater inspiration of a higher wisdom we are ready to change our ideals or conclusions. But we shall not be shamed out of either."

Witmer, Gasink Selected For Interviewing Board

Dr. Louise B. Witmer, assistant professor of psychology, and Miss Ruth Gasink, assistant professor of sociology, have been selected to serve on the interviewing board of the merit system committee of the state welfare board.

They will interview those persons who are aspiring for positions with the welfare board and who have already passed civil service examinations. This work, covering the state of Florida, will begin Monday and last two weeks.

Week-end of Excitement Expected with Sorority Parties Going Informal

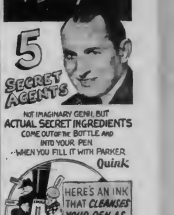
Most sororities are relaxing from the strain of classes this week-end with different kinds of informal parties. While chapter members and pledges are still trying to get better acquainted, a more formal type of affair is still a thing of the future.

Phi Mu's are giving an informal party for their dates and friends on Saturday night. The pledges will present a skit.

According to their usual custom, the Sigma Kappa's will have an after dinner coffee on Sunday night from 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock.

Rose and green were the colors used at the Delta Zeta pledge banquet on September 26 at the Cherokee hotel. Gifts of stationery were given to the pledges. On Friday the Delta Zeta's will have a picnic supper at ten from 4:30 to 8 o'clock for rushees and friends. Kathryn Thomason is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. McMullen, house mother of the Kappa Alpha house, gave a tea for all sophomore members of the sorority last Wednesday afternoon.



Pi Beta Phi pledged three new girls last Thursday. They are Eleanor Hanson, Ft. Lauderdale; Hope Talbot, Tallahassee and Minnie Bellamy, Tallahassee.

Read World's Greatest Books Advises Adler

BOSTON, Mass. — (ACP) — American colleges and universities should abolish textbooks and substitute the study of 100 of the world's greatest books, according to Dr. Mortimer J. Adler, author of "How to Read a Book".

As a model for such a move he suggested St. John's at Annapolis, where the famous Great Books courses on the great thinkers like Homer, Plato, Galen, Hazel, Mark.

Adler says that learning requires reading and that one must read the great works to be able to read. He doubts whether more than a few students, or even teachers, really know how to read a book.

He added that smaller schools must lead in any change because the "top-heavy" ones are so loaded with watertight compartments of so-called fields of learning."

Collegiate NYA Work Is Scarce

TERRE HAUTE, Ind.—(ACP)—Working one's way through college is easier said than done, according to Prof. A. C. Payne of Indiana State Teachers' college.

Nearly one-half the high school graduates eager to "work their way through" are unable to find employment and therefore never continue their education, Dr. Payne reported after a five-year study.

Professor Payne, a faculty director of the National Youth administration in Indiana State sought to learn how many prospective freshmen denied NYA employment fail to attend college anywhere. The study indicates that the percentage of non-attendance in college among those denied employment is increasing. In 1937 it was 44.7 per cent, in 1938 it was 43.1, and last year the figure rose to 45.5 per cent.

These findings dispute the belief of the man in the street that freshmen who fail to obtain employment will enter or continue school in spite of the handicap, Professor Payne pointed out.

He said that included among those unable to find work to finance their continued education are some of the best academic possibilities.

lege government and changes in the constitution such as amendments."

Orlene Cox: "Just coeducation."

Frances Cofer suggested the following topics: "Should the United States help England through the present crisis? Should we have a third term Should convocation attendance be compulsory? Why not include in the student activity fee the annual picture fee?

Mary Lou Atkinson. "Coeducation."

Phil Eckland: "The honor code."

Frances Tyler: "Cuts for students at Tally."

Emmett Curtis: "Why not discuss exemption from examinations for all students having a 'B' average or better? A 2.0 average not only for all the courses, but a 'B' average in the particular subject in which the exam is given. Students would study harder during the year and would concentrate more. There would be less emotional strain on both the pupil and the teacher."

Gene Bryan: "Distribution of activities. We should interest students who don't do anything on campus. There are hundreds of girls who don't do anything. We could at least interest them in becoming committee members. As it is, the committee chairmen are also the committee members."

Annie Lee Cannon: "I'd like to hear some intelligent opinions on the war and what the FSCW attitude in general is concerning a third term for Roosevelt."

Mary Lois Thomas: "Senior ball. Is it successful? The number of girls chosen decreases each year. What are the facts concerning that?"

Mimi McCowan: "Abolition of the rule of dressing for dinner Make it a custom, not a rule."

Wilma Smith: "Hygiene grading. For one thing, and should we have compulsory convocation for another."

Annie Shellhorse: "Better lights in the library."

Elizabeth Gleesb: "Let's talk about compulsory convocation and making it better. Also why don't more people write for the college publications? For example, so few girls contribute to the Detaff in proportion to the enrollment, and there's lots of wandering talent! Maybe if the type of material published were changed there would be more contributions. Another thing for discussion is doing away with required physical education for all students except freshmen, majors, and those making below "C." I think coeducation has been run in the ground Besides there's no hope for it so why discuss it."

Roberta Rhyne: "World problems would be good."

Hope Von: "No Saturday classes or 3:30 gym classes. Also cutting before and after holidays."

Frances Parker: "Having the library open on Saturday nights."

Jeanette Williams: Co-education and allowing students to cut before or after holidays, with certain limitations, of course."

Florend Brown: "I would like to have topics discussed which are relative to the present war situation in Europe—how it will affect college students. It is almost impossible to realize how near we are to a crisis when we are so far from such a tragic happening. Student forums should afford us the opportunity to become more familiar with events of utmost importance to us."

Pat Brandt: "My main interest is in world affairs, but I think the most pertinent question that could be discussed would be campus organization."

Alice Price: "There ought to be some way to spread extra-curricular activities over a larger group of girls."

Ruth Parr: "I think the plan of dressing for dinner should be discussed as so many girls have conflicting viewpoints concerning this."

Flastacowo Announces Picture Schedules

Sophomore pictures will be on sale from September 9 until October 12. Junior pictures will be on sale from October 14 to October 26, and the seniors from October 28 to November 9.

Debate Honorary Announces Plans

Delta Epsilon Alpha, national debate honorary discussed semester plans at the monthly meeting last night. According to Mabel Nibaud, president, these plans include a convocation program and a radio forum to be presented on 2 WTAL.

The convocation program, which will be given in conjunction with the club on October 16, will be presented by Margaret Chrisler Harrison and will consist of a direct clash debate between Mabel Nibaud, Mary Rice Deaver, Joan Weaver and Patty Holbert. The subject will be announced later.

The open forum will be broadcast from the Student Alumnae building at 7:45 o'clock on October 28. Gene Bryan will lead the discussion and several members of the Debater's League will participate. Plans for the all-Florida debate tournament to be held on this campus next spring were discussed.

Present were Joan Weaver, Rice Deaver, Helen Hawkins, Margaret Harrison, Rex Withers and Mabel Nibaud

Students Turn Tinfoil Fiends

Oh where, oh where, can some tinfoil be,
Oh where, oh where, can come be?
There isn't so much on campus now,
'Cause of two little girls we see.

Yes, two little girls have started a queer hobby of collecting discarded cigarette wrappers no matter how many glaring eyes are focused on them. It isn't the brightly colored packages that attract them so much, but rather the nice, shiny tinfoil inside.

Ever since their scavenger hunt began, it is much harder to find waste thing pass in front of the dining hall, in the smoking area behind Bryan, and on the tops of steps where they were formerly abundant. The formal garden-to-be between Landis and the gymnasium are now being combed.

"We aren't forgetting the other old places," one remarked, "we go back every once in a while, but don't have nearly so much luck as we do in."

While conducting their searches, the girls have noticed the marked popularity of Lucky Strikes. "Every other one seems to be," said one familiar and green color." Camels are rated second choice while Phillip Morris and Chesterfield are most rated third. Very few Old Gold and Kools have been found at all during these explorations.

The two girls are used to the more popular brands that we can almost distinguish the different brands and associate them with the wrappers without knowing from which they came." one said at the end of our discussion.

"This isn't an exclusive enterprise," the other added, her eyes suddenly growing larger, "for we are asking them for a good purpose and would welcome anyone who would to help. Already we have enlisted the aid of one sorority. Just come either to 242 Landis or to 323 Landis, and ask for Sara or Penny, respectively."

"All we ask is that if you should see us hauling away about, picking up stray bits of crushed paper from the gutters, please don't think we've mistaken Florida State for Chattahoochee."

Students Invited to Browsing Room

A special invitation is extended to new students and faculty to visit the browsing room tonight from 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock. Members of the library staff will be present to welcome guests. This is the first of the series of informal evenings being planned for the browsing room miral Sir Edward Evans to take charge of the air-raid shelters, the revival of mothers and children from the 14 London districts most damaged; the urging of all adults to leave London if they had no urgent business remaining there; the opening of 58 emergency feeding centers for the homeless; assurance that a new defense system was being developed against German air attacks.

The winter of 1940-41 will undoubtedly be the most terrifying, nerve-racking time that the British have ever experienced. Britishers must have sufficient air raid protection, and know what if it is humanly possible. The English nerve and fortitude must be the backbone of the empire—the backbone Hitler is desperately trying to break by his constant air attacks.

This week, Britain has struck back heavily in massed counter-offensive moves to give Germany a little taste of her own medicine. The attacks were concentrated mainly in the industrial centers, but Berliners found what it meant to be confined under shelter for five hours, when enemy planes were swarming above them. The people of Berlin experienced a little of what Londoners have gone through for the past five weeks. The attack on Berlin came mainly as a result of the insistence of the Londoners for retaliation; therefore the attacks on the civilian center of Berlin have been relatively of no importance in comparison to the attacks made on the industrial parts. But refineries, docks, shipping and railroad centers, which are the German war foundry, and other objects necessary for Germany to carry on her war have been the target of English bombs this past week.

At Home

In America Willkie continues his political campaign in the face of riots and other disturbances and Roosevelt makes a speech in Philadelphia where he parades under a "Willkie—for Peace—for Our Country" banner, while Congress works on, abandoning all hope of adjournment, although a 4-week recess is planned, to allow conventions over a longer group for campaigning purposes. Latest action of Congress is on the excess profits tax bill which already passed the Senate after going through the House and now awaits the signature of the presi-

Honoraries Tap Girls On Basis Of Leadership

Esteren and Spirogira Choose 11 Students For Membership

New Odd Goats Perform Skit For Whole Campus

Spirogira, the Odd honorary, and Ssteren, the Even honorary have tapped new members.

New Spirogira goats are Alice Price, Peggy Barker, Kitty Jo Hickman, Floread Brown, and Sue Chaires. These girls were chosen on the basis of outstanding Odd spirit, cooperation and leadership.

The newly tapped Odds, began an indefinite goating period yesterday afternoon when the goats, dressed in fetching outfits of black skirts, white blouses, and long white cotton stockings, completed by eye-catching accessories of long-handled brooms, acted out an adaptation from Ferdinand the Bull for the benefit of the campus at large

The old members and the Tallahassee alumnae were given a banquet by the new goats last night. The banquet tables were decorated with the Spirogira colors, black and white. The favors, small black eight balls must have been a rather ominous sight for the newly tapped girls.

On Saturday, October 12, Spirogira will celebrate its sixteenth anniversary. Members will wear black and white all day and will have a birthday party in the Student Alumnae building on Saturday night for both the new and old members.

Esteren tapped six new members during lunch Monday. They are: Mary Jane Medlin, Louise Crosby, Gwen Stephenson, Mary Frances Oven, Mary Lou Atkinson and Paulette Nolan. The girls were chosen on the basis of Even spirit, leadership, and cooperation.

The club will hold its regular meeting Sunday night.

Janet Wells is president of Esteren. Other old members are Grace Ball, Ella Maude Jones, Jean Wood, Marion Freeling, Martha Stroberg, and Anna Frances McKay.

Brunelle Mobley is president of Spirogira. Other student Spirogiras are: Pat Brandt, Ann Jones, Louise Patterson, Gene Bryan.

Classical Club Plans Schedule

Group Will Have Movie On Caesar Tuesday At Florida High

The Classical club, arranging its program in two parts, has decided upon two meetings a month. One will be a program meeting, at which classical plays and modern adaptations will be dislussed: the other will be creative, in which the physical features of the Greek and Roman theater will be studied, perhaps later making some of the properties for a play.

The first semester, they will study comedy: "Aristophanes", "Lysistrata," a modern play, Plantus' "Amphitryon," Menander's "Woman of Andros." The second semester they will study tragedy, discussing the background and characters of Aeschylus' "Oresteia," O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra," Sophocles' "Electra," and Tourney's "Daughters of Atreus." In the spring a short play "Exitium Caesar," is planned.

At a meeting to be held Tuesday, Oct. 15, a movie, "Caesar's Triumphant Return," or "There's No Place Like Rome" will be presented. This is a technicolor picture made by the Lakeland High school Classical club. The meeting will be at 7:30 o'clock in the Florida high school, and all Florida high school Latin studente are invited to attend.

Ahrendt Will Describe American Band Music

Mr Karl Ahrendt, associate professor of violin, will address members of the American Guild of Organists at its first meetiog in the Music Annex Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

Records will be played to illustrate his talk on American Music, apropos of the all-American programs to be played by the Marine band next week.

Since this is a guest meeting, all musically interested persons are invited to attend.

FSC Opinion Favors Roosevelt

Juvenile Plays Begin Series

Dramas of Rachel Field Directed by Senior Speech Majors

The first dramatic production of the speech department will include two children's plays, "Polly Patchwork" and "The Sentimental Scarecrow," by Rachel Field. These will be preseoted in the Augusta Conradi theater from 5 until 6 o'clock next Friday afternoon, and will be directed by Frances Ellison and Martha Whitehurst, senior speech majors.

The plays are planned and directed especially for children and will be advertised in Tallahassee grammar schools. College girls are invited to attend, however. These children's plays are not included in the season ticket for speech department performances, therefore the price of admissicn is 10 cents.

The settings of the plays are in charge of the stagecraft class and are designed by Miss Mary Mooty. The casts were selected from the sophomore and junior speech classes. Joan Weaver and Beth Blair are supervising the geoeral arrangements. The plays are sponsored by Zeta Phi Eta, national speech hooorary, under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Thomson, facult yadvisor

The cast for "Polly Patchwork" includes: Mary Small, Mimi MacGowan, Joan Weaver, Nelle Loyless, Sara Duke Bryant, Doris Carter, and Jeannette Thorpe

The parts in "The Seotimental Scarecrow" will be taken by Joan Weaver, Carmen Constantine, Martha Whitehurst, Roberta Van Brunt, Louise Clements, and Gwendolyn Creel.

Freshmen Will Aid In CGA Activities

Girls Will Make Posters Run Errands, Type

A total of 161 freshmen signed up to help in activities of CGA according to Cornelia Watson, president of the student body.

These girls were divided into groups according to the type of work they wished to do. Fifteen will make posters, 66 will help decorate for dances, 65 will run errands and 18 will do typing. The purpose of having freshmen sign up for these types of activity is to relieve the overworked upper-classmen and to give freshmen a chance to be connected with CGA

A file, to be available to campus organizations needing girls for these purposes, will be compiled giving the names of the girls, their free hours, and the type of work they wish to do. Organizations will be allowed to use this file with the permission of Cornelia Watson.

Freshmen who have signed up for this work will be free to withdraw their names at any time, and all who are placed on probation at quarters will be automatically withdrawn.

Meetings will be held once a month, the first being scheduled for November 5.

Would Words Fail You Too?

"Please send the elevator to four. Please send the elevator to four." These words, familiar to every Landis girl, were uttered the other day by a group of students who were extremely anxious to catch the elevator. After several minutes of their insistent calling, a voice down in the elevator shaft said, "I can't. I've been stuck here for the past half hour." The girls on the fourth floor sighed, "Well, I guess we'll have to walk."

French Club Plans Initiation Today

New Members Will Wear Ribbons and Pins

French Club will initiate new members at the first regular meeting, which will be held at 5 o'clock today in Broward lounge. The program will opeo with the singing of the French national anthem.

During the initiation ceremony, under the direction of Mary Evelyn Wooten, new members will be given ribbons and club pins. Virginia Waiowright, president, will give a welcoming address in French, and the new members will receive a constitution. Later, refreshments will be served.

Julia Weed, membership chairman, has announced that anyone taking French or anyone who has had some French can be a member of the club and may sign up in her room, 250 Jennie Murphree. Tentative plans have been made by the club for the showing of a motion picture on Nov. 9.

Defense Program Will Be Topic Of Student Forum

"Our Part as College Women in the Defense Program" is the subject for discussioo at the oext meeting of the Studeot Forum.

Mary Pinckard Bryan, forum chairman, will conduct the meeting this coming Tuesday night, in room 303 Westcott at 7:30 o'clock. What college girls can do to make the present defense situation a little better will be brought out in the discussion.

AAUP Will Meet Thursday Night

Cotterill Will Discuss Education-Defense Connection

"Education and Security," will be the subject of the speech to be given by Dr. Robert S. Cotterill, professor of history, at the meeting of the American Association of University Professors to be held in the Student-Alumnae building next Thursday evening.

The meeting will follow a dinner in the dining hall at which all teachers on this campus who are members of the association will be present.

The purpose of the subject is to show the relationship now existing between education and the present defense program of the United States. In order to understand this program and be able to cooperate individually and in groups to combat the fifth columnists, Dr. Cotterill will point out that education is a prime requisite. This discussion will be based on such education as would best benefit the nation as a whole.

Ahlsweh Requests Contest Material

Distaff Needs Stories, Poems by Freshmen

Vivien Ahlsweh, editor of the Distaff, requests that more material be turned in for the short story and poetry contest for freshmen being sponsored by this magazine. There have been very few short stories turned in for the contest and the editor will be unable to give a prize for the best if more material is oot turned in before October 16.

The dead-line for all stories and poetry for the next issue of the Distaff is October 23 and upper classmen are also urged to contribute something to the campus magazine.

Roosevelt Wins In Straw Vote Held On Campus

403 Students Vote; 294 For Roosevelt; 104, Willkie; 5, Thomas

Ballots Show Variation In Spelling of Willkie

Results of the Flambeau's straw vote proclaim Franklin D Roosevelt Florida State's choice in the presidential election this year.

In the poll which closed last night students cast 294 votes for Roosevelt to Willkie's 104. Five girls designated Norman Thomas, the Socialist party candidate as their preference for the next president.

Only 403 girls of the 1,946 students registered at the college cast votes. However, this number compares favorably with the average percentage of votes cast in regular student elections.

Voters Misspell Names

Fifty-seven of the girls who voted for Willkie spelled his name incorrectly, most of them spelling it "Wilkie." Five of the ballots on which Roosevelt's name appeared had his name spelled wrong.

Most of the girls voting used ballots printed by the Flambeau last week or simply wrote the name of the candidate of their choice on a slip of paper. However many girls added comments of their own at the bottom of the ballot.

For instance, to the bottom of one vote cast for Roosevelt was affixed the following quotation: "The Lord helps those who help themselves." Another said "Roosevelt, of course." One student cast

IRC Will Study World Conflict

Club Will Emphasize Discussion of U. S. Relationships

This year the International Relations club plans to discuss the world conflict and its relation to the United States. Emphasis will be placed on forums, each meeting to be carried on with student talks and open discussions. There will be informal speakers on occasion. In connection with the forum, the IRC plans to stress balanced independent thought and its influence.

Membership this year is to be open to all students who are interested. Formerly, membership was determined by the voting of members on names suggested by faculty members. In order to qualify for membership, students must prove their intentions of interest by attending meetings regularly (if a student misses more than three meetings, she will be considered a "member in bad standing") and by paying their dues.

Officers for this year are as follows: Dr. Marian Irish, faculty advisor: Johnnymae Wright, president; Mabel Nihoul, vice-president; Edna Leibovit, corresponding secretary; Betty Pearlman and Frances Smart, co-treasurers; Marie Manley, program chairman; Nona Irwin, social chairman; Lillian Rogin and Eleanor Grenell, scrapbook committee; and

Atrocious Hats for Rainy Days Become Tradition of College

Students Prize Bonnets Correctly Prepared And Aged for Drizzly Tally Weather

By KITTY JO HICKMAN

Almost a tradition on our campus is the annual competition to get the most atrocious hat for the rainy season. As soon as the first gray cloud rears its ugly head, upperclassmen, one and all, dive under their beds for their precious rainhats, put them on at rakish angles, and sally forth to be admired by alarmed freshmen.

Students come into possession of their rainhats in various ways. The average hat has gone through a training period which consists of being sat on, run over, or dropped in a mud puddle. This is followed by a quick trip to the railroad tracks to give a more atmospheric blocking. After two weeks spent on the closet floor under a varied selection of shoes, the hat is ready for wearing.

Almost unconsciously, the average college girl, when choosing her wardrobe, buys her hats with an eye to the future, thinking "Will is be good enough for me to wear as a rainhat later?"

Most raincoats are of a warped felt material, but this season the corduroy hat has loomed on the horizon. Several of the corduroy models have been waterproofed with fingernail polish by ingenious Florida Staters. Always favorites are the oilskin and black rubber hats. Both of these offer special protection for the neck and shoulders by means of a cape-like effect.

The life span of a rainhat, after it has become mature enough to be considered as such, is approximately four years—or the same as the time it takes the owner to earn enough credit hours to graduate from this noble institution. In order to accomplish the feat of retaining a rainhat for four years one has to store her hat at the college during the summer months to avoid controversy at home. We cite the famous Melbourne case, for instance. Miss Melbourne, an honor student, took her hat home the summer before her senior year. When her appalled mother gazed upon the monstrosity, she immediately gave it to a junk dealer, and it was only by reas-

300 Students Try Teaching

There are approximately 200 students who practice teach in the demonstration school each year. About 150 of these are in the elementary and kindergarten division, and 150 in the high school.

The school of education requires 72 hours spent on the three-point schedule of the practice teacher in order to complete the education course and be eligible for recommendation to teach in either junior or senior high schools.

The three points are: observation for three weeks or more, to be spent under the supervision of a demonstration teacher; second, preparation of a daily schedule or lesson plan with a critic teacher; and last, practice and participation in the art of teaching. At the end of this time, an A.B. or B.S. degree in education is granted the student according to the subjects she is prepared to teach.

The high school load is heaviest with the greatest demand in English and commerce. A complete educational program which includes subjects such as art, speech, home economics, music, industrial arts, and physical education along with the regular academic program.

Studeot teachers may practice in all fields. A full elementary program illustrates modern education, and its program is enriched by music and practical arts. There are twenty members of the regular demonstration school faculty.

Browsing Room To Open For Discussion Tonight

Miss Sara Graham of the library staff will be in the browsing room in the library from 7:30 to 8 o'clock this evening to discuss reading problems, answer questions and recommend books for reading. All students and faculty are cordially invited to visit the browsing room tonight and all succeeding Friday evenings when there will be informal programs and discussions.

Four Get Honor Society Bids

Pi Delta Phi Plans Year's Activities At First Meeting

Four undergraduates were tapped this week by Pi Delta Phi, national French honorary. The neophytes are Helen Hoffman, Belle Yonge, Mary Lou Atkinson, and Marion Fornald.

The organization, inaugurated its activities for the year at its first meeting Tuesday at the home of Dr. Arthur Seymour, head of the modern language department and sponsor of the group, with plans for the initiation of new members.

After the names of the new members were presented and voted on, pledging and initiation committees were chosen. Mildred Jones will direct pledging and Frances Cofer will have charge of initiation.

Plans for the year's program include a survey of Moliere's works, a play to be given in French by members and the presentation of several scenes from 'Le Bongentilhommi'' from Moliere by the new pledges. In addition Pi Delta Phi will attempt to bring a French movie by the Academy Francaise to the State theater.

Officers and members of the honorary are: Allefaire Everett, president; Patty Holbert, vice president; Mildred Jones, secretary: Frances Cofer, treasurer, Evelyn Uhrhan and Ruth Uhrhan.

Student to Tell Of German Life

Mary Huddleson is scheduled to tell members of Der Deutscher Verin, the German club, of her four years' experience in Germany at its meeting next Thursday.

Mary attended school there and traveled through the country. Following her talk the club members will sing several Germao songs.

At a meeting last Monday Ida Mary Scharfschwerdt, Evelyn Uhran, and Grace Theige were appointed members of the program committee. The club is planning to have various guest speakers on its program throughout the year.

Home Ec Students Begin Activities

At the first meeting of the Home Ecooomics club approximately 175 home economic majors and students interested in this subject heard Carolyn Johnson describe the activities of freshmen during the year in the organization. She illustrated her talk with still pictures.

During the meeting the members of the organization voted to aid the Tallahassee chapter of the American Red Cross by conducting knitting classes. They will continue this project until the quota has been filled. Other features of the program included the introduction of the council members and the sponsor, Miss Helen Cate, instructor in foods and nutrition.

Speakers Urge Aid to Britain

'Bundles For Britain' Is Principal Topic Of Convocation

Mrs. Ian Robertson, Florida State college alumnae of the class of 1937, was introduced to the student body in convocation Tuesday in regard to the "Bundles for Britain" drive. Mrs. Robertson's husband is a second lieutenant in the British army. Briefly greeting the students was Mrs. Fred Elliott, chairman of the Tallahassee chapter of "Bundles for Britain, Incorporated."

Speaker in an appeal for clothing and the knitting of articles was Mrs. Teresa Myers of the advertising staff of the Democrat, who is co-chairman of the local drive. She urged the Florida State college students to contribute five cents for wool for knitted articles for Britaio. She also announced the arrangement of a place for the girls to work on such articles in the Student Alumnae building and summoned volunteers to knit "badly needed garments."

Mrs. Myers poioted out that the students would be following in the footsteps of students 20 years ago when they knitted for the doughboys. Two rooms are being kept open during the week from 4:30 to 6:30 o'clock in the Student Alumnae building to receive clothing for the "Bundles for Britain" drive.

Sarah Duke Bryant opened the program of convocation with a

WTAL Now Plays Important Role in College Girls' Lives

By BETTY JEAN DAVENPORT

Of special interest to college students now is the local radio station which features college programs several times a week and welcomes requests from students on the transcribed program of popular music every night.

Station WTAL, located on the Thomasville highway north of Tallahassee, operates from 7 o'clock every morniog until 11 o'clock every night on a frequency of 1310 kilocycles and a power of 250 watte as assigned by the Federal Communications Commissioo of Washington, D. C. All stations are under direct surveyance of the Federal Communications Commission in Washington—their laws, their rules, and their regulations concerning the manner and the contents of all programs.

The staff of WTAL is made up of: Owner, Gilbert Freeman; station manager, William C. Wyatt, chief engineer and announcer, William A. Snowden, Jr.; operator-announcer, Russell Bennett; program director, Mildred Williams; staff secretary, Mary Charles Fendley; salesman, J. M. Smedley; sports announcer, John Leverett.

Programs are according to the facilities used: recorded, transcribed, studio, and remote control. The difference between recordings and transcriptions is in the size of the records. Many types of programs are commercially sponsored by both local and national advertisers.

All remote control programs, in this as in any other radio station, are relayed by a telephone line from the scene of the broadcast to the transmitter at the main station. For example, WTAL has a line connected with the college and when the programs are broadcast from the publicity office and the auditorium, they are sent from the campus back to WTAL and are there transmitted over the air. A microphone is connected to the telephone line into which the program participants speak. All national network programs are broadcast in this way. A station carrying network programs simply leases a wire.

Several programs, including a weekly news-of-the-campus broadcast, a book review program, and a Florida State College Forum series have recently been scheduled for broadcast direct from the college campus through the remote control facilities of the local radio station.

Has College Interest

Behind the process of announcing are the copy writers, secretaries, stenographers, salesman, saleswomen and people with a knowledge of music, literature, speech, science, or in any given field. There are various radio artists' bureaus and placement bureaus to aid in finding a suitable location. Journalism, newspaper work, and advertising are particularly beneficial to those who are seeking a career in radio. Advertising agencies also hire people who are known as ghost writers who receive no merit or mention for their work, but whose salaries range from $25 to $2500 for the script for a one-half hour show. Sample scripts may be obtained by writing to any radio station. A general cultural education is sufficient for this type of work.

If there are any special talent groups, either singers or a campus Little Theater group, the staff of WTAL gladly receives calls or letters with a view to broadcasting.

Radio Work Changing

One of the staff members of WTAL expressed the opinion that life at the station is ever-changing, and assured the reporter that with each new day come new and interesting situations. There are few, if any fields of manufacturing or industry in the world whose products aren't advertised and talked about. Beginners' salaries are generally about the same as in any other business, but scarcely any field offers more opportunity for advancement.

Latest Fashions Styled by YWCA

Sixteen Models Parade Before Audience Of College Students

Parading before the college audience yesterday afternoon in the Augusta Conradi Little theater, 16 models participated in the YWCA Fashion revue to show what "Miss Femina Perfecta," will wear this season.

Under the direction of Tillie Van Brunt, with comments by Sarah Duke Bryant and Lou Attinson, and with costumes furnished by Vogue, the student models presented a panoramic view of styles beginning with campus togs, proceeding to street clothes and closing the show with formal evening gowns.

Modeling campus clothes were Mart Parson, Mary Small and Emogene Howord. Mart wore a two-piece corduroy in beige and green, Mary, a one-piece combination with plaid skirt and brown velveteen blouse, and Emogene, a blue wool skirt, long sleeved white blouse with red suede Jerkin and matching cabi.

Louise Berger, wearing a flared skirted green wool dress with three-quarter length sleeves and wide belt, and Jane Kane and her accessories and Kate Hedrick, wearing a tailored brown suit, completed the group. Each model's costume complimented by black accessories, displayed street clothes.

For big moments in the life of a college girl, Jean Miller displayed a black girdled red taffeta frock. . . . Ann Mabrey modeled a formal costume boasting a gay plaid satin skirt topped by a black velvet bodice.

A pale blue taffeta frock accented by deep blue velvet band displayed by Zoe Johns, Minnie Ratliff, wearing a formal black jumper over gold blouse, and a bouffant plaid skirt with a rhinestone studded lace top modeled by Cornelia Watson climaxed the fashion revue.

Other models included Frances Duncan, Ethel Hall, Jean Nichols son and Barbara Brow.

By Delza Dorothy Cliv

Dear Miss Clix: How can I impress our drama teacher that I ought to get the part of Juliet when our school does "Romeo and Juliet" this year? The teacher comes from New York, is handsome, worldly and mature (around 35), but he's as aloof as a Greek god on Mt. Olympus. I feel like a babe in arms in his presence. How can I get the role?

ASPIRING

Dear "Aspiring": I don't want to poach on any of Mr. Freud's preserves, but you sound as though your mind aspires toward the drama teacher more than toward the drama. However, Juliet was only fourteen, so maybe feeling like a babe in arms (even his arms) might help, psychologically. Beyond that, remember that an actress must express deep emotions with her hands. Eyman Will Attend Education Parley

Conference Will Plan Teacher Instruction

Educators at Florida State college are adding projects which are being undertaken to promote better education.

Dr. R. L. Eyman, dean of the school of education, will leave Monday for Atlanta, Ga., where he will attend the Teachers' Education conference conducted by the American Council on education. Dr. Millon W. Carrothers of the state department of education will accompany him and representatives from each of the institutions of higher learning in Florida will be present. The purpose of the conference is to work out ways to formulate a program for teacher education in the southern states.

Dean Eyman and Dr. R. L. Goulding, superintendent of the Demonstration school, returned last week from Pensacola, where they have been writing reports on the high school instruction and the educational program of Escambia county. This work is being done by the state department of education under the direction of Edgar Morphet and Dr. Carrothers. Such a survey of school conditions is made by the state department whenever requested by the school board. A more comprehensive survey was recently made of Dade county.

Atrocious Hats Become Tradition of College

surrounding them from various faculty members that Mrs. Melbourne was persuaded that Miss Melbourne was not ready for the institution in Chattahoochee. Miss Melbourne promises to get back to Florida State college though minus her rainhat.

Rainhats reveal the individuality of the wearer. The novelty collection can easily be corrected for her hat is usually covered with a museum which may consist of articles from miniature dolls to the quarry shaped fad pins. The school-wearing type sometimes uses her rainhat as a display counter for her many trophies—fraternity pins, fraternity hats which bear pledge ribbons and pins. And there are the rainhats which bear everything "pin-on-able." And fashion, which will readily admit that charm bracelets are being rapidly replaced by rainhat mascots.

Many rainhats bear mute memories of good times—a little splatter of hot chocolate, reminding the wearer of that marshmallow roast at camp; or a cigarette note that speaks of the horrible tenseness of exam week, which all thoughts were turned to study; or else a deep purple stain over remembrance of Saturday afternoon spreads and that slackberry jam that Suzy's mother used to make.

The rainhats brought in their wake several strange customs on our campus. Started by the "great initiation of '39" is the habit of hooding down rainhats for good luck. The sentiment gave their hats to freshmen who needed luck and, oddly enough, the hats brought the luck that were supposed to. The idea is to pass the hat on to a freshman as soon as the owner has received her share of good luck.

The outrageous headgear has solved the problem of "What Shall I give Brenda for her birthday?" Why a feather for her rainhat, of course! At any fire and ten one can easily find feathers—fall feathers, short feathers, fat feathers, skinny feathers, orange feathers, purple feathers—all kinds of feathers.

One of the most outstanding rainhats appeared on our campus about 1937 and left us with the aforementioned "great class of '39." Owned by Frances Williams, it was decorated according to the seasons. Halloween the hat was covered in orange and black crepe paper; at Thanksgiving, red, white, and purple; at Christmas red and green; and during graduation week, green and gold.

On campus now are two very outstanding rainhats—those owned by Anne Jones and Lib Milleer, both seniors. Their hats set the goal which so many students are striving to reach—that slightly insane effect.

The history of "Joney's" hat is unusual. She amazed one and all during her freshman year by owning a hat explicitly to be used as a rainhat—with no period of

Abbey Addresses Freshman Class

Dr Kathryn Abbey, professor of history was guest speaker at the freshman eiss meeting Thursday afternoon. Introduced by Dr. Dorothy Breen, Dr Abbey told the newcomers that the campus has its share of "debbers," students who do more and more things less and less well. She concluded her address by asking the freshmen to try to do better than these are the things that interested them most instead.

Wilma Johns, a member of Mortar Board and Phi Beta Kappa, made a short talk on scholarship and its importance to students, telling the freshmen of the awards given for scholarship here.

ageing. "The hat, a warped ornate felt model with an execrable feather effect, was acquired by her after days of shopping. She finally found it in Woolworth's department store.

Lib Miller's is a family heirloom. It was bought originally as a gardening hat for Mrs Miller who, like most women, made a great sacrifice when Lib came to college—gave her the hat. Unlike most hand-me-downs these various fates are left to the discretion of their temporary owners. Lib's has its future planned. It will go to Little Peter. Lib's sorority pledge daughter, when Lib graduates, and when Lib's younger brother enters the University of Florida she hat will go to him. "I just want to keep it in the family," says Lib.

After these descriptions of two rainhats what can one say in conclusion the reason for the request made by the social committee last year that girls refrain from wearing their rainhats should it rain when Mrs. Roosevelt comes?

her vote for Franklin Delano Roosevelt" and another said "Roosevelt, with reservations."

Mississippi Has Poll

In a similar poll carried on by the Flambeau, Mississippi State college paper it was found that Wallace could be a true dinner guest. Republicans and Democrats alike were of the same opinion that Wallace's wife would make a fine hostess. The majority of the students contacted said that the third term tradition was "cockeyed" and shouldn't occur another away from the real American; real Democrat, and the man that has proved that he wished to help the south, east, west, and north alike."

According to remarks made by students at Mississippi State the need for an experienced person and the present world crisis were among the chief reasons set forth by Roosevelt supporters while Willkie voters desired help for the business man.

YWCA Will Join YMCA at Camp

Cabinet Goes Tomorrow To Joint Retreat At Flastacowo

The YWCA council of the University of Florida will be guests of the YWCA cabinet this weekend at Camp Flastacowo when the two groups convene for a joint retreat. This is the first time in the history of the organizations that such a meeting has been scheduled.

The girls, headed by Mary Lois Thomas, president, will leave the college at 4:30 this afternoon and return Sunday in time for college vespers at 5 o'clock. The Gainesville group will also return to Tallahassee and will lead the vesper program.

The program for the week-end includes:

Saturday—4:30. Introduction and welcome, Mary Lois Thomas. 4:40, YWCA and YMCA; Their Place in a War-torn and Poverty-Stricken World, Anna Forbes Liddell; 5:30, round table discussion on faith and worship, led by Jean Wester.

Sunday—8:00, Round table discussion; 10:00, 11:00, worship service. Speaker, Dr. Paul W. Shankweiler.

Speaker on the evening vesper program to be held in the Student-Alumnae club room is Dr. Raymond Bellamy, professor of sociology.

Committees in charge of the Little Theater masked the first dance of the season of the year. Sixteen student models representing campus leaders and sorority and fraternity pledges appropriate for college wear. Those modeling were Cornelia Watson, Carolyn Mims, Minnie Ratliff, Grace Ball, Imogene Howard, Louise Barrington, Mary Bedrara Brown, Zoe Johns, Jean Nichols, Ethel Hall, Frances Hedrick, Frances Duncan, Joan Miller, Pat Brandt, and Mary Small. Mary Lois Thomas will discuss the history, plans, and achievements of the club during a radio broadcast Monday night over radio station WTAL, from 7:15 to 7:30 o'clock. The broadcast is to be one in a series of such programs originating in the studios.

The scarlet and blue uniforms of the Marine band provide a contrast with the full dress suits of the symphony orchestra. The wardrobe of the 65 musicians of the band is valued at $5,000. The committees in charge of the concert will place United State flags on the stage in honor of the occasion.

In addition to the regular program, many encores have been prepared for the audience's requests. The music for both programs is written entirely by American composers.

Only a limited leave could be given to the oldest military band in the country, and Tallahassee will be one of the few cities to hear this famed military-musical organization. The band is being conducted by Captain William P. Santelmann, who will be heard for the first time in Florida on this tour which marks the completion of visitation of 48 states.

Since 1798 the president's band has performed at every inauguration since the time of Thomas Jefferson, has played for all White House weddings, and has met visiting royalty with musical welcomes.

Fla. High to Close For Day Next Week

Today

Building Will Be Used For Registration

Florida high school will be closed for registration of men in Tallahassee between the ages of 21 and 36 next Wednesday, October 16.

Under the selective service act, all schools are to be dismissed at the request of the state board of education and are to be used as focal points for registration. Faculties of the dismissed schools are responsible for accurate and complete registration in their locality.

Registration will be confined to the front entrance and bottom floor of Florida high school. Any one really interested in observing this process of unprecedented and nationwide participation is invited to come to the demonstration building and see how it progresses. As yet, further details of the plan have not been worked out.

Since the faculty of Florida high is largely responsible for all phases of registration, they are asking members of the college faculty, who are interested, and who can serve as much as two hours between 7 A. M. and 9 P. M. to volunteer their services by calling 8462-W.

Dorman Works For Beauty In Campus Dorms

Gilchrist Hall Renovated During Summer Months

Believing that beauty in surroundings soothes the spirit and makes for peace of mind, Dr. Olivia N. Dorman, dean of students, and head of all matters pertaining to dormitories, is striving to improve the college dormitories.

She is assisted in this work by the residence hall committee composed of Miss Beatrice Frier, chairman; Miss Lelia Venable, member of home economics department, and Miss Lucile Bowen, director of residence. Mrs. Grace Tyler, supervisor of maintenance, and the social directors of all halls.

This committee studies the physical needs in the residence halls and makes recommendations for redecorating and improvements of all kinds. Each year one dormitory is completely renovated, resulting in the addition of necessary new equipment and the renovation of old equipment for each hall every six years.

Gilchrist is the favored hall this year and her residents returned to school to find the entire woodwork throughout two of the floors. It is the hope of the committee eventually to have white woodwork in all dormitories. This will happen if there is evidence of care afforded the present improved rooms in Landis and Gilchrist. All bedroom furniture in Gilchrist was repaired and refinished giving the appearance of new furniture. The parlor was repainted in blue which will be complimented by new mohair draperies of a flowered design on a yellow background.

Although Gilchrist received the major attention this year, minor changes were made in other dormitories. Jennie Murphree had its parlor redecorated in yellow and its smoking room has emerged in red, white and blue. Reynold's parlor is tinted in pink and its smoking room will be repainted in the near future.

In the last two years Broward has been completely repainted and linoleum laid throughout the building. Plans for the redecoration and reconstruction of Bryan are nearing completion at the present time and will probably be effected during the coming year.

Collegiate Writers Classified According to Numerous Types

Class in Journalism Has Baby-Dolls and Radicals Working with Students of True Talent

By MABEL BENNETT

It is generally conceded that there is a certain art to writing articles. The layman is not supposed to possess the divine spark, as established by the subject we call it, which causes words to drip off of their pens, or typewriter keys if you must be modern and technical about it all, like molasses out of a pitcher. I am supposed for my simile because there is something about molasses which is utterly down-to-earth and symbolic of the common people, who are the subject of the most popular articles and stories today. It seems that is that if you are determined to write articles, you might just as well write about something with reader interest even though you know nothing about those subjects. You would have a marvelous opportunity to develop your imagination and anyway a lot of the reading public wouldn't know the difference and would believe you no matter what you said.

Although writers can be divided into many categories, I shall deal with only one—the collegiate writers. They are among the most conceited because they fancy themselves to know much more about composition than an unbiased comparison would show them to be. Perhaps they have to be that way in self-defense to keep themselves from becoming discouraged when they realize that although they may receive much acclaim in college from their fellow students, it will be another story when they have to start from the bottom rung of the ladder in the outside world.

It is a fine class in article writing you will find numerous types of writers. There is the grim, tenacious type who, when she knows an article is due, determinedly sits down at a typewriter and goes to work on any subject—just any subject at all that she can talk about for three or four pages. Her subjects are neither very original nor very clever, but they always come in on time. After she leaves college she will probably never write an article again, so why should we worry about her?

Another who could be put in the same classification is the mechanical nonchalant, a pounder. This person is like a loose-jointed automaton, and her articles are typical of her. They are disjointed and disconnected and show that she does not give a rap what she says. Her articles seldom, if ever, rate publication in the college newspaper or magazine.

In every class there are usually a cynic and a radical to enliven it.

Kitty Baucum, president of the group, has announced.

"Yes, sir, the slower-burning cigarette is aces with me. I like all those extras in Camels, including the extra smoking"

STRATOSPHERE PIONEER "TOMMY" TOMLINSON, VICE-PRESIDENT and CHIEF ENGINEER of TWA

He outflew the weather for Extra Speed

● In this "flying test tube," above, "Tommy" Tomlinson pioneered the newest wonder of modern air travel—the Stratoliner. In rain, snow, hail, and sleet, this veteran flyer "asked for trouble" to prove that high-altitude planes can fly over most bad weather.

Skill, vision, perseverance..."Tommy" Tomlinson has them all—in extra measure. Mildness, coolness, flavor—the qualities of a fine cigarette—he gets them all in his smoking, with an extra measure of each. He smokes slow-burning Camels.

He turned to Camels for Extra Mildness

● Twenty years—7,000 hours of flying—more hours above 30,000 feet than any other flyer. 19 national records for speed and endurance. That's the flying log of "Tommy" Tomlinson (above). His smoking log would read: "I wanted more mildness in my cigarette. I changed to Camels and got what I wanted—extra mildness with a grand flavor."

AAMC will Test Medical Aptitude

Examination Is Offered Only One Time This Year

The aptitude test of the American Association of Medical Colleges will be given here on Nov. 2 at 3 o'clock p. m. 2624 Westcott. This test is designed especially for pre-medical students, but anyone else interested may take the examination.

The test will be given only once this year and all students who plan to take it should notify the personnel office as soon as possible.

This test has been adopted by the association as one of the requirements for admission to any of the colleges which are members of the association; it should be taken by all students who plan to apply for entrance to a medical school by the fall of 1941.

The examination is supposed to measure one's ability to learn material similar to that studied in medical school, as well as one's general information, scientific background, and ability to draw accurate conclusions from a given set of data. Students who have taken this examination in past years can take it this year, but if they destire. The fee for the test is $1.

Ambulance Corps Drive is Begun

Colleges and Universities Open Moves to Send Fleets Overseas

NEW YORK—A drive in schools and colleges throughout the nation to enable the people of America to dispatch their own ambulance fleet to war-torn Britain has been launched by the British - American Ambulance corps, William V. C. Ruston, president, announced.

Each institution will carry on an individual campaign to raise from its own student body the $1,200 needed to purchase an ambulance, which will bear the school name. Each also will select its own committee to handle the drive.

Richard E. Wilbur, Yale '39, who is national chairman of the campaign at the headquarters of British - American Ambulance corps, at 430 Lexington Avenue, said today that initial responses from the undergraduate councils of virtually all schools approached indicate overwhelming enthusiasm for the drive.

"The young people of America can be expected to respond quickly to Great Britain's immediate need for over 1,000 ambulances," Wilbur said. "I have just returned after visiting many of the undergraduate councils in several of the largest universities and I am indicated overwhelming enthusiasm over this opportunity to 'do their bit' to help fill the critical need of a country fighting to defend the very concept of human decency that it and America and live by."

The new colleges and school divisions expected to play an important part in British-American Ambulance corps' intensified fall and winter drive for ambulances.

Plans Completed By Tarpon Club

The Tarpon club has made final plans for its exhibition in Gainesville and for reorganization of the minnows.

Under the new regulations, it will be easier to become a minnow but minnows will have to pass a more difficult test to become tarpons. The minnows will be a larger, separate group with their own formations.

The Tarpon club is putting on an exhibition in Gainesville Saturday morning at 11:30. The formations they will present are the water wheel, submerged ecstel, and Florida frolics.

Tarpon Club Schedule

The Tarpon club practice schedule announced for next week is as follows:

Monday—5:15
Tuesday—4:30
Wednesday—5:15
6:00
Thursday—5:15

Texts Cost So Much

"Why do textbooks cost so much?" Probably no other single question is as oft repeated as this one, by students at Florida State college as well as at other colleges.

At the beginning of a college term each student must pay between $10 and $20, occasionally more, for textbooks. Perhaps this would not be so objectionable if it were at all possible to sell the books at the end of the year. As things are now, the most a student can get for a second-hand book which cost $4 new is $1 or sometimes as much as $1.75. In most cases it is less than this. In the case of books which will be out of date or "old stuff" the following year, this is understandable, and we raise no protests, but we do protest selling a $4 book for $1.50, say, and then have that same book sold back to students the following year for $3 or more

The National Association of College Stores recently distributed a pamphlet explaining the high costs of textbooks. The reasons given are easily understandable. The principal reason for the high cost of textbooks is the high manufacturing cost. Because the market for any one text is extremely limited and the life of a textbook so short, quantity production is not possible, and production of a small quantity of printed matter is costly. It is therefore impossible for publishers to reduce prices by taking advantage of the savings which would result from quantity production methods.

Compensation of the author is another factor that makes for high costs of textbooks. Since the volume of sales is small compared to popular fiction and non-fiction, royalties must be relatively higher if the keenest minds are to be attracted to textbook writing.

In addition, methods of textbook advertisement are expensive. Sample copies of each new book must be sent to hundreds of professors if the publisher wishes his book to be assigned to students for class use; trained salesmen must visit teachers to personally point out the values of new books; expensive exhibits of textbooks must be displayed at the various conventions of educators.

The pamphlet went into considerable detail to exonerate college book stores of the charge of over-pricing. It states that the selling price of texts are established by the publisher, that the discount a college store receives from the list price is unusually small in comparison with that offered in other lines of merchandise and that in spite of this small discount, express and delivery charges must be paid by the store.

After examining this pamphlet, we cannot help but see that high costs of new textbooks do not result from profiteering on the part of the publisher or the book store. However, we can offer at least one suggestion for lowering costs. Since a great many books are good for only one or two years because of the necessity for constant revision, why could not these books be bound and printed on less expensive paper? Would not this lower prices to some extent?

As for second-hand books, that is another matter. Who realizes the profit on these books? When a book whose original cost is $4 is sold to a book store for one third of that cost and then sold at a profit of one hundred per cent or more, who gains? Is it the book store? If so, this should not be. Since prices of college textbooks are high and since there does not seem to be a great deal that can be done to lower these prices, college book stores should be non-profit enterprises, particularly in state institutions.

Expensive textbooks seem to be inevitable and unavoidable, but if less costly materials could be used in printing and if college book stores could be operated on a cooperative basis, it does seem that student-expenditures for books could be somewhat reduced.

Far From The Crowd

Over and over again one hears comments about college students, and students at Florida State college in particular, is the noticeable lack of interest we take in national and world events. Immersed in the artificial collegiate world around which our lives revolve, we pay little heed or attention to the swiftly changing world outside.

Occasionally someone drops a remark about some great catastrophe that has recently happened, but for the most part we act as though we are living in a land far away from the troubles and calamities that beset the rest of mankind. We know that the conscription bill has been passed, that this is the presidential election year, and in a general way that there is a war raging in Europe, but we give little thought or study to any of them. Our thoughts are so completely taken up with collegiate activities and happenings that we have little time or inclination to think of anything else.

In fact so great is our lethargy, when it comes to looking at things which do not directly concern our campus, that we cannot give five minutes to state our preference in the coming election. In the straw vote which was conducted here this week only 400 students voted. Only 400 students out of 1,946 had the initiative and interest to take the trouble to check on a ballot the person they would prefer having for the president of the United States.

In country after country all over the world since the last world war the right of vote has been taken from the people, and dictatorships have sprung up like mushrooms. If that calamity should ever happen to us—if we should find ourselves without the privilege of stating whom we prefer as our leaders—we could only bow our heads and say we deserve it. When people deliberately spurn and ignore something as precious as the gift of freedom they deserve to have it taken from them.

If there were no newspapers, no magazines, no radios, no lecture series there would be some excuse for the average college student's lack of knowledge on current events. But living in the scientific age that we do with every opportunity open for us to learn about what is going on we deserve only rebuke and scorn. Scorn for our foolish, idiotic preoccupation which keeps us from taking advantage of the opportunity to learn while we have the chance.

College life and its interests are and should be important to us, but not so important that we are unable to see and hear anything else. In a few years college will be behind us and we will be out in that world that we have so consistently scorned. How can we expect to be prepared to meet that world if we are so bound up in our own little trivial affairs that we have failed to notice its affairs?

Dartmouth Scores

Dartmouth college is making some experiments on student participation in educational policies that purport to be extremely interesting to all undergraduates. The English department of the New Hampshire school has just appointed a special faculty committee to meet periodically with representatives of the English council of English majors, a body of twelve men formed this year.

The social sciences department at Dartmouth had already taken steps toward student representation in departmental counsels, but the English department's fully organized plan is the most important development to date. In accepting the proposal, the English department commended the purpose and organization of the Council of English Majors, while the Daily Dartmouth, which has backed the plan of student participation, declared editorially that "congratulations can be equally divided between the students who had the initiative to organize the committee and the faculty who had the sympathy to recognize it as valid and constructive function of the educational process."

According to a story carried in the Intercollegiate Press bulletins, the undergraduate council has as its objectives the creation of greater student interest and participation in educational functions of the college, the development of a larger interplay of minds among students and faculty, and the creation of more important and more productive social cohesion between students and faculty.

Topics which the undergraduate listed for discussion with the faculty include the freshman English course, the possibility of providing honors work in all branches of the major instead of the Survey of English Literature now offered, the possibility of a coordinating thesis in the major, and the possibility of providing seminars on popular subjects not available in courses. These topics have been proposed by the Council's educational sub-committee. A social sub-committee has in mind the development of closer relations between the English majors and their professors through activities in Sanborn English house, headquarters of the department.

These progressive activities at Dartmouth are thought-provoking for students everywhere because they show the possibilities of cooperative action. Students have been admitted to the sancto sanctorum of their own educational administration, a noteworthy step even though time will have to tell how the experiment will succeed. Perhaps the plan could be adopted on this campus. It is certainly food for thought.

Of The World

In the Orient . . .

Clouds gather in the Far East, as the situation there grows more tense. Japan clearly showed her hand when she joined the Rome-Berlin Axis and warned the United States against intervention. In the last few weeks this country has dealt several blows to Japan: The loan to China of $25,000,000 by the Export-Import bank, the embargo of scrap iron, and Monday the ban on wheat imports to all China ports under Japanese control. The most recent major blow came, however, not from the United States directly, but from Great Britain, when she announced the opening of the Burma road.

What will happen when the Burma road is opened on the 17th of October remains a secret. Japan, however, believes that the United States is backing Britain in this action. It is evident that the United States and Great Britain fear some move by Japan, for 16,000 Americans have been asked by this government to leave the Orient. The U. S. fleet has been increased to its full strength in the Pacific. The Burma road is China's main avenue of securing supplies from Britain and America. When England was following her appeasement policy, she closed the road after protests from Japan, who was endeavoring to close every doorway to China, shutting out all supplies, and thereby forcing China to give up her fight.

The steamship companies in Japan are swamped with Americans clamoring for passage to the United States as a result of the request or warning issued to them by this government. Missionaries and business men, hurriedly made attempts to evacuate the Orient as the crisis draws nearer, while the Shanghai stock market dropped from 3 to 5 points.

It was reported in Japan that if Britain persisted in opening the Burma road, Japan would be forced to bomb it from her recently acquired air bases in French Indo-China.

Or Forever Hold Your Peace . . .

May I also ask the student body to look ahead with me ten years? In all good faith I believe that you are capable of seeing my presentation of the future with as much clarity as I saw Miss Harriet Benson's excellent picture in the Flambeau last week But there is something wrong with hers—somehow she has struck just a little beside the mark.

In ten years this campus will undoubtedly show great improvement in both its physical and social complexions unless there has been some radical change in the social program as it is progressing now. In ten years there will be intelligent, free-thinking girls treading these same walks with their heads held as high and as proudly as they are in 1940. Each Wednesday night, and possibly on other nights as well, these women will go to dinner refreshed and clean because it is customary and pleasant to do so. They will not walk regimented, goose-stepping, in brigades of eight, but in the natural straggling masses that we see day by day. There will be no curbing of their thoughts or speech, and yet they will not question the fitness of "dressing" for dinner every Wednesday—it is seldom that one questions an enjoyable habit.

Other social customs will be as right and dignified as this one; no longer in the handbook the indictment of our manners which penalizes us for failure to introduce our friends to the social directors, no longer the plea that we look well at play night, no longer the constant urging that we wear evening clothes to Artist Series, no longer the frantic appeal that we refrain from eating peanuts and popcorn in the theaters, no longer—but you all know these things.

Ten years from now, the usual thoughtful students will attend the usual Student Forum and, as usual, discuss with license anything they choose. And since the chairman of the Forum is a vice-president of CGA, dissenters can be assured that their ideas will be presented to the officers of CGA and to Senate. This Forum will be a powerful organ in shaping legislation because it has the direct means of presenting public opinion to the governing bodies of the school.

Does this image resemble in any way Miss Benson's dolorous foretelling of robots who are guided by a master brain? Consider the progress which has been made in the short life of this college and question whether there is any immediate danger of a reversal My confrere believes that there is. Let her be persuaded from her pessimistic thoughtfulness!

Collegiate Comebacks

"Ah sleep, it is a gentle thing, beloved from pole to pole." 'Nuf sed.

Have you ever gone over to the Spick between classes for a cigaretta and noticed people making a Dagwoodian dash through the door just before the last bell rings?

This could be an argument for:
1. Longer periods between classes.
2. Smoking areas just outside classroom doors.
3. A rule against smoking between classes. (How could they have missed THAT one?)
4. Most anything.

We always knew Tally girls were sly little foxes, but the most ingenious thing we've heard lately is the tale of a girl who borrowed a very good friend's favorite fraternity pin to ward off a first date with that gleam in his eye. The prospective Romeo tried to disillusion her about the sacredness of pins 'n lil'n stuff. Safe in her psuedo-security, our little pin-borrower convinced him so thoroughly of her naivite that by the time for fond farewells arrived, all he could stammer (in a paternal tone) was "Don't let me . . . or anyone else . . . ever destroy . . . those sweet illusions."

And then there's the girl whose brother brought up three freshmen, who wanted dates of their own mental caliber. Rather than hunt down freshmen for 'em she threatened some of her upper classmen friends. Unless it occurs to the G'ville rats (and after all, who expects them to think?) that Landis isn't a freshman dorm, they'll probably never know that the red-headed Phi Beta Kappa wasn't one of the newly orientated additions to our campus.

The local food shoppes are doing an amazing amount of business on Wednesday nights—could it be that we don't want to be finished? Or perhaps we don't happen to have stockings enough to stand the wear and tear of every Wednesday night from now until Christmas—maybe a petition that sturdy red knee-length socks might be worn instead of fragile stockings is the answer to this Pertinent Problem of ours.

Maybe it's our imagination but it seems to us that we travel in a deep-rooted rut—dorm, dining room, classes, Spic, P. O., classes, library, dorm, etc. Personally we're saving firecrackers to blast us out Armistice week-end. Until then—

To breakfast, to breakfast, for Vitamin A,
And then our 8.30 (our schedule's that way.)
We go to the P. O., a bill and an ad,
To the Spic to recover;
Life is so sad.
On to the library—we stay for an hour,
And dash to the gym in a cold, dismal shower.
To the parlor (it's Wednesday), for tea and a bun,
And dressing for dinner—
Ain't Collitch life just like da cinema?

With the YWCA to make us style conscious, we can't help wondering why the new hip-length coats always have to appear on girls who are built like inverted wastepaper baskets.

Which could or couldn't bring on the observation that now is the time for all cute girls to realize that Homecoming, Georgia-Florida, and Christmas aren't too far off and really those extra eclairs aren't going to make you any cuter for the above functions.

Also on the food and figger idea (we know we're in a rut—who wouldn't be?) we heard a sage sophomore say, "A moment on the lips, a lifetime on the hips." This seems to sum up the food situation.

The gay ol' Odd-Even spirit is starting early this year. We heard clear young voices shouting about the various and sundry spirits the other night. It was all very thrilling, but we are a trifle worried though—What would we do if all their enthusiasm was worn out about a month from now when every good old girl should be in there yelling for her team?

Contemporary Student Thought . . .

By DORIS CARTER

Several new ideas have been included in South Dakota State college's 1940 Hobo Day—better known as homecoming to us. A special award will be given for perseverance in an annual beard growing contest The no shaving edict was issued enrollment day by student president Alan Oviatt. One member of the student body, however, gained a head start on the contest by starting last June 8, his present growth of several inches. Another of the outstanding activities will be the warding of five prizes for individual stunts in a parade of floats.

A complete and effective code of honor is active in the Law school of approximately 100 students at Louisiana State university. The honor system automatically dismisses any member who would cheat or steal. Hundreds of dollars' worth of books are left on Law school hall tables and no one ever bothers them. Perhaps it is because the books are too heavy to carry off.

A cry for a course in marriage in the school curriculum has been echoed in a school editorial at Alabama State college for women Sixty-two per cent of the senior class are even willing to take the course for no credit, feeling that the extra freedom from the idea of examinations and grades will make the study more profitable and enjoyable

Alumnae records show that since 1896 over 50 per cent of the graduates from the school have married. Although the figure does not include those students who married and left school before graduating and those graduates who have not kept in touch with the Alumnae association, the percentage more than warrants some form of amends. "And who knows?" says the school editor, "if we have a good course, we might raise the marriage rate somewhat!"

Acting-President Paul M Herbert declared at a recent all-university convocation that Louisiana State university will "solidly support the nation's defense program and will tolerate no irresponsible agitation founded upon misguided conceptions of civil liberties or individual interpretations of constitutional rights. We want no fifth column in this university." Great applause ensued when Dr Herbert announced that students above the age of 21 who may be called for service in the national defense program would be allowed to complete this academic year. The president then pointed out to the students their "double opportunity" in connection with the Latin-American program:

1. "Participation in a wider range of activities centered around Latin-American interests."

2. "Serving yourself and your country by becoming better acquainted with the history, culture and economy of our Latin-American neighbors by promoting and participating in friendly relations and by appreciating the value and importance of our common interests."

He then pledged the resources

Inquiring Reporter . . .

Question: Would you prefer to dress for dinner on Friday night instead of Wednesday?

It is the general concensus of opinion that dressing on Friday night is more convenient to most students. The girls expect dates or guests more often on this night than in the middle of the week. Time is also an important factor considered. The majority have full schedules of classes and meetings on Wednesday. However, others feel that Wednesday breaks the monotony and climaxes the dormitory teas. A few simply have no opinions on the issue.

Kitty Jo Hickman: I'd rather dress on Wednesday because it breaks into that middle of the week drudgery and lifts my morale

Barbara Morrison: Friday night is, in my opinion, the best time to dress because it enables me to go to play night in more appropriate dress, and everyone will look extra special Wednesday night is too much in the middle of the week to suit me.

Leona Ogle: As there are very few visitors on Wednesday, I think it would be much more appropriate to dress either Friday or Saturday night when the week-end really begins

Frances Waid: I'd rather dress on Friday because then we won't have to rush on to the library, meetings, etc., and we would be better dressed for play night or the movies. If we dress on Friday night we don't run the risk of ruining our hose on Glee club and library chairs. Although many people do study on Friday night, they usually have more time to change clothes.

Carolyn Mims: It's the hope of the social committee to make Wednesday a sort of break in the week. We already have the dormitory teas, and they plan, I've heard, to make dinner a festive occasion — perhaps after-dinner coffee, music in the dining room 'n such. The dressing just fits in with the whole idea and I think we should cooperate. We could all profit from a little relief in the middle of the week's classes, meetings, and saddle shoes.

Jean Hampson: I think it's much better to dress on Friday night because dressing on Wednesday takes time away from our studies, and it's inconvenient to carry on evening student activities in our Sunday clothes. We often dress for dates and play-night on Friday, so why not make our efforts serve several purposes at once.

Floread Brown: I prefer to dress on Wednesday rather than on Friday because I think it is at this mid-week period that we need the psychological lift that dressing gives us. It is an opportunity afforded us during the school week to take an extra-special interest in our appearance. I think this is definitely needed on this campus!

Lorraine Cottrell: It's plain psychology—the week-end always makes one feel like sprucing up, so it seems more logical to me

Betty Mott: I have heard many girls say that they would much rather dress on Friday night because we usually have to dress anyway to go to playnight or to the show; then too, there are a number of visitors who come into the dining room on Friday.

Lola Lastra: Friday night would be more reasonable. We dress to make an impression on other people not on ourselves, and we have more visitors on Friday. As for the teas—why not have them Friday afternoons?

Irene Hoke: I'd rather dress Wednesdays because Friday is too close to Sunday. If you dress on Wednesdays it peps you up be-

Magazine Jottings . . . . .

By MARLENE DALE

"This Pre-War Generation," by Mortimer Adler, appears in the October Harper's. The first world war produced a post-war generation. Its young men were self-conscious of their disillusionment and demoralization — and their spokesmen—the artists and journalists among them — publicized their cynicism so successfully that it came to be regarded as the mood of the whole decade. The second world war finds us with a pre-war generation which consists of youngsters still in college and the graduates of the past ten years.

There is one remarkable difference between the two generations. The veterans of the last war had "illusions," they had pledged themselves in "ideals." They were lost because they had lost something. The present generation is not demoralized or disillusioned. It seems to have grown up without any allegiance that could be betrayed, without—a moral philosophy to remove. The young people talk like calloused realists.

This pre-war generation has not been produced by the present conflict in Europe nor by the threat of America's involvement. It existed five years ago, ten years ago, but it took the dire calamities of May, 1940—graduation speeches—to make us generally aware of the characteristics of college-bred youth. In their impatience, however sincere, to put over preparedness, the educators and leaders did not stop to ask themselves why their words would fall upon deaf ears.

No one can claim to know the etiology of a whole generation Mr. Archibauld MacLeisch claimed that bad literature was the avenue of infection and that post-war writers contaminated pre-war readers. However Adler does not agree that literature is the major cause. Another author places the blame on young men's doubts about their economic and spiritual stake in American democracy And still another said that they had "lost faith in democracy."

"There is some truth in all these remarks," Adler writes, "but I do not think they go to the root of the trouble. The real trouble is that our college students and recent graduates do not take any moral issues seriously. Their principle is that there are no moral principles at all. All appeals to standards are nothing but slogans and hence defrauds and deceptions. The present generation has been immunized against anyone who might really try to argue for democracy in terms of justice but not against the attractions of success and security. Instead of trying to make democracy work because they rationally know it is right, they will give it up for something else, which at the time offers a quicker cast return.

What has been happening in American education since 1900 what has finally achieved its full effect in the present generation, flows with tragic inevitability from the seed of modern culture as they have developed in the past three hundred years. The most plausible explanation of the character of this generation is in terms of the education youth has received They have been misled by their teachers into giving up their birthright. Education has failed democracy as well.

"Who says that it makes no difference what people think or how they speak as long as their hearts are in the right place commits a dangerous fallacy. When the mind refuses to see the good and the bad things, the will is blind and blindly attaches itself to this or that through natural instinct. They can easily be uprooted by those skilled in playing the Pied Piper to the passions. That is why I dread the instability of the generation which will only have 'faith' in democracy—but no sure reasons for upholding it as objectively the best form of political community."

Can anything be done about American education? It is doubtful at present. The college presidents who expressed such deep concern about American youth last June do not for the most part see educational failure itself as the major cause of their condition.

Whether it is a post-war or a pre-war generation will make no difference so long as it is a generation which has been educated in the manner of the past forty years. This may sound like the counsel of despair, but it is defeatism in the school room, not on a battle field. Strangely enough, it is much easier to solicit propaganda for war than propaganda for peace. "Men can energize into action, even radical reforms, when the issues are urgent enough and the end not much beyond their noses. Education will not shake off its typical modern faults until history is ready for the end of modern times and the birth of a new culture"

all Leaves and Bright Colors Will Adorn Pi Beta Phi Dance

Autumn leaves and the bright colors of fall will decorate the Pi Phi house for the annual dance to be held tomorrow night at 8:30. Pi Phi arrow, made of fern leaves will predominate at one end of the room, and the living part of the house is to be filled with wine and silver bliss carnations, symbolic of the sorority colors. A tea dance will be held at the house Saturday afternoon, and Sunday morning there is to be a dance for members, pledges and their dates.

Bach Love Morrow is in charge of the decorations, and Mudge Gurry and Dorothy Daniels are responsible for invitations. Food is approximately 200 guests. Margaret Painter and Sue Vennig are in charge of the dance. Unique Bowl and Ladle Featured at 4-H Club Tea At Student House Outstanding features of the annual 4-H club tea given last Friday were the unique bowl and ladle used for punch. The pieces were made from the shells of huge gourds.

The tea took place at the Baptist student house under the direction of Elizabeth Mountain, general chairman, Mrs. Strickland, co-chairman, Ruth Hendricks, freshman advisor, and Frances Palmer, president.

The affair honored associate members and guests including: Dr Edward Conrad, the faculty, townspeople, the staff from the Home Demonstration Extension office, social directors, dietitians, members of the Board of Control, and members of the Home Demonstration staff in Gainesville.

Music was furnished by Wilma Smith and Francea Rogers throughout the tea. Flower arrangements were carried out by Miss Ethyl Holiway. Home Demonstration agents agent, Miss Virginia P Moore, extension specialist in home improvement in Florida, Gainesville, and Mrs Ruth Ferguson presided at the punch bowl.

In the receiving line were the college 4-H club officers and Miss Mary E Keown, state home demonstration agent.

Serving on the refreshment committee were: Helen Henley, Perry Robinson, and Lillian Mc-Keown. On the invitation committee were Vera Ray, chairman, Ruth Thene, and Wilma Smith. The serving committee was composed of Elsie Mae Day, Marjorie NeSmith, Inez Olive, Frances Smart, Tol Strickland, Beulah White, and Johnnymae Wright. All of the officers were included in the floor committee

PLEDGE PARTIES AND SORORITY BANQUETS PROMISE A WEEKEND OF SOCIAL ACTIVITY

Fall initiations bringing banquets and breakfasts in their wake, the new members, the Pi Beta Phi formal, tea dances, picnics and various pledge parties are all going to make the sorority houses very busy places this week-end.

A surprise shower and coffee was given by Tri Delt pledges Tuesday night for Jamesine Brown. She is to be married next week to Glenn Pears of Tallahassee at the Tri Delt house.

There will be a standards program and after dinner coffee at the Delta Zeta house Thursday night for members and friends. A discussion will be held at this time on present social trends. Pledges will entertain chapter members Sunday evening at Mary Ellen Johnson, social chairman, is in charge of the entertainment.

Using a "ship of dreams" as the motif, the Alpha Xi Delta's had their pledge banquet at the Floridan hotel Sept. 29. The centerpiece was yellow flowers in a blue ship. Their new pledge officers are: Dorothy Moore, president; Pat Mayor, vice president; Frances Hatfield, secretary; Mary Louise Anderson, chaplain. The girls to be initiated this Friday are Betty Anderson, Elizabeth Waterman, Shirley Erickson.

"Chi Omega around the world" was the theme of the Chi Omega pledge banquet Tuesday night at the Floridan hotel. Place cards were in the shape of books giving the history of the different countries. Among the entertainments planned was a dance for the pledges.

Kappa Delta will have a supper Sunday night for friends and dates. It will be served buffet style in the back yard.

Preceding their formal that night the Pi Beta Phis will give a tea dance Saturday afternoon. Then will also be a picnic Sunday for dates.

The Phi Mu's enjoyed a picnic supper last Friday night at the home of Jessie Hemmens. Later on in the evening they gathered around a bonfire and sang songs.

All kinds of games will be played at the Sigma Kappa party Friday afternoon. Guests will progress from one [illegible] to another and the girl with the highest score from the various [illegible] will win.

Zeta Tau Alpha will have an informal dance Saturday afternoon from 5:30 to 8:30.

Olivene Hancock: I think to dress on Wednesdays is nicer because it breaks the week. Usually dress on Friday, anyway. This dinner is a little different. I'll vote to me. It would be agreeable to me no matter what night it comes on as we do dress.

Dorothy Babers: Why not dress on Friday instead of Wednesday?

Freshmen Journalists Honored by Press Club

Approximately 50 freshman journalism students were entertained by the Press club at a tea given last Tuesday from 5 to 6 o'clock at the Sigma Kappa house.

Mary Elizabeth Rivero, president of the organization, poured, and was assisted by Mattie Lou Peacock, chairman of the refreshment committee. Others on this committee were Marjorie Richardson, Charles Collins, and Norma Pennoyer. Belle Yonge, vice-president, received the guests at the door.

Entertainment was furnished by Pearl Tyler, who played "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise," "Aloha Oe" and "Evening Star" on a xylophone. Mary Stapleton, Madge Clayton, and Linnie Lou Casuti accompanied the trio which sang "Whispering Grass." They were accompanied by Jerome Butler at the piano. Helen Emanuel was in charge of entertainment. Tea was served by Harriet Benson, Lorraine Cottrell and Helen Mathis.

days if you're going to dress anyhow. So many people don't dress on Fridays when they should to make it a real dress-up day. Let's do it.

Norma Pennoyer: Friday is better because classes for the week are almost over and I feel more like dressing up.

Joy Willis: I prefer Friday because there are more guests in the dining room then, and the appearance would be better for them.

Anne Jones: It makes no difference; one is as inconvenient as —Formal initiation for 23 new members of six national sororities will be held tonight and Saturday night. Following initiation ceremonies the sororities will honor their new initiates with dances, breakfasts and banquets.

CAMPUS SORORITIES TO HOLD INITIATION FOR TWENTY-THREE INITIATES THIS WEEK

Alpha Delta Pi will initiate Adele Gleason, Mary Lynn and Olive Cuthbert. A tea dance for friends and dates of the A. D. Pi's will be given Saturday afternoon with the new members being honored guests.

Dorothy Jewell, Jean Austen, Annice Klosterman and Virginia Jones are to be initiated into Alpha Chi Omega tonight.

The Chi Omegas are having initiation banquet for Margery Franklin, Barbara Franklin, and Drucilla Henderson.

After initiation tonight, the Kappa Alpha Thetas will honor their new members at a banquet at the chapter house. Honored initiates were Waylee Wood, Janice Heidt, Lenore Gorman, Ruth Garrison, and Jeanne Hoffman. The banquet is to feature the sorority colors of black and gold.

Saturday night the Zeta Tau Alphas will initiate Carolyn Schook, Mary Louise Braswell, Mamie Swanson and Dottie Mae Dugan. Honoring the new members, the Zetas will have a breakfast Sunday morning at the Dutch Kitchen. Turquoise blue and steel gray, the sorority colors, will be featured in the decorations. Following the banquet breakfast the old and new members will attend church together.

of the university to the support of educational defense.

The Alligator at the University of Florida expresses doubt of the conscription's merit in the recent statement: "Conscription is a sacrifice worth making so long as the conscripted defend—not offend, invade, or seek to conquer." Dartmouth also fears that "there may be danger in the spirit that runs through it all. If we do not intend to find our own way we had best keep the fact in mind. If our talk of war against the principles of fascism is sincere, it would do no harm to first it with action and not words."—ACP.

Bryan Has New Housekeeper

Bryan hall has a new housemother, Mrs. Mary Bryan C. Will, graduate of the Lewis Training school, Washington, D. C. Will take over the responsibility of keeping house for the Bryan hall "family" this year. Her duties will include checking records, keeping record books and time books, taking inventories, and checking order books.

Says Mrs. Tyler, who has her degree in institutional management from the school and carried an internship in practical training there: "I understand that systematic planning and careful checking are essential to a smoothly operated housekeeping department. I advocated keeping the students' interest in excellent repair for I believe that when rooms are as fresh and light as paint can make them, when door keys work easily, when windows raise smoothly and drawers open without sticking or squeaking, the students have a feeling of care and attention that makes them loyal to the dormitory, as their temporary home."

Episcopal Student Leader Leaves for Church Meet

Miss Julia Gehan, student secretary at Rose hall, left for Kansas City, Mo., Sunday afternoon to attend the triennial general convention of the Episcopal church. Miss Gehan will participate in the several programs of the convention, but will be particularly active in the College Commission work

Mrs. Frances Lewis Lace, an alumna of the Florida State College for Women, will be in charge of the student center during Miss Gehan's absence.

Science Classes Observe Moon Through Telescope

Miss Elizabeth Lynn, instructor in physics, took the physical science classes out on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings of this week to observe the moon.

Telescopes were set up on the campus near the Westcott building. The students observed the course of the moon's progress in the heavens from 7:30 until 9 o'clock.

Miss Lynn says that next week she hopes to have the students observe Jupiter at Saturn, two of the large, bright planets which are to be seen in the eastern sky.

Musically Speaking

By VIRGINIA DUNN

Don't forget the artist series program on Monday. Perhaps you know that the Marine band has played a record performance for each of the presidents since the head as an organization was in its infancy. This is the reason that the posters advertising it have the line "The President's Own," written prominently beneath the title line.

The night performance of the band will include George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" . . . which is worth ten or fifteen minutes of anyone's musical time. There is an exhilarating element in the harmony or the composition and in the arrangement of instruments on the different parts that is most thrilling than a good Strauss waltz can be when it is played with a dozen saw fiddles for the rhythmic background. A composition by Deems Taylor will be featured on the afternoon program.

Several members of the glee club and of the orchestra are taking the members to dinner in the dining room . . . but there's one girl who isn't. . . She said, "Aw, who wants to take a girl to dinner—a man to dinner!" Here's hoping that we don't have squash and onions for dinner that night.

Speaking of "Rhapsody in Blue," there is a recent recording of this composition in the Music Appreciation room . . . 123 Westcott. There are reams of notes for listening pleasure there. If you're interested, you will find some there at any time . . . whether or you are studying music or not. This record room is open on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights from 7 to 9. Any person in charge of the room will play whatever you wish, unless it happens to be "Tuxedo Junction" . . . which isn't included in the list of standard classics.

Speaking again of listening pleasure, do you hear the Chesterfield program at nights about 11 o'clock? . . . Well, you should. the CBS program with Jack Leonard called "A boy, a girl, and a band" . . . his voice is smooth as silk . . . perfect for songs such as today. Faculty members to be present are Miss Marjorie Mayer, Instructor in physical education, and Miss Katherine Montgomery, director of physical education.

Tallahassee Scientists Will Meet October 21

Tallahassee Branch of the Florida Academy of Sciences will hold its first meeting on October 21, at 8 o'clock in room 307 of the science building.

William H. Joubert, instructor in accounting and economics, will present a paper entitled: "The National Policy of Securities Administration," based on his research work in the graduate school of the University of North Carolina.

Faculty and students are invited to attend, according to Dr. Paul Shankweiler, assistant professor of sociology.

WAA Allows Students Preference on Courts

According to a decision made by the Women's Athletic association, students may ask town people to relinquish the tennis courts at any time the latter wish to play. The tennis courts are for student use, so they have preference in using them. However, it is permissible for town people to use them. A student may not ask a town person to give up her place she is playing with another student.

Settle Will Give Party For Junior Gym Majors

An old rustic party will be given to the junior physical education majors by Miss Mary B. Settle, instructor in physical education. This party will be held on Saturday. Faculty members to be present are Miss Marjorie Mayer, Instructor in physical education, and Miss Katherine Montgomery, director of physical education.

School To Close Friday Before Armistice Da

The executive council of the college, upon recommendation of cut committee, announce Armistice holiday will begin with the close of the last class on Friday, November 8, and continue through Monday, November 11.

This will be the first time in many years that this plan, which will apply to all holidays in the future, will be in effect. Under this system the student will receive a half a day more at home from classes.

McMichael Is Elected New Odd Cheerleader

Betsy McMichael was elected alternate cheerleader of the sophomore class at a combination rally and class meeting Wednesday night, replacing Jane Wood who has transferred to another school. Kitty Jo Hickman, present cheer leader, presided over the short meeting.

like very much. Her voice is smooth as that of Ginny Simms, and has a pleasing color and warmth.

Remember the little one-line ditties that we all used to sing such as "Mother, Mother, Made Me Out So Fine . . . Mother, Mother, Is That Me Crying Daughter"? There's a very popular number out that is based on those lines. Here are the words. The odds. "East of the Sun" . . . Here's a number with comeback trail . . . there's a good arrangement of it on the unofficial list at the Sweet Shoppe. We had the moon over Miami . . . Moonlight over the ice . . . Remember K-K-K-Katie" . . . over various and sundry places . . . but now we have over Burma. . . . Have you heard the song about "Moon Over Burma"?

Among the newcomers to near-waves are "There I Go" . . . "Our Love Affair" . . . "I Kiss Your Hand, Madame" . . . "Yes, Yes," and the revived edition of "Sweet Heart."

Offspring of the joke (?) side what did the big rose say to the little rose? . . . "What's new, pussycat?" . . . the glee club on the Chesterfield program does a good arrangement of it ever so often.

What's become of "I'll Never Smile Again"? . . . we have not have faded from the big music programs and that's a good sign. It was played too much at once

Hail To The
Caps and Gowns!

Seniors Will Don Caps, Gowns For First Time At Investiture

Dr. Conradi Will Invest 260 Students Formally Tuesday Evening

Sophomores Will Carry Senior Mortar Boards

Senior investiture, the traditional ceremony in which sophomores don formal academic robes for the first time, will take place in the colleg auditorium Tuesday evening at 7:45 o'clock.

In procession of the seniors and their sophomore sisters, led by the college officials, headed by Dr. Conradi, and the section officers, will march into the auditorium while Miss Margaret W. Dow, associate professor of organ and theory, will play "Hail to the Caps and Gowns."

In the 260 seniors cross the floor, Dr. Edward Conradi, college president, will take from each sophomore sister the senior's mortar board and place it on the senior's head.

Abbey Will Speak

Following the ceremony Dr. Conradi will give the opening prayer and then Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, professor of history, will deliver the address of the evening entitled "The Romance of the Caps and Gowns."

After the benediction by the Reverend Pierce Ellis, Baptist minister, the recessional "Pomp and Circumstance" will end the ceremony.

Instead of wearing the heavier type of cotton academic gown which has been worn here for many years, some of the seniors will wear lighter gowns made of silk rayed. This type of gown was used by some last year and was found more comfortable for a special climate.

Ushers to be invested are:

According to the latest figures given by the registrar's office, there are 789 freshmen registered here. The number has increased almost twice as large as any year.

The sophomore cl this year has 576 members, while the junior class has 394 members. There are also seniors, 19 graduate students, and 41 special students.

TCDA Initiates County Contest

Vance Made Chairman Of 'Youth in War' Essay Project

A county-wide prize essay contest among students in all colleges and high schools in Leon county is to be sponsored by the Tallahassee Committee for the Defense of America, it was announced today by Earl L. Vance, chairman of the prize essay committee.

The subject of the essays will be "Youth's Stake in the Defense of American Democracy," and they must be between 900 and 1000 words in length. All essays must be in the hands of the chairman of the prize essay committee by midnight December 10, 1940. Judges will be three prominent Floridians to be selected by the contest committee. It is expected that many students in the schools will accept the essays as part of their regular assignments.

A total of six prizes will be given, one each in the school and college and each of six divisions, student body offices will be filled having to compete with those in any other. For instance, students in Florida State college will be in one division, and a prize will be awarded to the best essay in this division. Students in the second high school will be in a second division, and a prize in this division will be awarded another prize. The winner of each will be a third division, the winner of which also will receive a prize.

Students in the colored schools and college will be divided similarly so that there will be the same three prizes in this group, for which only colored students will compete with those only in the white schools.

Every student in either of the colleges or any of the high schools in the county is eligible to compete. All prizes will be in the form of current books dealing with the prospective subject.

First prize in both college divisions will be copies of "Twelve Hitler Did To Us" by Lips and Joseph. "I Saw It Happen In Norway," by Lie. Second prize will be the award in the senior high school division, and "The Moral

'Dear Octopus' Is First Speech Play

Broadway Comedy Slated For November 6-7

As its first major dramatic production of the year, the speech department will present a comedy from Broadway, "Dear Octopus," November 6 and 7. The play will be directed by Miss Kemper Moore. The production will be given in Doc Stephen Mizell Auditorium.

"Dear Octopus" is the all also and in so doing awakened Florida's interest. During the time between the two wars Britain did a fine piece of construction but now she is not bungling at all; rather she is doing a wonderful job in the face of great condition. Canada is her mainstay in distress, and the Dominion of Canada would be able to hold out even if something should happen to Britain. Canada has tremendous undeveloped physical resources and is far from being over-populated.

Chilean Speaker Encourages Latin-American Cooperation

University of Florida Exchange Student Says Two Countries Have Much in Common

"North and South American friendships should be based on more than military and economic conditions, for these two countries have many things in common," emphasized Mr. Daniel Montenegro, exchange student from Chile at the University of Florida, in his address before visitors and members of the American Association of University Women last Tuesday evening, at Rose Dunn.

"These two countries are both relatively young and should stick together, because the European war is closer than we realize," he continued. "Each can contribute adequately so that the other can benefit from it," he added. Latin America is looking toward North America in order to be able to go forward in business, while the northern continent is going forward culturally with the help of her southern neighbor. This cultural exchange will contribute much to the material aspects of civilization."

Mr. Montenegro's address was received by an audience of approximately 100 persons, who was surprised to learn tha. he is an American citizen, having been born in New York City. When the International Educational Association offered him the opportunity of attending colleg esthe. in Ohio or in Florida, he chose the university of Florida for his higher studies.

He was in Florida once before in 1927, and likes it very much, although he doesn't believe that the educational syste.s is very different from that of other schools which he has attended. The stress of humanities and similar subjects is parallel in the cultural classes in Chilean schools.

War Is Subject Of Abbey's Talk

Teacher Thinks Britain With Canada's Help Has Good Chance

"Britain and the War" was the subject of Dr. Abbey's talk for the Bundles for Britain organization Thursday afternoon in the Augusta Conradi Little Theatre at 3:30 o'clock. Miss Mrs. Fryo Elliot of Tallahassee who is in charge of the Bundles for Britain here in Tallahassee.

Dr. Abbey traced the history of the English people from the Middle ages until the modern period. Her belief as expressed in her introduction was that England's downfall has been since the first World War and that the world has greatly changed view points. Before the war Britain's military experience had been her empire and her navy. After the war she tries to maintain this and a fine peace on land but now she is not bungling at all; rather she is doing a wonderful job in the face of great condition. Canada is her mainstay in distress, and the Dominion of Canada would be able to hold out even if something should happen to Britain. Canada has tremendous undeveloped physical resources and is far from being over-populated.

Forum Endorses Aid To Britain

Formal Resolution Made In Reply To Request From Students

Acting in accord with the will of the student forum, a resolution endorsing student participation in aiding Britain has been drawn up and will be presented at the next meeting of the forum, according to Mary Pinckard Bryan, chairman.

The resolution, written by Mary Pinckard, was approved by most of the students present at the forum Tuesday night at which time the topic for discussion was "Our Part as College Women in the Present World Situation." The committee appointed by the forum to draw up the resolution consisted of Margaret Christie Harrison, Phoebe James, and Mary Pinckard.

The proposed resolution reads as follows: We, the participating students of the student forum of Florida State College for women, believing that college students of America should aid the power in Europe who is the key to our safety in this present war, hereby pledge to do our utmost to help as can by actively supporting the organization known as Bundles for Britain. We, the undersigned herein to assist regularly by knitting and sewing for the organization with the Bundles for Britain plan which is already in operation on this campus.

Three preliminary talks concerning the present international situation were given at the forum in order to create a foundation for the ensuing discussion.

"The War Is Affecting Us Now" was the subject of the first talk by Sara Dukz Bryant. That was the Pearl Harbor attack campaign was represented by the Japanese government. "They do not particularly care what he does with the land acquired so that he only accomplishes this act."

The two main ways college women are affected by a war in which the United States is involved, she stated, are the drafting of all women in a "frenzie" draft, and the high cost of living. She felt more than anything else, said Sara Dukz.

Monitor Notes FSCW Aviation

On the Woman's Page of the October 8 issue of the Christian Science Monitor is a picture of the Florida State college aviation students of last spring. It is part of a feature lay-out entitled "Aid of Woman," which shows pictures of college students from different sections receiving training in aviation. The inscription under the lay-out reads:

"Perhaps Uncle Sam does not realize that the enthusiasm of American women and girls being trained for air defense. But despite little skepticism Americans are being true daughters of the eagle are absolutely jetting ready through their own flight organizations to serve their country in the air.

Of Florida State college students it says, "Girls at Florida State college for women enrolled in the CAA program receive flying instruction from Mrs. Fryo Elliot, veteran Ivan Munroe."

The flight training program could not be continued this year by the Civil Aeronautics Authority, however, because of the demand for instructors in defens preparations.

Students Meet to Discuss Renewing Political Party

A group of about 35 students met Wednesday night to ormulate plans for the revival of a student political party which was begun two years ago on this campus. The main aim of this party is to promote freedom of student expression and activities.

A forum discussion was held during which aims and purposes were discussed criticized. Harriet Benson presided during the forum.

Thanksgiving Will See Alumnae Celebrate Homecoming Again

Parents' Day Scheduled For May Day Weekend Of This Year

Regular Alumnae Lodge Not To Be Discontinued

In order that alumnae may have their official homecoming at Thanksgiving time, the celebration of Parents' Day and Homecoming will be changed this year at Florida State College for Women. Parents will observe Parents' Day some time in October as in the past, rather than at this time.

The change was announced yesterday by President Edward Conradi because of increasing requests on the part of alumnae to restore Thanksgiving as official homecoming, and because it was felt the parents could be better entertained at some weekend centered more around their interests. Lack of space does not permit accommodations for both sets of visitors at the same time.

Parents Come In May

Parents' Days have been set for the weekend of May 10, which is one of the most colorful and most beautiful times of the campus. It is always held the first Saturday in May, which comes near Mother's Day and will afford an opportunity for reunions of many mothers and daughters.

Alumnae will continue to hold their Alumnae luncheon and meetings of an educational type of gathering where college faculty members and alumnae may keep the returning graduates posted on latest trends in modern education. This will take place in the spring.

Both parents and alumnae are welcome to visit the campus at any time, but these two particular weeks are set especially for their enjoyment.

Last year over 450 parents and friends of students attended the Thanksgiving celebrations, at which time the basketball team won a 27-18 victory over Weddo, and the Even varsity team downed the Odds 29-20.

Last Year's Programs

Also included in last year's programs were the dedication ceremonies of Reynolds hall, the new infirmary, and the new dining hall, the Tyson cottage, the new dance exhibition, and the usual demonstrations. The theme of the Even Show presented that year was "Oddkiller Wins the Day," in which Ella Mae Lee was crowned the fair Princess Evonne from the wicked clutches of King Oddkiller. The Odds held sixth out followed this event, at which there all Odds marched their way around the campus carrying lighted torches and singing their songs.

"The Wizard of Odds" was the title of the Odd demonstration, which told the Odd Athlete's journey to the land of Odds where he met the Scarecrow, Tin Woodsman, and the Cowardly Lion. After many tribulations they finally overcame the forces of evil.

Joubert to Address Academy of Science

Securities Regulation Will Be Discussed

William H. Joubert, instructor of economics, will present a paper entitled "Problems Involved in Securities Regulation" at the first meeting of the Tallahassee branch of the Florida Academy of Science Monday.

Based on his research work last year in the graduate division of the University of North Carolina, Mr. Joubert will take up the subject of government regulation of stocks and the effect of the New Deal on securities.

All faculty members and students are invited to attend the meeting which will take place in room 207 of the science building at 8 o'clock.

Chemistry Teachers Go To Gainesville Meeting

Dr. Leland Lewis, Dr. Jennie Till, and Miss Isabelle McKinnel represented Florida State college chemistry department at a meeting of the Florida Chemical Association in Gainesville, Wednesday.

Highlight of the meeting was a talk on "Radioactivity: Natural and Artificial" given by Dr. Lewis, or who presented this discourse, was Dr. Lind of the University of Minnesota, president of the American Chemical association.

As War Becomes Grim Threat, Girls Recall Tales of Fathers Who Went "Over There"

BY BETTY JEAN DAVENPORT

Those who are called safety in college are just beginning to awaken to the fact that war can and is real and not merely accounts in history books. The realization has swept over them on with blitzkreig force since our brothers and fathers have entered the air corps or going to training camps under the conscription bill. Somehow, it seems, we must look ahead to the Christmas holidays and see that the disorganizing effect of war will be a reminder that the young men of our generation are preparing for war—war such as humanity has never experienced before.

And when we start to think about war, we have heard our fathers tell of World War I—stories of the "good old days" and of the so "anti-war propaga.da." Now we can begin to understand how very real war must seem to them, because they have seen the hideousness of it. They can tell us how horrible war really is and we never realize that the present war tactics and weapons are far worse than those used in destruction, than ever before.

Many of the college girls' fathers served in the last World War, at home and abroad, and their experiences, memories, and stories will be a part of their daily life in the trenches as well as other branches of service.

It seems to be the general opinion of the students that most of those who were actually at the front are hesitant to talk about the horrors of the front lines, but rather of the more humorous incidents which occurred during the periods of relaxation.

One student has several simple French Grammars — "Soldiers and French Course," $1.50—in which are given the most fundamental words and phrases which would be necessary and useful in talking with the French soldiers and in ordering from French menus.

Another girl has a wrist watch which her father wore while he was "over there," and the amusing fact about it is that it still runs and keeps good time!

One girl's father has told her that in crossing the Atlantic, the ship which he was on dis.ha.ged a wandering "...se in order to avoid submarines. Another of the students' father was a captain in the medical corps at Le Mans, France, and even though he never did quite reach the front, he said the hospital was crowded to capacity with wounded for miles back of the front lines.

Another father was in France with a group of soldiers who decided to celebrate with an old barn. They had scarcely moved away from it early the next morning when it was completely demolished by a bomb. Fortunately they had to remain abroad for several months after the peace was signed and of three spent their time touring about France, Belgium and Holland, some of the time travelling by motorcycle.

One of the more facetious tales is told by the ma.ha.. of several soldiers who, during occupation, had to sleep in the same billet, and after becoming pretty well intoxicated, decided to walk the street. One of the least steady of the men stumbled into an enormous abandoned wooden shoe and had quite a bit of difficulty in extricating himself. Subsequently, he soon gained the appellation of "Shoe."

Many of the fathers of girls here served in the trenches of France for months on end, and their stories of the horrors of trench warfare are numerous.

Tri Delta Team Wins Swimming

Thetas Second, Chi O's Third in Aquatic Intramurals

The Delta Delta Delta sorority swimming team once again easily captured the intramural swimming crown by a wide margin over the other teams participating in the meet which took place in the college pool Friday afternoon.

Due to the fact that a great number of contestants entered the 25-yard free style, and the relay back, two heats were run off.

Winners in the first, second and third places were: 25-yard free style race, Delta Delta Delta, dining room, and Kappa Alpha Theta; elementary backstroke (form), a tie between West Landis and Delta Delta Delta, with the Alpha Delta Pi third; balloon race (novelty), Kappa Alpha, Theta and West Landis; side stroke (form), Reynolds, Pi Phi and A. D. Pi tied for second. The racing back was won by Kappa Alpha Theta and followed by Pi Phi and the Chi Omegas. In the old clothes relay, a novelty, the Chi Omegas were first, Kappa Delta, second, and the Tri Delta third.

In the diving events the results were: running front dive, a tie between Pi Phi and Kappa Delta, with Delta Phi Epsilon third. The back dive effected a tie among the Chi Omegas, Jennie Mugford and Tri Delta. Backjack knife was won by West Landis. Tri Delta, and the Dining Room and Kappa Delta tied for third.

The final scores gave Delta Delta Delta 28 points, Kapa Alpha Theta 21 points, and Chi Omegas 14.

Denora Ecker and Irene Premo were co-chairmen in charge of the meet.

The next intramural sport will be golf in about two weeks, intramural manager Frances Battle has announced.

Chilean Speaker Seeks Latin-American Unity

Inter-American affairs, and is assisting with language at the Spanish-speaking house on the campus. This house is composed of Spanish students who will study American ones who study that language. Formerly these students were kept apart, but now they live in a certain section of the dormitory.

He has also distinguished himself as a public speaker and writer. Traveling and lecturing under the Institute National in Santiago and the Linacre Society of Cottage, his university. Before coming here he was associated with the Pan-American Victor offices in Chile and Argentina in the advertising and editorial departments.

Mr. Montenegro is the son of Ernesto Montenegro, and was a student at the University of Colorado in 1934, a master's thesis. He is an international lecturer, biographer, journalist, novelist, essayist, and author of folk tales of Chile. At present he is associated with the Carnegie Endowment for Peace to promote good will between the American republics through inter-change of artistic values in lectures. In accordance with this he is the United State lecturing in colleges and universities.

Mr. Montenegro, continuing his address by explaining the rise of the middle class, and the educational reforms in the majority of the women stay at home, but some are becoming more and more interested in political business life. Most of the men enrolled in colleges in Chile, and whether or not they intend to be lawyers, just for the cultural benefits. Chile is gradually turning toward industrial, however, for the present lack of education and material, embarks have retarded the South-American development.

He also told how hich the resentment against the Spanish is in some parts of Latin America. France has always been dearer to their hearts than Spain, and at present England is becoming important. But since the Spanish revolt against Spain, England took an interest in and aided the old parent countries. Now, she wants Chile to aid her at least morally.

"South America can be compared to Chinan and Tibet, for it is so different in certain sections. This wideness is the largest obstacle toward getting them together, but I believe that variety makes for unity. The proof of this is that similar countries find it hardest to agree—Argentina and the United States for example. In order to increase such differences rather than similarities, a better understanding must be brought about between the nations."

In conclusion, Mr. Montenegro confincied a discussion based on American writers.

Vogue's Editor Opens Contest

Fashion Magazine Offers Careers and Cash To Winners

NEW YORK—The sixth Prix de Paris, Vogue's annual career contest for college seniors, was announced today by Edna Woolman Chase, editor of Vogue magazine.

"Our purpose in sponsoring the Prix de Paris contest," said Mrs. Chase, "is to discover college girls who have the ability to write and a flair for fashion. To study the contest is a means of adding to your college educational staff. To contestants it offers a tremendous opportunity in professional feature writing which they will find invaluable in determining whether it leads to a prize or not."

This year, Vogue's Prix de Paris consists of first and second place awards. First prize is a year's employment on Vogue's fashion staff. Formerly, this prize included six months in Vogue's Paris office, but now, for obvious conditions, the winner will spend the full year in the office of Vogue's great New York office. Second prize—a special Vanity Fair award—is the same as a feature writer on Vogue's staff. In addition, five special prizes will be awarded for the best contest themes.

Entries before the seven major prizes "Honorable Mention" will be awarded to contestants whose papers show unusual merit. These awards carry with them the possibility of jobs in a wide variety of fields. Honorable mention winners will be interviewed by people by means of questioning letters, and publications. Of the 60 leading colleges in the five previous contests, 40 are today following careers in a variety of fields.

Last year over a thousand seniors from 250 colleges in 43 states entered the Prix de Paris. First prize winner was Mary Moon of Vogue's staff. Second winner at Bryn Mawr. Second prize went to Jean Gould of Evanston, Ill., a senior at Northwestern university. Iiota Barker of Dubuque, Ia., senior at Byrn Mawr was awarded the Vanity Fair prize. Cash prize with-holding of jobs in New York: Gwendolyn Smith college. Nancy Moseley of the University of California, Mary Patricia McAfee, of the University of Southern college. Honorable Mention awards were awarded to both Wilson of McMurray college, Frances Ann Jones of Vassar college. Nancy McPadden of Northwestern; Blake college, Kendall Kolan, of the University of California at Los Angeles, Betty Martin of Smith College, Hilda Reis of Vassar college. Jane Straus of Mount Holyoke college, Evelyn Lyman of the University of Southern California, Suzanne Morton of the University of Louisville, and Betty Lou White of the University of California.

Odd-Even Teams Start Practice

Record - Breaking Groups Report as Practice Gets Underway

An all-time record was set on campus this week when 210 students reported for practice in odd-even sports, basketball and volleyball. This is over one-tenth of the girls registered at school.

The evens, who practice on Monday, Wednesday and Fridays, have many veterans of past years out besides the freshmen. Meta Helms, student coach of volleyball, reports that she has 86 girls out for the game. Faulded Gaines, Marian Webster, Cecelia Harper, and Mary Jane Medlin are playing their usual good game while newcomers Carmen Crespo and Dot Bryant are showing excellent playing ability and good technique according to Miss Jean Wood, basketball student coach for the evens, has 46 students out for practice, from which she will pick the Thanksgiving game last year.

Brunelle Mobley, student coach for odd volleyball for the second year, is still spiking the ball over the net with Pat Patterson and Diana Vervoose to back her up. There are 84 players, most of whom played last year, out for this sport. The odd basketball team, under the coaching of Frances Battle, is working on passing and combination of guards and forwards. Thirty-two have been out for practice.

In Miss Pridgen night, as an added attraction to help the odd and even sports, there will be two basketball coaches, Jean Wood and Frances Battle, have arranged for a team chosen from those going out for the Thanksgiving game to play a three-quarter game night besins. This gives the players a chance to get used to playing competitive ball, and the coaches a chance to try out different combinations.

Play night promises t be a very hilarious affair tonight when the skits of the various organizations on campus are presented. This program of skits is presented every year under the sponsorship of the College Government association. Prizes are awarded for the best skit and this year's prize is to be a cake.

Among the organizations taking part in the contest will be: Delta Phi Alpha, German honorary; Flambeau, 4-H club, Spirettes, Interna, and others.

Immediately following the skits there will be an Odd-Even basketball game. This game does not in any way relate to the games held at Thanksgiving but is merely played to give more girls a chance to play and stimulate a better spirit of rivalry among the Odds and Evens.

Dancing will follow the game under the direction of the playnight committee with the social committee acting as hostesses. All students and their dates are invited to come.

YW Leader Calls Retreat Successful

Joint Meet With YMCA Ends with Vespers

With the close of one of the most successful retreats in recent the organization's history, the short impressions which have been turned to campus Sunday night eager to apply ideas resulting from conferences with leaders of the University of Florida YMCA, according to Lucile Ball, YW president of the local group.

The joint retreat of the "Y" leaders from both colleges opened Saturday afternoon at Camp Wakulla Springs with Miss Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, professor of philosophy at Agnes Scott, and vocational advisor of the YWCA, and Mary Lois Thomas. Saturday evening the group listened to a round table discussion on the subject of "Religion" which was led by Joan Weaver.

Dr. W. H. Johnson, professor of religion at the university, spoke at the early morning worship service Sunday, and conducted discussion on "Service" followed. by Bill Lippold, president of the YMCA.

During the church period Sunday morning Miss Dr. Anna Bowler, sociology professor at the university, conducted a discussion for students on "Religion and the Social Order."

The thirty-five students returned to the FSCW campus Sunday evening with the joint Y vesper vespers program before a large audience in the auditorium of Little Theatre. Dr. C. E. Moore, professor of sociology, was the vesper speaker.

Swimming, canoeing, and sailing on the lake attracted many of the boys and girls participated between meetings. Saturday evening's supper was an outdoor wiener roast on the shore of Lake Bradford. Miss Dr. Forbes's breakfast the students worked over wood fires to cook their own eggs and bacon, and the Sunday dinner featured steaks grilled by the boys.

Girls from the colleges who attended were: Mary Lois Thomas, Elizabeth Mc-Donnell, Marjorie Ruth Trott, Edith Pfarr, Martha Bostwick, Betty Ann Taylor, Robbie Lee Hall, Mary Ann Hampton, Mary Anna Hampton, Marie Mashburn, Mary Elizabeth Hammond, Joan Weaver, Katherine Alexanderakos and Margaret Lasalle.

Among those from the University of Florida who attended were Bill Lippold, Bill Norman, Eric Earl Hood, Bob Bowden, Charles Harry Baumer, Turner Hoxan, Enos Kerr, Wallace Fuller, Dave Sapp, Jack Miles, Herbert Brown Jack Miles, Herbert Brown Jr., Dominee, Maurice Parsons Wallis Fuller.

Queen Elizabeth Compliments Santelmann and Marine Band

Leader Describes "Greatest Thrill" of Career as British Monarch Praises Music

"The most thrilling event in my musical career occurred the summer before last when Queen Elizabeth complimented me on the Marine band's rendition of 'God Save the King' during their Maryland's visit to the White House," stated Captain William P. Santelmann, leader of the United States Marine band and distinguished musician, who directed the concerts given by the band on the campus Monday.

"Queen Elizabeth is even more beautiful and gracious than her pictures would lead one to be continued. "No picture will ever do her justice."

Captain Santelmann's career preparatory to this incident was founded upon thorough musical training and 78 years of experience as a member of the band. His father, William H. Santelmann, founded the Marine band from 1898 to 1927 and served as its leader for a total of 53 years. The present leader studied violin under his father, graduated from the Washington high school and studied at the New England Conservatory of Music.

Santelmann Takes Command

Upon entering the band, then still under the leadership of his father, as a private in 1923, Captain Santelmann began a rapid climb up the ranks from violin soloist to second leader in 1925, to acting leader in 1930, a position which he held for 15 months. Late 1931 he received the command of the oldest military band in the nation.

The leader of the marines expressed his pleasure that the band has been invited to play in Miami, Florida, the only state in the union, in which he has never played with.

"Florida is the forty-fourth state I have visited," said the captain, after describing the ceremonies attending the band's appearance performed for the first time by the band.

The golden harp which attracted so much attention at the band concert on the campus was unusually found in a band Captain Santelmann purchased in Paris in only two or three concert bands in the nation which use harps. The use of the harp in the band is covered with gold leaf and is 6 feet high.

After leaving Tallahassee the band is placed at Gainesville and Deland. It is now headed north again and will end this season's tour in Washington within two weeks.

Alumnae College Date Remains Set for Spring of Coming Year

Campus Unable to Accommodate All Graduates During Thanksgiving Festivities

To settle discussion which arose at the last business meeting of the Alumnae association held at Alumnae college last spring, concerning the time of Alumnae college, the committees appointed by the president met at their last week.

That committee, composed of Daisy Parker, chairman; Kathrine Warren and Mary Settle, after considering the question from all possible angles, came to the conclusion that Alumnae college should remain set for the spring of the year due to the fact that the college would be able to better accommodate the returning alumnae, also fewer events would conflict with this arrangement. At the same time, the committee felt that those graduates who wished to return at Thanksgiving should have the right to come back then and consequently decided that the Alumnae association should welcome those who return for the Thanksgiving festivities.

The same arrangements which are in effect at Alumnae college will not be used. Alumnae who return at Thanksgiving will have to make their own plans for rooms and meals, with the exception of the Thanksgiving dinner tickets which will be sold by the alumnae office to students or alumnae requesting them. But this event and the college will be glad to have alumnae come at this time and some events will be planned for their pleasure.

It is the hope of the committee that this arrangement will be satisfactory to all concerned, since it is felt that this plan will continues to serve the best interests of the alumnae and at the same time take into consideration the fact that college facilities are limited. The Alumnae association hopes always to be able to have returning alumnae all accommodations possible, and at Thanksgiving this hope could not be due to lack of space both in the residence halls and dining halls. However, those alumnae who wish to come at Thanksgiving and those who desire rooms to the Alumnae college in the spring, will find a few rooms available at the office.

Mrs Frank Moor Appeals To All FSCW Alumnae

With the opening of our beautiful Student Union behind us, it is my hope that alumnae and friends will shall all over the state will turn their attention to the immediate of raising funds to continue our project of furnishing the building. To appreciate the loveliness of the furniture purchased for the building—lounges, bed rooms, recreation and foundation rooms—you will just have to make a trip to Tallahassee to see it for yourself. I am proud of our achievements so far, but there is much more we can do when we finished.

Please, Alumnae, who put your heart and soul in a shelf for future remittance and those of you who have bed and folders, send your contribution to me; it isn't too late. I hope the Long Leaf will have a part in helping to equip this building, and will only make it a memorial to our late beloved Miss Longmire, but how about remembering some good friends, living or dead, in this building which will almost "speak" with welcome as we enter the doorway?

Our paramount need, at the present time, is a rug for the main lounge. It will need 81,000 and will be made in three sections. Of course we could get a cheaper rug but you who have had experience in housekeeping know that one would be very poor economy. Then, too, our rug has been selected to "tie-in" with the beautiful draperies and other furnishings in the room.

It has been hard work this year. Numerous details have had to be worked out, but I want you to know that all the time and effort I have put into this project have been repaid and rewarded a thousand times over again in just having my name, your dream, of 20 years come true. Thank you for your help and co-operation!

My mailing name is still Mrs. Frank D. Moor and my address is still Tallahassee, but I am very fortunate in the building and furnishings committee headed by our president.

Girls, if you are interested in the continuance of this project, drop me a card to that effect, as the only encouragement will help me wonderfully. Though I could no more turn back and stop my interest in this project than I could stop breathing. It has "gotten under my skin" and I hope the "bug" will bite many of you to spread the contagious disease of enthusiasm and interest—in the building! Let's keep it the active part in the growth and development of our Florida girls who enter through the gates year after year.

This memorial to Miss Longmire my dear friend, I close to my heart, and I know that many of you feel as I do. You must sacrifice a little bit to really get the deep feeling for this memorial that I covet for you.

Loyally yours,
BETH W. MOOR.

Building Opens With Reception

Alumnae, Friends Come From Over Florida To Open House

Lounge of Student-Alumnae Building

Elizabethan style is the keynote to the furnishing of the main lounge of the Student-Alumnae building. The furniture, which is valued at five thousand dollars, was purchased with part of the fund raised in a drive last year conducted by Mrs Frank Moor, past president of the Florida State college Alumnae association.

Regulations Concerning Alumnae Honor Award

According to provisions drawn up by the first Award of Honor Committee, the award of honor is to be given to alumnae who have brought distinction not only upon themselves, but also upon their Alma Mater.

1. Achievement may be attained in the field of Science, of Liberal Arts, of Professional Service, of Government, of Civic and Social Service, or in the Arts.
2. The following rules were approved by the Board of the Alumnae association in May, 1938:
   A. That any person who recommends herself for the Award of Honor shall not be considered by the committee.
   B That a quorum of five of the committee should be present before any award can be made.
   C. That a unanimous vote of the committee should be required before any awards are made.
   D. That the Alumnae Award committee should follow up on the name of a candidate on whose name action has been deferred.

Alumnae Group Makes Ashmore New President

Graduate of '26 Asks For Suggestions On Alumnae College

Pictures Formal Opening Of New Student-Union

At the regular meeting of the Alumnae association, held, as usual, as part of the Alumnae college events, Gracie P. Ashmore, class of 1926, was elected president of the association for the year 1940-41.

While in college Gracie was a music major and stood high in school she has been active in musical circles in her town of Oraceville and in the state as well, having won first place in a song writing contest last year. She is very active in civic work. She teaches the fourth grade at Oraceville. teaches music privately and is president of the Woman's club which she has served for many years in other capacities.

Her one particular love is Florida State College for Women, and the Alumnae association is fortunate in having her for its president. Announcing the opening of the Student Alumnae building, which will be one of the major projects of the association this year, Gracie writes

Writes to Alumnae.

Dear Alumnae:

Friday night, Oct. 11, I attended the formal opening of our beautiful Student-Alumnae building and wished for every alumna in the state of Florida to be here to see its beauty as a building and the part that is furnishes us. The main lounge is furnished except for the rugs and is most artistic and lovely with Curtis Bethan style. Large bouquets of dahlias and chrysanthemums, gifts of alumnae and friends for the opening added more beauty to the distinctive appointments. Several hundred people—students, faculty, alumnae and friends of the college visited the building and were in complete accord in congratulating the Alumnae association and the college for the construction of this building.

I sincerely hope tha' this structure which is an everlasting symbol of our love and devotion to our Alma Mater will be a bond to draw us closer fraternally, and will become a means of creating and maintaining more interest in the college and the association. There is still much to be done to make this building complete and I am making an appeal to you now to

How About A Book Room?

How would you like a reading room in the student union building? Yes, a conveniently located room where you drop in most any time and pick up something on the light side yet something of standing in modern literature.

The idea of such a room in the campus' new building all began at the first of the semester when by chance in a small corner of the stands, the door of the smaller room opposite the main lounge saying "Browsing Room" met several students here disappointed to learn that it was only intended as a sort of informal lounge and would contain no reading matter. But since that time it has been decided that a reading room in the union is not at all impossible.

To begin with, however, there are many definite set-backs. First, there are some who will say that there is no need for such room as a formal library when we have such an extensive "Browsing Room" in our main library. But supporting the new room are those who feel that our present reading room has both an inconvenient location and an inconvenient time schedule and even the head librarian, Miss Louise Richardson, has said that there are certain students on campus who do exude a demand for two such reading rooms.

Second in the arguments against a small library in the new union are the facts presented by the dormitory directors. They will tell us how magazine subscriptions were cancelled after all the halls after finding out that students walked off with nearly every copy that was placed on parlor tables. But there certainly should be some way to cope by the students really desired it. And Miss Richardson, directed as always to the needs of students that reading is a splendid recreation, has offered her services wherever they are needed in order to get another reading room started.

Just this week we received a letter from D. R. Anderson, director of the university's student union, which has an informal reading room in a convenient location. In his letter Mr. Matthews says:

"We are very proud of our small reading room here in the Union. It contains four or five hundred volumes, and I think that about two hundred boys daily. We spend about $150.00 a year on the library, buying new books, magazines etc., and all are selected from our Florida Union budget. A member of my staff, Brian Beggs, is the head of the library, and assisting him are four NYA students. We have an assistant on duty nearly all of the time that the library is open, 8 A. M. until 11 P. M., including Sundays. Due to the small number of books that we have in our library, we do not purchase any of the books to be checked out. The students must read them in the Union. I should like to recommend a reading room to you very enthusiastically because I think it represents one of the finest services around the Union. I am sure from close cooperation with the University library, and our books are ordered and catalogued from the same department."

After hearing what Mr. Matthews has to say on the matter it seems even more possible that our Union also could have such a reading room. To be sure the room isn't furnished yet, but the student-alumnae furnishing fund will have chance at that. With a few chairs and the various organizations and classes and even a special drive, if that were necessary, it seems that we could collect enough money to get at least a start on the volume—a few subscriptions to good magazines and perhaps a subscription to the Book-of-the-Month club.

Yes, it does appear that it would be desirable to have another attraction to our almost perfect student alumnae building—an attraction that would offer students at almost any of their leisure hours the latest copy of Harpers, New Republic, Life, Good Housekeeping, or even, Esquire and the latest magazine from China, Siam, Thomas Wolfe, or John Steinbeck.

A Tribute To A Lady

Because Miss Rose Denham, social director here for 24 years, has for so long symbolized a distinct part of college life to so many students, the Flambeau has asked Miss Kathryn Byrd, social director of Landis hall to express the feelings of all of us who knew her. We quote Miss Byrd:

"It is a pleasure to Miss Rose! We know a few people who might adequately express an appreciation of her exemplary life. Certainly we very humbly recognize our own inarticulateness and inability to do so.

For 24 years Miss Denham lived on this campus. But, to the last analysis it is the quality of her service rather than the length of her residence which is so amazing. And it is the spirit which motivated this service which is a challenge to us who knew her, loved her, and worked with her.

Her spirit-in-law Mrs. Thomas Denham said in a recent tribute to Miss Rose, "Students came and went but each one under her care was a separate problem." Each one—and their problems at home or in college were her own. Each year multiplied the number of undergraduates she felt unsettled in college until Miss Rose had heard about the summer vacation, the latest beau, and had approved the current style. Hundreds of alumnae found Homecoming incomplete until Miss Rose knew about the present girl, the most perfect husband, or the newest baby. And these friends kept coming back year after year for on the annual visit to remember what the job was and both the husband's and the baby's names. That was one of her most endearing traits. This vivid interest in people was the keystone of her contribution to our college life.

As we think of her life we know we have witnessed a philosophy at work. Her beliefs were active, vital forces. She was truly a Christian gentle lady. Her unfailing loyalty to this college, her intolerance of anything cheap or shoddy, her refusal to compromise if it meant alteration of her ideals or standards, her kindly patience, her will to live in the face of almost unsurmountable physical setbacks have been inspiring. And her humbleness—all these qualities were reflected in her life's friendships.

So many people loved Miss Denham. Among these was a group whose friendship she prized highly—the servants. Miss Rose appreciated in her gentleness toward them and her consideration of them made her quite special in their eyes. One of these personal friends said on other day, "No, ma'm, we'll never forget Miss Denham." The way he said those seven words, his name omitted, implied that the impression on his face as he stated what was to him a fact, "in spirit and in truth," continued to form the complete tribute to her life and memory.

Truly, we'll never forget Miss Rose.

Visitors, Welcome

The surprising news that broke today concerning the change in the celebration of "Parents Days" and "Alumnae Homecoming" has undoubtedly set many to thinking about it. The alumnae now are to have their official homecoming at Thanksgiving time, and parents will observe "Parents Days" as one week-end alone.

According to the report, the change was made by the administration because there was an increasing number of requests on the part of the alumnae to restore Thanksgiving as a time of full homecoming. And because it was felt the parents could be better entertained as one weekend later devoted more to their interests. Lack of space does not permit accommodations for both sets of visitors at the same time.

For the last few years when "Parents Days" have been the feature of Thanksgiving week-end, there has never been a stream of alumnae returning, too. For freshly graduated girls Thanksgiving is the time to come back. That is the time that campus spirit rides high. The football games, the dances, the pep rallies, the demonstrations, the games, the night-outs and the color rush means more to alumnae than to parents.

Accordingly, in the present plans, "Parents Days" will be the weekend of May Day, which is considered our of the outstanding beauty spots of our year. This festival is always held the first Saturday in May and therefore comes near Mother's Day. Naturally, and appropriate time for family visits.

One difficulty, however, might incur for seniors with the late "Parents Days." With their parents present at the Tallahassee for graduation, they will probably have to refuse the "Parents Days" invitation. In the spring run it seems that will be the parents who are inconvenienced, as many of them are probably planning trips to Florida State colleges for Spring holidays. But there are also some will undoubtedly come anyway, so no one will mind much.

Alumnae can still hold their annual "college," consisting of an educational gathering at which members of the college faculty and other speakers keep the alumnae organization posted on the latest trends in many fields. Having a weekend in spring the alumnae will be able to take a holiday of fall or spring and have fun and culture at the same time.

With this stress on special times for special visitors, we only hope that the visitors won't be frightened off. The isles is not to be selected, but to those weekends when the pleasure and entertainment of certain groups are paramount. We are always ready for company on the trail of campus life and pep rallies. We want more features!

Wednesday Made History

On Wednesday later signs hung over the streets in the towns and cities of the United States, proclaiming "Today is Registration Day." For the first time in our history all men between the ages of 21 and 35 registered for peacetime conscription. Most of them came willingly; the ones who didn't were issued questionnaires, while among the objectors were the time students at the University. Theological seminary who had announced in advance that they would not register From all walks of life the men flocked to the polls of registration, doctors, lawyers, farmers, members of the CCC, forsmers, mechanics, and even the idols of Hollywood. They now await the news of who will be drafted. The first draft numbers will be drawn from a large bowl in Washington in the presence and order of conscription. Finally the induction board will pass on the individuals. detes.aining whether they are eligible for draft. In Reno, where divorce laws are not only registering the men but issuing marriage licenses they refused to grant one to a certain prospective bridegroom who was less restrictive, for information that he was marrying to avoid the draft.

With Election Three Weeks Away

President Roosevelt and his opposition candidate, Mr. Willkie, have been campaigning throughout the country during the past week and the end is not in sight as the draws near. Very much discussed was the circular printed by the devoted citizens of the Republican national committee, in which Mr. Willkie's character, his personality and Mr. Willkie labeled as prodemocracy. Democratic presidential Republican candidate said that President Roosevelt had practiced a speech on tolerance yet his campaign material was both militant and warlike. Senator Ed Flynn, the chairman of the Democratic national committee, maintained for the action of the colored division in circulating the pamphlet stated "Hitler and Stalin did it" and said: "Reference to Mr. Willkie's family is one which every family have no part in a political campaign." No doubt it is a gentlemen agreement, since neither of the candidates' families has escaped the criticism.

Willkie plans to make 55 more speeches before Oct. 28, making a total of more than 500 since his acceptance address. The remainder of his campaign will be spent mostly in the four states with the heaviest electoral votes, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Illinois. Roosevelt has about matched Willkie's speech for speech in number, for although he is on an "inspection" tour of the Pacific coast and Ohio, it was not at all devoid of political aspects. In Ohio he outlined the defense program and foreign policy as one of "total defense of all the Americas and the adjacent oceans." H asserted that no compromise would be made into stopping the aid to Britain

Or Forever Hold Your Peace . . .

In the recent straw vote of presidential candidate preference on this campus, the students failed to vote in large numbers. Significance alone in this fact? Why should the majority of college girls here such an important part in interest in current politics?

Perhaps it is because no one feels the importance of the pending problems in our country. No one discusses politics. Not even a mention of the word. Yet the opinions held in private circles of a campus election were imminent.

This campus government is supposedly a miniature of our government and I believe one of its purposes is to fit us for the life of the nation. But we will not know how to discuss future problems or even know how to attend to wise when if we are not first acquainted with the issues of our country. We cannot have good perspective unless groups of people gather at certain intervals to argue, and to form definite opinions. Until the school creates universally inaugurate and encourage this type of discussion, why can't we show interest enough to state our opinions when given the opportunity?

Collegiate Comebacks

By ISABEL DAY and TERESA SULLIVAN

Gloomy Thursday,
Gloomy Friday,
Gloomy Saturday,
Gloomy Sunday,
Gloomy Monday,
Gloomy Tuesday,
But Wednesday, goody goody,
we don dress for dinner!

We are by the CCA bulletin board that you are requested by our Emily Post-minded superiors to dress for all three of the all public places." Both of them, or will one be enough to start with?

Classes have been going strong for a full month and a half, but we still find ourselves rushing unanxiously to class every day to play a little game with ourselves. It's very simple and amusing. You merely make a wild guess at what's under the light brown paper bag on your desk and if you just can't imagine you taste it. If you still can't figure it out, and you are in the money, you take yourself elsewhere to eat undialized hamburgers—such mad fun!

We were surprised and put a little hurt the other day to find. that we had been left out of Emmamate's choice letters, a note especially for us. It said, briefly and pointedly:

Note to anyone reading this letter.

"Even if she said you could—I don't want to hear any of you." Maybe he's clairvoyant.

We know someone who will either end her career as an economics major, or else go along with the president of the United States.

When she is literally down to her last dime, she quite casually borrows one lone penny from friends and acquaintances—then goes and sits up in a corner and cigarettes or so. If this arouses no pity, then we suggest that she I-have-two-cents-I-just-need-another-penny - to - buy-a - stamp act.

Being from a long line of ardent Republicans, we couldn't help noticing the fact that Mr. Roosevelt Willkie admirers who, practically alone, cheered loudly and long when Mr. Willkie spoke on the silver you-know-what last Tuesday. Democratic applause being the haughty and condescendingly disgusted stares that were exchanged. Which, we admit, we hate to mention it, but they were the only demonstrations we could muster a few weak boos when the Willkie smile appeared

From Ohio State comes an item about a professor who sauntered into class 15 minutes late to find that the subject under discussion is nice if you don't have to take it. Subject: "What is love?" The prof. being very unhappy about this evident lack of interest in the finer things in life, made his hurt and indignant feeling known to the amazed students at the next lecture. He ended up by telling the class that he had his wife and children have indirected to any group of select interest that if the subject was not far behind. The next day there was little brain "some profs will never learn! he found the room empty. On each desk was a spooky letter.

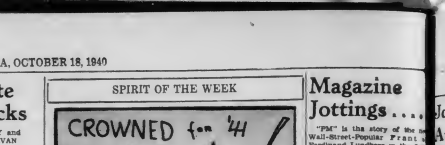
Roommate: Will you let me have five dollars 'til my allowance comes?

Also roommate: Sorry, but I only have four.

Roommate: Come to Human-kind: Oh well, you can owe me the other one.

And then there's the boy at Ole Miss who paid his fees—$120—in nickels. It seems he earned them picking cotton.

Frances G Wick, of Vassar My Dears, claims that if cracked ice is cold enough it will emit "glows and flashes of light." What we want to know is how does anyone get that close to know anything about cracked ice?



Dr. Otto Loewi, co-winner of the 1936 Nobel prize in medicine, joined the staff of the New York University college of medicine.

Iowa State College is ready to supervise the training of some 1,000 technicians for national defense purposes this year.

Flastacowo Needed

At the request of the Annual Staff of the Collier we are adding any Alumna who has a copy of volume 7, dated 'seven 1915 and 1921 of the Flastacowo to communicate with the editor, Sonia Mitchell, at the college. If you do not have this copy but know of someone who has it, would appreciate your notifying her of this request.

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK

Contemporary Student Thought . . .

The Florida Alligator is definitely supporting the peace-time draft, which is likely to be signed the manpower in our country. If a person is entitled to the privileges of democracy, the Alligator says the editorial, then he should serve in return. One American statesmen will not be able to aid in world respect if the conscription is not backed by those who are asked and can participate. Statistics from the United States have always been the most prompt to volunteer in time of national defense measures. But one of the most important reasons for enlisting thousands of by this editorial was the alternative of a few thousand dollar fine and five years imprisonment upon failure to register!

Texas State College for Women is taking to do their part in aiding national defense. The Red Cross, which has 3,271 chapters in the United States is making calls for swimming life savers. Accordingly, Texas State College is offering preparatory courses in life saving to students. At the completion of a one hour a week First Aid course now being conducted by a class of 21 girls students will be awarded a Red Cross standards first aid card. Knitting wooden socks, sweaters and helmets for refugees and for the army itself has become quite a hobby within the dormitories In order to recruit undoubtedly naval and military hospitals in case of war, the Red Cross is attempting to increase its Nurses' Reserve Such forethought will prove invaluable in combating epidemics such as the 1918 influenza epidemic which killed over million women in the United States are now at work producing garments and surgical dressings for use in European war zones.

Inquiring Reporter . .

All those who were asked this week's question. "Are you in favor of a third term, if so, why" If not why not?" have given very frank answers to offer and sound statements to support their views. The majority of the students are in favor of the third term, while the minority had strong arguments for their opinions.

Helen Jerman As far as I can see, there would be no harm in a third term as far as the third term tradition is concerned. The president is not likely to become a dictator because he only serves 12 years instead of eight. There would still be a system of checks and balances—the House and the Senate and the Supreme Court to prevent the one from usurping too much power. The "no third term" tradition is merely a tradition. There is nothing to keep a third term precedent established many years ago from being broken. I think Roosevelt is the best man for the job, I would not let the fact that he is running for a third term prejudice me against him.

Minnie Ratliff: I am definitely in favor of it.—Yes. I think Roosevelt has proved himself a leader which he should carry out. Also, he's done so much for the country that he should be permitted to complete his project.

Jeanette Faudis: The policy of "no third term" may be a traditional establishment many years ago, but that does not mean that there is no need for it today. Its purpose then as now is to maintain our democracy by keeping the power in the hands of the people rather than in one man. Isn't it true and natural that a president at the end of eight years has more power than he had at four? What would keep him from increasing his power? Two terms are a period of 12 years? The confidence of the people of a country in one man is not to be put to the test of one person's integrity. The third term might possibly be against the good of the people but even so, it would not be dangerous. As in the next case we might not be so fortunate. The risk is too great to take So I favor the third term."

Frances Little Sure. I'm in favor of a third term I guess it is because I am a good democrat. I'm for the New Deal and Deal and I don't believe in changing horses in the middle of a stream." Roosevelt is the man, anyway.

Harry Jones: I definitely am in favor of a third term. I think that Roosevelt should have the right of three terms in office. Merely because it has never been done is no reason why it should not be done now. There is a first time for everything, and right now I think is a bad time to experiment on a new idea. So it's have Roosevelt for a third term.

Bebe Rivers: I'm not in favor of a third term. When it comes to the point where there is only one man in the country to carry out the scheme of government, then the time has come to change that scheme.

Cecelia Harper: I am against a third term because I feel that in giving a man a third term we are thereby giving him dictatorial powers. Not only will we be giving him the power in the hands of one man rather than in one man. Isn't it

Magazine Jottings . . .

"PM" is the story of the man and the magazine. Ralph Ingersoll, until 1936 publisher and formerly vice-president and general manager of Time Inc. called it PM—a new kind of half dollar—not from some of the most influential families in America, but from the editorial staff and contributors no such salary is paid. The celebrities has ever before been assembled by a newspaper. Peter Fraser, editor says there is not a staff responsible for so many books.

The paper itself was to be historic event." "A new kind newspaper." It would be complete pictorial journalism; it would carry no boasting and be free from big business pressure. It would be conscious of the real problems of the day and it would be a fighting newspaper.

Mr. Ingersoll knows associated with the Luce news magazine Time, Fortune, Life, specialize pictorial journalism. The formula and make little attempt to disguise it. He has hired a brief term on the New York American, as a cub reporter and has had considerable gathering of raw news or facts from various metropolitan newspapers.

Ingersoll says that he got first idea for PM when during president's strike in 1823 all New York papers were forced together a small eight-page paper which received 100,000 readers of the idea, however, until 1941 publication.

The five years of organizing and experimenting while editor gathering of "intellectuals" to their relentless task. He then proceeded, the basic editorial attitude did not change.

The world have read Mr. Ingersoll in a memorandum in the spring of 1939 addressed to the staff of the United Front. An extract was delivered by Roosevelt to the people. On June 18, 1940 the first issue hit the sidewalks its premium of 2 cents and sixty substantially intact.

Circulation and advertising promised the readers PM better news writing that the newspapers usually print. Not all copy by staff members was written into page one stories, but any touch of editorial slant was labeled as such. Also, the wow, a copy desk was installed and now PM has one of the largest copy desks in the city. All the talent for words is not stranded.

The union that was promised brought more than ten thousand new readers and a considerable number of good journalists to get a chance to practice their art. Now after two months of publication the paper shows itself to be a success in the field it has decided. Perhaps it is a phase any growth, but PM already shows an absence of extreme co-ordination.

The personnel features mined from PM. features that are in other New York newspapers, are comics, stock market reports, detailed sports reports and boxscores, and boxscores, and advertising. But the greatest lack PM is the lack of local news, while as a picture paper PM is a decided success.

PM made its debut in the midst of the most savage war in history and the most savage peace period since the Civil war. It was launched in a depression, with five cent price in a city where some of the best papers in the country sell for a penny. It is a franchise and now has to along with less comprehensive Press service.

On the 12th July, PM devoted a full page to an article which named a long list of British members and sympathizers as being either communists or communist sympathizers. According to the publication material being circulated in competing newspapers. Some of this material was to be published to hurt the circulation of the new paper. Mr. Ingersoll in an editorial stated in the document, but said: "Because PM does not like Hitler, it does not follow that we are pro-Stalin. PM has always been and always will be a free newspaper reader grounds for suspecting that any newspaper, including this, document, should contain articles considered agreeable by the left, was a "plant."

The great question now is—Will PM make the grade? At the present there are doubts. The circulation has dropped from the 200,000 copies sold during the first days of publication. At this writing, the future of PM is fair, but the fever high. Expiration difficult.

Jamie Brown, Glenn Sears Are Wed At Tri Delta House

Sorority houses are often the scene of gay parties, dances, and the maidon do they rise to the dignity of a wedding. The Delta Delta house did this when Jamie Brown, daughter of Mrs. Mary Sears became the bride of Glenn Sears of Tallahassee at high noon Tuesday.

The Rev. Jack Anderson, pastor of the Trinity Methodist church of Tallahassee, performed the ceremony.

The parlor of the house was beautifully decorated and formed a brilliant and dignified setting for the wedding party. The mantel was paneling above the fireplace was covered with white satin with the usual designs of plumeas fern. Candelabra with graduated tapers were placed on each of the large gilt mirror hanging above the fireplace and snowy white chrysanthemums in wrought iron candlesticks were interspersed among the ferns. Palms flanked the center edges of the improvised altar.

A program of wedding music was given by Jeanne Colley, pianist, and Richard Thomas, soloist, the members of the chapter sang "O Perfect Love" and "The Lord's Wedding Hymn." Margaret Ann Al'Brew's "Mystery of Life" and "To an Evening Star" and "Liebestraum" were played during the ceremony. The traditional wedding march was used.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and was attended by Miss Mary Hutchinson as maid of honor. Mr. Sears was attended by Mr. John Teague as best man.

The bride was lovely in her wedding dress of ivory duchess satin made on princess lines and featuring a panel skirt which continued in a long court train. The sweetheart neckline was embroidered in seed pearls. The long puff sleeves ended in points over the wrists and the fingertip veil of illusion was caught by a band of pearls. She carried as her bouquet of white orchids and lily-of-the-valley ornamented by a diamond pendant, gift of the bride's father to her mother on their wedding day.

The mother of the bride wore a navy chiffon gown trimmed with sequins and adorned with orchids.

Miss Hutchinson wore a model of Williamsburg blue satin and carried a cascade of gold daisy-type chrysanthemums. The mother of the groom wore soldier blue with corsage of yellow orchids.

Following the ceremony, Mrs. Owen, mother of the bride, entertained with a breakfast in honor of the bride and bride-groom. A four-tier, bouse-mother for the party, poured coffee. She was dressed in black crepe and wore corsage of yellow orchids.

The bride later changed her wedding gown for a traveling dress in rust blue wool crepe with a fur cape. Her hat and accessories were black and her corsage was of white orchids.

Mrs. Sears was graduated from FSCW last May and since her graduation had been connected with the Florida National Bank-Loan Association of Tallahassee. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Moss Sears of Shellmai, Ga. Upon returning from their wedding trip the couple will reside in Tallahassee where Mr. Sears is manager of a local bottling company.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were: Mrs. John Council and Mrs. Milton McDonald, Americus, Ga., Miss Jane Sheldon, Quincy, Fla., Mr. and Mrs. Arvid Peterson, Pearson, Fla. Fashion Show and Dance Scenes of Entertainment For Pledges this Weekend

Invitations to a shipwreck party, a bowling party, a dance and a football frolic, and a barn dance promise to give the pledges of all the sororities many different types of affairs to attend during the next week.

All kinds of clothes, from campus to formal wear, will be modeled by the Tri Delt pledges at their fashion show on Friday night at 8 o'clock. Several stores in Tallahassee are lending the dresses for the event.

Sailing on "ship" Alpha Xi Delta Saturday at 4:30, the passengers will unfortunately be shipwrecked on an island sometime during the afternoon. Refreshments will be served there by steward Elisabeth Waterman. Dorothy Moore is in charge of all the arrangements.

To the riotous strains of "The Bowery, the pledges of Pi Beta Phi serve anymore' the Sigma Kappa pledges will give their social the last Saturday night. Amidst advertisements for cigarettes, beer and Coca-Cola, the pledges will pass sang and Emily Thompson plans the affair. Elinor Merrill was "cigarette girl" and Pat Pressley, "bartender."

It seems that they might get away from civilization, the guests of the Kappa Alpha pledges will hold a barn dance Saturday night. Hoss, rake, pitchfork and bales of hay will be the decorations. Mary Ellen Johnson is the chairman of the affair.

As this is the football season, the Delta Phi Epsilon pledges will give a "football frolic" Wednesday afternoon from 4:30 to 6:00. Hilder Kraemer and Sim Hargrett are in charge of the arrangements.

will" but would also be ultimately getting us into debt that our grand-great-great grandchildren will be paying for what we have done.

Mary Lois Thomas: I'm definitely for the draft. I think it's one of like him. I think he's done quite well so far, and I don't see why he can't go on as he has been doing.

Catherine Rhodenbrink: I'm definitely not in favor of it. I don't think that this is going to be a great break for the people that has worked so well in the past. The country has gone through other crises in the past year, and it has not been the draft that was indispensable to the welfare of the country. He could be elected down from the presidency and perhaps have served the country in a less prominent position.

Katherine Donnelly: I definitely do not favor a third term. Democracy loses an essential quality when one man becomes, or seems to become, indispensable to government. If Washington refused a third term even at a time of great national need of leadership, why did Jefferson and Wilson, opposed to a third term, it should be denied Roosevelt.

Mary Greenleaf: I am very much in favor of the third term. When as important a question as having a leader who knows his job is balanced against a principle it merely breaking a precedent the answer, to me, is obvious.

Aurora Summerada and Elaine Lawson: It seems to me that Wilkie is incompetent for the office much less that of the president of the United States.

Thermore. Roosevelt has done a lot for the working class and has improved conditions greatly. I'm all for a third term.

Norma Pennycuff: I definitely favor the third term because I believe the New Deal has proved itself and is capable of continuing for another four years. In these critical times it would be detrimental to the country as a whole to change the executive branch of the government. What we need now is continuation of

Many Students Attend U of F Homecoming In Gainesville

With fear in their hearts because they "feel a draft coming on" approximately 100 Florida State College for Women students are leaving this weekend for the U of Florida - Maryland homecoming football game and the usual round of tea dances, dances and breakfasts. Honor guests at this time will be the Tarzan Club who will give a water pageant, Tarzan and Jane, two other girls attending are Frances Battle, Margaret Clements, Jean Wood, Irene Frank, Demora Ricker, Phil Lang, Marion Swanson, Mary Sears, Ola Claude Varn, Betty Smith, Marcie MacKintosh, Nona Murphy, Irene Hoke, Patty Holland, Ann Rhone.

DAR Honors Magazine With Informal Coffee

The local student chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution held an informal coffee Monday afternoon in honor of A. T. C. Maguire, visiting state regent. Attending this meeting was Mrs. Maguire, the state regent, Mrs. Nevin Chillingworth, Florence Turner, Phyllis Kite, Anne Blanche Cross, Mary Ruth Westley, Betty Anne Wilson, Hazel Mahan, Pat Watkins, Merrianna Smith, Mrs. Hamilton Holmes, Lucille Rivers, Virginia Grimes, Louise Barton, Emily Cone, Lucile Keener, Mrs. Madeline Duncan and Dr. Vendla Shores, sponsor.

The plans and projects already begun rather than the inauguration of new ones.

June Poorbaugh: I certainly do favor a third term because it would take a new man a couple of years to feel his way around and in this stage we can't afford to waste time.

Sarah Stewart: A third term is definitely the only thing with the world crisis as it is now. Roosevelt has proved himself as able and trustworthy leader in favor of helping the people as a whole. Why not him the third time?

Mary Isabel Thompson: I do not favor the third term because it is in opposition to the traditional background of our presidents. If a man like George Washington was within a third term, why should we overrule that tradition now?

Evelyn Ann Doyle: With world conditions such as they are, the president who understands the problems and can guide the country through the turmoil. Having become very familiar with conditions and being thoroughly capable of continuing the work begun, Roosevelt deserves a third term. Time honored traditions deserve to be carried on just because they are traditions.

Ruth Hendricks: I can't say I'm not in favor of the third term or say I am. Of course, a tradition would be broken, but if it were being broken by a man who had done more good than evil for our country, I would be in favor of it. In the case before us today, "Third Termer" has led our country into enormous debt and has made our people lazy and dependent instead of encouraging them towards that virtue of independence.

Katherine Camp: I am definitely in favor of a third term because existing conditions are what they are. I think it would be most unwise to elect a new president at this time

Olivette Hancock: I am in favor of the third term as long as the man is not insane. I don't think we should change right now and have some one go into office who probably doesn't have the executive ability of the government. What we need now is continuation of

SORORITY WEEKEND PROGRAM INCLUDES INFORMAL DANCING AND PLEDGE PARTIES

National inspectors initiations, pledge parties, and banquets will make up the social activity for the sororities this week. A few houses will also have informal dances for lieutenants from Fort Benning, Georgia.

Zeta Tau Alphas celebrated their Founders' Day, October 15, by wearing white dresses and their colors, turquoise blue and steel gray. They were organized at Virginia State Normal at Farmville, Virginia, in 1898. A service was held Tuesday evening in honor of this occasion.

After the initiation of four girls, Kappa Alphas will have a banquet at the Three Torches. Decorations will be maroon and lavender, the sorority colors. The new members are: Clyde Cain, Miss Aileen Adams, Dot Dekle, and Zelda Carpenter.

Mrs. Harry Beveridge, the national inspector of the Phi Mu's in this district, will be entertained at an all-sister dinner coffee Saturday night. Mrs. Cleveland is from Coral Gables, Florida. Following the initiation of nine girls, the Phi Mu's will have dinner at the Floridan hotel last Saturday night. The table was decorated with pink and white carnations while the place cards were the seal in gold. Thoroughbreds were given as favors. The new members are: Christine Needham, Martha C. Adams, Mary Barnhart, Betsy Nelles, Mary Monahan, Mildred Lewis, Jean Durrance, and Ursa Cogdill.

Mrs. Laura F. McMullen, house mother for the Kappa Alpha Theta's will give a garden party Wednesday afternoon. The affair will honor all junior members of the chapter.

Delta Phi Epsilon will initiate Dorothy Dubbin, Claire Shapiro, Sarah Tepper and Selma Hyman Saturday night. Afterwards they will have a banquet at the Three Torches.

On Monday the Delta Zeta's pledged Virginia Mae Mitchell, Lasland and Alethia Wang, Daytona Beach. Last Saturday morning they initiated Lucille McLeod and had a breakfast immediately afterwards at the house. They received a box of stationery stamped with the Delta Zeta seal Mrs. James Peavy, an alumnae, entertained the chapter Saturday night with a party. Mrs. Crovatt, house mother, assisted her.

Chapter members of Alpha Delta Pi will honor the pledges at a formal dance Saturday afternoon. Edna Rue Hendry is in charge of all arrangements.

Alpha Xi Delta will have an informal tea Thursday afternoon from 4:30 to 6:00.

In Europe

The tension so evident last week in the Far East has transferred to the Balkans, where events are fast approaching a crisis as Germany continues to send troops into Bucharest. While Germany moves to gain both political and military control over the Balkans Great Britain were withdrawing from the country. Russia has also been given a big part in the tense situation, for Soviet troops have been stationed on the northern Bukovina frontier area. Tertus the Dardenels. Reportedly a Russian destroyer has sunk a Rumanian warship. From these happenings it is evident that Britain will have Russia's sympathy, upon the final stroke of Adolf Hitler. The reaction of the United States to the Balkan situation was not a new one. Roosevelt did what he had done when Germany invaded the other nine countries; he issued an order freezing Rumanian funds in this country. The battle between Germany and England was not so intense during the last few days as previously due to weather conditions. However in the early part of the week a great deal of damage was inflicted on both sides. In Germany the RAF bombed strategic docks and ports; in England, particularly in London, where the 57th attack of St. Paul's Cathedral was destroyed, the bombing was intense. Perhaps with the coming of autumn, the raids will lessen in intensity and Londoners will get a little respite.

Band Attracts Large Crowds

Marines Bring American Program With Variety Of Selections

Drawing the largest crowd in the history of Artist Series, the United States Marine Band which opened the series by presenting two performances in the college auditorium last Monday was so well attended that even standing room was sold in the evening. The nearest approach to such a capacity crowd was Lieut. Martini's appearance here several years ago for a single recital.

High school bands from nearby cities flocked to the afternoon performance, as did many individuals and groups of visitors from Florida and Georgia cities.

It was the band's first trip to Florida, and this engagement was the first in the state. Dressed in red coats and navy trousers, the group made a vivid picture with a large American flag hanging in the background.

Captain William Santelmann led the band in their All-American program which included a variety of serious, popular, and patriotic selections designed to appeal to a wide range of tastes.

Featured soloists in the afternoon performance were Edward Masters, who rendered "Spanish Caprice" by Leonard Smith on the cornet, and Oliver Zinsmeister, who played Badinage" by Victor Herbert on the xylophone as encores. Masters presented "Blueberry Hill" and "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," while Zinsmeister played "Whirlwind" and "Twelfth Street Rag."

The afternoon program included the concert overture "In Bohemia" by Henry Hadley, "Jabberwocky" from the suite "Through the Looking Glass" by Deems Taylor, an arranged medley of Stephen Foster's songs, "Tryion and Perisphere" by Pride Orofy, "Rhumba" from Hadley-McDonald's second Symphony, and Ernest Williams' Revolutionary Fantasy" based on a collection of variations on the theme "Yankee Doodle." The program came to a close with the playing of the National Anthem.

Encores at this performance included the cornet quartet song, "Halls of Montezuma," the march "Semper Fidelis," "Pavane" from Merton Gould's Symphonic Suite, "Gate City March," by Wilden, "Stars and Stripes Forever" and "God Bless America."

The evening program featured soloists Robert Iveis who played Arthur Pryor's "Blue Bells of Scotland" on his cornet, and Charles Owen, who played on the xylophone. Numerous encores were presented by each.

In addition to many other encores, other selections given in the evening performance were "Rhapsody in Blue" by George Gershwin, Nathaniel Shilkret's tone poem "Skyward" "Symphonic Overture" by Burnet Tu hill, excerpts from the opera "Natoma" by Victor Herbert, Howard Hanson's "Andante" from his "Nordic Symphony," and "A Victory Ball" by Ernest Schelling. The interpretation of several harmonized versions of "Taps" at the conclusion of "A Victory Ball" provided a most impressive finale before "Star Spangled Banner" which brought the concert to a close.

Board Designates New Instructors

At the meeting of the board of control of Florida State college last Sunday Mrs. Nell Woodham Green and Mrs. Katherine Blood Hoffman were appointed as part-time instructors.

Mrs. Green, instructor in commerce, received her B. S. degree in commerce from this college in 1935 and has taught two years. Mrs. Hoffman, chemistry teacher, was graduated with a B. Musically Speaking

By VIRGINIA DUNN

The most talented thing to say now is, "Wasn't the concert wonderful" . . . and it could be added, "Weren't the men attractive?" . . . well, most of them were! To those of us who'd expected to be an array of bald heads and over-developed waistlines the trim appearance and predominating attractiveness of the Marines added much to the pleasure. Or was it their handsome uniforms? In any case, the audience at the night concert was the largest that has attended an Artist Series program for many a moon. The attention was wonderful, and the behavior was splendid. Not even a cough nor breath during a short pause in the second number "Skyward," for fear that someone would enthusiastically applaud . . . then after the piece started again I myself wanted to applaud the fine technique she had broken the silence. The social committee should be very proud of us!

Did you notice the smoothness of the band in "Blueberry Hill," "I'll Never Smile Again," and the other popular numbers? You could almost hear the saxophone players pretend that Wayne King was on the job . . . why couldn't they have played a few dance numbers to grant between the afternoon and night concerts . . . you know a few dance in their honor . . . and the thing would have been as thrilling as a check from home!

Rich male tones were wonderful in the chorus bearing the "soprano" voices seven days a week for sure . . . well, six weeks anyhow!

One of the men asked if this were the University of Florida . . . he was told that this is the institution for girls . . . he was just a day ahead of himself (he had played in Boys' Town Tuesday) . . . that was the same man who ran down the back of the stage during the concert with a piece of music in each hand and a few sticks in the other . . . hitting all sorts of chimes, drums, and bells at so many various and assorted times. He was also the one who threw the hand-held drums throughout the performance . . . did you like the manner of pressing a lever beneath each drum, it is possible to vary the pitch of the drum . . . so that explains his peculiar actions . . . and those cymbals seemed dull or unimspiring. one could always watch that percussion man . . . he was usually doing something interesting . . .

All he needed to complete the Rhumba and the Dagger Dance was castanets and Virginia Mandeville Zongs and her talented daughter . . . did you like the mixture of "Swanee" and "Dixie" . . . they were played together . . . those white shirts certainly rose and shouted when the "Stars and Stripes Forever" was played . . . especially during the part when the three piccolo players did their little bit in front of the band . . .

"Chop Sticks" is coming up in the world . . . especially with the interesting rhumba rhythm as a background . . . "Rhapsody in Blue" was very good . . . but the band arrangement of this composition just naturally isn't as good as the original piano and orchestra score . . . that certain oomph wasn't there . . . did you notice the people standing for "Dixie"?

The music department is doing its share in keeping the National Spirit from waning during this world crisis . . . in the public school music class every Wednesday afternoon we sing "God Bless America" . . . Miss Phipps selected the arrangement for us this summer in Chicago . . . and it is lovely . . . perhaps you'd like to listen some time.

Did you see "Strike Up the Band"? . . . the music was entertaining . . . as Paul Whiteman's band could be anything else . . . "Gloomy Sunday" . . . you have made a some-back on campus lately . . . it couldn't be due to the fact that quarterlies are just before rearing their horny heads . . . perhaps you remember that this is the song that caused a wave of suicides several years ago . . . pleasant thought! Among other old favorites which seem to have brought up from the past lately are "Just a Little Street Where Old Friends Meet" . . . "Paradise," a grand waltz song . . . "Stormy Weather" . . . "At Sundown" . . . "Singing in the Rain."

On Horace Heidt's program Tuesday night were clever arrangements of "Cecelia" and "Love" . . . the boys are old the treatment modern . . . the effect pleasing to the ear and feet . . . do you know Harry Babbitt? Pal Stole My Sorority Gal" . . . "The Sailor With the Navy Blue Eyes" . . . "I'm Home Again" and "I Can't Believe Our My Mind" are nice ballad-type songs . . . wonder if Willkie will use the latter song to advantage in his campaign . . . have you noticed the patriotic songs that are flooding the market? . . . every few of them are worth playing more than one-half time . . . from a musical standpoint . . . or even just to play for fun . . . Propaganda, that's what it is!

Dr. M. R. Binson, professor of education, attended a joint meeting on Monday of the executive committees of the commission on Curricular Problems and Research, and the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education of the Southern Association of colleges and secondary schools in Atlanta, Ga.

At the same time, Dr. Hinson, who is president of the organization, met with the secretary and treasurer. Dr. Shelton Phelps, president of Winthrop college, to complete plans for the program of the Southern Association's annual convention which is to be held in Memphis, Tenn. December 9-13.

Dr. Hinson will have his article on "National and State Aid to Individual Security" published in the September issue of the Southern Association Quarterly.

Council Honors Florida Synod

Presbyterians Welcome Visiting Ministers With Luncheon

On two occasions during their meeting on Tallahassee visit, the Presbyterian students at Florida State College for Women entertained the Florida synod, made up of one minister and one elder from each Presbyterian church in the state.

The Presbyterian council served a luncheon in honor of the synod Wednesday at the Episcopal student house on campus. At this time the need of a student house for the Presbyterian organization, and the two for Whiteman, student houses serve were discussed. Following the luncheon, girls of the student council showed the visiting ministers and elders the lot which has been bought as a site for their proposed student house.

The synod was again entertained in the interest of student work in a formal banquet in the college dining hal Wednesday night. Leslie Patterson, president of the Presbyterian senior council on campus acted as toastmaster and welcomed the visiting group.

Girls on the senior council are Leslie Patterson, Clara Bassett, Doris Dorner, Elisabeth Miller, Delia Adams, Peggy Thornton, Peggy Hunter, Peggy Cook, Betty Perran, Louise Crosby, Amanda Zewadski, Dee Neal, Mary Clark Caldwell, Carolyn Brinson, Orace Stephenson, Katherine Burgess, Jeannette Paulis, Marjorie Mae Elizabeth Yancy, and Jane Tolford.

RESOLUTIONS UPON DEATH OF MISS ROSE DENHAM

The death of Miss Rose Denham in July, 1940, has deprived the college of one of its most beloved and revered members. Miss Rose's long connection with the college her years of happy and tireless service, and her qualities of character and personality gave her a unique place on the staff and in the hearts of those who knew her.

Miss Denham came to the college in July, 1916, and lived in Bryan hall until 1922. When Jennie Murphree hall as built she became the head resident, and continued to serve there until 1939. Then with the opening of Landis hall she was appointed one of the co-directors in this hall. For the past 24 years of service Miss Denham came to know many generations of college students and was an important influence in their growth and development.

In her girlhood days Miss Denham attended Mary Baldwin seminary in Staunton, Virginia, which was a scene that was to influence her life. Here she maintained throughout her life a warm and progressive in her ideas. she continued to study and read along the lines of her work and to keep abreast of new thought in the field of student life and guidance. Her keen intelligence and long experience in this work made her a most valuable member pf the staff of directors here, particularly in her relation with freshman students.

During the long period of her connection with the college, during the spring of '39. L.e administration and love of the studen's was constantly attested by the stream of letters, gifts, and flowers that poured in from all sides. It was at this time that her remarkable fortitude of spirit became so manifest. Former students of the college throughout the state and elsewhere continued also to send their tributes of affection and esteem on her birthdays and other special occasions and come from long distances to visit her. Among her fellow directors ah. held a position of particular honor, prestige, and affection and her opinion based on her good judgment and good sense and on the wisdom and experience of years, receives, marked deference and consideration at all times.

Throughout her life Miss Denham was a communicant of the Episcopal church and was honored by being elected for two hitches offices in the Woman's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian church. From 1909 until 1911 she was president of the Florida Synodical and from 1913 to 1915 was president of the Presbyterian Societies. At all times deeply religious and concerned with spiritual values she strove I build into the lives of those about her the high ideals of character and conduct upon which her own life was founded.

With a keen appreciation of all for which Miss Denham, stood, and the realization that there was a place which cannot be filled arah.

Therefore be it resolved: That the faculty and staff of the Florida State college for women acknowledge the lasting indebtedness to her life and our grief at her loss be recorded. That a copy of this memorial be spread upon the minutes of the faculty. that copies be distributed to the press, and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased as an expression of our sympathy.

Respectfully submitted.

Walker Says Cotillion Will Continue Lessons

Lucille Walker, Cotillion club president, has announced that the members of the club will continue to give dancing instructions to all who come to Landis recreation hall on Wednesday afternoons from 5:15 to 6 o'clock.

Lessons are being given simpler to the more complicated forms of dancing.

Miss Rose Denham

ham constantly maintained a gallant and courageous spirit, pushing on with unfailing faith and unfailing devotion to the college. Her relations with all who knew her were marked by acts of generosity and thoughtfulness and by a genuine friendliness of nature. Her appreciation of new ideas, her daily life and of kindnesses shown her by others was an eched by her own acts of beauty and of kindness. Her dignity, graciousness and charm set her apart as a lady of distinction.

For many years Miss Denham was an active and prominent member of the Presbyterian church and was honored by being elected for two hitches offices in the Woman's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian church. From 1909 until 1911 she was president of the Florida Synodical and from 1913 to 1915 was president of the Presbyterian Societies. At all times deeply religious and concerned with spiritual values she strove I build into the lives of those about her the high ideals of character and conduct upon which her own life was founded.

With a keen appreciation of all for which Miss Denham, stood, and the realization that there was a place which cannot be filled arah.

Therefore be it resolved: That the faculty and staff of the Florida State college for women acknowledge the lasting indebtedness to her life and our grief at her loss be recorded. That a copy of this memorial be spread upon the minutes of the faculty. that copies be distributed to the press, and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased as an expression of our sympathy.

Gainesville Group Hears Art Lectur

Williams Illustrates Modern Architecture

In the best of modern architectural functionalism, fitting building to the duty for which it is intended, is being stressed according to Mrs. Beatrice B. Williams, professor of art, who was on this subject to the Gainesville Association of Fine Arts Monday.

In functionalism, buildings are designed from within to without, so that the inside suggests the outside and a unity of design is achieved. Mrs. Williams used illustrative slides of Frank Lloyd Wright's buildings to show influence this architect has exerted over American and European architecture. He is at present designing buildings for Southern Florida.

Today there is a group of young mural painters, subsidized by the government, who are doing some work; maintains the art teacher. These young artists have done murals in government buildings all over the country.

Her Gainesville ta... was limited to the three main fields of painting, sculpture, and architecture She described second. Unity, harmony, and rhythm in paintings and sculpture. The third dimension in volume with the fourth includes volume, movement, and space, and the fifth mind space which is the fourth dimensional, is used in painting and sculpture.

Slides of buildings, expressing functionalism by Lescaze and Howe, slides illustrating the international contemporary American art, and slides of fourth dimensional work were also shown.

Colleges Begin Interning Plan For Teachers

Instructors Will Train In Public Schools For Semester

Internes To Be Placed Beginning In February

A plan for interne student teaching is being developed by the institutions of higher learning in Florida engaged in the training of teachers. Under this plan students preparing to become teachers will work for a semester, or a quarter, in a public school situation under the supervision of a good teacher and principal. College credit to the extent of 15 semester hours will be allowed for this interne teaching.

More Experience Needed

This plan of interne student teaching has been instituted in an endeavor to better prepare beginning teachers for their work. Experience has demonstrated that student teaching in campus practice schools is inadequate because these schools differ so radically from public institutions in addition the student teaching in the campus demonstration school is heavy that, as a rule, no one teacher is able to get enough actual experience for it to be of much real value to her as a preparation for handling large groups of children in public school situations.

Number Limited

A limited number of internes will be taken in the field from the Florida State college for women during the second semester. Each student selected for larger number will be placed each semester of next year.

Witches To Ride At Gala Frolic In Gym Tonight

Hallowe'en Celebration Will Feature Spooks In Horror Room

Under the direction of Pierrad Brown, chairman of the playnight committee, plans are being completed to make play-night this Friday a Hallowe'en party. The gym will be decorated in black and yellow pumpkins and big black cats, witches will scatter the walls. The lobby will be booths where the girls may purchase ice cream, hot dogs, candied apples and soft drinks. There will be games of chance such as dice throwing, bean bag throwing, and guessing games. The party will feature a chamber of horrors and a fortune telling booth.

A highlight of the evening will be the costume dance. During the dance all those who are in the costume, will dance and their costumes will be judged by the judges present. A prize will be given for the best costume. In addition to the costume contest there will be elimination dances and other novelty entertainment.

Hostesses for the Hallowe'en dance will wear the traditional blue and white dance costumes. The girls who will act as hostesses for the evening are Ann Paulette Nolan, Doris Knowles, Virginia Green, Charlotte Cooper, Virginia Brown, Pearl Tyler, Ruth Torres, Virginia Dunn, Mary Frances Hall, Jean Sue Thomas, Eva Adamo, Mary Lou King, Margaret Carter, Virginia Hallman, Jan Preeling, Peggy Smith, Suetta Blanding, Sara Macintosh, Nina Bennett, Mary Jane Donnelly, Margaret Tilghan and Betty Lane.

Freshmen Learn Superstitions Along With Orientation Rules

If You Want to Marry Perch on Desks Not Chairs, Upperclassmen Warn Innocent Ones

By NORMA RENNOTER

Have you ever wondered why so many things happen as they do? Did you ever stop to think that it might be because of the long lasting some special superstition? Surprisingly enough, even aside from the Hallowen season of ghosts and goblins, superstition plays a large part in the life of almost every student here on this campus. Usually at some time during her freshman year, each girl manages to fall prey to a number of peculiar theories, what with all the upper classmen hovering around, trying to be first to attract her gullible mind.

Although usually when neglected ,these omens point toward bad luck, not all fall in that category. No wonder so many of our freshmen have grey hairs. after trying to remember all the "musts" and "must not" theories. Yet, when she has accepted them, out of fear' shall we say, and she grows to them, they become as vital as they are to the upper classmen.

And when she returns for her second year of study, she is one of the first to impart her scary stories to the next group of awed newcomers. It has been, backed by careful notations that it is the sophomore class which leads in telling these tales.

In order that she may pass all her subjects and be ab to return another year, the little freshman is warned that she must have at least one crib course a year, or she will surely fail in some of her other subjects. This crib course may range in type and teacher and it is strongly recommended that they don't choose a one hour because they are harder than some three-hours.

When examination time comes around, two are three superstitions that simply cannot be disregarded. The fretting who cares, lessly walks in the road through the front gates is always sorrier than the one who stays on the sidewalks while going under the heavy iron structure. How much happier is the one who wears a hat all the while she is studying for her examination, too, taking it off the last thing at night and put it on the first thing in the morning!

These professors scorn this, especially when she appears, dangling a rabbit's foot in the other hand of their rooms, muttering "All hope abandon. ye who enter here," but it helps. It must be discovered that another proven theory to keep meeting blue

Bristol Attends State Meeting

Psychiatrists Discuss Mental Hygiene Plan At Jacksonville

Miss Margaret Bristol, assistant professor of sociology, attended the meeting of the Florida Society of the State Psychiatry association. The purpose of the meeting was to try to formulate a plan for an adequate program for the mentally sick members of the state. At the meeting, the relationship between psychiatry and social work was discussed.

Nine Florida psychiatrists attended the meeting. Dr. Will Rebec of California, who is president of the American association of Private Psychiatric Hospitals, was also present.

Miss Bristol recently conducted an institute for social workers in Central Florida. She was director of the institute which met at Orlando and "Relationships in Social Work."

There will be a series of institutes later on sponsored by the Florida Conference of Social Work and the Florida Conference of Social Workers, according to Miss Bristol.

Professors Return From State Trip

Miss Ruth Cesaink, assistant professor of sociology and Dr. George Wilson, professor emeritus of psychology, returned Sunday from a two weeks' leave of absence from the college during which time they acted as members of the Board of Control of the State Merit department. They were also interviews to select applicants for positions who have taken written merit examinations for social work positions.

Applicants in Gainesville, Orlando, Lakeland, Miami, West Palm Beach, Tampa, and Jacksonville were interviewed. Several former Florida State college students were among those interviewed.

Student Forum Meetings Suspended Until First Tuesday of New Quarter

Because of approaching quarterly exams there will be no meetings of student forum until the first Tuesday after Armistice according to Mary Pinckard Bryan, forum president of college government and chairman of the forum.

At the next meeting the discussion will be a continuation of last week's topic, "The College Woman's Part in Our National Defense Program."

Preceding the discussion a junior representative to the forum will be elected to replace Gale Angas.

Campus Revives Old Ceremonial Of Torch Night

First Week in November Will See Freshmen Pledge Loyalty

Traditional Classical Theme Turns American

Torch Night, one of the college's symbolic traditions, will be held this year the first week of November with the pool as the theater as the stage for action. This significant ceremony will be combined with Pealty last year and presented under that name, but this year a new theme program has been planned and will be presented as a separate occasion.

Will Announce Tryouts

Chairman of the event is Frances Cobb. Tryouts for participation in the pageant around which Torch Night is based, and the exact date and time will be announced in next week's Flambeau.

Torch Night has long been a tradition at FSCW. In previous years the program has had a Greek classical setting, but this time the blazing torches will frame a modernistic American ceremony.

Freshmen Get Chance

The college anthem, "Virs, Artes, and Mores" will be passed on to freshmen by sophomores at in the past. Previously 90 freshmen have been selected as representatives of the class, but Torch Night in its new garb can accommodate the freshmen's desire to participate. These are slated to see their freshman counselors for further details.

Torch Night is a symbol signifying the allegiance of freshman to his college. As the flaming torches are lighted at the symbolic altar, freshmen sophomorically pledge themselves to their Alma Mater and promise to keep their torches burning ever brighter.

New Student Party Sets Forth Aims

Political Organization Has Three Purposes

At its second meeting, last Wednesday night the newly organized Student party, elected over by Dorothy Miller, set forth its specific aims.

The aims of the political party are threefold: (1) to encourage the expression of student opinion on campus; (2) to put up an campaign for office; (3) while it not necessarily had previous experience in politics, to learn; and (3) to hold forums relative to campus issues.

The purposes of the organization are to encourage freedom of speech and to foster democratic body elections.

Next Wednesday night at 8 o'clock another meeting, of the party will be held in 203 Westcott. Future plans will be announced by posters. All students interested in the party are invited to attend these meetings, according to members of the party.

Sue Erwin Elected Astronomy Leader

Club To Name Permanent Officers Next Week

Sue Erwin was elected temporary president of the Astronomy Club at a meeting Tuesd ; Permanent officers will be elected until next Tuesday, when the revised constitution will be presented.

Miss Elizabeth Lynn, instructor in physics and faculty sponsor of the club, announced that 30 or more girls have been attending the meetings which are held every first, second and third Tuesday nights of each month. The first and third meetings are observational ones, as a rule, the telescope is taken out in front of the Westcott building until observation meetings, but occasionally naked eye observations are made. The second meeting is devoted to a program and business session.

The next observational meeting will be held November 5, when Saturn and Jupiter will be observed through the telescope every. The club is open to all students only is invited to join the club. Miss Lynn stated. The club plans to abandon an overnight trip to camp soon.

Baptists Leave For Convention

Conquering with Christ Is Theme of DeLand Student Meeting

This morning 27 Florida State college students left for Deland in order to attend the state convention of the Baptist Student Union. The students will be guests of Stetson college through Sunday. There will also be representatives from Gainesville, Southern, Tampa and Miami.

The theme of the convention is "Conquering with Christ." It will open Friday night at 7:30 o'clock with a devotional by Edith Cranston of Florida State college for women, followed by a discussion of student activity work. Other speakers during the evening will be Dr. C. Britain Jackson, Titusville, who will talk on "State Missions," and Dr. C. Roy Angell of Miami.

Saturday morning Miss Mary Nance Banks, southern student secretary of Nashville, Tenn., will conduct an interview conference on Baptist Student Union work. Dr. Angell will deliver the Saturday morning address. His subject is "Spirit—Triumph." Saturday afternoon Dr. W. S. Allen, president of Stetson, will deliver an address on "Christ Meets Modern Needs."

A banquet will be given Saturday night in the Stetson cafeteria, followed by a pay entitled "Vocations Determine Destiny," presented by the Stetson BTU.

Dr. Charles A. Medley of Richmond, Va., will deliver the Sunday morning sermon. The convention will close Sunday afternoon with an address by Dr. Maddrey on "Christ Conquering Through Us."

The music for the convention will be furnished by a sextet from Florida State college composed of Mildred True, Lucille Arnold, Evelyn Ann Doyle, Lenore Hudson, Frances Rogers, and Audrey Bolton. Mrs. Swindell and Pearl Tyler will also help with the musical program.

Students from Florida State college for women who will attend the convention are Mildred True, Evelyn Ann Doyle, Lenor Dekle, Lucile Arnold, Frances Rogers, Chaves, Christine Harkin, Frances Rogers, Mildred True, Nadine Light, Audrey Bolton.

Distaff Appoints Four

Four students have been appointed to the business staff of the Distaff. These new members are Betty Lang, Mamie Hogan, Ruth Torres, and Monkney Whittlesey. Virian Ahlswede, business manager, announced her staff members preferably freshmen were needed. All applicants will please give their names to Nell Loginos.

News! Knitter Knits Helmet

Beatrice Bennett has the distinction of being the first student to finish one of the knitted garments for the Bundles for Britain drive. She turned it in last Friday morning after she had yarn issued to her on Tuesday.

The garment is a Balaclava helmet which is worn under the tin helmet of the soldier, and it is now on display on the ground floor of the Student-Alumnae building.

Some of the knitters who are just learning, sit with their eyes and minds intensely fixed on their work, and woe be to anyone who causes them to lose count of their stitches.

Others of the girls appear to be entirely unconscious of the fact that they are knitting. If one makes a slip the ease with which they rapidly move their needles and the unconcern with which they glance around and carry on intelligent conversations.

Most of the knitters are making 12-inch squares which will be put together and used as blankets.

The more experienced knitters are working on helmets, socks, and sweaters. There is great variation in the types of articles according to the size of the needles and the yarn.

One girl, who was struggling alone with needles of about one-half inch diameter, vowed that she had never tried it—not before in her life, but she was determined to make a mitt with one needle and send over because she has a Belgian friend who may be freezing.

Debaters Sponsor Radio Broadcast

The debate club will sponsor a radio program over WTAL on Monday night at 6 o'clock on the national debate question, "Resolved: That the United States should form a permanent alliance of defense against agression."

Margaret Harrison, Dorothy Wright, Jean Kneeland, and Joan Weaver will take part in the broadcast discussion of all the phases that arise from the question.

Aspects that will be discussed are how the union would be possible, and what defence would mean. Whether or not this union will involve the United States in war and the attitudes of Canada and the South American countries toward this alliance will also be debated.

Sophomore Council Plans Group History Project

Sophomore council, at a meeting held last week, decided to sponsor as a project this year the compiling of a history of past sophomore councils.

According to Alice Price, chairman, members will write the history from the council's beginning three years ago and continue through the year. A short biography of each member will be included.

21 Club To Hear Cotterill Speak

Political Parties' Role In American Life To Be Discussed

Dr. R. S. Cotterill, professor of history, will speak before the "21" Club on the role of political parties in American life at 7:30 Thursday night in 203 Westcott building.

All seniors and other students who are 21 years old and are interested in politics and the American system of government are eligible for membership in the club.

There will be a discussion of a more formal organization of the group after the talk. Plans will be made to cooperate with other clubs on affairs of student interest.

The announcement has been made that all girls who will be at home between now and November 2 may receive a sealed ballot from the county judge's office. All others who wish to vote may do so by absentee ballot on November 5 by securing an affidavit or certificate of registration from the county judge.

Homecoming Plan Will Be Very Simple

Arrangements Committee To Schedule Events

The committee for making plans for Homecoming has been appointed as follows: Miss Charlotte Stevens, secretary of Alumnae association, chairman; Miss Dempsey Creary, director Student-Alumnae building; Miss Rachel Pickford, assistant secretary and Mrs. Kathryn Blood Hoffman instructor in the chemistry department.

The committee has not met as yet, but they are planning, to have the arrangements for Thanksgiving activities this year very simple in order that the alumnae may have a more enjoyable time during the homecoming week-end. It will be so scheduled as to avoid conflicts. It is the desire of the committee that all alumnae enjoy themselves without being rushed and confused by so many overlapping events.

Three Freshmen Selected For Flastacowo Workers

Three freshmen were chosen to be assistants to staff members of the Flastacowo for this year. The girls are Jean Kelland, Mary Frances Conerse and Jane Brown. While the students are ineligible to be on the staff this year they will be of definite for ta their sophomore year.

Today and Saturday are the final days for juniors to get their picture tickets. Senior pictures will go on sale tomorrow and will continue on sale until Nov. 9.

Adam's Studio has asked girls to please return their proofs soon. Proofs must be turned in before the studio can finish the picture.

Nineteen Girls Will Be Listed In 'Who's Who'

Moor Selected Delegate To Go To Centennial

Women Will Celebrate Century of Feminine Achievement

Word has been received that Mrs. Frank D. Moor, of Tallahassee, representative of the Alumnae of the Alumnae association, has been selected as one of four delegates from the state of Florida to the Women's Centennial Congress scheduled for Nov. 20-27 inclusive, in New York City.

Mrs. Moor was selected on the basis of prominent club work and civic work in Tallahassee; because of her outstanding work as president of the Florida State college for women alumnae association, and as sponsor of the campaign to raise funds for the Rowen's Loan fund. The Alumnae Union at Florida State college, and as a member of the American Association of University Women. During her administration, she represented the college Alumnae association at the American Alumni council in Columbus, Ohio, and served as official hostess for the national convention held in Miami in Tallahassee.

The purpose of the congress is "to look backward at achievements won, to look outward at distinguished services rendered, and to look forward to emphasis importance for the development of mankind."

Outstanding women in education, the arts, sciences, business professions, politics, religion and social services, and leader in national women's organizations are cooperating in the planning of the program for the congress which will commemorate the "women's century" from 1840 to 1940.

Among the nations' sponsors are such well known figures as Pearl S. Buck, Mary Anderson, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, and Kathleen Norris.

Chairman of the women's Centennial Congress is Carrie Chapman Catt. Miss Josephine Schain, professor of citizenship at Hunter, is chairman of the executive committee.

Senate Member Chosen

Lucille Walker was elected senator representative to senate this year at a meeting October 16 to replace Jean Kelland. Martha Morrow who had to leave school because of her health.

Vance Describes Mexican Affairs

IRC Library Receives Six New Volumes This Semester

Mexican - American relations was the subject of a talk by Professor Earl L. Vance of the journalism department before the International Relations club on Monday afternoon.

Mexico has been going through a revolution for many years, Professor Vance said, and has not yet emerged from it. Among the aims of the revolution he listed the restoration of land to the peons, reclaiming the natural resources, such as oil, for the use of the people, and the secularization of education. Under the domination of the church in the past, education, he said, had made so little progress that even today illiteracy is widespread in Mexico.

Confiscation of land and oil properties, some of which belonged to Americans, was presented as a part of the total revolutionary process. While the American government has protested these confiscations, it has in the main not vigorously opposed them which is in line with its "good neighbors" policy of allowing other American republics to work out their own problems without interference from the United States.

The International Relations club received a set of six new books last Tuesday morning. These books deal with controversial international issues and will be placed in the IRC library for the use of all students.

The library will be located in room 402 History building until its removal to the IRC clubroom in the Almanac building. The books are to be under college library restrictions, but are subject to the rules of the club library.

Besides a half-dozen new books added to the collection each semester, the IRC library contains monthly foreign policy reports and copies of the Pathfinder, a summary of international events.

Richards Says Youth Realizes War Proximity

TCDA Head Urges Clear Thinking, Defense Action

"London bombed! Three-power pact. Hitler. Air-raid shelters." Words, words and similar phrases have long been drawing the attention of all college students to the fact that there is a major war being fought abroad. Such phrases continue to appear in the newspapers, but other newer phrases are beginning to attract attention homeward to American problems.

"United States policy in the Far East. Two-ocean navy. Conscription. Bundles for Britain," have caused college students to stop and consider the realistic possibility that the United States might become engaged in war.

"Is it true the children of young people toward the war abroad and toward American defense program to someone who has access to a perspective view of college students? What can college women do to better these attitudes? What part can they play in the defense of America?

Dr. Harold T. Richards, professor of physics and general chairman of the Tallahassee committee for the defense of America, states that judging from the young people he has talked with "the large majority see the dangers to America resulting from the European situation far more clearly than college students when the Great War was in its first couple of years. Then the war was a romantic thing to college students. Then this country was still provincial.

"Many college students see more clearly now, and yet there are large numbers of students who do not recognized the urgent necessity of preparing to defend American liberties in the immediate future.

"The number of young people actually called unpatriotic is negligible small, but from the standpoint of practical results it is nearly as bad to be ignorant of the situation or refuse to make up one's mind to recognize proved facts as it is to be unpatriotic. These wishy-washy people make extra hazards that the leaders of the country have to overcome in order that we may all be saved.

"The certain amount of resentment sentiment is found among the youth of today, and I think that all young people who understand the seriousness of trying to make a deal to appease Hitler ought to consider it an urgent personal duty to show the appeasers why they are wrong."

Appeasement sentiment disturbs Dr. Richards for two reasons. "The sacrifice of individual liberty and America's freedom of action, which would be part of the price of any appeasement deal with Hitler, would make conditions under which my true American would want to live."

"As one who has studied science in some detail, I detest the cheerful sense of mind which would permit anybody to believe that an appeasement deal with Hitler would have any value. In science we learn to base conclusions on observed facts and surely the trail of broken promises which Hitler has left in his wake furnishes abundant proof that he uses fair promises merely as weapons of warfare to weaken his intended victims and soften them for the kill.

"Today," he says, "young people in being placed for interne teaching will be given the opportunity to make application.

Abbey Lectures At Investiture

Ceremony Gives Seniors Official Rights To Caps and Gowns

"A civilization of value can only come from an expression of value in human lives; it must be the result of care, thought, and devotion." Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, head of the social studies department told the investiture audience last Tuesday night.

Calling attention to the conception of youth in this country and the enormous race among nations of the world, she said at the beginning of her brief address, "We are rushing to the defense of our institutions—our liberties. What is done with achievement is as important as the achievement itself."

"A few years ago many were inclined to believe that the peak had been reached as far as physical comfort and marvels of science were concerned," she said, "whereas today almost every issue of the morning paper shows how inventive genius believed in is toppling. What we really have attained is spiritual insecurity.

"Science has never done anything without the guiding hand of the philosopher. And many individuals are rascals who have a set of values and principles for private life, and another set for public life. Education is too frequently geared to the technique of making a living, thus allowing the individual to come out illiterate in his attitude and understanding, which are requisites for good citizens in this world," she added.

"It is not whether or not you have faith, but what you have faith in, that counts for the significance of salvation is what you save things for," Dr. Abbey concluded.

Approximately 280 seniors received the official right to wear the academic cap and gown in this public ceremony. Sophomore girls formed the traditional aisle with the seniors, carrying the senior mortar boards, which President Edward Conrad in turn placed on the senior's heads.

Following the investiture, the colleges organized, played the processional "Hail to the Caps and Gowns" and the recessional "Pomp and Circumstance." In addition, they should have a brand of citizenship "immediately preceding Dr. Abbey's address. The Reverend Pierce Ellis, of the First Baptist church, pronounced the benediction.

Miss Margaret Whitney Dow college organist, played the processional "Hail to the Caps and Gowns" and the recessions "Pomp and Circumstance." In addition, she played Bach's "Toccata and Fugue" immediately preceding Dr. Abbey's address. The Reverend Pierce Ellis, of the First Baptist church, pronounced the benediction.

ought to keep informed by reading a newspaper daily and a weekly news magazine such as Time. They should have a brand of current events.

"They ought to give up the idea that the fact something never happened before means that it will not happen, or any appeasement word. He has broken it too many times to be believed any more, object, or by anybody."

In short, Dr. Richard's thesis is such that he recommends informed, clear and decisive thinking. "Get the facts and draw conclusions from them and then, finally, act accordingly. This type of thinking will show we ought to defend American liberties, and the answer is yes. We need informed, clear, decisive thinking plus the determination that individual liberties and human decency must be preserved."

Sugary-Headed Angels Prance Through Halls Seeking Revenge

Reynolds Is Scene of Bewildering Confusion as Freshmen Play Many Wierd Pranks

BY NORMA PENNOYER

Qualifying themselves as practicer freshmen, Rooms 238 to 245 in Reynolds have been maintaining the standards of all first semester freshmen in holding forth with various antics.

All the fun began two weeks ago when one of the girls was celebrating her birthday. Helping her out were two neighbors, who managed to keep all incoming mail for an evening get-together. They kept until the wholesome bough revenge by hiding precious letters and pictures of the boy loved.

Following this, the gaiety spread down the hall where one girl managed to sew up the legs and arms of her roommate's pajamas. Seeing that that didn't succeed so well, they tried to fix a practical (the misplaced spool of thread) she, with the help of others, decided on a pie-bed.

Bags of sugar were gathered together and the contents were deposited nicely between the sheets. When the poor victim slid cozy-and-fine into that pleasant "yellingly" lumped out and landed—first on the floor. By this time, about 10 others had congressed in the room, and all received pie-bed. Such was the second bed. The tussle over, the roommates went to bed—in pie.

Light flash caused sugary-headed "angels" to dash for their rooms, sugar-coating the hall on the way. During the night, surrounded by muffled laughter, the night matron crunched past all of the doors, locked down.

A few nights later cold cream and vaseline were smeared on the door-knobs, so that those who scampered back to their own rooms to find the lights were out during light flash might not make it in time.

Conspiracies lurk everywhere, so that Reynolds inhabitants are beginning to cultivate wariness of all suspicious actions. As a result, an extra precaution has been assigned to that section of the floor, but the freshies go on undaunted—seeking revenge.

Freshmen Learn of Supervised Living Along With Orientation Rites

while talking each test, that is of course, if she doesn't want to be called down.

Around Thanksgiving every year, Fall and Spring fever reach a peak. Together with color rushes, demonstrations, and games, some two afternoons each week. The aim of these concerns the drawing of freshmen into group participation in order to see which team will have the privilege of presenting the best stunt. Besides, the ones who draws the last night is likely to be left at the games. It is also told every year that the best stunt ever put across in the Westcott building first during color rush will be the victors. A little competition is always in cases when one team draws the short straw—sometimes when the other team gets Westcott but these agood opportunities have many evident advantages.

Many stories are in some way or another connected with the dining hall. Two of these are appropriate to be told as it served. Before it is brought from the kitchens, it is placed on counters the four corners of the table with a certain girl's boyfriends' names. Then when it is time for pie, if it points in direct line to the boyfriend's name, it means that she is to have her next date. If the pie points directly toward her, she is to have a blind date. Then the next twenty-four hours.

Another story is told, she must always twist the stem until it is broken off any time you do; name a letter for each turn, and when it finally breaks, that letter is the first name of your date.

Three dining hall superstitions hold good whether or not the food is good. Whether or not the food served on these is the one rewarding the pats of butter. Instead of putting it on the bread and then eating it, each student knows that if she breaks it slightly above the dish and lets it fall, it might bring special significance. She knows what it is that on one of its corners and stays that way, she can have a wish. Then if it falls on one end and remains, she will get a letter; and if it falls on edge and then drops over the side, she look forward to receiving a postal card.

The same student has discovered by the dining hall remarks which on her way to lunch, that she is very bunery, that that will surely result in having a Florida state specialty dish. She also always puts the salt and pepper shakers down on the table in front of them to someone else. It is definitely bad luck to pass them over hand to hand.

Along the instrumental side (and what girl doesn't like to lean a little toward that way?) are four all-important rules that are remembered According to many authorities, if she does make a practice of sitting on a table are the ones who want to get married in the very near future. Could that be why chairs are used so seldom?

Two omens in particular, if disobeyed, will lead any student directly to the door of an old maid. She must never have all women teachers, for she does, she will have no husband. At least one male professor is sufficient to break the jinx. Also never take the last cookie on the dish, for that is a most unlucky one for hopeful brides. It took many bitter experiences to prove another one true, but lately the new freshman has been accepting upper classmen's proofs and now believes that it is a grave mistake to introduce her boyfriend to anyone at all until after the first kiss.

In concluding this survey, two additional ideas arise. One which is invariably more true for all, if anyone cleans her saddle shoes too often, it will ruin them. Saddles are no longer brown and white after the first week, but the sun does shine over Tallahassee. The other causes quite a bit of embarrassment sometimes, but if practitioner always agrees that if she says, "Pass me by," you how do you do; and how do you do again?" to the new moon when she first sees it each month, she will always get a package before the next new moon.

Although it is quite evident that the freshmen remarks which cannot be consistently aware of all these pitfalls, it is also clearly them all!

Warren Will Talk At TCDA Meeting

Committee Plans Public Rally for Monday

On Monday evening at 8 o'clock a public patriotic mass meeting will gather at the Leon county court house for all interested in the defense program of the American idea. This meeting is being sponsored by the Tallahassee Committee for the Defense of America of which Dr. Harold Richards, professor of physics, is the chairman.

Fullen Warren, democratic candidate for governor in the primary election and a defense advocate, will be the principle speaker.

Simon R. Doyle, member of the committee, stated, "Now is a time when every American should rally to the defense of our democratic nation, and this meeting is being called for the purpose of arousing the general public to a greater sense of responsibility."

Local High School Artists Complete Historical Canvas

A photograph of Florida high school students working on a mural is included in the civics text just published by Thom., Nelson and Sons, Atlanta. The photograph appears on page 260 of the book "Democracy in America," and has this inscription: "These high school students are working on a school mural. In this art project group cooperation is essential."

The mural, now completed, is in the auditorium of the Leon registration school on this campus. It depicts the evolution of our immediate civilization from the rugged frontier to the modern metropolis. Here is a portrait of the development of Tallahassee. A highlight of the mural is the main tower of the administration building of Florida State college.

Mr Ralph P Donaldson art instructor in the Demonstration school supervised the painting of the mural, which was done by four art students of Florida high school. Work on the mural was begun the last semester of last year and finished after a semester's work by the students. Doris Mae Lehr, Leon Smith, Catherine Sykes, and Doris Jacobi.

The mural pictures the founding of the city of Tallahassee, Fort Saint Louis; the first capitol of Florida; the cotton industry; influence on the locality; the "Tallahassee Girls"; tourists influence on the town; turpentine mills; lumber camps, natural birder, the Indian, and other highlights of history.

Distaff Will Print Three Freshman Poem Pages

In the freshman contest of the DistaFf, approximately 100 poems, and 18 stories were submitted before the close of the contest on Oct. 14. Three pages of freshman poetry will be published with the prize poem heading the section in the fall DistaFf.

Methodist Deputies To Visit Sopchopp

Students Plan to Advise Rural Communities

A Methodist deputation group composed of four girls will leave Saturday afternoon for Sopchoppy where they will confer with church work Saturday night and Sunday. The trip is done as a series intended to bring instruction and new ideas in church activities into rural communities.

The deputation, consisting of Gertrude Spofford, Elizabeth Huntington, Emily Phillips, and Virginia Perry, will present a program on Saturday night, having charges of the Sunday school worship service and classes Sunday morning, aid in the young people's work that afternoon, and end with the league service Sunday evening.

Elizabeth Whittington is in charge of all deputations. Group leaders are Jo Ann Hall, Mary Charles, Lamont, Miccosukee, Monticello, Havana, and Bristol in the near future.

Pepper May Speak At Mass Meeting

TCDA Invites Senator To Lecture Here

There is a possibility that some time in early November Senator Claude Pepper will speak on this campus before a mass meeting of students and faculty members who are interested in the national defense program.

At present the defense section of the Tallahassee Committee for the Defense of America, headed by Dr. Harold S. Richards, is trying to engage Senator Pepper's services for this purpose.

"About 100 faculty members thus far have signed up to work with the faculty committee on national defense," Dr. Cotterill announced.

HOW TO WIN BOY-FRIENDS AND INFLUENCE STAG-LINES

By Dolea Dorothy Clix

Dear Miss Clix: My brother, a sophomore at X ——College, is an absolute lamb about bringing his boy friends over to our school and introducing them to me. But oh, Miss Clix, they never come with their own escort! I ask my brother why, but he just poo-poos me evasively. I'm so upset that I bite my fingernails! What can I do?

ADONIZED

Dear "Agonized": Say listen, young'un! Does it bother you realize what's wrong? You've put your fingers on it yourself—you bite your fingernails! If there is any thing in the whole calendar of female wrong-doing that gives men the hives, and sends them away like a stag at bay, it's ugly, bitten fingernails. Take your character—if it isn't of weakby the scruff of its neck—say: "Never again!"—and then, bust out in a manicure team with a mother's care and keep them tinted regularly with a fashionable shade of nail polish. Then—ask Brother to bring on the Wild Game again!

AND NOW, DEAR READ THE NEXT COLUMN CAREFULLY!

WHAT YOU CAN DO TO HAVE MORE BEAUTIFUL NAILS

Let the brilliant, gem-hard lustre of DURA-GLOSS give your fingernails that marvelous attraction and allure that men admire. Just apply the amazing new nail polish that's different! DURA-GLOSS flows on more smoothly, keeps its brilliant beauty of color longer, resists tackin; and chipping better! Have the most beautiful fingernails in the world—buy DURA-GLOSS!

Archery Class Begins Practice

Best Scorers To Qualify For Prospective Archery Club

Lee Monday marked the first practice for prospective members of the archery club, when archery was held Wednesday and Friday. Another will take place this afternoon from 4 to 5:30 o'clock on the archery range.

The best archers will be selected for the archery club, according to the announcement of Miss Agnes Averill of the college physical education staff, who explained that this policy will be followed owing to limited equipment. Sue Erwin is archery instructor in general manager, and Miss Averill is in charge of the physical education department in advisory capacity.

Fans are underway to compete also in the women's winter college intramural sport, in which Florida State college participated for the first time last year. The sport is played about mid-way in the month of 158 teams of 100 each, and a team C rating. The highest score was made by the University of California, with a maximum of 648 possible, a world's record was set at the Olympic games at 71 hits and made 385 hits. Florida state college registered a total of 1,000 hits, which was made 66 hits and scored 99 points, and a class C rating. Sarah Butts who made 85 hits and 303 points Class A is second with a total of 1,000 hits and scores between 336-424, and the scores of 300-349.

Doggett Forms Dolphin Club

BY MARGARET ANN ASTBERG

Nancy Lee Doggett used her vacation time this summer to train a "Dolphin club" in Jacksonville. This club is affiliated after the Florida State college for women Tarpon club.

At the beginning of the summer the Dolphin club was made up of 12 girls. Later on, six of the girls were replaced by six boys. Of the six girls, three are students at Florida State college for women. They are Marie McIntosh, Kate Hedrick and the Misses Nancy Lee Doggett.

During the school year the boys swim for their school teams. One wims for Princeton, one for Andover, two for Axeter, and one for Robert E. Lee high school in Jacksonville. Several of the boys and a few of the girls hold Southeastern and Atlantic championships.

The "uniforms" are white satin bathing suits and white caps. The whiteness of the suits against tanned skins and the dark hair mers quite distinct in the water. The club took part in six aquatic stunts this summer. The paraset for the Mid-Atlantic benefit was directed by Miss Doggett and staged at the Springfield pool. An "Aqua Ballet" was produced. It is stated that the "young swimmers performed with a grace and beauty that has seldom been seen by professionals."

The season opened with a water wheel formation. The second number was a star formation, followed by a diamond formation featuring the back stroke and ending with a circle formation. It was the execution of the back stroke by the couples disappearing into the water and continuing the intricate back stroke roll the length of the pool. The parade ended with the most graceful of water formations by the Aqua Waltz. The main purpe of the Mid-Atlantic benefit was to send swimmers to the A.A.U. meet. The benefit was to send ATHONS to the A.A.U. meet in Cincinnati N C

At the Red Cross benefit show presented by the life saving and water safety committe of the Jacksonville chapter of the American Red Cross, Nancy Lee had the water ballet in formation swimming under her supervision. The parasut was entitled "The Downfall of Paris."

The team received an invitation from the management of the Sea Island Beach club at Sea Island Beach, Georgia, to perform during the time it was late in the season, and most of the members of the team left for Florida. The engagement was postponed until next summer.

The Dolphin club will travel this coming summer with Mrs. Crystal Beckwith, well-known in swimming circles.

Opera Takes Cake For Odds

Audience Delighted With "Draft" Skit

The first prize in skit night last Friday went to the Odd honorary, Sphinxmen, by the unanimous decision of the judges. The prize was a cake bearing the inscription "Congratulations."

The skit presented by Spirostra, "Rumbia for Britain," or "Gone With the Draft," was a take-off on opera. Among those taking leading parts were: Brunelle Mobley as Madame Butterfly, Ann Jones as Pagliacci, Lucille Walker as William Tell, Gene Bryan as Prince Igor, Spirostra, Cornelia Watson as Carmen, Sonia Mitchell as Faust. An orchestra composed of the following: Carolyn Mims, Florest Brown, Elinabeth Lang and Betty Mitchell, played an overture before the skit began. Martha Ellen Hackl was the commentator.

Senior Hall merited honorable mention for its skit entitled, "I'm Nobody's Babe." This skit presented Mary Berry as Nobody's Baby, a homeless babe. As people walked by, the babe tried to make them notice her, making special efforts when a cute boy passed, even serenading him with "Hi Babe, Hey Babe." It was not until Judy Juniper, representing the true Babe Hall girl, proceeded to "wind up the cat and put out the clock," that Nobody's Baby was noticed. Mary brought the skit to a close by singing "Pony Boy" after which all the girls of Senior Hall adopted her as their "Senior Haul." Peggy Hunter was the reader for the skit and Marjorie Harris was in charge of the arrangements.

The Woman's Athletic association with a skit entitled "The Game of Life," or "It starts With a Tie," also merited honorable mention. This skit was a mock wedding with the characters dressed in old-fashioned gym suits. In odd sizes. The bride was Mary Jane Medlin, the groom, Mary Henry, Others takin part were: Phil Kibler, Brenda Foster, Mary Starling Hall, Yvonne Martin, Virginia Green, Betty Brown, Charlotte Cooper, Betty Collins, Peaches McKay and Marion Freeling.

The Tarpon club skit was a water pageant given in the college pool by the swimmers. The Tarpon club members were in Galloway dress and with Alphonse Irene Hoke was in charge.

The skit given by the Home Economics club was patterned after their scrap book. Pictures of the most outstanding events of the club year were enacted. The following took part: Lenore Driskell, off-campus committee, freshman counsellor, Alpha Chi Alpha, society editor of Flambeau, editor of Flambeau, Delta Delta Delta sorority, Odd Demonstration property chairman, senior hall, and Mortar Board. Her average is B minus.

Lorrie Walker, intramural manager of Georgia, sophomore representative to judiciary, sophomore council secretary of Collich club, senior representative to judiciary, snapshot editor of Flastacovo, freshman counsellor, senior hall, "Mortified," editor of Seminole Review, and Odd Demonstration. Her average is C.

Cornelia Watson: athletic manager of freshman class, sophomore representative to judiciary, sophomore council, basketball, president of Sphinxmen, representative to judiciary, delegate to national NSFA convention, president of Southern Intercollegiate association of student governments, president of Phi Upsilon Alpha, senior hall and Mortar Board. Her average is B-A.

Odds and Evens Play Workouts

Evens Score 19-14 Win In Second Practice Game Friday

With only six more weeks left before Thanksgiving, and with the second game Saturday, the Odd and Even volleyball and basketball teams are slowly ironing out the rough spots in their team work and technique for the classic competition. The teams show signs of being evenly matched this year.

The Even team once again scored against the Odd team in the second of a series of practice games which will be held on Friday afternoon until Thanksgiving. The final score was 19 to 14, much closer than that for last game Betsy Walton was the star of the game, making all but two of the goals for the fast moving evens. Ruth Thomas, of the Odds was Betsy's close second in playing ability.

The players who took part in the game were: Odds: Lucille Walker, Minnie Dale Webb, Hoffman, Ruth Thomas, Edith Thomas, Belzie Ross Howe, Elsie Cater, Dot Jewel, Rita Le Roe, Frances Battle, Tubbie Martin Cornelia Watson, Margaret Carter, Evens: Lippell, Hawkins, Bernice Walton, Walker, Lillian Godbold, Peaches McKay, Mary Lou Eyman, Myrtice Louque, Bennett, Martha Twitty stressing the set-t., and spiking gers, Dorothy Cohen, Jean Stephens, Laura Schmitt, Hilda Hendricks, Dot Swanson, Reid Fussel, Rebekah McCrae, Ruth McClain, Frances Smart, Sandra Wilkinson, Ruth Miller, and Shirley Hilton. Carilyn Jihnson was the reader.

Mortar Board's skit was in the form of a sing. Members taking part were: Midge Scott, Cornelia Watson, Lenore Driskell, Dot Nickinson, Minnie Ratliff, Gene Bryan, Elizabeth Linn, Wilma Johns, Vivian Ahlswelt, and Virginia Baldwon.

The skit presented by Esteren Even honorary, was a take-off on Henry Mitfield, titled "Mitfield's Light." The scene depicted the return of Ulysses and it was done to popular sense. The characters were in costume suitable to the period of the play. At the conclusion of the play Ulysses sang "Home Sweet Home." Ulysses' characters were: Penelope, Mary Pierson; Ulysses, Jean Wood; Richard, Jean Wells; Lou, Ann Stinson; Mary Jane Medlin, Chancery Overton; Pete Crosby, Martha Strobert; Marian Freeling, and Peaches McKay.

Musically Speaking

BY VIRGINIA DUNN

Music by Ted Sherwood's orchestra sets the pace this week . . . And the event is the first College Prom of the year. If you don't have tickets for the dances, climb up to the balcony and enjoy the music anyway. Here's how you know. Ted Sherwood comes from the university campus in Gainesville. Es has a good band too . . . All of the members are students at the university

If you want to know what to do with your date Saturday afternoon . . . bring him down to Landis ne . . . There will be dancing all afternoon. And is will also be an opportunity for him to meet some coeds who enjoy the dance that night.

Did you hear the musical automobile horn riding around campus Tuesday? It seemed to have quite a repertoire . . . Part of the time it played "Merrily We Roll Along" . . . There will be dancing at just played. It was quite a relief to hear it after hearing so many "beep-beeps" all the time.

Deanna Durbin in "Three Paisade" contributes much to one's listening pleasure this week end on the State Theatre screen. Although she's a little bit early with her seasons . . . Ad "Miss Coed Dorm Burma" becomes a much more interesting song after hearing Deanna sing it. I'll soon be clamoring by singing it in the picture of Deanna Durbin.

By the time you've probably heard what one tonsil said to the other tonsil . . . "This must be Capistrano—here comes another swallow!"

WTAL has a good arrangement of "Perrybocal Serenade" . . . It is complete with whistles, merry-go-round music, and a vocal chorus . . . Hot music, and a good swing arrangement of "Trade Winds" . . . If you didn't know "Maybe" is number one song and "Practice Makes Perfect" is number-up this week . . . "Maybe" was written in 1923 . . . Certainly has had a long pull to get to the top of the parade . . . Only 17 years! In the time it's been around NBC network presents "Melody Lane" every Sunday morning just about setting you up. Here's selections played by th. string ensemble Ever perfect to start out Sunday. "The Saturday Night Serenaders" with Mac Marshall and Bill Perry, and the Serenaders is which makes for a faster and more exciting game . volleyball The Odds have a new system for encouraging their players to keep their eyes on the ball. Each is divided into two sections, the blonded an dthe brunettes each time a member misses the ball she must get out of the game.

An unusual experiment has been made in the photo engraving class by Allison Harrison a senior in the department, as an independent project which she undertook to extend her study of photography. The result of her experiment was a photomicrograph of a section of kidney tissue and was the first to be made in the physics laboratory by a student.

The finished photograph was about four inches in diameter which when magnified by a number of other tonsil . . . "This must be times, is just what the name implies. The selections range from light classics to the latest thing on the hit parade.

Listen for Dinah Shore and her "Yes, My Darling Daughter" . . . You'll like it! "Pasting Mr Bach" is a novelty . . . Seeing that all that Bach's two and three part studies need is a modern beat to make them modern as Raymond Scott is a slight flit to the rhythm.

Almost any Saturday night you may drift into Landis parlor and listen to light classical and chamber music . . . Through the medium of the radio-phonograph and Miss Kathleen Gilchrist's records.

Or if you happen to have some good records that you would like to play . . . You may collect a listening group yourself . . . wouldn't it be nice if we could have dinner music in the dining rooms on Wednesday nights? . . . That said that music aids digestion?

Tennis Tournament Started This Week

Twenty-eight Take Part In Ladder Matches

Members of advanced tennis classes are participating in an extra curricular tournament which began this week. Twenty-eight players are taking part. Their names are arranged in a ladder formation, the object being to stay at the top of the ladder.

Each participant may challenge a girl above her to a match, consisting of one set. If she wins, she may exchange positions on the ladder with her opponent.

Another tournament is to follow this one. Any girl who is an advanced tennis player and would like to participate should see Miss Rebecca Averill at Starling Hall. Practices are held on Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. All courts are reserved at this time. Those taking part in the present tournaments include: Pat Mayer, Mary Jane Medlin, Sara Hill, Cecelia Harper, Mary Fields Pat Ravanaugh, Betty Colbert, Minnie Lou Moore Irene Hoke, Louise Crosby, Frances Kiester, Mucrene McIntosh, Nancy Lee Doggett, Elizabeth Linard, Paulette Nolan, Katherine Simpson, Margaret Carter, Wally Wood, Marion Freeling, Phil Eckland Orlene Cox, Marion Swanson, Nova Killingsworth, Barbara Barton, Ruth Thomas and Rachel Erwin.

to the naked eye Allison, used as equipment for her experiment a very fine Bausch and Lomb microscope with the objective and eye piece selected to give the proper magnification of 430 times as viewed directly.

She mounted the large physics camera directly above the eye piece of the microscope with a bellows of the camera extended to give a long path in which the rays of light emerging from the eye piece might spread before reaching the film. Thus, a very large field was produced. Especially noteworthy is the fact that Allison moved the lens from Kaldeen camera to get the size of work.

Allison began her study of photomicrography last year, and since her father is a Florida physician, she has become intensely interested in photomicrography. Her first success in this field was attained at the end of 12 hours of work on this project.

Is It Worth It?

There is a place for extra-curricular activities in the lives of college students—a definite place. Besides books and term papers, the students need the broadening influence of association with other young people, with programs, and with projects. They need to struggle with and worry over things that aren't really vital in the end but momentarily seem all-important. They grow through these experiences.

We believe in extra-curricular activities when they have purpose and meaning. But we are beginning to be disillusioned. We are afraid that many of our campus organizations, worthy and honorable as they may be, have lost sight of their purposes and have developed into nothing more than a reason for meetings. Day after day we hear the old complaint, "Meetings, meetings, meetings. How can I ever get at my studying?" And we wonder if extra-curricularizing is worth the price.

As typical students we have spent our college days as joiners. First this church club, then this class club, and then this party, and sometimes even honoraries. Basically we have found them all alike. We found each struggling to bag new members, straining to add prestige, or searching for some project to undertake. No matter whether it's the Bohemian club or Pi Chi Delta, its members tried to consider it the most important thing on campus.

We are disillusioned because we have heard that honoraries, which we had always thought tapped for high scholarship and excellence in their fields, are known to discriminate against girls for character and reputation. It always seemed to us that no matter what a person was, if he excelled in one thing, he deserved credit.

Our faith was shaken again when we learned that one of the campus organizations, presumably organized merely as a source of enjoyment for students, had turned almost professional in its purpose, that it was no longer open to those who wished to participate and had something to contribute, but open to those who "would not detract from the beauty of the group."

And then there's goating. It seems to us that we should have left those childish practices behind us years ago. It was funny in high school to see boys and girls rolling peanuts with their noses and washing other people's clothes, but somehow it seems incongruous for college women. We pride ourselves on being adults and talk about assuming the problems of the world, and yet we waste our time writing sonnets to the members, polishing white shoes and standing with our backs to the wall. What purpose has it? What has it to contribute to our development that is in any way worth the time spent? We don't see it, do you?

Realizing that organizations are human, we hesitate to condemn, but we hasten to make a plea. Organizations, stick to your purpose. Go back to your constitutions. Find out why you were organized. Are you following the path your founders planned for you? Does this series of meetings that you are having lead to anything? Do you care too much for reputation and not enough for substance? Take stock of yourself. Are you worth joining?

"At a time of great emotional appeal such as that which now prevails, one will do well to concentrate upon one's work more than ever and to be unswayed by speculations or vague commentaries filled with foreboding for the future."—Pres. Thomas S. Gates of the University of Pennsylvania cautions against false prophets.—Quotable Quotes.

"There is no greater menace at the moment than the danger that sensitiveness to evil should become numb by reason of constant familiarity with evil. We shall not save our way of life through denunciation of the wrong; salvation can only be achieved by active practice of the right."—Pres. Charles Seymour of Yale university calls for an alert creed in which right excludes all wrong.—Quotable Quotes.

Well Take 'em

Several times this week we have been confronted by students asking us to write an editorial concerning the tennis courts. It seems that frequently in the immediate past students and faculty members of the college donned their shorts, gathered up tennis racquets, balls, and partners and set out for recreation in the form of a few sets of tennis. On reaching the courts, however, they have found the courts filled with local neighbors from town.

We'll admit that the situation is anything but pleasant and desirable and we extend our sympathy to the teachers and students who have been thwarted in their attempt at outdoor exercise. We'll also admit that the town people should be able to see the two large signs saying, "Town people will please relinquish the courts to students and faculty."

But after taking up our overworked torch to fight for the students rights we have found from some of the WAA officials that the students themselves are responsible for the situation and that the students themselves hold the key to the solution of the problem.

First, the students need only show a little nerve by asking the intruders to get in their own territory. The only courts on which town people may rightfully play, unless they are in a game with a student, are the last two clay courts. These have been given to the Tallahassee Tennis club, in return for their upkeep, for the use of town players. Since this is true, students may feel that they are acting within their rights any time they ask for the courts.

Second, students should think twice before they turn a court over to town people in preference to students. According to some of the campus tennis fans, many of our Femina Perfecta have given courts to local swains, while students, who have been waiting for hours, keep on waiting.

Whatever the situation, it seems that all students need do to get the courts from town people is to have the gumption to ask for them. And so we say, "Take 'em, students! They're yours!"

21 Or Over?

Are you 21 years old? If so, you should be vitally interested in the coming presidential election and should show your interest by voting in the election on November 5. Most college students are far better informed as to campaign issues and qualifications of candidates than the masses: if they are not, they should be, for not only do they have access to sources of information, but every effort is made to stimulate an interest in such vital issues.

Thousands of college students throughout the nation are not voting, simply because they do not understand the machinery of absentee voting. Most states supply the absentee ballot as a piece of democratic machinery. The Flambeau, like many other college newspapers throughout the nation, is attempting to further simplify the voting process for you. You, as a democratic American citizen, are under obligation to vote.

In general, there are three steps to absentee voting: registration, application for the ballot, and voting the ballot.

If you have not already registered, you cannot do so now, for the registration period for Florida was from the first Monday in September until the second Saturday in October. Application for the ballot is usually accomplished by filling out an affidavit form which has been procured from your own county judge or municipal clerk. Application must be made not more than 15 nor less than 3 days before election. In Tallahassee, application may be made through November 1. Incidentally, there is nothing mysterious about an affidavit. It is merely a written statement which the affiant swears to before a notary public who thereupon stamps the writing with his seal.

After your application has been accepted you will be sent an official ballot. However, you may obtain a ballot in the county in which you now are. The ballot will be accompanied by full voting instructions. You vote in the nearest precinct, the ballot is deposited with the county judge or municipal clerk, returned to your own county and counted along with all other ballots on election day.

Pan-Americanism Rises

America's collegians are enthusiastic sponsors of the rise of Pan-Americanism. The trend toward solidifying relationship between the United States and her sister nations of the New World is evident in developments on hundreds of campuses.

Importance of education's role in this field is noted by the New York Times, which points out that in recent months the republics to the south have been subjected to a quiet but nevertheless intense "penetration." the invasion of American school teachers. "Even more significant," says the Times, "were the visits of whole groups of teachers and undergraduates who went south on serious study tours. The invasion undoubtedly will have beneficial repercussions on both continents."

On the other side of the picture, the University of Iowa Daily Iowan notes that student enrollments in Spanish language classes at American colleges and universities are showing substantial increases over 1939. "This trend," the Iowan observes, "holds one of the strongest hopes for real improvement in understanding between the United States and its neighbor nations to the south."

A practical application to the subject is given by the Louisiana State university Daily Reveille, which cautions that "more than 200 students on this campus are not getting the co-operation that they should. These are Latin-Americans." Charging that "the student body renegs in doing its party by mildly 'snubbing' our Latin-American friends," the LSU publication comments that "the welfare of the United States in protecting its democracy and its people depends as much upon solidarity with its neighboring countries to the south as it does on its army and navy."—ACP.

Collegiate Comebacks

"A little work, a little play to keep us going."
—George Du Maurier.
George had the right idea.

We understand that the infirmary did its little post-weekend bit Monday, as usual. A friend of ours, who wasn't quite sure whether she needed sleep or economics worse was saying, "I wonder if it was such a good idea to go to Inn Monday morning," when a voice of experience at her elbow answered, "It may have been a good idea, but it wasn't an original one."

Overheard in one of our coke-and-hot-dog emporiums: "My only objection to these hamburgers is that they fry them a week in advance."

A classic example of futility is the Gainesville boy who spent the best part of Saturday night playing soft, sad music on the Jook at his fraternity house, waiting patiently for his car, his $5, his date, and his Brother-Under-The-Pin. After a while he got rather discouraged.

We've spent the better part of the week trying to figure out a way to pay our debts which, as usual this (or any other) time of the year, are pretty overwhelming. Just when we'd given up hope, some enterprising sophomore showed us the light to financial solvency.

"Why," she wanted to know, "should you and I mortgage our futures to support tobacco heiresses? We should'nt!!"

So saying she pulled out some white objects that looked as if they'd been moulded in a cork-screw.

"I," she announced proudly, "don't. I roll my own!"

It seems one buys a roller for a quarter, and tobacco for a mere whistle. Whereas the finished product may not look like a cigaret, it is one. So there!

We keep overhearing things that amuse us. This is very good because it is obvious that we can't think of anything ourselves. Anyhow we overheard a senior who was unhappy because (1) she'd had to miss Investiture to write a paper, and (2) her sophomore sister had been very perturbed because she hadn't gone through the all-impressive ceremony.

"Some people," she said in squelching tones, "think Investiture is like being baptized—you don't get to heaven if you aren't."

Some people just don't get around. When some one mentioned that they had sat in a box at the football game, our inquiring reporter asked, "A box of what?"

Here's one for the books. It seems that two of our fellow students have something exactly alike. We must admit that it's nothing new but this is different. Have you ever gone out, all dressed in your best bib and tucker, only to find someone has a pair of bedroom slippers that can't be distinguished from your brand new, best Sunday-go-to-meeting $7.50 shoes? It just goes to show you—there's nothing new under the sun.

Or Forever Hold Your Peace . . .

You can't do this to us!!

By "this" I mean changing Parents' Day from Thanksgiving to May.

I'm just a freshman, but perhaps that's why I feel so strongly that Thanksgiving, more than any other day of the year, is the time for a family to be together. My parents were planning before I even sent my application in to FSCW to come up for Thanksgiving, and I know that they will be disappointed as I am over the sudden decision to change Parents' Day.

From talking with other girls on my hall I know that they were looking forward to Thanksgiving with their parents too. Frankly, although we've already grown to love Florida State very much, we would really rather be home for Thanksgiving—and it's adding insult to injury to be told that our mothers and fathers may not even be able to eat with us in the dining room.

We can see how accommodations might be cramped with parents, friends, and alumnae all here at the same time, but in that case why not change Homecoming to some other date, as it is at Gainesville? We're not so shortsighted that we can't realize that we will be alums ourselves too soon, but somehow I can't believe that the particular date, Thanksgiving, can mean as much to them as it does to us, the present students. Then, too, Alumnae college is especially set aside for them in the spring. Why couldn't that and Homecoming be combined?

We don't really care how you change it but we don't like it the way it's planned now. We want our mamas!

Heroes Of The Air

The members of the Royal Air Force, fighting in ernest, bombing German industrial centers and naval ports, this week became the heroes of the war of Britain—the men who killed an invasion of the British Isles—who forced Germany to abandon an attack before it was launched. Wave after wave of bombers, attacking naval bases and ports from Norway to Southern France, destroyed 20 per cent of the massed German fleet, ready for the Blitzkrieg on England. The result of each night of bombi... lessened the chances of a German invasion in the near future, for the RAF battered at Hitler's war supplies, destroyed his factories, shattered his ships, and blew up his oil wells and mines.

The Nazis know n... how the people of London fe..., for they also are spending large parts of the nights huddled in bomb shelters. The Germans are not prepared for this terror of modern day warfare, either morally or physically. They were taught by Der Fuhrer that theirs was a war of victory and glory—that pain and anguish came not to them, the victors, but to the losers. The breakdown in morale may come not to a people prepared for the terrors of bombing, but to a people expectant of glorious victory and experiencing the horrors of civilized aerial warfare.

Great Britain scored also against another Axis power, Italy, in a naval battle in the Red Sea, when a British ship torpedoed an Italian destroyer, the Francesco Nhllo. The Italians, as usual, also claimed the victory asserting that their fleet had sunk six merchant ships and a 8,000-ton cruiser.

A "New Order" In Europe

In Europe today one man controls the continent. Adolf Hitler dictates not only to the peoples of Germany, but to those of Poland, Norway, Denmark, Belgium, The Netherlands, France, and all others he has brought under his control. In order to bring about a stronger continent, one more able to cope with the problems of a war he has brought upon the people, he has held conferences this week with both Pierre Laval, French Vice Premier, and Generalissimo Franco of Spain.

To the once-great democracy of France, now a fascist puppet state, he proposed an agreement, whereby the French government would yield all her air and naval bases throughout the empire to the Axis powers. In return the unoccupied area of France would be extended north of the Seine, returning a part of Paris to the new government. The French had no choice. It was either that or complete alliance with the Axis against England.

Cloaked in deepest secrecy Adolf Hitler met Generalissimo Franco on the Spanish border Wednesday to discuss, it is thought, the place of Spain in the present continent of Europe. No information concerning the conference has been yet made public.

Europe, under Hitler's control, stands opposed only by the three small islands across the channel, the only great democracy still existing on that side of the Atlantic.

Politics

The citizens of the United States, who thought that at long last they would see reform in Jersey City, met a sad disappointment, when the news came to light that the voting machines, expected to cause an upset in the Hague government and clean the city's skirts of graft and corruption, would not be installed. According to city officials, there was not time before election. Boss Hague won again, as democracy went down in defeat.

Both presidential candidates have been busy with their political campaigns in the last two weeks before election. Roosevelt, although he at first decided not to make any campaign speeches, has been busy this week with his drive for the presidency. In the first of five addresses scheduled to end his campaigning, he answered the charge that his administration wished to lead the country into war, with the statement that "It is for peace I shall labor all the days of my life." Willkie continued his attack on the New Deal in his speeches, charging that it was destroying democracy and "was making the various State and local governments subservient to Washington." On both sides, the campaigning has been sharp and bitter.

BY DORIS CARTER

The 6,000 alien students who have entered the country on student visas must be registered and fingerprinted before December 26, according to the National Alien Registration act. In order to be admitted into the United States the non-quota students are being compelled to carry 12 semester hours of school work and must be at least 15 years old. The average age of alien students now in the country is 18. Three hundred and thirty alien students from Latin-American countries are enrolled at Montezuma Seminary, Montezuma, New Mexico, which is the largest single group in the United States. Rather than go to school in European cities, these students have been coming in since 1937.—ACP.

A front page editorial in last week's Tulane Hullabaloo berated a specific case of theft which had occurred on that campus and the policy of dishonesty in general. The newly appointed Student Center council promises to recommend expulsion to the officials of the university should the theft culprits be revealed. Said the editor: "Perhaps the crook is a freshman. Perhaps he has been reared in unfortunate circumstances, knowing neither the rules of fair play nor honesty. But this is neither the time nor the place to speculate on the character of the person guilty of the crime. This is a university, and a university is not a place to teach students to be honest!"

A professor of sociology at Alabama State college allows his students to determine which problems are of the most vital and pressing interest for them to study. By means of recording the votes polled in the two classes of 1935 and 1940 Dr Knox proves how the ranking in importance of the social problems has been shifted within the last five years. In 1935 his students considered health the first of nine vital social problems, which employment and crime ranking fourth and fifth. This year the sociology class voted crime as first, health fourth, and employment last—on a par with religion.

Texas State College for Women voted two to one in favor of the United States working out some plan to prevent war. This poll seems to uphold the recent statistics in which almost one half of the 24,000 students in the United States think that it depends upon their country the strongest nation left at peace to prevent a total war.

A lead for Willkie of 73 4 per cent to 26 6 per cent was the result of last week's campus poll at Hastings college, Nebraska, among the men's organizations. The week before a poll for the women's organizations showed a lead for Willkie of 70 3 per cent to 29 6 per cent. As the Hastings Collegian points out, the Willkie influence on males is even greater than on the opposite sex.

Inquiring Reporter . . .

The question of the week asked on the campus was: What is your opinion of the proposed interneship the school of education is offering students beginning next semester? Why do you feel as you do?

The overwhelming opinion was heartily in favor of the plan with three dissenters on certain conditions and only one defiant student objector.

Students feel that the plan is very practical in giving the would-be teacher a down-to-earth situation in a classroom of her own instead of having an instructor sitting quietly in the back of the room.

The sole objection raised to the plan seems to be the feeling of the campus life the students will be missing. A student returning to the fold would have to make a "collegiate comeback." It would curtail to a great extent, if not totally, the extra-curricular bright lights gained by devoting time to the campus activities.

Sara Clark, junior:

I think that interneship for future teachers is a wonderful idea. It will give girls so really worthwhile experiences that will prove invaluable to them when they are out on their own. Also when these girls return to college after a semester of practical teaching they will have a fairly good idea of what they need to get out of courses and they will apply themselves in order to get the training they have found necessary. Having taught for four years and then returning to college, I have found this to be true in my case.

Marjorie Bullard, senior.

I think the proposed interneship to be offered is a very good plan for those students who feel that they have definitely decided upon teaching as their profession. This will be a much more practical plan and will acquaint our prospective teachers with actual problems of teaching in a school over a long period of time, than now offered in the demonstration school.

Helen Davis, junior:

I consider the proposed interneship for "budding" teachers a valuable part of their preparation for their work. However, by taking this interneship during their college course these girls are losing an opportunity to add to their fund of "what to think" but are instead gaining a better comprehension of how to teach, a limited knowledge. How about taking it out of the four years devoted to college work?

Hilda Garcia, junior:

I don't know much about it, but what I have heard sounds pretty good. It sounds much more interesting than practice teaching.

Norma Pennoyer, sophomore:

I'm definitely against such education, for if a student is carrying many extra curricular activities or work, such as journalism, a semester away from school would eliminate all possibilities for advancement in other fields.

Virginia Grimes, junior: I think the proposed interneship the school of education is offering is an excellent idea. One would receive the practical experience in teaching and come into everyday problems of the school room which a person does not receive in college. I also think 15 hours credit should be given for the interneship, for a person would do as much work and study as you would for a semester's work in college.

Grace Ball, junior:

I think this is by far the most practical step that c... d be taken in the preparation of future teachers. In the teaching field, I think the most valuable education is through actual experience in a real life situation. This proposed interneship would enable the future teachers to take part in the development of a complete school

Alumnae Weddings Hold Interest of Tri Deltas And K D's Over Campus

Arrangements of marriages of alumnae continue to be forth-coming. This weekend many Tri Delts are attending the wedding of Jean Stoy of Madison to Dr. C. W. De Long also of that city. Jean was graduated several years ago. The ceremony will take place at the Methodist church in Madison Saturday night at 8 o'clock.

Two girls from this chapter of Delta Delta Delta will serve as attendants. They are Frances Booker and Mary Virginia Day. Jeanne Colley, Jean Hitchcock, and Mary Elizabeth Wynne are to sing.

The wedding of Becky Ashion, former Florida State honor student, member of Kappa Delta, and the Reverend Caxton Doggett took place October 19 in New Smyrna. The ceremony, held in the Presbyterian Doggett's church, was a candlelight wedding in the late afternoon. Becky wore a heavy brocade satin gown fashioned through with threads of silver.

Delta Zetas Commemorate Date of Their Founding With Banquet at Wakulla

Commemorating the beginning of their sorority, the Delta Zeta's celebrated this event with a banquet at Wakulla Springs lodge Wednesday night. The members wore white dresses all day with their colors, rose and green, under their pins.

Jeanette Faulds, president, was the toastmistress for the banquet. Tributes to the various founders were paid by Lucile McLeod, Carolyn Patterson, Rozella Fuqua, Marguerite Dremler, and Hilda Alagood. A commemoration program was also presented.

Delta Zeta sorority was founded at Miami university, Oxford, Ohio, in 1902. Alpha Sigma, the chapter on this campus, was started in 1924.

quired to pay its debt to the Axis until it has completed the job in Asia and has laid in such ample reserve supplies that it could wait out Britain and the United States. Japan must be gambling on what it considers the chance it has in its favor. For the forces of appeasement are still strong in London and Washington. The cause of this only the historians of the future will know; however, the desire obviously exists and Japan can gamble heavily upon it. It is the fact which makes it wrong to think that Germany and Italy, not Japan, can gamble upon the new alliance.

There is probably truth in the reports from Shanghai that since August the Germans have been telling Japan plainly that if it failed to join them soon, its help would no longer be required, and it might find itself friendless at the war in Europe Japan might find that it had not only missed its chance to acquire some of the Dutch East Indies and other rich lands in the Pacific, but also its chance to conquer China.

Hitler's power over Stalin is heavier likely to have been Germany's trump card in forcing Japan to sign up its choice of sides and take the consequences. Hitler may have promised to back with Russian attack in Manchuria or Mongolia, while promising to keep the Russia stop all aid to China if Japan committed itself. The menace of Russia is no doubt of great use to Hitler in pushing Japan over the precipice.

China's fate must now more than ever depend upon the United States. Should this country be bluffed by Japan into continuing to supply it with the means of war, it is hard to see how China can fight on. A real embargo against Japan, coupled with arms to China, would keep Japan too busy and too short of supplies to it to be able to implement its promise to Germany and Italy.

Vestry invites Episcopal faculty members to attend vestry meeting as guests of honor with Bishop Frank A. Juhan. Members of the Vestry arranging plans for the breakfast are: program, Dorothy Wetherell; Poly Venning; tables, Adine Brewster; and serving, Peggy Lowe and Nelen Robertt.

Dancers Requested Not To Attend Wednesday Classes for Novices

Lucille Walker, Cotillion club president, has requested that girls who do any form of social dancing please refrain from attending any further novice dancing classes.

The classes will continue to be conducted by Cotillion club members, but instructions will be given only to those who do not know how to dance at all. Dancing classes are held every Wednesday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock in Landis recreation hall.

The Cotillion club will be co-sponsors with the Village Vamps for the College Frolic tomorrow night. Members will wear green and white ribbons.

term, and to see it carried through in all of its phases.

Mary Lou Jones' opinion over:

I am much in favor of the internship idea. It offers the student much more practical experience than practice teaching and gives them an opportunity to teach under ordinary conditions. I think it is a wonderful idea and I believe it will solve a great problem in the school of education.

M. Polly Lee, junior:

It'll be different from "college" as being away—but it'll be fun being at home. If one be lucky enough to be at home. I think it's a very good thing, and hope it works.

Sandy Hopkins, junior:

I think internship in the school of education is the most excellent idea and I don't see why the same thing couldn't be done for social work majors.

Emily Barrow, junior:

I think that the proposed internship which the school of education is planning to offer is a very good idea. Although the students of the school of education are required to do practice teaching before they graduate, I believe they will be much better fitted to teach after graduation if they have had the actual experience of teaching under natural circumstances, which the proposed plan will provide.

Hattie Lou Peacock, sophomore:

I think that it would be good experience, although it seems to me that students would be out of touch with college life and no longer feel a part of it.

Betty Wrafford, junior:

I think the students should graduate first and then teach. I think something is good experience but I don't think they should teach for a whole semester as they finish the course.

Barbara Allbright, junior: It doesn't make much difference to me. It is good and yet they would be out of touch with college life and all for a semester.

Isabel Dell, junior:

I think the idea is excellent. Practice teaching can't give us the real life situation that experience in a school somewhere out in the state could give. Besides, I think that grades in an internship would be more objective than our teaching ability to the people who will be hiring us than grades in practice teaching.

Allison Harrison, senior:

It seems to be a good plan to me, though it needs a very thorough going over in order that it may work. It will be much more

SORORITIES TO ENTERTAIN THIS WEEKEND WITH BUFFET SUPPERS AND TEA DANCES

In order that they may return the hospitality shown them at Homecoming, sorority girls have planned activities for this week and which will center around the first College Frolics for University of Florida men. Among the affairs are tea dances, buffet suppers and breakfasts.

Zeta Tau Alpha's are having two informal dances this week. On Thursday afternoon they had friends and rushees in from 4:30 to 6:00, and Saturday afternoon they will entertain at a tea dance for dates.

Announcing the approach of goblins and witches, the Sigma Kappa's gave a Halloween party Friday afternoon. Guests danced and played games. Mattie Lou Peacock and Lenora Dale were the hostesses. They will also have a tea dance Saturday from 3:30 to 6:00.

Open house will be held by the Phi Mu's Saturday night for dates of chapter members and pledges. On Sunday morning the pledges will give a breakfast.

Phi Beta Phi will have an informal get-together for members Thursday afternoon from 4:00 to 6:30.

A buffet supper will be given by the pledges of Kappa Delta for dates Saturday night at 6:30. Alice Hodges and Mary Hubey are in charge of arrangements.

Delta Phi Epsilon will have a buffet supper for friends and dates Saturday night. There will be dancing afterwards. Mimi Schneider is the chairman of the committee planning for the affair.

A tea will be given by the Delta Zeta's Friday afternoon from 4:30 to 6:00 for rushees and friends. Karolyn Patterson and Mrs. T. R. V. Crevasi, house mother, are the hostesses.

There are to be two teas at the Alpha Xi Delta house this week. The first was Thursday for friends from 4:30 to 6:00. A few faculty members will be given Sunday from 4:30 to 6:00. Mamie Hogan is in charge of the latter affair. Suzanne Vetts from Jacksonville is the Alpha Xi Delta pledge.

Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell spoke to the Alpha Gamma Delta's Monday night on "Christian Character." Coffee was served at the conclusion of her talk. Chapter members gave a silent tea for pledges last Saturday night.

At an Alpha Chi Omega party Saturday night the pledges will entertain friends and dates with their "goat song." These songs are a tradition of the chapter.

Halloween will be the theme of the Alpha Delta Pi party Friday night for pledges and chapter members from 6:30 to 8:00. Supper will be served at the house. They will also have a tea dance Saturday afternoon for their dates.

"NO POINT" CLUB WILL INSTALL FOUR PLEDGES IN POINTLESS INITIATION

"No point! No Point!" Passers-by hear this call and see eight white-clad figures dash for the smoking area across the street from the gymnasium.

The No Point club is having one of its three regular weekly meetings with "President" Nelly Lemon, its president, directing conversational points of interest toward the Co-Ed Call Girl, which ranges all the way from the fun they have at every Wednesday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock in Landis recreation hall.

The No Point club will be co-sponsors with the Village Vamps for the College Frolic tomorrow night. Members will wear green and white ribbons.

Hallowe'en Spirit Reigns This Afternoon at Party On the Chi Omega Lawn

Fortune telling will highlight the Halloween party given by the Chi Omega pledges this afternoon on the lawn by the Chi Omega house. Fun is scheduled to begin at 4:30 o'clock and continue until 8.

The affair is "dress as you please" with all pledges of the campus sororities invited.

Acting as hostesses at the party are the Chi Omega pledges: Joan Puffer, Ida B. Sanders, Yvonne Cody, Peggy Reynolds, Betty Jackson, Betty Adams, Blanche Thompson, Betty Boor" :, Jean Flynn, Virginia Long, Mary Ann Hartsfield, Betty Ann Wrenn, Thomasina Sullivan, Jeanne Hamilton, Betty Boor" :, Jean Flynn, Virginia Long, Mary Ann Hartsfield, Betty Ann Wrenn, Thomasina Sullivan, Jeanne Hamilton, Sandy Hopkins, junior:

A complete program of entertainment is being arranged by the pledges.

Village Vamps Will Sell Drinks Saturday Night

During the intermission of the College Frolic dance Saturday night, the Village Vamps will sell coca-colas in the Landis recreation room.

Two free cookies will be given to each purchaser of a coca-cola. There will be no advance sales on the drinks.

The door to lower West Landis will be open to be used by the couples from the dance.

Five Kappa Deltas Plan To Attend Georgia Rally

Two events happening this week are making the Kappa Delta's conscious of all their chapters throughout the nation.

The first of these is their Founders Day which they celebrated Wednesday. Wearing white dresses, with their colors, green and white, they had their regular ceremony in the afternoon in the afternoon at the Kappa Delta Kappa Delta was started October 23, 1897, at Virginia State Normal in Virginia.

Several members of the chapter are attending the Georgia Kappa Delta Rally" this weekend. It is being held at the Biltmore Hotel in Atlanta, Georgia. This rally is sponsored by the Georgia chapter and will include a number of social affairs such as barbecue, banquets and dances. The girls going from this chapter are: Ann McMorris, Sally Fullerar, Mary Carlisle, Jean Williams and Bunny Turnbull.

"perpetual mobilization" to "compulsory regimentation of liberty and ideas."

The two new halls at the women's college, at the University of North Carolina are still unnamed by the student body. A plea has been issued by the dean's office for the unenthusiastic students to put their thinking caps on and christen the "A" and "B" halls with names worthy of their handsome surroundings. It seems to think that such interest is the least that can be shown in appreciation for their rapidly growing campus.

Rollins college has suggested a solution to the problem of the high cost of good albums of recordings by the best artists. Since almost every fraternity and sorority on campus owns a radio-phonograph, each group could donate a certain amount of money for records to establish a circulating library.

Esteteren Goats to Fete Old Members, Faculty, With Supper in Landis

Goats of Esteren, Even hsnerary, gave a supper party for old members and faculty members yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Landis kitchen. Green and white, Esteren colors, were worn by all members. Lou Atkinson was in charge of all details of the affair.

Goats are: Mary Jane Medlin, Louise Crosby, Gwen Stephenson, Chancy Owen, Mary Lee Atkinson, and Paulette Nolan. Old members are: Jan Wells, Grace Ball, Ella Mandt Jones, Jean Wood, Marion Freeling, Anna Frances McKay, and Martha Stroberg. Faculty members are: Misses Byrd, Lynn, Montgomery, and Richardson.

The American Association of University Women has awarded $6,950 abroad to help European women scholars in distress because of the war.

First College Frolic Finds Tally Dance With Neu Rules

Saturday night at 8 o'clock in the gymnasium the first college Frolic of the year will be held with a Hallowe'en theme carried out in the decorations. Lou Atkinson, chairman of the dance committee, has asked that the following rules concerning the dance be announced and followed.

Everyone attending the dance shall write her name on both parts of the dance ticket. The long part will be taken up at the dance by the girls checking at the door. You are to keep the stub of your ticket.

When you return from the dance, if you are staying on campus, drop your ticket stub into the box that will be in Bryan parlor. No one is to leave the dance unless the dance you must turn your ticket stub into Bryan.

If you are spending the night in an off-campus house or live off campus put the name of your off-campus house or sorority house on your ticket and turn the ticket stub in to your house chaperone.

You must sign out on your engagement card whether you have a date or not.

You may check out of the dance one half hour at a time. Should you stay longer than this a penalty will be imposed.

You may not sit in parked cars.

You may not leave the dance to ride around.

You may not ride down town for refreshments.

Irish Addresses Democrat Club

Citizens Should Unite On Foreign Policy Says Professor

"The Defense of Democracy" was the subject of the speech given by Dr. Marian D. Irish, associate professor of political science, at the dinner-meeting of the Democratic Women's club in Leon county Tuesday night.

Dr. Irish emphasized the opinion that preservation of the United States democratic form of government is the issue on which the major political parties are united, and that "not as the parties have a common viewpoint on this subject so should United States citizens stand firm and united before the work in the formulation of our foreign policy. Therefore, she said, the coming presidential election should not produce among the people serious differences or distrust in governmental policies, no matter what the outcome. For "if democracy is to survive in the United States we like our British cousins, must believe first in our own government. Our democracy is threatened from without, but we can best say combination of forces—if our democracy is not destroyed from within and by ourselves—as it happened to France."

Three basic Irish essentials for an "decent strategy" for this election are "First, get out and vote. Made the greatest demonstration of democracy in the history of the world. Second, do not vote against anyone, vote for someone; be positive not negative in your convictions. Thirdly, make up your mind fully and without prejudice or passion and then vote for your own choice but be ready and willing to abide by the choice of the majority. Do not allow the party differences before the election to become permanent dissension after the election. We must show to the whole world today that this United States is one nation, individuals democratic in principle, republican in form, forever. God save America for yesterday and our posterity in this election."

Florida High Sets Date For Comedy

Members of Florida high school have been work on their first play of the year, "American Passport," a three-act comedy of national appeal, treating a thoroughly American theme.

November 21 is the date set for the first performance. The play will have a two-night run.

"American Passport, a quick-moving farce by Dana Thomas, promises to create a sensation among amateur productions because of its timeliness to the vital American position in world affairs at present," said Mr. Ralph P. Donaldson, art instructor in the Demonstration school.

The story deals with a typical American family whose traditions of decades are on the verge of upheaval because of the present International crisis.

Freshmen Hear Style Lecture

Students Model Frocks To Illustrate Talk By Miss Smith

At the freshman class meeting held Thursday afternoon Miss Janet Smith, professor of clothing and textiles, spoke on "Dress and Personality." This is the third in the series of lectures planned for the orientation program of the freshmen.

"Individuals cannot be placed in definite types," stated Miss Smith. "Each person is different from anyone else." She stressed the fact that girl's tempo and way of moving are more important factors than her build and coloring.

Wearing clothes from their own wardrobes, and in some cases dresses that they had made themselves, members of the Home Economics club illustrated Miss Smith's points of kinds of clothes from school to evening dresses were used as examples.

Girls who modeled were: Nana Currin, Elizabeth Cox, Barbara Sutton, Elisabeth V Lynn, Louise Patterson, Bette Ann Marron Bess Bowden, Mary Hollingsworth, Martha Jay Lee, Mildred Nelson Ann Keown, Catherine Durkin, Kathryn Bryan, Ruth Hendricks Mary Alice Richter, Edna Palma, Miriam Guy, and Beta, Brass.

Presidents Make Dance Plans

Cornelia Watson, CGA president, and John McCarty, president of the university of Florida student body, make plans for the first College Frolic of the year, which will be given for students of both campuses tomorrow night. This is a continuation of a policy made last year to bring the two state colleges together more.

Teacher Will Outline Success

Freshmen Asked to Take Part in Experiment

At the freshman convocation program on Thursday, Nov. 14, Miss Oriole Winner of Huntingdon college, Montgomery, Alabama, will speak on "Factors in Success." She will outline her plan of research into success factors and explain how freshmen can cooperate by volunteering to take a series of tests. These tests will be followed up after 16 years to determine how certain factors influenced the students' successes in life.

Miss Winner has already obtained data from several colleges. Her

Rockefeller Foundation Will Be Discussed

Following S. K. Ratcliff, noted English lecturer, scheduled to inaugurate the lecture series Nov. 16 and 17, Miss Caroline Hood, of the Rockefeller Foundation, will appear on this campus on Dec. 16. "Behind the Scenes in the Rockefeller Center" will be her topic. Included in the lecture will be details of NBC television broadcasting, the stage shows of the radio city Music hall, how it is planned in miniature, and the story of the Science Group Hears Joubert

Academy Chooses Lewis New Vice President At First Meeting

Mr. William H. Joubert, economics and accounting instructor, spoke to a representative group of 35 faculty members on the "Issue and Sale of Corporate Securities" and led an ensuing discussion at the first meeting of the year of the Tallahassee branch of the Florida Academy of Science Monday night.

As the organizations' past president, Dr. William Barrows Jr., has been called into active army service, Dr. Paul Shankweiler, former vice president, took over the duties of presiding officer. Dr J. L. Lewis was elected new vice president at this meeting.

An announcement was made of a state meeting of the academy to be held on November 21 and 22 in St. Petersburg. A group of college students, headed by Miss Louise Horne, and many faculty members plan to attend.

In introducing the speaker, Dr. Shankweiler stated a need for scientific thinking in today's age of confusion.

Mr. Joubert brought out in his talk the fact that before 1933 corporations as such were not effectively regulated by laws in the United States. As a result, he pointed out, there were many instances of fraud, manipulation, deceit, theft and other shady practices in securities.

A national law, the Securities act, was passed in 1933 to regulate the issue and sale of corporate securities. Congress was forced to enact this remedial measure and others because the disillusion of millions of defrauded investors "crystallized in

A demand for action among all classes of American people." Another reason Congress was compelled to adopt the Securities act was that propaganda had created the nationwide sentiment which caused people to believe that the depression was mainly financial and that the majority of bankers, brokers, and investment bankers were the incarnation of evil."

"Since 1933 the reforms demanded have largely been realized. With the enactment of the Securities act in 1933, the Securities Exchange act in 1934, the Public utility holding company act in 1935, and the Candler and Maloney acts in 1938, the United States has for the first time in its history adopted a national policy of securities regulation."

These reforms also were discussed separately by Mr. Joubert who presented a detailed study of the Public utility holding company act of 1935, in which he brought out its purpose, criticisms of the act, and refutations of these criticisms. Roger Babson, newspaper columnist, and Wendell Wilkie, former president of the Commonwealth and Southern corporation, are two of the men presented a detailed study of the law, intended to eliminate one of the evils of corporation finance," added Mr. Joubert.

The purpose of the holding company act, he says, is to "remedy the abuses and evils of holding company organizations and to eliminate unnecessary holding company structures." Under this act, the Securities Exchange commission is given full control over holding companies accounts and reports, and strictly regulates the payment by companies of dividend payments."

According to Mr. Joubert's observations concerning the new program of national securities regulation, "aspirations of the financial community have been improved not by the efforts of bankers and brokers, but by the action of the Securities Exchange commission. The job is not yet complete. Complicated holding com-

State security legislation is seriously weak and should be strengthened. I join in the support of the national security program and oppose the views of those whose suggestions for amending the laws would not prevent consolidation of gains already achieved and destroy effectiveness of the laws themselves but would make impossible further needed progress in orderly reform," he concluded.

Mr. Joubert's paper was based on research work done at the University of North Carolina last year.

Six Will Leave Tuesday Night For Press Meet

Local Editors, Business Managers Will Attend Detroit Convention

Round Table Discussions, Forums Will be Featured

Six campus editors and publication managers are scheduled to leave Tuesday afternoon for Detroit, Michigan, to attend the 1940 annual convention of the Associated Collegiate Press, convening November 7, 8 and 9 at the Book-Cadillac hotel.

Evan Aldwell, editor of the Florida Flambeau; Scott and Harriett Bellamy, editor and business manager, respectively, of the Florida Orchesis, and Mary Mitchell, Mabel Irvin, and Mary Myree Wood, editor, assistant editor and business manager of the Playmaker, will represent this college at the annual meeting of college newspaper, yearbook, and magazine workers.

The group will leave on the train Tuesday in time to arrive in Detroit Thursday morning for the opening of the convention and sessions have already begun.

Lee A. White, director of publications for the Detroit News, will be chairman member of the board of control of student publications at the University of Michigan, to be speaker at that time. He will speak Dr. Ralph D. Heyns, chairman of the department of journalism at the University of Minnesota, and M. W. Stratton, United Press feature editor. Continued on Page Six

Students Apply For Interning

Officials Will Examine Records And Find Placements

Thirty-five girls made applications for internships next semester at a meeting held Tuesday night. Some of these girls are positive that they would be glad to do the internship, and others are undecided. The principle thing some of the names on the list do the work.

The first step at the school of nursing in selecting girls to fulfill these positions is to check the scholarship standing and to interview each one. There are many obstacles which will make difficult for them to serve internships after they have checked the scholarship standing of the next step is to contact the recommendations and teachers in areas selected by the girls and if it can be arranged to have officials do their internship these areas. The girls will be sent to near their home towns if possible.

The areas selected by the girls in the four distinct districts: Florida-West Palm Beach district; Jacksonville district, the Pensacola district.

Several other small areas, as well as girls have applied for first semester of year 41-42, open for the second semester of that year.

The offer of internship does mean that the Democratic will no longer be in touch with prospective teachers, but only practice before real girls begins, it will serve as supervision school where she may learn how teaching is done and she attempts it herself. Through the next semester the student department will study applications made for the of 1941-42 and make plans to place them in schools for teaching positions.

Girls who desire to fill out application for internship should go to Miss Ruth Herbert in Dean Ralph Hall's office in the education wing.

Davis Returns From Lengthy Stay in Hawaii

"Army Daughter" Lived On Island of Hulas And Festivity

By MARGARET PAINTER

"Living in Hawaii is like a perpetual vacation," declared Betty Davis, Florida State college senior who has just returned to the United States after her two years spent in Hawaii.

Betty attended Florida State college three years ago and then moved to Hawaii where her father, Major C. T. Davis, has been stationed at Schofield barracks on the island of Oahu for the past two years. Betty lived at the army post with her parents and attended the University of Honolulu, which is on the same island.

"The first thing you think about Hawaii," said Betty, "concerns the Hula dance, for which the islands are famed. Each dance tells the story of the song it is danced to, and each movement of the body and hands has a meaning. Contrary to popular opinion, Betty explained, the hula motions matter more than the body movements. The dance was originally religious and was danced to the gods and kings of the Hawaiian people. In fact, the days each ruler had his own troop of

Thirty Students Take Field Trip

Sociology, Psychology Classes Visit Two Institutions

Thirty sociology and psychology students left the campus at 8:30 Tuesday to the Boys' industrial school in Marianna and to the Florida State hospital in Chattahoochee.

Faculty members who went included Dr. Ruth Waxtom of the sociology department, Miss Margaret Bristol, Miss Ruth Geslink, and Dr. Coyle Moore of the sociology department. Dr. Dashmond, secretary of the state board of control, also accompanied the group.

Miller Davison, the superintendent and members of the staff at Marianna explained to the group the organization of the industrial school for boys and showed how the institution they visited there, Tuesday morning.

The group went to Chattahoochee to the state hospital where the clinic opened at 2:30 o'clock and lasted about two hours. Examples of different types of mental cases were exhibited by a member of the staff of the hospital.

Publicity Directors To Dine At College

Florida Group Will Meet Here This Weekend

Cuban and American Schools Are Much Alike, Says Pincus

Cuban Freshman Describes Educational System, Recreation, Family Life of Her Country

By LEONA OGLE

Cuban and American schools are not very different, according to Rosalie Pincus, one of the Cuban girls enrolled in Florida State college for women.

Spanish schooling consists of the first six grades corresponding to our elementary schools, and four years of secondary school. There is only one recognized national university in Cuba. That is the University of Havana, which has college rather than having general courses, has students graduate for one vocation but may have a minor. If he selects law he studies only those subjects pertaining to that field. Private schools are not recognized unless by examination they have been accredited by the Cuban government.

Rosalie received all of her schooling in Cuba, with the exception of spending six months in a New York City public school when she was in the fourth grade. At home she attended Colegio Guimaraes, a private school sponsored by American Methodists. It had an enrollment of 1,000, and is divided into three schools: Commercial, the Spanish high school, and the American high school. Rosalie studied in the latter division, taking those courses required in American curriculum, such as English and algebra. Peculiar only to her school was the fact that classes were held on Saturday rather than on Monday.

Cuban recreation lacks the enthusiasm for football which is such an American favorite. The most popular sports are swimming, baseball, and track. Rosalie says that while the Spanish people don't "jitter," they have other forms of dancing which are as popular. Prominent are the rhumba, the conga, and the son, which is similar to the rhumba. She finds more enjoyment in fact that the Cuban rhumba is much "jivier" than the American rhumba.

Brief Ceremony Will Recognize Student Loyalty

Torch Night to Enlighten Freshmen Concerning College Ideals

Torch Night, the traditional ceremony at which freshmen pledge their loyalty and take up the three torches, symbolic of college ideals, will be held Wednesday evening, November 6, at 7:30 o'clock in the open air theater.

Presidents of the sophomore, junior, and senior classes, Martha Jo Hickman, Grace Ball, and Pat Brandt, respectively, will explain the meaning of the three torches. Cornelia Watson, president of COA, will be master of ceremonies.

The service will be very brief. All upperclassmen, participants, and non-participants, are urged to be present and witness the ceremony. Approximately 350 freshmen have signed up to be in the observance of the tradition.

Freshmen may get their torches anytime Wednesday, November 6, in the lower floor of the Westcott building. The torches are to be returned to the same table some time Thursday, November 7.

Any freshman who wishes to be in Torch Night and has not already signed up may do so before 5 o'clock Wednesday.

Classics Honorary Initiates Three

Eta Sigma Phi to Study Greek Tragic Plays

Eta Sigma Phi, the classics honorary, initiated three girls Thursday night in a secret ceremony. The girls initiated were Lenore Owen, Dorothy Reynolds, and Louise Whittler.

After the initiation a program meeting was held at which Miss Rozilli Kelton spoke on the Greek dramatists before Aeschylus. Jean McCall discussed the dramatist, Sophocles, after which Frances Cofer presented a paper on and principal works of Euripides.

Members decided upon an intensive study of the Greek tragedy, mainly the plays dealing with Orestes by Aeschylus, Sophocles, and Euripides. These include: "House of Atreus" by Aeschylus; "Electra" by Sophocles, and "Iphigenia at Aulis" and "Iphigenia in Tauris" by Euripides.

A short social hour followed the meeting.

Plans Underway For Celebration On Thanksgiving

Odd-Even Demonstration, Games Will Climax Five-Day Fete

Tarpon Club To Present Annual Water Pageant

A tentative program for the annual alumnae homecoming has just been announced. The climax of the five-day celebration, which opens November 27 with the Odd or Even demonstrations will be the annual Thanksgiving day basketball and volley ball tilts between Odds and Evens, followed by Thanksgiving dinner in the college dining hall. The celebration will end November 30 with a formal dance.

Tarpon Will Swim

A highlight each year of the Thanksgiving celebration is the water pageant put on by the Tarpon club. The pageant, which consists of formation diving, will have a patriotic motif this year. It will be staged Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights.

There will be no class reunions of alumnae held at homecoming, but they will be scheduled at the spring meeting to be held in the spring.

Headquarters for all alumnae will be in the recently completed Student-Alumnae building. Returning graduates are to make their own arrangements for housing.

Tickets for the Thanksgiving dinner will be sold later and arrangements will be made for alumnae to obtain them by writing Miss Lucile Lewis, Field Secretary.

Party Discusses Projects

Marguerite Dale led the meeting of the newly organized Student-Faculty Fellowship Thursday night. Two projects of the party were discussed and skeleton ballots for membership in a sentimental type. The other traits attributed to the writer were "very determined, sweet, self-centered, a little lazy, and artistic. He is very artistic but he tries to suffle it." When asked about the bad characteristics Betty replied, "not very many." The final verdict was that the author of the letter was inclined to be consistent as his letters were very much the same. When Betty asked the owner of this letter if she had made some correct statements, he said that she broadly and answered, "yes."

Tests "Feel" Clairvoyancy

Dr. C. P. Heinlein, professor of experimental psychology, will conduct an extra-sensory perception experiment, beginning Monday. He invites all students to participate in the test, which he says will be of scientific value. The experimental device will be placed in the bookstore where every student may see it.

The aim of the experiment is to determine whether an individual has the ability to perceive objects which are hidden from view. Although nearly a thousand students have been tested, there have been no positive results as yet.

The "Clairvoyant" or "extra-sensory perception" test to be used here was devised by Dr. Heinlein and his wife, Dr. Julia E. Heinlein. It consists of a large gray panel in which is placed a large white cardboard. Ten different objects or configurations are placed on the cardboard in designated squares. The subject then tries to perceive what is concealed in the box. Dr. Heinlein says that he believes there is a possibility that it can be done. He also holds that the test is an absolute method and cannot be accomplished by chance.

Haynes To Talk On Letter Art

Reference Librarian Will Speak Tonight In Browning Room

Miss Frances Haynes, reference librarian, will be the leader of an informal program which is scheduled in the browning room of the library for this evening from 7:30 to 8 o'clock.

Miss Haynes' topic will be "Letter Writing as an Art." She will introduce briefly various collections of letters emphasizing those of outstanding writers such as Winifred Holtby, Jane Carlyle, Mary Mitchell, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, and others

Another feature of the program will be a brief discussion of what constitutes good letter writing today.

Miss Haynes will be no scheduled program for Nov. 8, but on Nov. 15, Miss Rita Lane Matthews, a specialist in children's literature, and formerly a librarian here, will talk on children's books. This will be a special feature of the annual book week celebration, a new exhibit which is being arranged this year for the library by Miss Edna C. Gordon.

Home Economics Body Will Meet

Campus Representatives Will Go To Ga. Tech For Convention

Approximately 200 dietitians, home demonstration agents, home economic teachers, farm security workers, and county executives of NYA and WPA home making projects are expected to attend the annual business meeting of the Georgia Home Economics Association November 8-9 in St. Petersburg, Dr. Ruth Conner, president, has announced today.

Speakers to be scheduled on the program will include Marjorie M. Haseltine, consultant in nutrition, of the food relations bureau of the United States department of agriculture; a member of the staff of the maternal and child health division of the state health department, and a member of the American Home Economics association.

Among committee heads who will make reports on the progress of work at the convention are Miss Lucile Lewis, Miss Ruth Butler and Dean Margaret Sanders, all of the home economics division.

Pages at the convention will consist of home economics students chosen from Florida State college for women, Georgia Tech and the University of Tampa. Students from this campus to attend are Miss Betty Rose Scott, Phillipe, Rosella Pugitt, and Carolyn Johnson.

Woman Pianist Will Present Two Concerts

Sari Biro To Play Here On Evening Programs November 12-13

Hungarian Artist Made Recent New York Debut

The Artist Series will continue its 1940-41 schedule with the presentation of Sari Biro, outstanding Hungarian pianist, and leading European artist, in two concerts played on successive evenings.

The first will be November 12 at which time Miss Biro will play: Gavotte and Variation by Rameau; Two Sonatas by Scarlatti; Moonlight Sonata, Beethoven; Ballade F Minor, Berceuse, and Polonaise F Sharp Minor by Chopin: Etude by Arensky; Prelude by Prokofieve; three children's pieces—Walk, Cuckoo, and Bunny by Casella; Danse E'clat by Pick-Mangiagalli; Sacry Monte by Turina; and Noble Value by Delibes-Dohnanyi.

Second Program Planned

The second program will be give on November 13, with the following selections: Sonata in D major by Weisen, Klagen, Sorgen, Sagen Back-Liszt; Gavotte by Gluck-Brahms; Sicilians by Ignato-Respighi; Carnival by Schumann; Waltz in A flat major by Brahmsy; En Bateau by Debussy; Music Box by Liadow; Navarra by Arguena; Gritanerias by Lecuona; and Rhapsody (Rakoczy March) by Liszt.

Sara Biro was not prominently known when she arrived in America, but after her first appearance or "debut" in the American public at Town Hall, New York, the nation's elite paid her instantaneous acclaim and hailed her as a great, new star of the first magnitude. Newspaper critics are calling her the most gifted among the few contemporary women pianists of today.

Budget Report Grants Funds

Committee Allots Six Groups Convention Expenses

The college budget committee has designated the amount of $4,644.14 for the expenditures of six campus organizations for their respective convention funds.

The College Government association is allotted $85.65; the Women's Athletic association has access to $312; the Flambeau, $75; Dance Club, $75; Orchesis, $75, and debate council, $48.

The distribution is based on petitions which the budget committee by the above organizations. The funds may be used to attend the convention of their choice, but those funds are to be used for transportation only. This is in line with a policy adopted in previous years. Included in the expenses of conventions paid out of the budget is allotted to transportation based on day coach rates.

This report has been approved by the college council.

Bryan Hall's Mysterious Atmosphere Infuses Its Inhabitants With Mystic Powers

By ELEANOR YOTTHERS

Bryan, a mysterious building of ancient age, and wisdom has created an impression that this castle-like structure knows the secrets and sees into the future. An air of mysticism hovers about it.

Does any of Bryan's outward mysterious atmosphere linger in the dark walls, infusing the inhabitants with a corresponding mysticism? Does the mysticism of the most ancient of dormitories exert any influence over its occupants?

Read Palms

Two residents are true to the Bryanic atmosphere. In 114 Reading Kay's palm, Kay's handwriting. In room 5, Kay Cheney specializes in reading palms. Both girls give readings just for fun. They have been interested in the occupation for a long time, but have never done much reading concerning it or studying their ability to analyze handwriting on her own observations. "I'm just interested in handwriting. I've never studied it very much." She had never read handwriting extensively until she entered college this year, but some of her friends heard of her ability and consequently began to bring their letters from various boys from which she would give an analysis. Traits of character are supposed to be indicated in the handwriting. Betty Rose has studied under the writer of the letter is studious, hasty or has a nervous disposition. Betty does not use the best samples of a person's handwriting, however, Betty asserts. "A much truer analysis can be given if a sample of handwriting is used in which the writer was not conscious that it was going to be read carefully."

Works For Nothing

Betty does not charge for the readings because she does it "just for fun and because I don't want to tell somebody wrong." She does not tell her clients everything that she sees in the handwriting they submit because "they might get mad if I told them all the bad things."

Before attempting on a reading produced the following results: First, Betty scrutinizes the letter as a whole. Then she begins to notice the manner in which the Kay Cheney, the palmist, calls her business "Palm-For-Fun." She is a home economics major. But numerology and people are the subjects she is most interested in. She devoted much more time to palm reading in the freshman year than she does now. In fact, she had decided to give it up entirely this year as she had so much work to do, but old friends begged her to start again. Today it is necessary for her to put up an appointment list on her door two weeks in advance. Kay said "that if it gives that many people pleasure it must play some part in my life." Due to her work, however, she has had little time for the times for readings between first and second period every night. A small amount is charged for a reading, as "Madame-Lulu-De-Pan" has become embodied if it did not cost something.

Shape Counts

The lines, shape, size, and the slant of the hand all play the principal aspect of the person are the things on which Kay's reading

IRC Conference Will Assemble In Gainesville

Professor From England Will Speak to Group In December

The Florida State conference of the International Relations club will be held at the University of Florida on December 14 and 15. The speaker will be Professor B. B. Mowat, Honorary Fellow of Corpus Christi, Oxford university, England, and professor of history at the University of Bristol, England.

Professor Mowat was a member of the secretariat of the British war cabinet from 1917 to 1919 and a member of the British delegation to the Conference of Paris in 1919. A member of Phi Beta Kappa, Professor Mowat is a prolific writer. Among his more famous works are, "International Relations," "The War of the Roses," "A History of England," "Nineteenth Century Europe," "Anglo-American Relations," "History of European Diplomacy" and 45 other volumes.

There will be a registration charge of 75 cents to cover the cost of the banquet program, and correspondence. All other meals will be held in the university cafeteria. Breakfast will be 20 cents and lunch and dinner 35 cents.

Since the university will be in recess from December 14 until the 18, the dormitories will not be able to be used to house the representatives. Adequate housing facilities, however, may be found near the campus at rates from 75 cents to $1 per day. There will be a complete list of approved rooming houses available upon the arrival of the delegates.

The theme of the conference will be "Europe, the War and the Americas."

The program has already been arranged and will include round table discussions on the western hemisphere, the Far East, and the United States and England; an address by Professor Mowat, to be followed by questions from the delegates; a banquet, for which the speaker has not yet been selected; and an informal dance and floor show at night.

All meetings will be held in the Florida Union auditorium and banquet hall. All formal proceedings will be addressed at 12:30 o'clock December 15.

mechanism. Defense mechanisms seem to be the most popular part of a person's personality because they are found in so many people. It is a great delight seeing beyond the defense mechanism. Many people would be charming if they would just drop their defense mechanism, concert for example."

"To me music are the most interesting things in the world. Palm-reading is purely a hobby. I don't believe a thing I say, but many take me seriously. This gives me a peculiar feeling, because the whole process is nothing but nonsense. I call myself 'Madame-Just-for-Fun' for this very reason. The only reason I am continuing the readings is to provide amusement and to give others pleasure. I don't take it seriously and I hope my customers don't, though I'm afraid most of them do. No one gives me a chance to meet many girls Anyone with an analytical mind can develop a system of palm-reading. It's pure psychology, a bit of common sense, and extreme interest in people as individuals is all that is necessary to do this."

In giving a reading Kay first inspects the lines in the palm of the right hand. Second, the girl is allowed to ask all the questions she wants to and then Kay tells her whatever else she sees. If there are no questions she simply proceeds with the reading

"There are four main questions that are usually asked: 1- Will I be successful in my career? (2- What kind of a man will I marry? (3- How many children will I have? (4- A few girls with poor health want to know how long they will live. "Love life," in general, is the topic most interesting to both men and women, but especially to the latter.

From her observations, "Madame-Just-for-Fun" has classified men and women according to type. She has found that there are more or less all alike (not referring to their intelligence). They all understand each other and their reactions and weaknesses. Men are alike and so are the girls outspoken. They're good sports wholesome and non-complex. That's why they're so interesting.

Girls Complex

Girls are definitely more complex. Their types are: (1) Those who are selfish and self-centered, who look at everything from the angle of others or superficially consider them. (2) Those of this type want to know "how much money will my husband have?" (3) The all-work-no-play girls are inclined to be a little self-conscious, but are well developed and sympathetic. They usually have the "what kind of a man will I have" and "how many children" (3) The very unselfish type. This girl is interested in the point of depriving herself. She is the type that says she does not thing of herself and usually has to go into some humanitarian work such as nursing. She does not think about money and has literally given her life to others. She has a need for a husband and children. The perfection of this type. (4- The very active person. Characteristics of this person are that she is extremely sensitive and is either "up in the clouds" or "down in the depths," rarely achieving a good medium. Usually she gets married at her best work is done when she has someone to lean on.

In her own words "Madame-Just-for-Fun," Kay has experienced a number of unusual experiences. A lot of girls have left the room with tears streaming down their face and saying it was all in fun. One skeptical freshman last Saturday left the room somewhat during the reading. I told her she was in love with a boy named Roy, and told her she was going to get married. She became very white and said, "Let me if I was a witch! I laughed and told her not to be afraid as this wasn't really serious, but even then she asked me if I had been talking to her friends or had seen the boy's picture. I told her I didn't even know where she lived."

One young doctor from Duke university to whom I gave a reading about two weeks ago said at the end of my reading that there must be something to it as I had told him so many things that were true.

"One girl whose palm I read last year came to see me the other day. She said that last year I had told her she was going to get married sometime in 1940 and that I had described her future husband to her. "Well," she said, "I'm going to get married in a month to the man you described."

The days following first semester exams up to the Easter holidays are the times when girls come flocking for readings. Right after Christmas holidays there are not anxious to have readings as they have just returned from having a good time. Between the semester and Easter, however, the girls seem to need popping up and

Bundles Campaign To Sponsor Speech

Cotterill Will Address Knitters on War

Continuing the drive to interest students and Tallahassee residents in the Bundles for Britain campaign, the local campus committee headed by Dr. Marion J. Hay, of the education department, will present Dr. R. S. Cotterill, professor of history, speaking on "American Obligations" in the last "R" terms in contemporary events next Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the Augusta Conradi little theater.

Platform guests will include Mrs. Fred Elliott, chairman of the local Tallahassee Bundles for Britain committee; Cornelia Watson, College Government president who will introduce Mrs. Elliott and Mary Pinkard Bryan, chairman of the student forum.

Davis Returns From Lengthy Stay in Hawaii

Hula dancers who danced scops with bamboo sticks and hoops on him."

"To me the dance is extremely graceful and meaningful," Betty continued. "It is at all times sensual thing that Americans often make of it. Troope of Hula dancers in Hawaii are comparable as jazz bands in the United States. And as by far the most popular form of entertainment."

Miss Davis asked if Islands were all she expected of them. Betty replied, " " " and more. The water is as blue, the natives as colorful, and the whole atmosphere as romantic as I had always heard."

As our ship entered the harbor and Diamond Head mountain came into view, we were amazed to note the festivities put on for our honor. The dock was crowded with smiling natives singing Hawaiian songs to the accompaniment of a Hawaiian band.

"Before the ship docked we could smell the flowers of the leis which the natives wore around their necks. Native boys paraded out to meet the ship on surf boards and begged passengers to throw coins to them, which they did. The boys would dive for coins several times, then climb back on their boards and ride to the rest and begin again. When the ship docked, natives met us, still singing Hawaiian songs of welcome and presented us with leis.

"The favorite sports of the islanders are swimming, surf-boarding and out-rigger canoeing. In the afternoons Waikiki beach is crowded with natives and tourists indulging in these sports. I spent many of my afternoons here."

Therefore seek an outlet from their routine by indulging in a bit of palm-reading.

Kay asserts that the palm is always changing. "What you think and do is recorded in the palm. The lines of the palm go through phases of changing just as your body does. The human body is always either growing or deteriorating. It can't possibly be static. It is the same with the palm of your hand. Experiences are imprinted in the palms, the shape changes, and new lines are continually being formed and erased."

Other theories advocated by Kay are that some personalities clash and others blend, that electricity generated by the body is generated by people in such a manner that it attracts some persons and repels others. That in every individual has a definite place in the world to fill. If he or she does not fill it they will never find what they want in life and as a result will not be very happy.

In conclusion Kay said, "I wouldn't encourage too deliberate an analysis of people as it has a lot of disadvantages. It would suit me fine if I could not read another and if I could see people as they appear to the majority."

Freshmen Find Bangs Ruinous

Mingled shouts of glee and horror issued from Jennie Murphree hall Sunday night when about 18 daring freshmen decided to try the latest hair style bangs. Scissors whacked vigorously through blonds and brunette tresses, leaving in their wake destruction and repentant barbers. Sadly the results of the evening's work were found to be lacking in the chic and attractiveness promised in the bangs ads.

Peggy Quinby, and Patricia Dallinger were the chief barbers and executioners, and they did a good job, although most of the girls were apparently not made for bangs, or vice-versa. Some of the girls, however, had some fast hair-setting ad-sweeping at breakfast looking a little sheepish but a great deal more civilized than the previous night when they were unable to see much as damsels of the Stone Age.

Peaches Walton, upon viewing the results of the other girls' headplay decided not to be, and must belong to the strange class of "straight" and therefore succeeded to chop off inches of blonds with her shears. Such flash intervened so that she was unable to complete her work of destruction, and left a few wisps which add an "eye-length" bangs.

Monday morning breakfast found part of the group seated at one table, and all passers-by noticed the new Sonja Henie effect on the general effect created by the bangs. Even the girls who have naturally front locks have had a little trouble in getting accustomed to their strange fate, some of them are slowly taking on the appearance of the well-known Norwegian leading hair stylists. However, there are the unfortunate few who must wail for spring and a chance to grow their bangs back, or reconciliation between hair and individual can be reached.

Betty went on.

"Quite often I saw celebrities swimming, canoeing, or spending themselves on this world-famous beach. Among celebrities whom I saw while there were Sonja Henie, Bette Davis, Jack Benny, Mary Martin, Clarence Rogers and Dorothy Lamour.

"Let me tell you something of the University of Honolulu," Betty continued. "It is located in Manoa valley, about two miles enrollment of about 3,000. White students make up only a small portion of the student body which includes Chinese, Japanese, Korean and Hawaiian. All students spoken at the university is English, which is also the official language of Hawaii, though the islands have as many races and nationalities.

Honolulu university's famed research institute is one of the few of its kind in United States universities. The University's School of Tropical Agriculture is the only one of its kind in the world. Students are taught sugar and pineapple production. "Honolulu is one very unique thing about the university—every student is taught not one, but many languages."

Punch Institute is one of the few of its kind in United States universities. The University's School of Tropical Agriculture is the only one of its kind in the world. Students are taught sugar and pineapple production.

"Besides the various entertainments and interests which the Islands themselves offer." Betty told the reporter, "there is the army and navy. There are always movies and dances at the post and the Islands of the navy men are the army and navy balls, held at the Royal Hawaiian hotel, the most famous hotel on the Islands. There are held once each year when the City of Honolulu entertains for the services."

When asked about the race mixture which makes up the people of Hawaii, Betty said, "There is no race discrimination. Hawaii is the perfect example of interracial harmony. The people do not think of themselves as

Council Sings To Freshmen

Watson Opens Series Of CGA Lectures To Sophomores

"Goodnight Freshmen," the song that blue-jacketed Sophomore council girls sing to freshmen the first week at Florida State, was sung again yesterday in the freshman convocation as a part of the traditions program presented by Miss Mikels Florsers, director of residence here. Annette MacFarland, Betsy Ross Rowe, Carolyn Stowell and Charlotte Cooper sang the traditional goodnight song.

"The Scope of Student Government and Sophomore Council's Place In It" was the subject of the talk given by Cornelia Watson, president of college government association, to the council last week at its first meeting in the new assembly room of the Student-Alumnae building.

Cornelia is also the first of a series to be given by members of executive council of CGA to Sophomore council. These talks are to better acquaint Sophomore council with student government, according to Alice Price, chairman of the council.

"Blue and White," written by Carolyn Stowell, was adopted by the council as its official song.

rice, roast pig, and pineapple. I never have to be reminded to taste for most of the native dishes.

"In Hawaii, there are many holidays, each one commemorated by elaborate celebrations. One of the most outstanding is the celebration of Kahamamai day, in honor of the old King Kahamai. Hula who united all the Hawaiian Islands under one ruler. On this occasion there is much feasting and dancing, and colorful parades.

"Another occasion is 'Aloha Season,' continued Betty, "is May Day—Called Lei Day because everyone wears a lei of flowers. At this time there are flower exhibits and festivals. Lei Day, the University of Honolulu puts on a beautiful pageant. In this pageant the Hawaiian girls from the various islands compete for the honor of being queen of the festival. Last year," Betty said, "Dorothy Lamour represented the Big Island queen.

"Everyone connects Hawaii with the huge pineapple plantations. A visit to one is indeed an experience. The workers on these big plantations have the highest standard of living of any laborers in the world. Plantation owners not only provide comfortable living quarters for their workers, but see that they have leisure time in which to enjoy the four forms of entertainment, including competitive sports among workers on various plantations.

"Besides the various entertainments and interests which the Islands themselves offer." Betty told the reporter, "there is the army and navy. $5,000 Worth of Furnishings Make New Lounge Showplace

New York Firm Creates Elizabethan Atmosphere With Rich Colorings, Oak Panels

By MARY ANNA HAMPTON

"And I'll want a room with twenty-five dollars worth of beautiful furniture in it. . . ." Is that a part of your dream house, so have one room to show off, to encourage you to live graciously and beautifully?

For once a dream has come true, then. Completely for the use and enjoyment of the students is the formal lounge room of the Sorosis Longmire Student-Alumnae building. The spacious, high-ceilinged room now has $5,000 worth of appointments due to the generosity of the Alumnae association and the patriotic efforts of Mrs. Frank Moor, chairman of the association's supervise decorations and ex-president of the association.

The room, on the main floor in the southeast corner, was visited by many artists and finally by the formal opening of the building on October 11.

In the selection of the pieces, types, and colors, many details were considered. In securing a restingly dignified and rich effect in the lounge appointments. The New York firm of Ely, Walker, York City, sent as interior decorator J. W. Peak to study the needs and possibilities of the room. Mr. Peak returned to New York re-ports to the firm and as well as ideas of the committee on building decorations consisting of Mrs. Beatrice F. Williams, Mrs. Ralph Venables, Mrs. Charlotte Stevens, and Miss Dempsey Creary.

Plans were returned by mail model furniture plans and with the suggested sets of color schemes for the upholstering, drapes, rugs and accessories. After combining the selecting various materials and colors, the committee finally was ready to order the furniture.

The Elizabethan period was to be the underlying theme in the room decorations. Against a background of oak-paneled walls, and floor of blonde wood parquet with dark wooden pegs, the elaborate Elizabethan furnishings in rich blues, reds, and golds gained added distinction. Every piece of furniture in the room is from models of being carved directly from the originals in the Victoria and Albert museum of London.

"Besides the usual entertainment which the Islands themselves offer," Betty told the reporter, "there is the army and navy. There are always movies and dances at the post and the Islands of the navy men are the army and navy balls, held at the Royal Hawaiian hotel, the most famous hotel on the Islands. There are held once each year when the City of Honolulu entertains for the services."

When asked about the race mixture which makes up the people of Hawaii, Betty said, "There is no race discrimination. Hawaii is the perfect example of interracial harmony. The people do not think of themselves as dered a large patterned rug which will have the same blue tones.

To help create an authentic Elizabethan atmosphere in the hall, numerous small curios were imported from England. A saucy china chitten comes apart to form a bowl and lid. Intricately worked brass ladles, crystal bottles, and a pewter coffee pot add to the room's charm. Splashes of color are obtained from the large table lamps, some having as bases globes with the cracked pottery effect, five others with the more expensive brass bases. One of the most unusual and valuable lamps has a scarlet dragon encircling the white pottery base.

Interesting also are two huge crockery bowls, one blue and one purple, which carry the cracked effect again. The set of andirons at the massive fireplace is a gift of the Alumnae association, and the delicate brass grill work harmonizes with other furnishings. Even the fire screen is of the English period.

The Alumnae association has undertaken the furnishing of the reception room in the hall as a project for the fall. Decorations for the room will be ordered as quickly as funds permit. Appointments for this room are to be similar to those in the lounge and include a large table for writing purposes, comfortably upholstered chairs, lighting fixtures, a number of books and magazines for the shelves at either side of the entrance. Shades of green will be used for the room furnishings

Plans are directly above the library is the Club room, the use of which is also being sought by many campus organizations. But until there is money to buy and furnish this lower folding chairs necessary to equip the room will not be purchased.

There are a sink and a hot plate in an alcove of the room in order that light refreshments may be served.

Both Mrs. Moor and Miss Creary, director of the building

Chinese or Japanese, or whatever they be, but as Americans. The Hawaiian people never refer to the Islands as a colony, but as 'States,' but as the 'Mainland,' for these people themselves efore as an island state."

Betty said, in conclusion, that of all the places she has visited she likes Hawaii best and feels that it is the home of happiness who has ever visited the islands will want to remain," she said.

Besides Hawaii, she has lived in army posts with her father in Shanghai, Wake, and Panama. Major Davis was also at Gainesville for a time and is now stationed at Fort Benning, Ga.

Flash Bulbs Make Campus Lose Poise

Athletic Souls Try Angle Shots For Flastacowo

By BETTY JEAN DAVENPORT

Could it be that women are mentally deficient persons in our midst? Have you ever wondered why all of your meetings are interrupted by a flash and a dash—or why let those strange people loose with those flash bulbs and cameras?

Well, calm your fear and prepare for a shock. They're only the photographers for the Flastacowo. It seems that there comes an opportune moment for every "shot," so maybe that accounts for their peculiar actions. But just be sure that you don't catch you performing one of your "peculiar" antics, or might find a most unflattering picture of yourself adorning page one of the next section in the Flastacowo.

It seems that the best results are obtained when the pictures are made from odd angles. For instance during a basketball game, the staff decided to sneak into Bryan during a basketball game to get some views from various positions. All the lights were turned off except two spots which were carefully shaded to produce the desired effect. Then our staff photographer proceeded to climb onto a table and make her picture (flash) taking.

The photographers are made to feel quite conspicuous when they receive so many peculiar looks. They have to use strategy in their attempts to find just the right angle. Such was the case when they were taking pictures of the Marine band on its recent appearance here.

One of the prerequisites of becoming a staff photographer is a camera of one's own, and also some skill in the art. Last year's staff was composed of seven (all of other staff members) and took a semi-serial view.

At the recent presentation of skits at Playmakers' every effort in the "theatric krews" were made to feel that they might be unveiling the secrets of self-poise—for the "girl with the little black box" slipped in and set off one of her flash bulbs. It took a great deal of self-possession for the speaker as well as the audience to remain poised in the face of such a surprise attack.

And so, while they appear to be a peculiar lot and we've have reason to wonder about their rationality, we can't help but recognize the fact that they have what it takes to give us the shots for a "cute angle" section of our annual.

Evens Defeat Odds In Practice Game

Green And Gold Scores Third Win In Row

For the third consecutive week the Even basketball team has put down the Odds in the games played every Friday at the gymnasium. The score was tied at the half, but the Evens, due to the fine work of one of their Even players, Dorothy Buchanan, who made good nine out of 13 shots at the basket, came up on the long end of a 17-16 score. Dorothy made 12 of the 17 points for the Evens and was high player of the game, with Lucile Walker, of the Odds, second with nine points.

The score of this game can be no grounds for comparing the two teams, as they will be at Thanksgiving, since all the players on the Even team were freshmen and those on the Odd team picked at random from all players out.

Players for the Odds are Frances Smith, captain; Lucille Walker, Bertha Lee Hoffman, Ruth Thomas, Mary Alice Kirchner, Ann Prestall, Very Ray, Nancy White, Mary Gray Holderness, Betty Sue Smith, Betty Sherman. Evens were Dorothy Buchanan, captain; Jean Wood, Jeanne Hampton, Marie Pounds, Arna Alderman, Murrel Hamilton, Mary Frances Scoates, and Jean Lloyd.

The Evens' next most exciting game of the year to date in Odd-Even volleyball was played between the Odd teams from the Odds and Evens last Friday afternoon. The teams were divided like the blondes and the brunettes. Giuliano's Blondes defeated Mona Melms plan to have another game this Friday to which anyone interested is invited.

Final Date Is Set To Apply For Test

Merit Exams to be Given For Variety of Jobs

The final date for filing applications for the merit system examinations conducted by the merit system committees of the Florida unemployment service and the state welfare board is November 15. Applications for taking these tests must be made upon official blanks obtained from the merit system supervisor, James E. Chace, Jr., 308 University avenue, Gainesville, and must be returned to him by midnight of November 13. The examinations are to be held in Tallahassee, as well as in other Florida cities, in the near future to determine those qualified for 44 different kinds of positions in the fields of accounting, statistics, clerical work, and personnel work. The applicants will also be judged on the bases of education, experience, performance tests, and physical fitness.

Names of successful candidates will be placed on a register from which the appointments will be made.

Cuban, American Schools Much Alike, Says Pincus

life, Rosalie said the only difference between the Cuban and American family is that the former is very strict with the girls. Also the girls are much more dependent upon their parents than the American girls. However she added that some families have adopted the American idea and are "more or less" allowing their daughters more liberty.

Although she was born in Constantinogrand in the Ukrane in Russia, Rosalie went to Cuba when she was nine months old, and so considers that to be her home. She has one brother, five, and a sister, 10.

Leaving home Sept. 8 for Tallahassee, Rosalie flew to Miami. There she encountered difficulty with the immigration authorities over her United States residential papers. She had to stay over night there until the local office opened the next morning. Then she was questioned as to her destination and intentions. She continued her trip by bus.

Rosalie plans to attend Florida State college for four years. She intends to major in bacteriology and minor in music. After graduation she hopes to be a laboratory technician.

Class Concocts Special Salad

Reynolds students may remember the date and peach salad served with their banquet last Wednesday night. Thirteen girls in particular will remember that salad for many years to come—they were the students in the Institutional Management and Administration class whose job it was to plan that course of the banquet.

Under the supervision of Miss Edith Hall, class instructor, the students submitted ideas for the salad last week. To learn to think in terms of quantity" was the purpose of the project. The suggestion of Mary Alice Kirchner, Ann Prestall, Very Ray, Nancy White, Mary Gray Holderness, Betty Sue Smith, Betty Sherman, Evens were Dorothy Buchanan, captain; Jean Wood, Jeanne Hampton, Marie Pounds, Arna Alderman, Murrel Hamilton, Mary Frances Scoates, and Jean Lloyd.

Dancers Play At Hallowe'en Party

Gay Novelties Keynote Playnight Affair

Friday night the gymnasium was transformed into a scene of dance land for the annual Hallowe'en party sponsored by the Playnight committee.

Terrifying black cats and witches decorated the walls of the lobby and the main gymnasium. Black and orange streamers floated from each end of the hall, over the heads of the dancers. A "chamber of horrors" in the club room provided extra chills and thrills. In the lobby soft drinks, hot dogs, and candy apples were sold by girls appropriately costumed. Games of chance were also held in the lobby for those not caring to dance.

A highlight of the evening was the elimination dance. All of the dancing couples were given a number and then were asked to leave the floor as their number was called. Dorothy Ann Herd and her escort, Marquis Taylor residence at Florida State college has been appointed as chairman of the committee to arrange the Thanksgiving week program.

Decoration of the sorority houses will add a festive atmosphere to the celebration with the Alumnae association offering cash prizes of $5, $3, and $2 to the best-decorated houses. Campus buildings will wear green and gold colors of the Evens, and red, white, and purple colors of the Odds, depending on the outcome of color rush.

Leon Leads In FSC Enrollment

Counties of Dade And Duval Are in Second And Third Places

Represented by 233 students, Leon county again leads the state in the number of girls attending Florida state college for women. Dade and Duval hold second and third place respectively with Dade having 164 and Duval 160. Hillsborough follows with 157 and Polk 106.

Of the 1968 students enrolled this year, 91 are out-of-state girls. Alabama is represented by 18 students, while Georgia has 15. New Jersey and New York tie for third place with five students each. Massachusetts follows closely with four.

The names of the counties and the number of students from them are: Alachua, 66; Baker, 3; Bay, 14; Bradford, 4; Brevard, 16; Broward, 26; Calhoun, 3; Charlotte, 5; Citrus, 2; Clay, 3; Collier, 2; Columbia, 12; Dade, 164; DeSoto, 5; Dixie, 3; Duval, 163; Escambia, 41; Flagler, 2; Franklin, 10; Gadsden, 30; Gilchrist, 1; Gulf, 3; Hamilton, 2; Hardee, 9; Hendry, 2; Hernando, 6; Highlands, 10; Holmes, 14; Indian River, 16; Jackson, 31; Jefferson, 19; Lafayette, 5; Lake, 26; Lee, 23; Leon, 238; Levy, 12; Liberty, 5; Madison, 20; Manatee, 32; Marion, 35; Martin, 3; Monroe, 10; Nassau, 4; Okaloosa, 12; Okeechobee, 3; Orange, 82; Osceola, 12; Palm Beach, 73; Pasco, 8; Pinellas, 84; Polk, 106; Putnam, 27; St. Johns, 11; St. Lucie, 12; Santa Rosa, 10; Sarasota, 18; Seminole, 23; Sumter, 6; Suwannee, 13; Taylor, 30; Union, 2; Wakulla, 6; Walton, 13; Washington, 14.

The names of states and territories with the number of girls attending are: Alabama, 12; Arkansas, 1; California, 1; Canal Zone, 1; Connecticut, 2; Cuba, 3; District of Columbia, 1; Georgia, 15; Haiti, 1; Louisiana, 1; Massachusetts, 4; Michigan, 1; Mississippi, 2; Missouri, 1; New Jersey, 5; New York, 5; North Carolina, 3; Ohio, 2; Pennsylvania, 1; Puerto Rico, 1; South Carolina, 3; Virginia, 1; West Virginia, 1.

F Clubbers and Goats Honored at Banquet; Initiation To Be Soon

The "F" club is giving a banquet honoring members and pledges in the dining room tonight. The pledges are to be initiated.

At Freshman convocation yesterday "F" clubbers presented the campus tradition of "color rush" by giving a miniature exhibition. "F" club further entertained freshmen at the singing club meeting.

An after-dinner coffee featuring a Halloween motif was held by F club members in Landis parlor room Monday night. A combined business and social hour followed, during which plans for initiation were discussed.

Floread Brown Explains Campus Sports Rating

Minnie Ratliff, president of the Women's athletic association, was in charge of convocation last Tuesday. She introduced the executive board of the association and then turned the program over to Floread Brown, who spoke on the campus sports ratings, during which time vaqueros could be prepared portraying different sports.

Convocation was concluded with the singing of school song and several request numbers. Sarah Ruth Bryant commentated the various issues including the war and the theatre. Starline Hall led the devotional.

Those participating in the program were: Jean Wood, Margaret Carter, Meta Helms, Phil Eckland, Irene Pound, Deneva Ecker, Paulette Nolan, Mary Lou King, Myrtle League, Frances Rattle, Margaret Clements and Floread Brown.

Ruth Porter to Robert A. Baures on April 8, 1940, in St. Petersburg. She graduated with the class of 1938.

Caroline Oliver to William Pedrock Woods on June 22, 1940 in West Palm Beach, Fla. She was graduated with the class of 1936.

Mayer Defeats Moore In Upset

28 Students Participate In Extra-Curricular Tennis Games

Pat Mayer, freshman, upset the ladder in the extra curricular tennis tournament by scoring decisive victories over Lib Moore, FSCW tennis champion, and Starline Hall, opponent of the tournament last Tuesday. The score for the set between Lib and Pat was five to seven, in what turned out to be a hard fought battle Tuesday afternoon in the most exciting game of the tournament so far was waged between Mary Fields and Lib Moore. One of these girls will be the winner of the second startling upset changes the ladder.

There are 28 girls taking part in the matches of the tournaments, which is sponsored by Miss Rebecca Averill and Starline Hall for those advanced tennis players who have no competition in Odds-Even or intramural sports until after Christmas. Another tournament will be held immediately following this one.

Odds, Evens Meet In Playnight Match

Basketball and Dancing Slated For Tonight

Playnight tonight will feature the Odd-Even basketball game. These games are played merely for practice and have no bearing on the match played at Thanksgiving.

After the game dancing will be enjoyed with the Playnight committee will be hostesses. Floread Brown, chairman of Playnight, said that there would be no special entertainment program given because of the game, which will take up the greater part of the time.

Eyes Are Precious

"Be careful of your eyes, dear. You can have only one pair of them." Good advice that comes from myriads of mothers, fathers, doctors, and adults. "Eyes are priceless; treasure them."

Nurtured on this doctrine, college students find themselves stumped by a block that seems to grow worse every year—the lights in the library. Night after night girls crouch over their books in ill-lighted rooms trying to decipher the pages. They twist and turn, attempting to find some position that will lift the shadow, that will make it possible for them to raise their eyes at least a few more inches from the writing, and that will take the ache out of their eyes. Year after year more girls come back to school with glasses, many of which cases can be directly traced to the bad lights in the library.

The Flambeau, feeling that something had to be done and done quickly, set out to learn the why's and wherefore's. It found that the lighting was bad from the beginning. The fixtures have been changed three times in an effort to secure better lighting. The wiring has been re-done once. General Electric engineers and college electricians have held consultations about the lighting and have examined the building thoroughly to determine the cause of insufficient lighting. At the conclusion of their investigation they attributed the condition to three major defects. First, the wiring does not carry enough power for sufficient lighting. Second, the dark walls and ceilings absorb 40 per cent of the light. Lastly, the walls are dirty and need re-painting.

Although many students have thought that desk lamps were the answer to the problem, public building experts in lighting say no. They do not consider such lights best because they do not give adequate lighting at all points about the table, and they cast shadows when the other lights necessary for shelf lighting conflict with them. The University of Michigan thought that it had its lighting problem solved when it installed table and desk lamps. Now it is planning to discard them, as is the University of Tennessee.

The evident answer to the problem here is through an attack on the causes. Re-wiring will unquestionably be expensive, but this is a situation that transcends monetary cost. Human eyes are at stake—2000 of them. If that is the way to make the library a fit place to study, then it is worth the price. As for the walls, they sound like a good starting point. Even the sacrifice of a little cathedral beauty, which is so conducive to meditation if not to good sight in the periodical room, would be worth the additional light it would afford. The reserve room alone stands the test of good lights, and its light walls are not too unattractive. A paint job, using light tones, would definitely improve the reference room.

If the library should be "lighted up," and it has to be, fluorescent pale lighting such as is now used at the main desk in the periodical room, and is being experimented with all over the country, would be a wonderful thing to try. Although the initial output is greater, it gives better light than and uses one-fourth as much electricity as regular bulbs. When eyes are concerned, the best is none too good. Something has to be done, and t'were better it were done quickly. This is an emergency. Eyes are priceless.

Residents of Tampa were somewhat disgusted with the national lottery Tuesday because, unlike Tampa's local number drawings, the national house did not pay 70 to 1.

"When the clock in the steeple strikes three" is the top of the morning for Mahatma Ghandi, who says his best thinking is done between 2 and 4 o'clock in the morning. Maybe we should all live in India—or at least wear a loin cloth.

A more mature member of our campus expressed a thought several days ago, which to some ways of thinking contains a good deal of truth. "Ideas for an editoriel! They keep you so busy around here you don't even have time to get ideas."

The Press Pleads

For the past two years students in the department of political science have done interne work in certain state departments for which they receive college credit. In this manner they have opportunity to gain invaluable experience. Not only will they be better equipped to follow their chosen profession when they graduate from college, but the very fact that they have served this interneship cannot help but add to the prestige of the student when she presents herself, along with her brand new diploma, to some prospective employer.

This year college executives have begun a movement to make it possible for prospective school teachers to interne. Plans for this progressive measure are rapidly nearing completion and will go into effect the second semester of this year. It is the hope of college authorities that by next year, student teachers in large numbers will be sent throughout the state to gain actual experience in teaching in Florida public schools. In the past years would-be teachers have gained experience by practice teaching in the demonstration school connected with the college. Although they undoubtedly profit immensely by this, it cannot compare with the practicality of the new plan. Teaching in the Demonstration school is very different from teaching in the Florida public school system. Students are enthusiastically applauding the new teacher-interne plan, and well they may. To the approval of the general student body, we wish to add our own.

And now, we, journalists and would-be journalists of Florida State college, wish to make a plea in our own behalf. Why not interneships for journalists?

In presenting our case, we use the same argument that is the basis for the new teacher interne movement. Although we gain much from working with the Flambean and in putting out one edition of the local Tallahassee paper, this is not enough. If Florida State College for Women is to graduate teachers with actual real-life experience, why cannot it also graduate journalists with the same experience? What is the just due of one student is that of every other student. We feel that we have the right to graduate with knowledge and experience equal to that of every other student. We want to face the journalistic world with as much to offer it as those who desire entrance into the world of teachers and professors. If anything, we deserve it more than they do. Teaching is a woman's profession—a profession which expects and welcomes women. On the other hand, the profession of journalism belongs to men. It does notwant women and in order for a woman to gain entrance, she must be both exceptainal and ever-persistent.

As we said above, experience on the Flambean is invaluable. However, it cannot and does not approximate the experience one gets on a real newspaper where writing under pressure is a dire necessity, where an error may mean a breach of promise suit, where one competes with superiors rather than equals or near-equals. Furthermore, whereas news coverage of a college newspaper confines itself within the narrow limits of college life with its more or less childish and unimportant activities, a real neswpaper covers news of vital importance to every person no matter what his interest, his position or his station in life.

On these grounds, we rest our case.

According To Rumors

The social committees of Florida State College for Women and the University of Florida are laying bigger and better plans for the next monthly dance which is scheduled for March. Maybe it's something in connection with the picnics that were suggested last year. If it is, or if it isn't, more power to 'em. The Flambean has always been behind these intercollege functions, even in the days when the general student body was mildly skeptical. And the Flambean is still keeping its initial position.

Some organization on campus has been seriously considering the project of a book room for the Student-Alumnae building which was suggested in the Flambeau several weeks ago. We want to thank the organization for its consideration. We still think such a room for our new building is a good idea.

The Red and Black, student newspaper at the University of Georgia, has been carrying on a vigorous campaign for compulsory Wasserman tests in the institution. It seems that the dean of students and the university physician are in favor of the regulation and only the consent of the student body is needed to put the regulation into effect. Which makes us all wonder what became of the fight for, or at least discussion of, Wasserman tests on the Florida State college campus.

Studeols at the University of Tampa soon will have a recreation center for their jitter-bugging, card playing, ping pong, and gab sessions. Here's hoping the students there enjoy their new recreation center as much as we enjoy ours.

Student senate, at its meeting yesterday afternoon, vote dto send a recommendation to the faculty committee on student asking for extra hour on the Flambean editors' Thursday night permits. We wish to thank the student senate for its action and express a hope that the recommendation will carry some weight.

An Illinois contractor was trapped in the basement of a pre-fabricated house under construction because his workmen made too rapid progress on laying the floor planking. Somehow it reminds one of the personality development of students undertaken on this campus. While students are still laying the foundations for their college career they look up to find themselves covered with meetings, programs, and plans designed by officials to instruct students in campus living.

Collegiate Comebacks

One of our friends (who has a tendency toward gathering curves with that second cream puff) has a method of gentle self-control that leaves little room for criticism. Stuck in her mirror is a parallel card on which gambols a chubby little number in a play suit. "Remember," reads the note to herself beside it, "that you'll be wearing a bathing suit Christmas—and there'll be NAVY men around."

We'll bet she eats carrot tops and lettuce.

Overheard from an intra-faculty conversation. "He has a voice like a bear that swallowed a bull frog."

And on the all-absorbing topic of food, we can't help thinking that the dining room is carrying things too far. No doubt it's very encouraging to our mothers when we come home Christmas with that wholesome, healthy look. But do we have to eat desserts that have whipped cream and rice in them? The future has us worried. The theory that we'll all be automations as a result of having to dress for dinner leaves us cold. What really has us biting our fingernails is, "Will there be enough size 44 Sunday dresses to go around?"

In fond if futile hopes for next weekend—

We don't want A's—that's a futile hope.

Or bubble-baths or perfumed soap,

Or other of life's luxuries!

We're contented with Lux and a few C's and B's.

We don't ask for rubies or diamond rings,

Or dining-room vitamins — are there such things?

But down on our knees we humbly pray,

Let the Gators win ONE Georgia-Florida day!

And the girl who, after about three weeks of receiving no mail from her family, wired home. "I ain't furious—just curious! Still living?"

Item collected during G'ville week-end:

Clump, clatter, bang (and other falling-down-stairs-noises)

1st voice: (censored) Paul pushed me!

2nd voice: Paul who?

1st voice: (censored) Paul Jones.

We heard something in the smoker the other day that would be amusing if it wasn't so grim.

A gay young thing was rambling on about the man in her life. "He's tall, dark, and conscripted," she said cheerfully.

Personally we think the meal in the dining room Wednesday night was almost worth the effort of putting on our Sunday stockings.

Ah! the tantalizing odor of barbecued po'k chops n' stuff.

We bumped into one of our very good friends who had been up until the wee hours of the morning studying for a quarterly.

In spite of deep purple circles extending down to the dimples in her cheeks, and a vague expression about the eyes, she was waxing hilarious over nothing in particular.

We wondered about her apparent good humor until she said:

"Don't be misled by my attituda. I'm not happy, just hysterical."

According to the sound detector which an inquiring mind has been toting around the campus, the library is only half as noisy as the post office in the mad, mad, 9:30 a. m. rush.

The statistics are probably due to the end-of-quarter-pressure on long suffering students.

"My how time flies," we comment tritely. We were just thinking the other day that perhaps it would be clever of us to get an early start on papers and parallel that would be due in the vague future when we were rudely awakened by announcements from various and sundry professors which all added up to the fact that we're in the middle of quarterlies. Oh, well at this rate we should be leaving for Christmas vacation any day now.

After her column on the knitting for Britain activities on campus, our foreign correspondent for the Alligator, Margaret Painter, received the following letter from a protesting Gainesville student:

Dear Margaret:

We are amazed! We are aghast! We are also surprised. In your last column to these tenants of the Halls of Yearning for Learning in Gainesville, we read that hordes and groups, and crowds, in fact oodles of women at Tally are knitting chest protectors, socks, sweaters and other insurance against the cold winter ahead for the British fleet. Admirable pursuit, we might say, had not the

BY MARY CELESTE HARDEE

Startling and important events have occurred fast and furiously on the news front of the world. In Europe and in America this week will go down in history as one of the most eventful periods during these unsettled times. On the European continent, Petain has signed an agreement with Hitler, bringing France and Germany into closer cooperation; the Italian army has invaded Greece and thus spread the battlefield of war into new territory. In the United States 800,000 men were drafted as a result of the first peacetime conscription measure; Roosevelt warned France that if the Vichy government comes to the military aid of Germany, the American republics will take over Martinique and French Guinea; the presidential candidates made their last speeches in the political campaign; and John L. Lewis voiced his support of Willkie.

France and Germany Reach Agreement

As a result of a threat of starvation to his people, Petain has signed a Nazi agreement which, specifically, (1) gives Alsace and Lorraine to Germany; (2) gives the French Riviera as far as Nice to Italy; (3) gives France and Italy joint administration of Tunisia; (4) gives France and Spain joint administration in Morocco; (5) guarantees the protection of the Italian flanks in their campaign against Egypt by the French armies in Syria and North Africa. The French fleet will be expected to assist in the protection of North African, Mediterranean and Atlantic naval bases against British attacks so that the Axis powers may break the British blockade.

Believing that Hitler is demanding the use of French naval and air bases throughout the French empire, Roosevelt, after a conference with Hull, Patterson, and his chief of staff, General G. C. Marshall, warned France that the American republics under the Havana convention will occupy Martinique and French Guinea if the Vichy government comes to the military aid of Germany. Fourteen of the American republics have already ratified this agreement, providing that "if a non-American state directly or indirectly tries to replace another non-American state in its control over territory in America, thus threatening the peace of the continent, such territory shall come under the provisions of this convention and shall be submitted to a provisional administrative regime."

Italy Invades Greece

The first inkling of immediate war in the Balkans came Sunday, when, according to a dispatch from Rome, Greece attacked Italy on the Albanian border. The Italians also reported an attempt to bomb the lieutenant general's office at Port Edda. Beginning her Balkan drive, Italy invaded Greece early Monday, after an ultimatum issued to Premier John Metaxes calling upon him to surrender part of his territory had expired. The Greek government refused to consider the ultimatum and called upon the Greek people to fight for their country's "independence and honor."

Great Britain has rushed to the aid of Greece and has already seized Corfu island, where she expects to establish air bases to protect Greek cities from Italian invasion and to strike back at Italy. Without help from England, Greece is doomed, for she has comparatively no army. Germany also has an army of 1,000,000 troops ready to assist Italy if necessary in her attack on Greece.

Lewis Supports Willkie

In a dramatic speech Saturday, John L. Lewis, leading laborite and president of the CIO, voiced his choice of Willkie for president, and made a personal appeal to his followers, urging them to vote for Willkie if they wished to keep him as president of the CIO. Previous to the democratic nomination Lewis had asserted that he would not support Roosevelt for a third term. He had not, however, made public his support of Willkie until Saturday, when speaking as an American citizen and not as president of the CIO, he denounced Roosevelt as seeking to lead the nation into war. He said the New Deal had not kept faith with the people and had not solved unemployment problems.

Lewis has divided the CIO members into two camps, some of whom completely accept his support of Willkie; others demand his resignation. Many of the important leaders of the affiliate unions of the CIG still cling to Roosevelt, while some join with Lewis for Willkie.

In an answer to Willkie's speech, Secretary of State Hull said that Lewis made a false statement when he said Roosevelt was leading the country into war.

With election five days away, campaign fever grows hot.

Mankato (Minn.) State Teachers college this year placed 97.6 per cent of its two-year graduates.

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK

Contemporary Student Thought . . .

The number of enrollments in Spanish language classes at American colleges and universities has increased within the last year according to the Iowa Daily Iowan. "This trend," observes the Iowan, "holds one of the strongest hopes for real improvement in understanding between the United States and its neighbor nations to the south." The Louisiana State university Daily Reville accuses the student body of snubbing its 200 or more South American students and warns that "the welfare of the United States in protecting its democracy and its people depends as much upon solidarity with its neighboring countries to the south as it does on its army and navy." Lafayette college is now requesting new courses in Latin-American history and culture because of its connection with our national defense. Groups of teachers and undergraduates on intensiva study tours have invaded the South American republics within the last few months particularly, reports the New York Times, which should prove beneficial to both continents.—ACP.

Student thought should have been stirred by the recent editorial in Texas State college's Lass-o, "How Much Do You Read Papers?" A student opinion poll taken in October of 1939 showed that 45 per cent of the student body did not even read the daily newspapers, which brings about the conclusion that an appalling number of college students are ignorant of present day affairs. "Campus affairs are important," admits the Lass-O, "But sometimes there is a tendency to dwell too much in the pleasant college community, separating ourselves almost entirely from world affairs that we do not want to face."

A survey of the college methods of preparation of students for teaching positions is being held at Hastings college, Hastings, Nebraska, and at other colleges and universities throughout the middle west by the North Central association. Dr. Russell Cooper, professor of history and international relations at Cornell college in Iowa and representative for the association, says that already these two general trends are emerging:

1. "To give the potential high school teacher a broader general education in the particular field of concentration which the student will be teaching."

2. "Incorporation of more and more practical material into the courses with emphasis upon community contacts, the contribution of current events, and the introduction of material vitally related to a student's personal and social living."

A freshman poll at Leigh university, Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, taken during the English placement examination showed that 404 of 449 had read Shakespeare's "Macbeth." Next in order of the poll came "Silas Marner," "Rime of the Ancient Mariner," "A Tale of Two Cities," and "Tom Sawyer." Many of the more modern novels were neglected. "Lost

Inquiring Reporter . . .

What is your opinion of the Student political party recently reorganized on campus? What, in your estimation are the possibilities for such organizations? These were the questions asked by the inquiring reporter this week.

The overwhelming opinion expressed seems to be that it is a very good idea and that it will help the girls of the Florida State college to express themselves.

Almost everyone that was questioned seemed to be in doubt as to what the party really was, and it was felt that the organization needed more publicity.

Out of all the people questioned there was only one person that was heartily against the party. Everyone else felt as though this party has a definite place in the campus activities.

Lorraine Cottrell: It's a good practice for participation in politics later when we become voters in national politics. It should be one of the most justifiable organizations on campus.

Selma Hyman: If this party can really carry on free, unhampered discussions on pertinent topics, it will be an excellent addition to the many organizations already on campus.

Mary Anna Hampton: Of all the thousands of organizations on campus I place this political one in the last ten.

Lillian Gordon: I didn't know one was organized; it needs more publicity.

Madalyn Halpern: The student political party in my estimation is very outstanding. It gives each member of the student body the right to express her political views and opinions if she so wishes. This kind of organization is quite essential in a school of this size. The fact that it gives women good political views proves another asset.

Jimmy Pain: A student political party, under our College Government association, can grow in the right direction if students will cooperate. There is a real need for a party to enter our campus.

Esta Argintar: It needs publicity—I haven't heard of any work that it has done.

Phoebe Furr: Usually the girls on campus aren't interested in student politics. They consider them boring. But an organization of this kind they find surprisingly stimulating.

Theresa Sullivan: I think campus politics needed something like the Student political party to receive students' interest in campus affairs. I like the idea of having meetings at which people feel completely free to get up and say exactly what they think. I like the whole idea.

Margie Richardson: While the party isn't too well organized yet, it has set goals which if it does not swerve from them will be a great benefit to this campus. Students should be made more conscious of college government, and the party would be quite an instrument in acquainting them with it. It will serve to make students more alive and alert to problems of campus life. It can't be denied that it needs more publicity.

Gwendolyn Bradley: Such a party has great possibilities. However, I haven't heard a great deal about the Student political party. If it were given more publicity, I think students would be interested and benefited by it.

Isabelle Waterhouse: I think that if it is well organized and is not swerved from its aims and purposes, it will fill a "crying need" on the campus.

Leora Pruitt: I think the Student political party will probably be for the good of the school in that girls who otherwise would

Magazine Jottings . . .

By MARLENE DALE

"Plain Speaking About La[tin] America," appearing in the [No]vember Harpers is a react[ion] against months of scare stor[ies] about the inroads of Nazis in [the] southern part of the hemisphe[re]. Lewis Hanke, when Harpers as[ked him] to write the article, is director [of] the Hispanic Foundation of [the] Library of Congress and kno[ws] Latin America intimately.

To one recently returned fr[om] visiting most of the republics [of] Latin America, the most sing[le]hearted concentration of [the] press on Nazi activities comes [as] a disquieting fact. Thin conc[en]tration of public attention u[pon] the Hitler menace is perh[aps] natural, but may lose rather th[an] win friends for us in La[tin] America: and unfortunately [it] comes at a time when the Uni[ted] States has the best opportun[ity] presented for a hundred years [to] place our relations with the o[ther] American republics on an hon[est] and lasting basis.

The Nazi danger exists, [of] course, and it would be naive [to] underestimate the possible ha[rm] Hitler's agents could create [in] Latin America. There looms [an] even greater danger from [the] blotting out by the "Nazi Me[n]ace" all the other news of La[tin] America.

We need to improve our c[ul]tural relations with Latin Ame[ri]ca. There is probably no cou[n]try in the world where Hitle[r's] racial doctrines would find sc[an]tier soil in which to root t[han] Brazil. The government took [the] lead in improving our relat[ions] two years ago by setting up [a] division of cultural relations [in] the state department. Yet [this] division found itself hedged in [at] almost every turn by prohibitio[ns] there were so many activities [it] could not engage in. There [was] never any dearth of good ide[as]. Nor have other government [at]tempts, such as the Inter-depa[rt]mental committee on cooperat[ion] with the American Republi[cs] brought forth fruit.

It seems clear that only a mo[d]est assistance can be expec[ted] from Congress in the general c[ul]tural program. Our critic[ism] must not be too dogmatic, ho[w]ever, for as this article was be[ing] written, word came that Nel[son] Rockefeller has accepted Pre[si]dent Roosevelt's invitation [to] serve on the Council of Natio[nal] Defense as coordinator of [the] commercial and cultural relat[ions] between the American republic[s].

We have acted toward [our] southern neighbors in the sp[irit] of the Good Samaritan and a[lso] in the spirit of Simon Leg[ree]. We have a "Good Geighbor" po[li]cy, but this policy is being ca[r]ried out in various ways.

If one nation is to foster c[ul]tural relations with other peopl[es] it should know what their cult[ure] is. There should be no thou[ght] of linking this cultural progr[am] with a campaign to attack [the] Nazis in the press and by ra[dio], if for no other reason than b[e]cause in a campaign of vitupe[ra]tion we should be opposed by m[as]ters of a technic, who would [not] be slow to expose our most v[ul]nerable flanks.

No, accusations and indign[a]tions against the Nazis' war m[a]chine will hardly make frien[ds] for us in Latin America. [We] ought rather to strike a posit[ive] note by letting Latin Amer[ica] know what we are saying, thin[k]ing, feeling, and writing. A[nd] one way of doing this would [be] to provide a carefully select[ed] collection of our best books tra[ns]lated into Spanish and Port[u]guese, and conversely ought [to] launch a similar collection of th[e] contemporary writing in Engli[sh] translation for widespread circ[u]lation in this country.

The political and commerci[al] necessities that draw us togeth[er] are real and must continue to [be] diligently pursued. But only [if] we of the North and South [know] and understand each other c[an] we both face the future with co[n]fidence.

Musically Speaking

BY VIRGINIA DUNN

Surprise of the week:" What should Miss Phipps find the other day when she walked into the record and music room of the music annex but a very complacent cat, stroking it as a cool music, and enjoying a music appreciation hour of his own. However, it was a more physical appreciation than is usually found among musicians. That's right . . . it was gastronomical. There is a little sign tacked on one of the doors there that says . . . "Beware . . . rats and traps." Hunting season is now in full swing there in the annex, so Miss Phipps thought to trap the cutlets of the rat trappers!

Begin thinking now about the Artist Series programs on November 12 and 13 . . . the artist is Earl Wilkinson pianist. The program on Tuesday night will include Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata" . . . and if you ever listen to music at all, you know that this composition is one of the best-loved and most beautiful of all the classics. You don't have to be steeped in musicology to enjoy the hauntingly lovely theme of Sonata. The second night's program will include "Carnival" by Schumann, an interesting collection of small compositions which give the composer's impressions of various characters and actors at a carnival. This program also includes two Debussy numbers.

Did you like the communitysing idea in convocation Thursday? Why can't we have more of this . . . it's stimulating and it keeps us awake . . . and it appeals to everyone. Why can't we do some rounds or harmonizing as Robinson, Idus Wicker, Steve Watts, John Barr Watkins, Bud Walton, Tom Wakefield, Billy Van Dyke, George Vann, Jack Vrana, Ed Underwood, Billy Tomasello, Clyde Trammell, T. W. Summerlin, Louis Towson, Percy Thompson, Ben Tillman, John Tebelle, Bennont Tench, Winston Summerlin, George Steed, Clint Stevens, Billy Stanton, Curly Smith, Arman Smith, Melvin Smith, Frank Lamar Sparkman, Raab Skipper, Burr Ragsdale.

PLEDGE PARTIES CONTINUE IN SPOTLIGHT OF SORORITY ACTIVITIES WITH TEAS

Alpha Chis Celebrate Halloween With Party Given at Deetz Home

With not a single goblin, but lots of black cats, jack-o-lanterns and witches, the Alpha Chi Omegas were entertained halloween by Mrs. Bernice Deetz at her home on Lake Ella. The party, feting Alpha Chi alumnae, actives pledges and advisers was given in Mrs. Deetz' back yard around an open barbecue pit.

Ghost stories and pledge songs interspersed the entertainment given by the alumnae, who presented readings and songs. Miss Deetz, Alpha Chi in faculties, served hot dogs, coffee, baked beans, potato chips and doughnuts to the girls scattered around the blazing fire in the backyard.

Climaxing the party, the Alpha Chis ended their evening with the tradition of singing "Alpha Chi" and the Alpha Chi Serenade. Acting as hostesses with Miss Deetz were Miss Doris Terrell, Mrs. Clifton Osmon and Mrs. Roberts Dimmond, town alumnae.

Collegiate Comebacks

thought struck us in an instant that a great wrong is being committed.

Your sweaters and other wearing apparel are being stolen right away from the manly chests and torsos of their rightful defenders of . . . (consult any current periodical).

Have you forgotte so soon? Can you not remember back a short span of time that is less than a year past us? What of the wintry gales, the storm and sleet, the winds and the cold that we are subjected to, here in Tallahassee?

We, who brave the elements in our search for learning, are we to go unprotected? Indomitably we stride through stinky blasts to become bigger and better men of letters. For what? Are we doing this for a mere set of principles? Are we at our daily duty for selfish reasons? No, no and again, no! We are striving to become the kind of husband that every girl dreams of. You know the combination gentleman, scholar, drunk and M. D.

Do we ask for thanks? Do we go about in search of plaudits from the masses? Not a bit. All we ask from life is the simple necessities to aid us in our pursuit of learning. Are we helped? Is the ground shifting from under there to aid us? No!

The British fleet, in every crown land and colony submarines or ensconced in giant weatherproof bombers sit about and wait for the weekly shipment of sweaters from Tallahassee. We can imagine their commenting:

Sergeant: Look, boys, another load of sweaters and socks. The boys (en masse): What, again?

Sergeant: Now quit your gripping. You can always save them and go into business when the war is over.

One of the boys: Listen, sarge, when this war is over England is going to be snowed under in sweater shortage. Why don't they clothe the guys around home? Why pick on us? We got enough troubles, but now we got sweaters to worry about.

So, dear Margaret, think of us. Remember that although we are not waging a war against an abbreviated mustache we are warring against influenza, tuberculosis, colds and typhoid. (Does the last die around?)

We know that the gallant ladies at the Florida State College for Women, in their all sewing wisdom, will right this wrong immediately. I am sorry that we have had to mention this but we saw our duty and we done it.

With great affection we are, chillily yours.

A Hallowe'en tea was given Wednesday afternoon by the juniors and freshmen of Kappa Alpha Theta for friends. Mrs Laura P. McMillan, house mother, assisted in serving. The juniors sent out the invitations and the freshmen did the planning. Cheese sticks and orange candles reminded the guest of the spook and goblin season.

All kinds of games will be played at the Sigma Kappa party Friday afternoon from 4:30 to 6:30. Irene Richards and Miss Beth Weathers are in charge of the affair. There will also be an informal dance Saturday night.

Beta Tau Alpha enjoyed to outdoors at their hike Thursday afternoon for chapter members and pledges. They had a picnic supper in the woods also before they returned. Another hike is planned to be held Friday afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock.

Pledges of Phi Mu sorority will entertain this afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock at a party in the Phi Mu back yard. Guests will be pledges of other sororities.

Games will be played with the theme will be played and refreshments served. Mary Elizabeth Cates heads the invitation committee; Harriett Griffith is chairman of the refreshment committee; and Martha Maine Powell is in charge of decorations.

Saturday night the pledges will be the guests of Chapter. Hallowe'en party in approved Hallowe'en fashion at the house. The party will have a rural theme with a bale of hay in the corners. Bobbing for apples and a fortune teller's tent will highlight the evening. Jack o' Lanterns will peer from around the corners.

Sunday morning Phi Mu members will rest comfortably in bed while pledges bring in the food. They will prepare and serve the breakfast for the members as a special treat.

Tonight the Pi Beta Phi house will be the scene of the annual Hallowe'en tea by pledges of that sorority honoring all other pledges. The living room of the house will be decorated like a circus, while colored lights will be strung about the dining room.

Entertainment consists of fortune telling by Carolyn Bass, a freak show, house of horrors, and a ghastly dance by Loyd Pierce.

Carrying out the circus theme, the pledges will serve refreshments of pink lemonade and hot dogs.

Frances Tucker is person chairman of the circus. Miss Katrina entertainment, Betty Thornton, food, and Virginia Palmer, invitations.

Boyd to Speak Tuesday

Convocation next Tuesday will feature a talk by Dr. Mark Boyd, physician, teacher and international health officer, and assistant director of the division of malaria research located on campus here.

The malaria research station is operated under the international health division of the Rockefeller Foundation in cooperation with the state board of health.

West Honors Annual Staff With Coffee Friday

Friday evening, October 25, Miss Edith Woodlin West, chairman of the Flastacovo Faculty committee, entertained the editorial staff of the annual and the faculty committee at a coffee at her home on Wildwood Drive. A feature of the evening was the presentation of the lay-out of the 1941 Flastacovo by the editor.

The guests included Miss Bernice Deetz, Miss Mary Moore, Miss Lucile Richey, Gerry Mitchell, Mary Myers Alford, Marguerite Dressler, Lucille Walker, Jane Godbey, Mary Jane Medlin, Marsha Lou Austin, Allene Robson, Marion Webster, Rachel Erwin, Jean Felkel, and Frances Cofer.

Goats Honor Spirogiras At Supper in Haystacks

Ghosts and mysterious notes gave clues to the members of Spirogira who were feted in Hallowe'en fashion by the goats Wednesday evening in back of the haystacks in Gains' woods.

The goats, Frances Battle Mims Scott, Tracy Mitchell, Jean Hitchcock, Martha Ellen Hackl, Kitty Jo Rickman, Florence Brown, Peggy Barker, Alice Price, Madeline Duncan, Bos Chaires, and Jessie Lewis, served a supper of ham, sweet and Irish potatoes, and pumpkin pie.

At the party, fortunes were told, apples were bobbed for, and games were played in the Hallowe'en spirit. Members are: Pat Brandt, Anne Jones, Betty Hickinson, Brunelle Mobley, Gem Bryan, Betty Mitchell, Carolyn Mims, Cornelia Watson, Minnie Ratcliff, Sonia Mitchell, Nancy Lee Patterson, and Lucille Walker.

Conrad to Give Coffee For Faculty and Staff

President Edward Conrad of Florida State college and his daughter, Mrs. Ernest Rasmussen will entertain at an informal coffee Tuesday night, November 5, in honor of the faculty and staff.

The coffee will be from 7:30 to 9 p. m. in the main lounge of the Bowers Langmire Student-Alumnae Union.

Industrial Arts Faculty And Student Assistants Guests at Steak Roast

Surrounded by a pals Hallowe'en moon and goblin spirits, the industrial arts faculty members and their student assistants enjoyed a beef steak roast around the new outdoor fire place at the home of Miss Hazel Service Dietz, assistant professor in the department, last Tuesday night.

Hostesses at the informal supper were Miss Hallie Williams, instructor. Miss Emily Wilburn, assistant professor, and Miss Dietz. Baked beans, relishes, rolls, and hot drinks were served with the steaks in the garden of Miss Deetz's home on Lake Ella drive.

Those attending were Katherine Burgess, Rosalie Malphurs, Pearl Prickett, Mabel Ashburn; Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Harrison, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Donaldson, of the college faculty.

Registered at the main center of the New York's City College were 1,000 men and two girls. Total enrollment is over 29,000.

Smith, Pierce Write Winners

"Huckleberry Duck" And "Race Revolt" Judged Best for Distaff

The winner of the freshman short story contest, sponsored by the Distaff is Marianne Smith, author of "The Huckleberry Duck." The winner of the freshman poetry contest is Laurel Pierce, who composed "Race Revolt."

Three pages of freshman poetry will be headed by the winning poem with "Immorvable" by Vianne Bloodworth, a series of poems under the general heading of "Random Thoughts," by Elizabeth Clarkson, and "Dragon Monologue" by Lana Joughin following.

The only two other poems in the entire issue are by upperclassmen. Yvonne Martin composed "Tallahasse Pines," and Lucille Walker wrote "Two Sonnets to Extremes."

"Lopsided Ladies" by Jayne Mendenhal, a tirade on southern women, their education and traditions, is one of the articles published. "I Am a WPAer's Daughter" by Joan Peters, pseudonym of the writer, explains the difficulties and experiences of the daughter of a WPA man in college. Betty Ann Taylor relates allnes in "Life in a Political Town," discussing the effect of elections and office-seekers on the people of a political town.

In this publication, the Distaff is departing from its policy of an author being "literally dead when she leaves the campus" according to Vivian Ahlvers, editor, and is printing three short articles written by graduates of last year. "Youth Is Not" by Bertha Woodworth, "A Well Rounded Person" by Polly Douglas, and "Accent on Accent" by Lilli Burger, are the articles which were accorded this distinction.

The "Yard Wide" section of the book will contain an article on Sari Biro by Sarah Worth, who explains the ideas back of Biro's programs. Mary Angus reviews "Vanity Fair" by William Thackeray, the only old book criticized. Three other reviews of new books by Dorothy Miller, Jayne Mendenhall, and Mattie Lou Peacock will be included.

"People on These Pages" was written by Marjorie Richardson.

The illustrations, done entirely by Frances Cushing, harmonize with the contents. A picture of a woman at a piano, symbolizing Sari Biro, is one of the drawings.

The cover picture will be a photograph of Maxine Harrison taken by her sister Allison. An appropriate title, according to Vivian Ahlvers, might be "Pal Fever." The frontispiece was done by Jeanne Pelkel and is entitled, "— And Night Swamps."

Carol Marshall has written a play entitled "Wild Geese," adapted from a story by Charles Dovie. The theme is concerned with a ship model and the love of a girl for the sea. A satirical story called "Angel Duck" by Ann Gaylord describes the adventures of a meek little angel visiting in a church on earth. From the Gainesville exchange "Broken China," a story by Mark Howard, who describes an episode from the life of a girl.

The fall issue of the Distaff will come out about November 11. Due to the lack of space in this publication, some of the freshmen contributions will be carried over to the next issue.

Senate Approves Freshmen Motion

Senate unanimously, approved of the motion "that freshmen be allowed to go to a destination at night in a car with another student subject to the approval of the director," at the meeting yesterday.

Ira Brandt was appointed to head a committee composed of Carolyn Mims and Alice Pierce to form a recommendation to submit to the faculty committee.

Motion was carried that it be recommended to the faculty committee that the time for Flambeau staff members to get in from newspaper work be extended from 12 o'clock to 2 o'clock Thursday nights.

It was also surmised that Mart Perron, chairman of Senate, investigate the lights in the library.

respondents, will be the other featured speakers of the convention.

Transportation for the local delegates is being paid from the convention fund of the student activity fee, and the girls themselves are financing their other expenses. Rachel Ervin is not an official representative of the college.

Tracy Presides Over Session

Dietetic Group Takes Stand On Current Defense Issues

"Preparedness for Defense" was the keynote of the American Dietetic Association meeting in New York City recently, in a session over which Miss Anna May Tracy, dietician of Florida state college and past president of the national body, presided. Resolutions for whole-hearted support toward national defense were drafted in discussions, following reports by prominent figures, on defense as it affects the hospital, Red Cross, nurses, and the medical profession.

Recomendations were made calling for establishment of state nutrition councils as a part of state defense councils and it was pointed out that 36 states now have adopted this plan. It was also recommended that dietitians Red Cross dieticians subject to call wherever needed.

The association voiced its support of a senate bill which is designed to give military status to dietitians in military hospitals. About 50 dietitians are now located in military hospitals but have only civilian ranking.

The American Dietetic Association, which was organized in 1917 as a war measure with only 87 members, has grown to an organization of 4,300 highly trained food specilists.

Also attending the sessions from Florida state college were: Dean Margaret R. Sandels and Miss Helen Cate, of the school for home economics and Dr. Jennie Tilt, professor of physiological chemistry and nutrition.

Among important speakers at the convention were: Dr. Eugene Dubois, of Cornell Medical Center; Dr. Nathan B Van Etten, of New York City, president of the American Medical association; Dr. Henry C. Sherman, of Columbia university; Miss Grace Smith, of Toledo, Ohio, president of the American Restaurant association; also Major Paul P Logan, chairman of the food committee of the Army, Navy and Rations Board; and M. L. Wilson, advisor on nutrition in the consumer division of the National Advisory Defense Commission.

Elected president of the American Dietetic Association for the next year was Miss Mary Barber, of the Kellog company, of Battle Creek Michigan. The next convention site will be in St. Louis in 1941.

Additional features of the convention were a demonstration of feeding units built on trucks for use of the British relief work; and trips to West Point and Yale. While visiting Yale university, Miss Tracy had the oportunity to see two of last year's student dietitians—Amelia Magee and Ruth Reed, who now hold positions there.

French Club Brings 'Mayerling' To FSC

Charles Boyer Is Star Of French Drama

"Mayerling," a French film starring Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux and dealing with the love affair of a member of the French nobility, will be shown in the Auditorium Central little theatre on November 19 at 8 o'clock. Everyone is invited to attend whether she is a French student or not. Tickets will be 25 cents, and any student selling ten will be admitted free of charge.

At the meeting of the French club last Friday in Broward dorms members were entertained with a talk on "Vichy: The New Capital," given by Helen Emmanuel. New members were initiated, and were given copies of the club constitution as well as blue and white ribbons to wear. Plans were made for the purchase of a French song book for each member.

Library Displays Military Crosses

The Florida division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy presented the Florida State college library with a set of Military service crosses.

The presentation was made on Historical Evening at the Florida division convention that was held at Pensacola.

The crosses are four in number and consist of the Cross of Honor awarded to the Confederate veterans, and three crosses of Military Service awarded to the soldiers of the Confederate descendants who served in the World War, the Spanish-American War, or the Philippine Insurrection.

The four crosses are mounted on a dark velvet background and are framed. They will be on display in the library.

Flowers Ends Convocations

"Traditions" Concludes Orientation Programs For Freshmen

Miss Maude Flowers, director of residence, was in charge of the last freshman convocation of the year, at which time the theme of traditions was carried out. Assisting Miss Flowers were Miss Florence Tryon, of the history department, Miss Charlotte Stevens, alumnae secretary, and Miss Margaret Gaston, secretary of residence halls.

Miss Flowers was master of ceremonies throughout the program, and explained that the function of traditions in college life is "to symbolize the ideals for which a college stands, to express the spirit and loyalty of a student body toward these ideals; and to furnish a link between student generation and generation embodying that which remains good, lasting, and unchanging with increasing years."

Included in the program in the order presented were the welcome to the freshmen, YWCA recognition services, Torch Night ceremony, Thanksgiving activities including color rush, Odds and Evens, and the serenading. In the latter part, Dr. Raymond Bellamy, professor of sociology, sounded the shotgun for the races to begin.

Christmas traditions followed, then the celebration of Dr. Conrad's birthday, and May Day, at which time Mrs. Kitty Blood Hoffman, who was May Queen in 1936, took the role of queen, and Lelia Norris danced. Installation of the college government officers followed, and then commencement, at which time Dr William Dodd, dean of the college of arts and sciences, presented candidates for graduation to

YWCA Entertains At Freshmen Party

On October 16, the faculty-student committee of the YWCA entertained with a freshman party at the home of Dr Anna Forbes Liddell and Dr. Katherin Allen, for the purpose of creating a better feeling between the students and faculty, as well as for forming acquaintances among sutedns themselves.

After a program of various games, refreshments consisting of doughnuts and coffee were served. Freshmen present were Myrtle Van Valkenburg, Ruth Carrison, Ida Johnston, Harriet Lynch, Minnie Rita Gorris, Jeanette Bevan, June Dowd, Helen Herriot, Eleanor Watson, Frances Strickland, Lacy Ruth Atkinson, Margaret Spearman, Peggy Paddock, and Mary Ruth Weaver.

Frances Heard was in charge of the vespers program last Sunday. Ja ne Julia Gehan, Epis copal student secretary, spoke on the youth movement and the Youth Conference which she recently attended.

Dr. Edward Conradi.

Other traditions were explained but not exacted. They included Investiture, dormitory Christmas parties, tea dances, sophomore-senior breakfast, junior-senior prom, kid day, tapping of Mortar Board, tapping of sophomore council, the sophomore hop, and the secret traditions of the senior class.

Miss Flowers concluded the program with, "The year is finished, but the spirit of Florida State College for Women lives on in the lives and hearts of all of those who passed through the portals of our college and wherever you are at the sound of one long loyal hearts beat faster, spirits rise, memories are turned backward to happy days, and voices join to sing the praise of our Alma Mater." The singing of Garnet and Gold concluded the convocation.

Mid-Year Graduates Notice

Students who expect to receive their degrees at the mid-year convocation should file these applications in the Registrar's office on or before November 2, 1940. (See the general calendar in the current catalog.)

S. R. DOYLE, Registrar.

Needles Click For Britain

Needles continue to click vigorously as students, alumnae, and faculty members compete for "first" honors in the "Knittin' for Britain" campaign.

The handiwork achievement record for the current week boasts several completed garments. Honors are to student Ruth Sloan for the first V-neck sweater, to alumnae Mrs. Herschel Graves for the first mine sweeper's jersey, and to faculty member Miss Mary Noka Hood, instructor in bacteriology, for the first completed mine sweeper's sock. Beatrice Sennett holds another record having completed to date six Balaclava helmets.

Handworking knitters up on the fourth floor of the student alumnae building may now have music to set the rhythm for their knitting through the quarters, of the local Sears and Roebuck company which has donated a radio for the knitting room.

In addition to contributions given by local citizens and alumnae, H. C. Dearmin, manager of the Singer sewing machine office in Tallahassee, is sending out a Singer machine for use in the mending room

Four girls from China and one from Puerto Rico are among 500 students attending the College of St. Teresa at Winona, Minn.

Dr. Shankweiler Receives Offer Of Fellowship

Education Board Makes Grant For Study Of Population

Institute Will Conduct Advanced Research Work

Dr Paul L. Shankweiler, of the department of sociology has been offered a fellowship in a social institute in population to be held at Louisiana State university by the General Education board of New York.

A grant from the board promises six fellowships to enable a selected professors from the states to take advantage of the opportunity for advanced study in population research techniques which will be made when Dr. warren S. Thompson, director of the Scripps Foundation for population Research, assumes the institute on that board during the spring semester of this year.

Conducts Research

Dr. Shankweiler received his Ph.D degree from the University of North Carolina where he studied under Howard W. Odum. He taught for four years at the Clarke Memorial Collegeinster, Mississippi. In the south he has been an instructor Southern the University of Tennessee, and the University of Alabama. For the past five years he has been teaching at Florida State college for women.

Dr Shankweiler worked with Dr Ben Hanna Williams in Alabama doing research work on negro education. He also did research work for the Old Age Assistance in Leon county, part of the Florida division of the Social Security Board.

In addition to Dr. Shankweiler, the conducted research on rural feminism in the southwest and the growth in farming on a single rural delinquency in central Alabama Other offices and activit

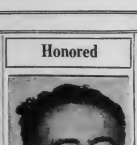
Posters Stress Education Week

Library Display Shows Great Importance Of Education



The display in the library this week is in celebration of National Education week, and shows the great part education plays in our country and progress as a nation and as individuals.

On the bulletin board by the entrance is a poster of 1940 leaders representing a few of the many fields of endeavor in the United States, such as farming, music, experimentation, mining, radio, aviation, radio, airplane building, etc.

In the showcase in the center of the lobby are pictures of Benjamin Franklin, Alexander Hamilton, Thomas Jefferson, and Thomas Paine with copies of their own words about education, a picture of the signing of the Declaration of Independence occupies a prominent place.

A poster by the door leading to the stacks shows how one attempts of public education, aside from the formal schools. The purposes are: to provide for intelligent independent thinking; public discussion, detection of prejudice, and selection of leaders Still another poster reminds all of our spiritual heritage

Bureau Places 423 Graduates

Teaching Positions Top Placement Report With 178 Jobs

The placement bureau of Florida State college has found positions for a total of 423 graduates since the 1938 report was made in November of last year. Sixteen graduates with Master's degrees were placed out of a total of 178 positions, the number being equal to 49 per cent of those applying.

Among four year graduates, 276 out of 341 were successfully placed. Of the total of 341 seniors, sixteen out of 45 two year graduates, or 35 per cent, and 131 out of 296 former graduates, 90 were placed in positions, making 423 in all. In addition 26 1938 graduates were placed by the bureau this year.

This year the placement bureau received a total of 289 requests for teachers as compared with 318 requests last year. There were 17 openings in other fields this year as compared with 44 last year.

In addition to the 178 graduates placed in teaching positions, 46 have entered the field of business offices; 21 are pursuing further study; 20 are in secretarial clerical; 12 are doing welfare work; 2 have received civil service positions; and 24 have entered the field of commercial art.

Day Students Pick Two New Officers

At the meeting of the day students last week elections were held to fill two vacancies which occurred after the resignation of last year.

Elected to fill these vacancies were Mary Alice Mc-Pherson, president, and Naomi Pinkston, secretary-treasurer.

Plans were made for the buying of uniforms and lockers for the day students' rooms in the basement building, which is to the convenience of the girls.

Plans of the day students were discussed. Not year are: Monday, Mary Esther Tucker, president; Betty Rose Veal, social chairman; Jeanne Smith, secretary-treasurer; Virginia Kinney, publicity

The spirit was there in the form of a bottle of Ballantine's ale which was a welcomed answer, and according to the boy, the best end of the bargain.

Other oddities that have been wired to the girls include apples, Coca-Colas, and chili beans. The manager of the Western Union, Mr. Lovell W. Marshall reports that wires for chili beans are not unusual. While apples would be in us in on the secret of who receives the beans. We like the apples.

Bunches of carrots and celery have been wired to the girls also. If all the telegraph offices in college were to send this sort of business it would be best if pet shops and grocery stores were opened up in connection with the offices. This would save the telegraph boy the time and trouble of purchasing beasts and food from other stores.

For those lucky girls who get candy and flowers by the telegraph company that Valentine's day is their biggest occasion. They report that this is because the girls are usually gone on other holidays. The girls say that it is because all true love comes across the Valentine line. Most of the flowers are wired through the local florists although some are wired directly to the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph. The boys have brought as many as 12 bouquets of flowers and 14 pounds of candy to the college at once. This keeps up all day and all night. The boys also bring all the candy and fobwers. Some of us get the 25 cent valentine greetings, but that is the sort of business it would be best if pet shops and grocery stores were opened up in connection with the offices. This would save the telegraph boy the time and trouble of purchasing beasts and food from other stores.

For those lucky girls who get candy and flowers by the telegraph company that Valentine's day is their biggest occasion. They

FSCW Girls Are "Practical," Claim Unromantic Gators

Questionnaire Reveals Opinions And Biases of University of Florida Males

By CLYDE DAILEY

In a recent and somewhat brief survey of the opinions of a group of "typical" University of Florida students, we have attempted to assimilate the "average" attitudes of these Gators and to expose their general opinions to the wrath of the Florida State college woman in our own inimitable way.

Separated and united as we are, Florida State college for women and University are more or less connected. The two are very few quasi-classmen enrollet at Gatorland who have not spent at least one memorable weekend in the land of the fair femmes. The number of weekends spent on each campus by our glorious institution for the "averser" Gator is two per semester. Now, a certain percentage, however, who keep our telephone calling, our hats rolled up at night, and our lines polished by appearing on the scene from nine to sixteen weekends each semester, bless them.

Delving more deeply into the private life of our friend, the university student, we were somewhat startled to learn that he firmly believes that our primary ambition from September through May is to be asked down to Gatorland for all the big social events held there. The classical statement "Be reserved from Gainesville concerning the "average" FSCW girl is, "The average FSCW girl is O. K., although they are all just average girls; intelligent, ambitious, and glamorous, good for a good time, and practical." It is somewhat disconcerting to discover so crudely that all our efforts at the so-called glamour have gone unrewarded. We remain just plain human beings that are termed friendly, practical.

In our questionnaire we asked

Interviewer Stalks Wary Collectors

Soap, Elephants, and Silly Poems Leave College Reporter in Daze

By MARGARET OSTBERG

As this article is being written for the editor of this article has nary a thing to write about. Others have started, students are studying as well as hoping, and what did we do, but interview? Yes, I've interviewed them in the library where I should have been busily escaped with my head still on my shoulders in the post office where they are trying hard to read their mail, at lunch, in the dormitories where they were already late for the next class, and at night between the flickers.

Some were very sarcastic, some patiently bored, and others downright cross when I, authoritatively tried to interview them more than once. Being a timid, shy soul, was a little too anxious to tell me about her hobbies, I decided that they were trying hard to read their mail, at lunch, in my business to get my story here already late for the next class. and at night between the flickers.

Some were very sarcastic, some patiently bored, and others downright cross when I, authoritatively tried to interview them more than once. Being a timid, shy soul, was a little too anxious to tell me about her hobbies, I decided that they were trying hard to read their mail, at lunch, in my history as well as her immediate surroundings. Almost all answered my questions reluctantly and hesitantly, but in every way I had hoped they would. Enough for my struggles. The hobbies are as follows:

Since a lot of things begin at once when one becomes a freshman one bright afternoon and asked her if she collected anything, and if so what she collected. Her answer was soap. She told me that she collected soap, and she has a collecting soap. Naturally I was at a loss for words, but kind of a person I was living with, so I repeated clearly and distinctly after her, and my roommate left. After a few minutes of senseless conversation, my roommate was told me not to be so silly, that the kind of soap she collected was the kind that came in hotels and their guests. Then in a reporter-like tone, I asked her just how many cakes of soap she had. She couldn't tell me for sure, but thought that she had left. Again I was rather dazed because I had thought that she had meant that when a person collected

Home Economics Members Leave For Convention

Business Meeting At St Petersburg Claims Group Interest

4H Club Models Parade Eight Dollar Wardrobe

Ten delegates from the Home Economics club leave today at noon for St. Petersburg where they will attend the annual business meeting of the Florida Home Economics association November 8-9. Four of the girls will act as pages to the convention of dietitians, home economists, teachers, farm security superintendents, and supervisors of NYA and WPA homemaking projects. Headquarters for the two-day meeting is the Vinoy hotel, North Madiera Beach.

A number of faculty members in the home economics department and townspeople will attend, in addition to the student group composed of Miriam Stuckey, Ruth Hendricks, Ann Williams, Rosella Puglit, Carolyn Johnson, Ruth McCain, Jean Padilla, Ruth Hilton, and Marcia Sparkman.

Concert Tonight

Dr. Ruth Connor, professor of home economics, and also state supervisor of nursery schools, is bringing a number of new books dealing with subjects of interest to homemakers and home economics workers.

In addition to announcing names of students who would attend the meeting, the Home Economics club at its meeting Tuesday night offered an unusual program to its members.

"A college wardrobe for $7.50!" This was the theme of Frances Palmer, president of the college 4H club, when she introduced the models in the costumes before the Home Economics group.

The students who accompanied Dr. Waskom on this trip were Mary Esther Tucker, Mildred Brown, Delia Montero, Betty Pearlman, and Jane McCray.

Ratcliffe Will Discuss Future British Action

Well-Known Journalist Will Lecture Here Next Friday

Speaker Slated To Meet Two Discussion Groups

"What New in Europe?" or "Britain What Now?" will be the topic of the lecture to be given by S. K. Ratcliffe, popular British journalist and lecturer, at 8 o'clock on next Friday in the college auditorium. Mr. Ratcliffe's lecture on Saturday night at the same time will concern "The Great Age Is Ending." He will conduct discussion groups at 4:30 o'clock on Friday and Saturday in the auditorium of the Student-Alumnae Student-Alumnae building.

Lectures Frequently

Mr. Ratcliffe is a frequent radio speaker, and a member of the Spoken English committee of the British Broadcasting corporation. At Yale university he has lectured on the Brownley and Beecher foundations, and at Cornell on the Messenger and Schiff foundations. Every winter for the establishment, he has delivered a series of addresses at the Town Hall. New York City.

As a journalist, Mr. Ratcliffe's career has been extensive. He spent five years in India as acting editor of the Statesman, the leading daily newspaper of Calcutta. While there he was a member of the Senate of Calcutta university. On his return to England, he was for a time assistant editor of Extension Department of the University of London. For the past year he has been an editorial writer for the London Daily News and the Statesman and Nation, and a constant contributor to important magazines in England and America.

For Red Trip

During the spring and summer of 1936 Mr. Ratcliffe, on journey to the Far East, lectured at the University of Honotulu, spent a month in New Zealand while the new Social Security legislation was being shaped, and was three months in Australia as the Commonwealth was preparing to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the landing in the Act of 1938. From there by way of Manilla to China, lecturing in Shanghai, and thence to Japan, returning to England in the autumn of 1938.

On Thursday, 1939, Mr. Ratcliffe completed 25 successive years of lecturing in the United States on subjects relating to the British Empire and this country, before the Indian Civil service, universities and colleges, the other imperial services, learned societies, and innumerable organizations and clubs from Maine to Florida, the Pacific and from Canada to Mexico. No other lecturer visiting America from Britain has equaled or even approached this record.

His exceptional popularity before American audiences has increased steadily over the years and rests upon a substantial basis.

Press Delegates Will Give Report

Delegates who attended the Collegiate Press association convention in Detroit, Michigan, November 7, 8, and 9, will report at the next Student Forum meeting to be held a week from Tuesday instead of next week as previously announced.

Election of a junior representative to the forum will also take place, as will a discussion of the discussion of the part of the United States in the war.

Those delegates who will speak are Midge Scott, Harriett Brunon, Frances Hall, Jeanne Mitchell, and Mary Myers Alford.

French Honorary Pledges Four At Recent Service

The Pi Delta Phi, at a meeting held October 30, pledged the following girls into the association. Belle Yonge, Marion Pernald and Helen Hoffman.

Before the pledging party the neophites entertained the faculty and student members with a program. The pledges were given blue, white and red ribbons to represent the colors of both the French and America flags. They in turn gave the same institution which will be the latter part of this month.

Ice Cream Cones, Chili Beans, Valentines Keep Telegraph Wires Hot In Tally

BY MARY VOCELLE

The biggest laugh the telegraph company has had in some days a day was when the Gainesville boy friend wired his love in Tallahassee a strawberry ice cream cone. However, the practical joke was just as much on the telegraph company as it was on the girl.

When the wire came into the office the manager and his employees chuckled with laughter, but the gaiety ceased when it was necessary to determine whether or not the girl was in town, as the cone delivered to someone who was not would certainly be worth writing. although it might be worth drinking. So after calling back and forth out to the college to get all prerequisites arranged, a telegraph boy was sent to the girl with her cone and in record time the boy found a bottle of Ballantine's ale which

Fashion School Offers Award

Five Fellowships Open To College Seniors

The Tobe-Coburn School for Fashion Careers, Rockefeller Center, New York, is again offering five fashion fellowships to members of this year's senior class, according to announcements that have reached the campus. Each fellowship covers a year's tuition of $700 in the school. There will be only one fellowship awarded in any college or university.

Members of the senior class who wish to apply for one of the fashion fellowships must mail registration blanks and answers to the first test questions to the school on or before December 10. One more set of test questions and a research project will complete the work for the awards. The awards will be announced April 25.

Pamphlets containing complete information, with registration blanks and test questions, are available in the office of Miss Janet K. Smith, associate professor of clothing and textiles.

"Winners of last year's awards are already outstanding in this year's student group," said Julia Coburn, president of the Tobe-Coburn school, "University of Indiana, Oberlin, Wellesley, University of Cincinnati and University of Colorado are now represented in the school by last year's winners.

"The kind of specialized training is indicated by the progress our graduates are making. In department store advertising, merchandising, styles and fashion coordination they are snapping up the ladder. Eighty per cent of last year's class had positions waiting for them when they graduated, and we are constantly receiving requests for our graduates, that we are unable to fill."

FSCW Girls "Practical" Claim Unromatic Gators

the age of twenty-five. "Do you think that women should follow a career, or do you think that it is the fundamental duty of women to be a wife and mother?" Twenty per cent of the girls answered bluntly. "That's her business." The other 80 per cent were of the opinion that a woman should be prepared to follow a career in case and in spite of circumstances at some time to rely upon herself entirely. They believe that the fundamental and most desirable duty of woman is to be a wife and mother. Fifteen per cent of these went so far as to underline emphatically the word "mother."

Of the woman who smokes and drinks, the opinions vary. Five per cent say that the woman who either smokes or drinks is thoroughly disgusting and is to or avoided. Forty-five percent say after a fashion and directly. "That's her business," while about 35 percent think that both drinking and smoking are perfectly proper if done at the right time and in the "appropriate places" and not carried to excess. The other 15 percent are not to be quoted.

The university students have unlimited cuts, but very few of the students interviewed take advantage of this liberty. The average in cuts is from three to four classes per semester. The reasons given for cutting were, generally speaking: to sleep; to go to a "special" show; to go home or to Tallahassee; because they have something more interesting to do, occasionally, during the class hour because most classes are a waste of time.

By asking how the students concerned spend their leisure, we learned that, with extreme percentages, the greater part of their time is taken up in research, looking, sleeping, reading, movies, dates, sports, dances, and ball sessions, with accent on the looking, reading and sleeping.

The favorite magazines of the average Florida man, listed according to popularity are: Life, Time, Readers Digest, The Saturday Evening Post, Esquire, Fortune, U. S. News, Look, and Sports Detective. Fifty per cent of the boys read poetry often, and it seems that they prefer Kipling, Keats, Shelley, Longfellow, and Dorothy Parker. The preferred authors at the university range from Pearson and Allen to Pearl and Scott. Sinclair Lewis, however, was ranked at the top of the list.

According to the "average" Florida man, the outstanding motion pictures of the last five years have been "Gone With the Wind," "Born Town," "You Can't Take It With You," "Rebecca," "Northwest Passage," "Of Mice and Men," "Test Pilot," "Good Earth," "Hurricane," "Typhoon," and "Sho.. Boat."

The men contrary to universal opinion, seem to prefer brunettes this year, although Bette Davis did manage to rate another well in the "favorite actress" poll. In order of popularity, the preferred actresses are: Joan Bennett, Vivian Leigh, Heidi Lamarr, Bette Davis, Dorothy Lamour, Joan Crawford, Norma Shearer, Myrna Loy, and Olivia DeHaviland. For the actors, Spencer Tracy has twice as many devotees as the rest of the actors in mass. Next in popularity on the Florida campus are Clark Gable, Paul Muni, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., William Powell, Lionel Barrymore, Leslie Howard, and Charles Laughton. Robert Taylor was not listed at all, although 40 per cent of the boys replied that Robert Taylor was, in their opinion, a good actor, very handsome, and a "swell looking guy."

Glenn Miller is the favorite orchestra, leader by an outstanding margin. The boys, in general prefer "Sweet and Swing" for their listening pleasure. Next in importance they rank light opera areas and semi-classical pieces. Jitter-bug-jazz they place last. Dancists, stating that the ultra-modern type of music is generally monotonous and impossible.

The University of Florida student appreciates what he calls a "good show." He likes to spend his weekends in Gainesville. He says that he thoroughly enjoys our important social events in Tallahassee, but they are not much rather visit our city of the hills on the quieter weekends when he can get a chance to relax without for the lady's attention.

As for views of the present situation, only one per cent of the students interviewed desire peace at any cost, while the other 99 per cent would fight unconditionally for their country and for the principles for which it stands."

The average university student feels that he has intellectual freedom, desirable social life, a fairly good college government system, freedom of speech, and academic opportunities at Gainesville. He believes that college is necessary for future gratification of his ambitions. He thinks that the cantata he makes at college will be useful in later life.

Wags Try Ride In Red Wagon

Two of our campus cut-ups had a very unusual afternoon this week, thanks to a little red wagon and a mud puddle. It seemed that the idea struck them while at the Flambeau decided to release the Flambeau Flyer from its long period of idleness by using it to take papers from the Student-Alumnae building to the Westcott building.

The trip to the Westcott building was fairly successful, the wagon turned over only once and only six papers were lost. Sue Silas, as our circulation manager came out of the building, she had an old friend who immediately hopped into the wagon and started there during a hazardous trip across mudholes down deep hills, and around amazed students leaving their 3:30 o'clock classes.

The two girls and the Flambeau Flyer arrived covered with mud at the back entrance of the Soda Shop. The girls left the wagon and prepared to smash to smithereens the evidence of their appearance in public.

As they walked into the Student-Alumnae building who should they run into but Mrs. Spessard Holland, one of the colleges' most elect, plus a kind friend, who saw the situation and promptly introduced, mud and all. Weakly, the girls acknowledged the introduction, and the situation could not be came back with Saturday-afternoon composure to steady their nerves with cigarettes.

Ice Cream Cones, Ect., Keeps Telegraph Wires Hot In Tallahassee sent from Byran hall. She then takes the message.

The number of telegrams sent to the dormitories and sorority houses are about the same. Sorority houses receive and send a great many telegrams during the week-ends of their formals. Since these telegrams must be collected, added the telegraph business is at full strike during this time.

There are about 3,000 telegrams received by both telegraph offices of Tallahassee. Of this number the capitol gets the most. Next come the dormitories. There is close competition in the Agricultural and Mechanical college with its enrollment of 1,000.

Dr. ing football season the wires are hot with the A. and M. college urging pass those sent from our own college. Many telegrams are sent to encourage the players to do their best in the spirit of the team up.

The reporter finally ended the interviewing by asking the sweet-voiced operator if she minded not getting any tips for his many trips to and from Byran Willet.

As I have said before, I went out in search of prey. Little did I think that my own roommate would be the one to prey upon me. Upon my return from class after being invited in I entered and made myself comfortable on the nearest bed. The beginning of the interview was everything that interviews are supposed to be. I learned that she has stamps from Australia, Finland, Denmark, Germany, Egypt, Japan, China, and numerous countries some of which still are and some of which aren't. She informed me that she had obtained the said stamps of people in various countries from stamp collectors' magazines. So far, so good. My troubles started when she asked me if I wanted to know how many stamps she had. Of course I was delighted to think that she realized the kind of information that I wanted. She started to tell me the number of stamps in her collection and then confessed that she didn't remember, but she had a large book with quite a few in it, and some of the pages were full of stamps. I hurried this confusing issue and asked her if she had any valuable stamps. Enthusiastically she told me that indeed she did have some valuable stamps. One stamp was on a recent letter that had been given to her. She didn't know the exact age of it, but the paper was yellowed and the ink nearly faded. Another old stamp was of the Columbian issue which she thought was printed in the year 1623. Another valuable stamp was from Greece. If the corner were to torn off, it would be worth $45. I suggested that this room and I decided to retire for a few minutes. When I returned the first sensaes that I can rightfully claim.

One set of roommates has the Arab Republic on their minds. The room looks like a flying carpet. One section of a wall they have pasted many kinds of pictures of planes. One of them got a bright idea and put a coat hanger in the midst of the planes. Nobody caught on to the hanger idea, so now they have pasted the word "hanger" underneath and all remark about the cleverness of that pair. When I left my room future plans for this hobby. I was told that they were starting on the Navy. I flew out of this room and headed for a freshman pal of mine.

This freshman pal said she would stick by me and help me out on my article. She declared that she had a very interesting hobby, collecting elephants. She has some made of glass, some of ivory, and others made of china. I also learned that she swiped one from her mother's best friend, that the other one was picked up in a ten cent store. Just to prove some of which still are and some of which aren't. She informed me that she had obtained the said dresses of people in various countries from stamp collectors' magazines. Cotterill Airs War Sentiments

Says America Obligated To Aid Great Britain In War Crisis

"America's Obligation In The War," was the subject of an address delivered by R. Gotterill, professor of history at Florida State college, at the Augusta Conradi theater Wednesday afternoon. His address was one in a series in connection with the Sunday lies for Britain drive.

"There are three reasons why we should help Britain," he said, "The first is a matter of self-preservation—the law that is universally obeyed; the second reason is that they are fighting for ours—they speak our language, and the third and most important reason is that Britain is fighting the fight of righteousness.

"If you don't know the Nazis represent darkness, then you're mighty blind," he declared. "It's a war of freedom on one side and slavery on the other.

"Anyone who is neutral between right and wrong takes the side of the wrong. When God asked Cain where his brother was, he answered with, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

It is ridiculous to think our neighbors are safe on the other across the Atlantic just as it is to think that Germany can be contained by the seashore."

Dr. Cotterill concluded the audience of students and townspeople for helping to send clothing to Britain's children and said he believed we should help more the English children to safety.

thing for a time she usually kept them. This time I was told not to be so dumb. Out of sheer desperation, I was explained to me that whenever her mother neglected to pay the collector he would lose a few of his members. I was given a pair of the room, in search of more prey.

My next victim was a collector of seeds. Her name was Ann and her weakness. Verses with a floral theme. Flowers are her favorite dish. Should We Abolish Grades?

Student Discusses Pros and Cons of Present Grading System in Colleges Today And Offers Substitutes

By EMMA JEAN HIGLEY

Why not do away with all grades in our colleges? Why are grades necessary? Would it not be more satisfactory to have a student's work strictly on the S and U basis? Or should we do away with the S and U also?

With these questions in mind, the purpose of this article is to present an argument pro and con our present grading system today and in our colleges, in hopes that some conclusions may be reached.

All university students today realize the multitude of shortcomings in our educational system, and they all predict and hope for a drastic change that in the near future will bring about better and more desired results in educating our college students. Accompanying this change will no doubt be a different grading technique than has recently been employed. For, many educators claim that the most important block in education today is the total indifference students have towards their studies, a new attitude is needed whereby students will work for knowledge instead of working for grades.

Students Complains

Studeis in colleges frequently complain of being graded unfairly and of being cheated out of the high grade they should have made. These students often accuse their instructors of favoritism and "pet hates"; they eye pile in foreign countries. Quite a while ago, she couldn't remember when, she began to write to a boy in Italy. He sent his picture which was good in any language, and that was for quite awhile. At least the fact that they wrote is definite until she got a letter one day from this boy's cousin saying that her friend had died of a heart attack. She wrote back and sent her sympathies and she received another letter from him. Before either one realized it they were corresponding regularly. Since the present war broke out, the letters have ceased. She also used to write to a girl in England.

Other students collect match folders, letters, males and dates. Two individuals collect sweet dreams and dance steps.

with suspicion those students who continuously make high grades while generally speaking they are "teacher's pet" or that well known stamp, "apple polisher." In so doing the complaining are usually those making low or just average grades. These students' higher grades are smart enough to know the flaws in their characters and go on about their business. But why not do away with the grades entirely and thereby help dissolve such dissension among the student body?

Now-a-days students work their heads off mostly just to receive a good grade. The grade is foremost in their minds. The hope of absorbing knowledge and deriving benefit from a course runs a poor second to the hope of getting a pretty little piece of paper with a pretty little grade on it. Grades—how important they are! But this counts with them. So, since human nature has the sad habit of always searching for the shortcuts and quick ways of getting something for nothing, the present quite often effect first analyses his instructor and figures out how to get a good grade from him, instead of how to get some knowledge from the course. If he figures he can get a good grade by writing what the instructor will do just that and think he is cleverly getting by with something of comparative benefit is lost. Most students are up all night, many a night, cramming just before an exam. Most likely if there weren't any grades there wouldn't be much cramming and then the student would learn day by day or week by week. In the long run, to the one who stuck with it a considerable amount of knowledge would be retained.

Low grades have a bad psychological effect on a student. They are frequently responsible for thousands of inferiority complexes. The student's conception that he is dumber than the rest of his classmates, loses faith in himself and also his ambition. He consequently doesn't "put out," and hence is a detriment to the college.

Instructor Handicapped

Also, an instructor is definitely handicapped when he must hand out final grades at the end of a semester. Due to large classes, he rarely knows the majority of his students more than by name; so he must determine their grades mostly by their handed-in class assignments. Therefore, even in courses which require handed in daily work for hours, there are whose only class work consists of one or two papers during the semester. In such a course grading it is exactly fair for a student to be judged on such a small amount of work?

Teachers already have a difficult enough time as it is trying to think of the effort and needless time hour it would take to grade them if they didn't have to spend three-fourths of their time correcting papers. Teachers are only human, after all, and they would no doubt appreciate more time like the rest of us.

Grades On Other hand.

If we did away with grades, the situation would be of a different nature. But it would not be impossible to do just as easily. It is generally considered that people do best when under pressure. If there were no grades, students would lose their incentive to work. Therefore professors would be slow. if not completely stopped.

The present system of having grades helps weed out many of the "dumbbells" never probably to come to college" cases. Without a method of weeding out these individuals our colleges would undoubtedly become cluttered up with a congregation of "duliards."

Grades should be abolished

Grades would be more accurate, and there would be much less dissention between students. What do you think?

Grades Should be Changed

Grades should be changed from the present system to a more accurate and fair method. Instead of having a student's grade depend entirely on the number of times he has been absent, or how many times he has been late to class, or how many times he has failed to hand in his assignments, his grade should be based entirely on his knowledge of the subject. Grades should be given on the basis of how much knowledge the student has gained from the course, and not on how many times he has been absent or late to class.

Instructor Unprejudiced

Also, the instructor is definitely unprejudiced when he must hand out final grades at the end of a

No Smoke Pact Made By Three

Thanksgiving will be a time of great joy and merry-making for every Florida State college for women student, but most especially for three girls who, in a moment of weakness, made an agreement to stop smoking, eating candy, and eating chocolate until after Thanksgiving dinner.

The agreement was made because one of the girls, Alice Price happened to hear Nelle Loyless say to Kitty Jo Hickman, just as Nelle's cigarette case fell into the wastebasket, "I always wanted to give up smoking, anyway."

Before either Nelle or Kitty Jo could catch her breath a pact was made, stakes were decided upon, and signs reading, "No Smoking, No Candy, No Chocolate" were hanging in their rooms.

The terms of the agreement are no candy, cigarettes, or chocolate until after Thanksgiving dinner at which time Alice is to present Nelle with a package of Chesterfields and Kitty Jo with a package of Kitty Moore's candy. The girls shall light their cigarettes from the same match to be held by Alice.

The following Sunday night the girls will be in the dining room and the picture show. Should any of them break the rule will have to treat the other two to hotel dinner and to the picture show.

Club Postpones Next Meeting

French Club Schedules Famous Boyer Film For November

The regularly scheduled meeting of the French club has been postponed until November 15 at which time final preparations for the showing of the film "Mayerling" will be made.

"Mayerling" is to be shown in the Augusta Conradi theater at 8 o'clock, November 15. Tickets will be on sale Tuesday, and may be purchased from members of the French club. They will be sold for 25 cents, and everybody who has them will be entitled to see the complimentary ticket.

Elaine Williams is chairman of the ticket committee. Others on the committee are Elsie Merrill Sara Helms and Irene Wheeler. Elizabeth Lynn is chairman of the program committee, and will be assisted by Marilin Bennett and Lois Lastra. The advertising and publicity committee will be Julia Margaret Olsen, Charlotte Hartman, Bess Cunningham, Ed Mercer, and the chairman, Peggy Peterson. The entire ticket committee will act as ushers in addition to Maria Bird, Eleanor Ezell, Marian Connor, and Julia Weed.

As a result of this, college standards would fall—gain downward and the whole higher purpose would become a farce and filled rich with worthless degrees.

Of course, there are instances in his work, he desires to know how to procrastinate, but he may make the proper settlements if he's not doing so well. Why should a student who is intelligent, a hard worker, and interested in his work be given an identical recognition as the student who "took a course" the last time year and handed in just fair or below average work? The latter has the same method of distinguishing between the two, so far, he can see, is unnecessary. It may be grades are the only means of accomplishing this end, but I doubt it. But whether or not this is at all satisfactory is certainly not to be questioned.

Strike Medium

To strike a happy medium between having no grades at all as in our present way of grading methods, and the other extreme where it seems necessary to check up on a student's progress, why not have several tests during the course and grade these quizzes and notebooks on the basis of how he did work. This would do away with the cramming which almost occurs quarterlies, semesters, and finals. There would be no opportunities for cramming since students would have to keep up each day or not be graded. Grades would be more accurate, and there would be much less dissention between students. What do you think?

There will be a group of the girls from the Tarpon club participating. The girls' relay team is made up of Irene Hodge Swanson Ruth Smith, Mrs. Marion Irene Powell, Mrs. Geors Kekers will give a solo exhibition at this time.

Three Students Have Articles In Publication

Harmon, Padgett, And Dowson Have Stories Printed

Articles by three Florida State girls for women journalism are Geneva Harmon, Roberta Padgett and Ann Towson, appearing in the October issue of the All-American Student, an American boy magazine published in Detroit, Mich.

Miss Bertie Harmon in her article, "Do You Need Money?" tells up the financial side of college, says:

"We can't young people, how passionately in love, wait they both have a greater understanding of their innate desire to be. Why can't we marry them as if only as a faded light, be plainly seen before they go into a polished, steel that will endure its aloss . . . the frazile beginnings of marriage that shocked so easily to leave only a bitter taste of realistic soap opera."

Before you rush into this thing of marriage, let us take an inventory of your unsatisfied desires, then compare them with your chances of ever satisfying them under the restrictions of husband-to-be's pecuniary ability . . . which is desperately small.

"Desires, wants, ambitions, assets and handicaps are the most motivating forces of our lives.

Have you no more desires than you the noble, the basic sacrificial soul to settle down? Do you see you love with only one-room cabin, a piece of land, and a slab of corn bread you feed . . .

In her article entitled "We, the Women" Roberta Padgett says:

Everything must change, and change can change in one of two ways, that is it can get slower faster. Since it was slow before and since everything speeded up after the World war, it was natural for it to become faster. There are a great many people there still doing their slow dancing however. This may be due to the fact that they like it, or fascinate them or they are unable to keep up with the jitterbug, or jitterbugging is hard. It is a good day's work.

The jitterbugs don't jitterbug because of or because we are the victims of a war-torn world. We jitterbug because once upon a time we learned and now have it in our blood. It's a very contagious, incurable state which hangs on through life and then. Once you learn it will be haunted for the rest of your life.

Jitterbugging has been banned in many places because it is said to be very similar. This is not jitterbugging in its true sense, for the real McCoy is a graceful, swift, fast, dance. Those who are pictured in the newsreels or theatrical magazines are not true jitterbugs but only those wishing to show off and exploit the style. Grace is the very essence of a dancer as much as a rather as acrobats or contortionists.

When a fast piece is played over an audience, you can always select the jitterbugs by their eyes. They sparkle so that not even a muscle were moving, you would know them. They can always absolutely still, however:

this is their main trouble. Because of their love for jitterbugs are sometimes found to be laughing when they are dancing. Because of their understanding of this and never know it until someone asks them to explain it."

The article "Christian Questioning" by Ann Towson, deals with the problem of religion in the world today and concludes as she says of religion: "It is one of the requisites of a well-rounded life as accepted as saddle oxfords or sweaters and skirts—that at some time in the college career there will come an amnestic, proceeding from the mind of a person who has an ardent belief in a more zealous faith than before, and in some cases even the wiser is thought to be an original philosophy."

Vivian Alvarez is the college editor of The All-American Student and contributes articles from Other colleges and universities who are also members of this publication. Miss Alvarez, University of Arizona, Arizona State Teachers college, Northwestern university, Wayne university, New York university, University of Georgia, University of New Mexico, University of Kentucky, Mills college, Bucknell university, University of Colorado, State University of Iowa, College of Idaho, Swarthmore, University of Oklahoma, Oreson State college, Rutgers university, Ohio State university, City of New York college, Chamberlaid university, Phoenix Junior college, University of Kansas, Occidental college, University of Cincinnati, Baylor university, University of Denver, Stanford, University of Alabama Montana State university, Phoenix university, University of Arkansas and Utah State Agricultural college.

Tarpons Will Be Harnessed

For a good many years our waters have been harnessed for power; now swimmers are being harnessed for the Tarpon club exhibition Thanksgiving.

These harnesses are made of rubber insulated wire, with ivory panel bulbs soldered onto the wire. Each harness consist of four strands of wire with three bulbs to each strand. The two pieces of wire are connected to two flashlight batteries.

When the swimmer has her harness on, she will have a row of small lights on each arm and leg, held in place with tape, the two batteries tied around her waist across the small of her back just back of her right side. For the exhibition the lights will be painted red, blue, green, and amber, and will make the swimmers clothed in the dark.

There will be no danger of any one being shocked or electrocuted for the voltage of the batteries is too low The girls will be carrying three volts while the safety limit can go wrong is twenty-five volts. The girls will be practicing three weeks before the big night.

Evelyn and Ruth Durhan and Irene Frenzel were co-workers on this project When Lucked down Tallahassee Hills, it was a most particularly hard, but C.at it was finally solved by a piece of junk that was once a Ford, and left in a few days for Virginia. Evelyn and Ruth worked and my adventure in housekeeping.

Frenzel said that he was proud of his library and obtain a copy of "Live Alone and Like It" by Marie Kelly. As it fell I should find out what one did or did not do when living alone. However, although I enlayed the book I found I was saved much trouble for all the help I received from it. The author described what to do when you go to it in order to live on every type of budget from unlimited to mine. Even a book on budgets probably cannot help everyone, but people know to live on my allowance.

For the first week or so when Evelyn and Ruth left I returned on every light in the house, and a systematic search—including the closets and under the beds. I always felt better after doing so, but I did it nevertheless.

The first day in bed I strained every nerve listening to the sounds of the house, magnifying them tenfold. The tiniest squeak of a board became a step outside my door, and the slightest creak an hand in my excitement that I was positive I could hear some one softly breathing in the same room. Shadows took on weird shapes and then ended up looking like a man's head, or his arm or his hand.

Sees Strange Arm

One night on turning into the farthest corner of a uncouth room, I was suddenly scared to death when I saw a long, thin shadow, which resembled an outstretched arm, move slowly forward. Without waiting to see more I dived under the covers and twisted myself into a ball at the bottom of the bed. A slow tortuous minute passed—nothing happened— another went by and still there was no sound except my labored breathing. With cautious movements I slowly returned to my normal position at the head of the bed and poked my head from under the covers. Glancing hastily in the direction where the "arm" had been, I discovered—much to my chagrin—that the terror of the night was the shadow of a limb that was swaying back and forth outside my window.

After being my own protector for several weeks I began to realize how absurd I was acting, and gradually ridiculed my fear away. When people ask me, "Aren't you afraid to stay by yourself?," I would casually answer, "Why no. What is there to be afraid of?" without mentioning my antics of the first few weeks of course).

Housekeeping never has been my forte and although I started out very conscientiously to "wash the cups and saucers and sweep the crumbs away" the crumbs got ahead of me. Through necessity I washed the dishes once a day but otherwise I let things accumulate until there was "Standing Room Only" unless I was expecting company. It did amuse my neighbors would say "Somebody's coming to see Holly! Look's like the porch."

One night, through some of my company for whom I cleaned up so assiduously, I got locked out of my apartment and ouch hours. Three other girls and I had been playing bridge when I decided to go for a short ride. Although I wasn't really afraid anymore I always kept the Yale lock on the door locked whenever I was home. As we started to leave, I went into the kitchen to get a glass of water, and one of the other girls, who had never come into contact with a Yale lock before, locked the door. Of course what she did was to turn the lock back only far enough to open the door. When I slammed it shut after us it automatically locked itself. But all unknowingly I carefully locked it on the outside and put the key in my pocket.

Arriving home at midnight, my pinch-penny instincts shocked me to see that in the rush of leaving I had left all the lights burning. I rushed up the steps to put them out and tried unsuccessfully again and again to open the door. I could see the key was doing its job effectively and after about the fifth attempt I realized dimally what had happened.

I slowly retraced my steps down the stairs trying to decide what should be done. But the only thought that came to me was what a lovely night it was for a murder. It was awfully dark—but was sudden quiet—and as cold as it had been raining practically all day—and the familiar objects in the yard took on strange and unsanny shapes. As I stood there trying to forget this atmosphere and determine what to do, I was startled to hear footsteps coming down the walk. Looking in the direction of the sound I saw—much to my joy—Lucky Gardner's neighbors returning home.

I explained my predicament to them, adding that if I could find Mr. C—, my neighbor across the hall I could go through the fire escape and across the porch that was along the length of our two apartments. As he was a deputy sheriff, we called every place in town we thought a burglar most likely to be from the jail to the poolroom. But we not only could not get in touch with him, we could not even find somebody who knew where he might be.

"The Fire Department!"

Feeling rather discouraged at our futile efforts, we sat down and tried to think what other course was open to us. We had already discussed the possibility of using a ladder, which was a good plan—but we had no ladder. Suddenly our contemplative silence was broken by Mrs. R—— exclaiming in an excited voice, "The fire department! Why don't we call the fire department and ask them to bring a ladder?"

Without waiting for us to answer she ran to the phone and in a jiffy the fire department drills a moment we heard. "Hello is this the fire department? This is Mrs. R—— 427? Call every one in the young girl who lives in the apartment next door to me has locked out and there is no way for her to get back in except by a ladder. Would you bring one out? The poor child is all alone and is scared to death."

"Yes, uh-uh . . . yes . . . You see it's a Yale lock . . . yes . . . that's right . . . and the poor child . . . uh-uh . . . yes, sir! Yes, sir! Oh . . . Oh, you can't, uh, that's fine. Thank you so much." Turning to us she exclaimed triumphantly, "They say they are always glad to rescue a lady in distress and will be right out."

Five minutes later the fire child's red car came speeding to a stop in front of the house and the stalwart fire-chief armed with a skyscraper of a ladder rushed toward us. Under our excited directions they raised the ladder, which responded with an assortment of rumblings, groans and screeches, and leaned it against the house. As one of the "Galahads" stood below, holding it firm, the other climbed up, over the porch rail, and into the house. In a few seconds he had unlocked the door and I was able to return home—and turn out the lights.

Living by myself was fun. The one fun housewoman hours—staying up all night and sleeping half the day. It was fun not having set times for my meals—eating when I was hungry—and eating on the sofa. In the armchair by the radio, on the porch in the moonlight. It was fun having people in at any old time, throwing parties at a moment's notice —having the gang in for a slumber party. The feeling of independence it gave me was fun—it made me feel older and sophisticated and more appreciative of my position in life).

Living Your Own Life

We have always done pretty much as we've wanted to in my family, so it wasn't that I was suddenly united from my mother's apron strings. But I found that when you are one of a family, whose members have their own desires, habits and routines to follow, you have to think of them when you are planning things, and often because they have plans also, your plans fall out. When you are by yourself you don't have to consider anybody's plans except your own.

Living alone was good experience, especially for a person who desires to do journalistic work. as I imagine a journalist has to spend a lot of time by himself. It made me realize how much you depend on the telephone and how few little things—those little things that make up the best there is in life —someone to talk your day over with, it's big moments and little incidents—someone to joke with and plan with and play with.

In a practical way it gave me experience in managing a house —planning meals (such as they were), shopping for food, getting up the laundry, paying the rent and utility bills. It gave me a responsibility I had never had before.

I liked it. It was wonderful knowing if I wanted to play tennis at any time my tennis racquet would be right where I had put it because no little brother would have borrowed it and broken the string above the roar of the shower, covering up dialogue was the only drawback of the entire experience of living alone.

But when I returned home about 7 o'clock one night early in November and heard someone singing above the roar of the shower, I was a familiar head over the drilling adventures of Buffalo Bill and smelled the fragrant aroma of a good ole Virginny ham issuing from the kitchen. I vowed to myself, "Live Alone—Never Again."

Imaginary Ghosts, Shadows, and Locked Doors Frightened Senior Who Spent Summer By Herself in Tallahassee Home

BY HOLLY KINNEY

"But my dear, you can't mean that," Mrs. C—cried in a shocked voice to mother as they sat talking together one day last June.

"Can't mean what?" mother inquired.

"Why what you just said about Holly. That you are going to let her stay in your apartment by herself in Tallahassee while you all are in Virginia."

"Certainly I mean it," mother said. "Nothing could possibly happen to her with people below and across the hall. Besides I think it will do her good."

"Well, I think it's terrible. I bet you'll change your mind and decide you can't do it. I know I couldn't think of letting my daughter live by herself for three months."

And though the concensus of opinion of the majority of the people was that it was a shocking thing to leave a 20-year-old girl all summer in an apartment house with only three other families, of which was headed by the deputy sheriff, mother didn't change her mind. Instead she left me a letter, my brother and herself into "Seabreeze" an old piece of junk that was once a Ford, and left in a few days for Virginia. Mother had packed herself and my adventure in housekeeping.

The first week was to go of to the library and obtain a copy of "Live Alone and Like It" by Marie Kelly. As it fell I should find out what one did or did not do when living alone. However, although I enlayed the book I found I was saved much trouble for all the help I received from it. The author described what to do when you go to it in order to live on every type of budget from unlimited to mine. Even a book on budgets probably cannot help everyone, but people know to live on my allowance.

For the first week or so when Evelyn and Ruth left I returned on every light in the house, and a systematic search—including the closets and under the beds. I always felt better after doing so, but I did it nevertheless.

The first day in bed I strained every nerve listening to the sounds of the house, magnifying them tenfold. The tiniest squeak of a board became a step outside my door, and the slightest creak an hand in my excitement that I was positive I could hear some one softly breathing in the same room. Shadows took on weird shapes and then ended up looking like a man's head, or his arm or his hand.

Sees Strange Arm

One night on turning into the farthest corner of a uncouth room, I was suddenly scared to death when I saw a long, thin shadow, which resembled an outstretched arm, move slowly forward. Without waiting to see more I dived under the covers and twisted myself into a ball at the bottom of the bed. A slow tortuous minute passed—nothing happened— another went by and still there was no sound except my labored

Florida High Beats Wewahitchka 'Six'

41-0 Score Ends Game Played in Rain

The Florida high school football team played Wewahitchka on the latter's field on November 1 and won by a score of 41-0. The opposing team was weakened due to injuries in previous games in the past few weeks, according to Coach H. D. Loucks of the Demonstration school.

Substitutions were frequently played almost the entire game in a drizzling rain. This win brings Florida high's record of games to four wins and one loss.

College girls are cordially invited to attend the game played today against Sopchoppy and the football field. A fee of 10 cents will be charged.

Tennis Tournament Will Be Extended

Ladder Tourney to Last For Another Week

Although the tennis tournament which has been going on for the past two weeks was scheduled to end this next week, manager Starling Hall announced that, due to quarantine, the tournament will be extended for another week in order that all the matches may be played.

Immediately following, a second tournament will be played for the championship of the school. In this tournament players will be seeded according to the results of the present ladder tourney and will be run off in national tennis tournament style. Pat Mayer is still on top of the ladder, having defeated Starling Hall again in a 6-3 match. Final results from the first tournament will be known next week.

Playnight Game Results In Tie

Odds And Evens Battle In Pre-Thanksgiving Basketball Tilt

The Odds and Evens tied 26-26 in a fast game of basketball last Friday at Playnight. At the half, the Odds were far in the lead, but the Evens willed to bring the score to a tie before the final whistle. An enthusiastic audience witnessed the game.

Both teams and all of their members played exceptionally good games. Guard Tommy Larrett, of the Evens, and Betsy Ross Howe, of the Odds, played outstanding ball, as did Frances Keister. Odds, and Jean Wood and Bernie Watson, Evens, in forward position. Wood was high point man, rolling nineteen points, while Keister was second with fourteen. This is the fourth in a series of Friday practice games between the Odds and Evens, the first three of which were won by the E-ens.

Players for the Odd team were: Margaret Carrel, Cornelia Watson, Lucille McLeod, Frances Battle, captain; Lucille Walker, Dot Jewel, Nancy White, Betsy Rose Howe, Frances Keister, and Betty Shearman. Even players were: Bernie Walton, Jean Wood, captain, Peggy Barfield, Del McGowan, Viola Lewis, Peggy Walker, Tommy Larrett, and Lillian Gulmond.

In regular practice the basketball ladders are streeting team work, and the girls are working out plays and formations using the same guarding method, while the Evens stress man to man guarding.

Student coaches Meta Helms and Brenelle Mobley have been allowing their volley ball players to mix for games each Friday. These games are merely for practice, and still in playing rather than making a final victory is stressed. This system will be continued until Thanksgiving time.

There will be no games Friday because of the holiday, but practice will be resumed on Tuesday.

HOW TO WIN BOY-FRIENDS AND INFLUENCE STAG-LINES

By Dales Dorothy Clix

Dear Miss Clix: My brother, a sophomore at X——College, is an absolute lamb about bringing his boy friends over to our school and introducing them to me. But oh, Miss Clix, they never come back of their own accord! I say my brother who, but he just poo-poos me evasively. I'm so upset that I bite my fingernails! What can I do?

AGONIZED

Dear "Agonized": Say listen, young woman! Don't you realize what's wrong? You've put your finger right on it, yourself! You bite your fingernails! If there is anything in the world that's absolutely fatal to the attainment of female wrong-doing that gives men the gripes, and sends them away like a stag at bay, it's ugly, bitten fingernails. Take your character—if it isn't all washed away by the scruff of the neck, say: "Never again!"—and then, just to make it easier, manicure them with a mother's care and keep them tinted regularly with a fashionable shade of nail polish. Then—ask Brother to bring on the Wild Game again!

Isn't It Possible

Next Friday and Saturday the first speaker on the Florida State lecture series, S. K. Ratcliffe, famous British lecturer and world traveler, will be proved so popular on this campus five years ago, is returning to speak to students on "Britain, What Now?" and "A Great Age is Ending."

Which all brings to mind the old Flambeau fight for a good and better lecture series. Last year an editorial appeared in the Flambeau asking for a separate deal on the activities budget for the lecture series. Alongside was the Inquiring Reporter showing that a great many among the student body agreed with the Flambeau. Most of those answering the questionnaire agreed that the lectures were an important part of student activities and many of them were even willing to give up one or two artist series in return for some really outstanding speakers. And there's a possibility that feelings haven't changed, certainly not so far as the Flambeau is concerned.

About 12 years ago the idea of the lecture series on the campus began and since then, with the help of Dr. Elizabeth G. Andrews, the lecture committee, with its limited $200 a year, has attempted to provide the students with noted, intelligent, and interesting speakers. But the committee has never had enough to do that let us briefly review the odds it struggles against.

What sort of speaker would possibly come all the way from New York or any other northern metropolitan center for only $50. Such a small amount would not even cover his transportation, let alone tend to induce him to come. Yet, one $50 for a lecturer yet a musician is offered from $500 to $1000 to appear here. Does this mean that music is so much more important than intelligent discourse to the students on this campus? We wonder.

Of course, we enjoy the Artist Series, especially the larger groups such as symphonies and bands and we enjoy the better known artists. But judging from the attendance at recitals of some of the less famous our budgeting seems that the student body is not getting its money's worth from the Artist Series fund.

And we are sure that students on this campus appreciate good speakers. If there is any doubt in anyone's mind, let them remember the large audiences Dorothy Kilgnan Rawlings and Cornelia Otis Skinner drew here. But the catch came in the price of admission. You only can't afford to pay for a lecture committee can't foot the bill, the students must. And there are many of us who can't squeeze out of finance lists our budgets, and for this reason, many of us miss the good speakers who do reach our campus—usually by the meager support of the lecture association.

Doesn't it seem possible that the funds could be more equally distributed, distributed so that we could have only three artist and two exceptionally good Artist Series and two equally attractive lecture series programs?

Beg Your Pardon!

Here we go again! We're off on our annual tirade about courtesy. This time it's concerning the endless chatter that takes place during convocation.

1,969 people whispering and laughing, no matter how softly, are rather too much competition for one speaker to compete against. And yet every person who has tried to give anything from an announcement to a speech in convocation has had to compete against pure for your attention. Rather silly, don't you think, and so childish. And, as long as you are acting like children remember the old adage about being seen and not heard.

At college women we are too old to be told about how rude it is to speak while someone else is speaking. Forgive us for reminding you.

Reading newspapers. Any newspapers, the New York Times, the State News, and even the Flambeau.

Reading Gerald W. Johnson's article in the November Harper's, "To Our Thirty-Year-Olds."

What Now?

The future of the United States for the next four years has, in one sense, been settled. The epoch-making election of 1940 is over and Franklin D. Roosevelt is elected to serve a third term as President of the United States.

The year of 1940 has brought forth in the breaking of a tradition which has endured for 150 years. For the first time in our country's history a man has been nominated for and elected to serve three terms of office as our Chief Executive. A lesser tradition was also broken when Roosevelt was the first nominated to run on the Republican ticket. This is the first time that a man with no previous political experience has run for the highest office in the nation.

According to reports received Wednesday at 6:45 P. M., E. S. T., on the day following election day, Mr. Roosevelt carried 39 states with a total of 468 electoral votes and Mr. Willkie carried 9 states with a total of 63 electoral votes.

Roosevelt, according to this report, polled 24,365,798 popular votes to Willkie's 20,049,749.

Franklin Roosevelt goes into office this time as head of a people, a vast number of whom have learned to look to him as really be a great handicap but it is up us as Americans to see that it is not.

Being elected to office for the third time is indeed an honor, but it is also a tremendous responsibility, a responsibility which we must help him to bear.

The campaign is over. No doubt is left of the will of the majority. With the end of this historical event, Americans also the end of all antagonism and ill will.

Wendell Willkie has publicly stated that he feels he will and is ready to cooperate to the fullest in helping Mr. Roosevelt in his responsibility and to face the great problems of the time. We, for one, must also show this true American spirit, the spirit of which we are so proud, and give our President the hand of good will and cooperation with a smile, whether we voted for or against him.

Now Is The Time

Once more November 11 is being observed as a holiday. Once more we are celebrating the ending of the war fought to make the world safe for democracy. Flags will wave, bands will play, and America will march with parade from one end of the country to the other. At 11 o'clock we will pause in our day's work and say a silent prayer in remembrance of those soldiers who gave their lives in the belief that they fought to end all wars.

But we are not celebrating over the Armistice. But alone. Throughout the world the United States is the only country that is able to observe a world holiday. None of the other countries who signed the Armistice treaty is at peace.

The American Youth Congress asserts in manuscripts, which it has spread throughout the land, that the highest tribute that our generation can pay to those who died in the first World war is to keep America from plunging into the conflict again devastating Europe and Asia.

The Youth Congress has issued a call to the young people of this country to commemorate this armistice day by demonstrating youth's will to keep this country out of war.

In a proclamation the congress states, "Our elect pledge to our country that we stop warlike acts which bring America closer to war and strengthen and which at every step are matched by increased restrictions and of democratic rights and civil liberties.

"We, the youth, pledge to our entire day defend America by insisting on all that is true in a fight for liberation, a complete embargo of arms, loans and credits and victims of war, support the American Youth Fellowship Fund, and preserve academic freedom, civil liberties and labor's rights."

We Recommend

Professor K. C. Leebrick of Kent State University in Kent, Ohio, has given his students seven rules for governing their thoughts and actions during the war. They are as follows:

1. Don't believe everything you hear.
2. Don't be inadvertently a "fifth columnist."
3. Don't be a war gossiper.
4. Be careful of your criticism.
5. Remember that propaganda is more effective at this time than at any time in history and you can't believe only those things which exceptionally good Artist Series and two equally attractive lecture series programs!

6. Think of the situation as it has happened and not only read it in the papers or hear it on the radio alone.

7. Don't be too hasty to judge what's going on until you have full information. We, as a rule, are sometimes very gullible, particularly so at the present time when we are in the midst of such a period of international crisis; the nations of the world are all involved, either directly or indirectly. Naturally many people have voiced their opinions concerning the matter. Some of these people are of great renown and authority and we think that "ipso" is on the "right road of thinking." Don't jump at conclusions or believe everything you hear. Do a little independent thinking and research.

Students of Florida State college for women wish to take this opportunity to thank the members of the Board of Control and Mr. S. R. Doyle, Registrar, for making it possible for us to leave o- Friday rather than Saturday for the Armistice weekend. All future holidays will begin on Friday also. Mr. Doyle recommended that the extra day be given us to the Board, which approved and passed Mr. Doyle's recommendation.

Collegiate Comebacks

BY THERESA SULLIVAN

We don't feel like this always,
Just when pressed for time and taxed, as in the weeks before Armistice:
I often find my attitude
When a pollyanna platitude
Is said with great beatitude
By faculty or friend.

Takes on a slightly nawsty air.
The outcome of the whole affair
I want to choke them then and there
Until the blue-black finish.

And so if you should want to say
"Early to bed," or, "An apple a day,"
We suggest that you get a damned fur piece away
'Cause we really understands that sunshine!

Then there's the girl who has a brother in college who makes more A's than B's. She also got initiated into Phi Beta and family wondering why she didn't ever get that fourth grade she was making on tests and papers and things. How could she make a mistake? Everybody else did and didn't know about papers because all hers were marked down to zero for excess?

We are thoroughly convinced that we are fated to be torch-bearers for lost causes, the causes we've taken up following:

1. Republican candidates.
2. Co-education.
3. Light assignments during cram week.

Note to faculty members: We hope your conciences bother you, for you've made Flambeau editors gnaw.

This G'vilite seems to have his finger on Oklahoma's pulse-beat. He ended his last letter rather abruptly with, "Must go now and ramble on for another page or so, but I simply must dash off to a bridge session."

Since our overdue assignments and quarterlies have caught up with us we haven't had time to do anything but dash all the time. Present soda shop for coffee and a sandwich and dash back to study all over again. If we had time to think we'd probably decide we would look mighty good right now.

Our spirits were lifted no end when we opened our mail box this week and found a letter addressed to no mail, as usual, we were very much surprised. The envelope contained picturing a chubby Santa Claus wishing all college girls a Merry Christmas. On the bottom of the ball of it when he said "Mary."

We just heard of a group of fall Tally girls who didn't have dates for Georgia-Florida last year. Undaunted, they went to Athens in a gay crowd and let people know by phone that they were there.

More of the wishful thinking that seems to be rampant on campus.

We were glad to note that we have five days to recuperate from New Year's Eve this coming vacation (you know which one we mean but we don't like to repeat, ourselves so often). Five days we won't be so many people heading for the infirmary and we may get off the bus this time.

You-ant-win-nots:

The gold star for futility goes to the little girl who had to stay home to study and spent last Saturday afternoon and evening sitting on two of The One's fraternity brothers, (whom she thought were fairly cute) while they entertained her under a mistaken impulse of kindness. Said dates for one of them) returned to his fraternity house with the fill - founded, but rather startling news that the One and Only might as well step into the pin - cushion business. He's a chubby wasn't in the running since.

Ah youth! You're so impetuous!

Just when we began to think Armistice was a lovely misaye in a desert of parallel, note books, Flambeau assignments and quarterlies, we looked up from an article on "The Girl from One to Six" long enough to note the chrysanthemums blooming all over the library. "Ah," we sighed, as we read that the two weeks old Infirm should be able to raise his head. "It isn't a myth after all."

Of The World

BY MARY CELESTE HARDEE

Tuesday, November 5, 1940, has come and gone. As a result Franklin Delano Roosevelt will take his oath of office in January for the third consecutive time; both the House of Representatives and the Senate will remain Democratic, as they have been since 1932.

The election was not a landslide for Roosevelt. Even though Willkie won in only nine states, latest returns show the margin a close give Roosevelt 24,362,758, and Willkie 20,049,749. It was a close race, but now the election is over. Because the welfare of the country depends on the people forgetting the bitterness of the last few months, and, instead, looking for natural unity, as shown in editorials of Republican newspapers in the writing of world famous columnists, in statements of important men, and in the speech of the defeated candidate himself, "who said": "I know that [they the supporters] will continue as I shall to work for the unity of our people, in the completion of our defense effort, in sending aid to Britain and in maintaining the immoral of antagonisms in America —all to the end that the government of free men may continue until may spread again upon the earth."

Turned to the White House yesterday, Roosevelt is going to be the president. It is thought that he will be occupied with the problem of defense and re-armament, which he said were his true tasks the coming four years. On his return, the people of Washington gave him a roaring welcome.

The election of 1940 will go down in history not only for the election of the third term for president tradition, but also for the record vote cast, which was estimated to be about 49,000,000 people. Also for the present time there is no accurate compilation of the total vote. This fact shows the interest in the intense and flaming interest aroused by the defense program among the United States. As could be expected, the New England states took the lead in coming through their voting privilege. But all over the United States there was a tendency toward this intelligence and toward the realization that the individual citizen's opinion was vital to every citizen of the country. Now we have to wait patiently to realize that his vote would count.

One of the most contemplated points in post-election conversation is the question of whether or not John L. Lewis will remain in office. The CIO leader, who definitely announced that if Willkie were defeated he would tender his resignation at the meeting of the convention next month, has remained silent on the subject. Reporters say that he is in a permanent afoot by pro-Roosevelt leaders to "Unite" Lewis for another term, but others say that he will not accept. It is the general opinion that Philip Murray, a close friend of Lewis and of Roosevelt will probably succeed him. The future success of the AFL are in the resignation of Lewis, for there is more chance for the two labor camps to become united.

Reaction to the presidential election was varied throughout Europe and the Far East. Berlin replied and wrote of it: "The blackday Berlin has known since the beginning of the war." In Rome, believing that a change in the administration of the States might interfere with American acceptance of German aggression, also expressed their joy in the outcome. The Axis powers were strongly influenced.

The election has by far overshadowed any other event during the past week—even the staunch stand made by the Greeks against the Italians. The Greek fighting army has put up unexpected resistance and has proven themselves heady announce that they have succeeded in driving from Greek territory every Italian soldier except prisoners. The Italian invasion of Greece, which for months has been rendered useless to the Italian Army after the great defeats it received from the artillery of the Greek army. The Greeks will in all probability not be content to occupy the town because the Italians have used it as a base for their attacks with bombings from the air. The Italians more than once have been driven back by the Greeks in charges of the Greeks with hand grenades and bayonets. All over the world the small Greek army is being applauded for its courageous attempt and its unexpected success. The Italian army, meeting unexpected opposition, has so far not succeed. One of the Italian generals, Count Ciano, has gone out the information that he has "only a few more officers" "Greece will not fight; we will just walk in."

Inquiring Reporter . . .

What do you think of the establishment of a new reading room in a convenient place in the Student-Alumnae building? Why?

The Inquiring reporter discovered that by the popular opinion among the students that the new room would be a good idea provided it were open for extended hours. However, some thought that the present hours were found to be sufficient, while others said that they never did any reading and so didn't really care one way or the other to them.

Betty Patterson: I think that a new reading room in the alumnae building would be a wonderful idea. I think that the present room is in this building, a reading room close by would be handier for us.

Carolina Choate: If a reading room in the alumnae building could be arranged with better hours than the present reading room and equipped for more pleasure reading on campus, I think that it would be a good idea.

Peggy Barker; I think it's a wonderful idea. If there were a room there, they probably would not need the one in the library. The hours would probably be more convenient and could be used by more students than at present.

Louise Dahlin: It doesn't matter to me one way or the other as I never do any reading, so to the browsing room we have.

Virginia Howard: I think a new reading room would be a very nice establishment to be put in the Student-Alumnae building. It would be more convenient for most of the students and could be open more often than the present browsing room.

Tudy Oilbert: I think it would be a very good idea if they have a lot of new books there.

Ann Eberhardt: I think it would be a good idea if the students were more interested in it and the hours were more convenient.

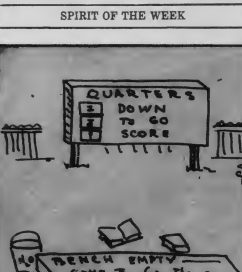
Roberta Van Brunt: It would be a fine thing because the alumnae building has an air of independence that the library doesn't entirely lacks. (For obvious reasons the library couldn't be otherwise).

Adele Johns: I think a reading room would be a fine addition to the Student-Alumnae building. The room would be open at more convenient hours than those in the library; so more people would be able to use and enjoy it. Current magazines would be kept in this room. The student-alumnae reading room would have a much more cheerful atmosphere than the library has.

Catherine Brown: It doesn't make much difference to me as I rarely have time to read anything but the books I have to read.

Ann Stanton: I suppose it's all right for those who would have time to use it. They tell me there are people who do have time for it. Me? I don't.

Hilda Frankenhoff: a reading room in the student-alumnae building seems a grand idea to me because there is no room near the soda fountain.



Barbara Hopkins: I believe it would be worthwhile if material of current interest was available in the reading room. Where it should be able to make use of it.

Ruth Roehmer: Of course it would be a good idea to have a browsing room in the alumnae building, but I hope we don't keep the other one in the library, too, because I'd never know where to go and the best books—and the books count more with me than not the convenience.

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK

Contemporary Student Thought . . .

BY DORIS CARTER

A recent presidential contest sponsored at Davidson college, North Carolina, has attracted the nation-wide attention. The plan was staged by two literary societies in the college—one of which was a former tradition of debating. Carefully selected students participated in speeches and rebuttals supporting the national political candidates. One student chosen as "old-time" brass band played between speeches. To further add to the atmosphere, campaign leaflets, banners, buttons, and campaign ters were contributed. A torch-light parade followed the rally, during which the students supported their state posters for the Democratic or Republican candidate. Open polls the next day gave the students an opportunity to register their choice for president. The main purpose of the rally was to "Americanize" the student interest in nationally important affairs.

Life magazine is considering the inclusion of the story in one of their future editions, and pictures were sent to Collegiate Digest.

"Citizenship, It's Privileges and Responsibilities," by Roger Holden appearing in the November Atlantic Monthly, was selected as the best essay on that subject in a contest sponsored by the magazine.

It is man's privilege to study the responsibilities of citizenship and it is his responsibility to be sure the privileges to his fellowmen. Two things are vital to democracy: that every man accept every other the rights he claims for himself, and that every man accepts the obligations he expects others to assume.

"The basic privileges in a democratic society are contained in the Bill of Rights. It is obvious and is conceived and its constitution established by men and women who were denied them at home and who braved perils on the high seas to establish where they would be safeguarded for others as well as for themselves. Do we want freedom of speech? We want it for ourselves but we do not want it for others. We insure that our opponent will have it also. A democracy must be often and almost exclusively ourselves.

"This is true in the world-of-community of democracies. It is also true within a democracy the privileges have received the widest possible extension. Freedom promised life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. They are not to be had by anyone unless they are taught to expect something for themselves. They are not to be we built up for the benefit of one of them individually. But if each man is taught that his rights can be gained only through what he does to others and to democracy one never gains privileges demanding them.

"Democracy is that we fulfill responsibility by going to the polls and voting for the man we registers his judgment as we think best. The privilege and responsibility is in putting yourself the background and voting intelligently for the best for the entire community.

"These are responsibilities and privileges of citizenship. Either we exercise our citizenship or we lose it through neglect."

"The Philippine Question Then and Now," by Francis Bowes Sayre, is also in the November issue of the Atlantic Monthly. Sayre is United States high commissioner to the Philippines.

In 1898 it seemed simple take up the white man's burden and bring to the unfortunate people freedom and democracy. But in the twentieth century world " Bilskirings and rubbing elbows with neighbors, the America stands uncertain at cross roads

Out of the complexities of the problem of the Philippines is the most extended problem of American policy in the Orient. Nevertheless so far as the islands themselves are concerned, the future course of action upon which any realistic approach the problem must be based is in some extent limited by the ultimate solution of the problem of Philippine independence.

In the first place, there is the fact that from the earliest days of the American occupation we have constantly promised independence to the Filipino people. During the years we have been accomplishing things toward that end.

A second factor in the problem is the fact that the United States was, on one hand, pursuing a trade policy was based on the Philipino more and more dependent upon the United States economically.

A third objective fact is the progressive development of self-government by the Filipinos, culminating in 1934, which virtually made the Philippines an industrial independence at the end of a 10-year period and provided in effect for a further increase upon preferences in the American market. The act also contains provisions of a somewhat contrasting nature for the retention of naval reservations for the retention of naval reservations.

As a result of the compromises in the legislation, it is only natural that there should be dissatisfied groups both in the United States and in the Philippines. President Roosevelt stated in his message to congress that inequalities exist, I am confident, that they can be corrected after proper hearing and in fairness to both peoples."

It is quite clear that the Filipinos cannot achieve their independence without severe economic strain and grave industrial dislocation. The risks of international disorders and economic depression are great and manifest.

newly launched and entertaining lately to be or should be free? The answer hinges on objective realities. In the Philippines, the people have come to plebiscite adopted the Constitution of the Commonwealth in the independence act and ratified it after accepted the offer of independence. The latter has normally bound not to alter without the approval of the Filipino people in the second place, by our law the program cannot be altered or independence delayed except by an affirmative vote in both the house of representatives and senate changing the present law."

Which is also the problem of the trade Commissioner and Independent Filipino republic. As far as the Philippines for independence, surely we owe it to them under such terms as they offer reasonable time for their surviving economy. It does not follow, however, that we should extend to independent Filipino nation the preferential American markets and for all time. Is the Philippine ready for independence? If because of pressure of foreign agents some Philippine voices are heard counseling postponement of independence, must it be deceived into believing that they are clamoring for independence are dying.

Officer To Be Honored With Informal Coffee By Tri Delts Next Week

Among the first of social events after Armistice will be an informal coffee next Wednesday night for the Delta Delta Delta district president, Mrs. Charles V. Mercer. Mrs. Mercer will be visiting the Tri Delts next Tuesday through Thursday.

The district president is a native of Jacksonville and is a graduate of Randolph Macon Women's College in Virginia.

Mrs. Mercer is now on her district visit which will cover five states in four states, all sites of Tri Delta chapters. She returned only a few months ago from the Delta Delta Delta biennial national convention on Mackinac Island, Michigan. This is her first official visit through her district since her beginning of the present academic year.

The time of the coffee honoring Mrs. Mercer Tuesday is Patty Walker, social director.

would be a very good idea as I don't know anyone who goes to the other one."

Katherine Butler: I think that a reading room in the Student-Alumnae building will be wonderful. It is more convenient for some students to go to the Union Building."

Harriette Mullins: It seems like a good deal for those who have time to read but I very seldom have time to read, so I guess I'm no good reader whenever we have a new magazine."

Diana Vergueze: I never do very much reading so it won't affect me one way or the other. But it would be a good idea for those to do extra reading."

Mary Cotton: I think it would be very convenient to go up and go down and get something to eat when you want to.

Linda Kreyer: It would be more comfortable and relaxing and you'd get more pleasure out of it. A pleasant atmosphere would be more inducive to study."

Kathryn Bennett: I like to go to the browsing room in the library, but I don't see why the whole it is convenient for the average student to go. And the lighting in the library is very good. So I think a reading room in the alumnae building is a good idea, if they get the latest books."

Virginia Hall: It would be a good idea but since we have one what is the use of another one. I never go to the library, there's only one in the library. It would be a waste of money."

Zoe Johns: There should be a reading room in the alumnae building, with more up to date and longer hours."

Janie Ruth Johnson: It seems to be a good idea to me. Lots of new books and being able to use them at any time would be nice."

Lois Lynch: It would be nice if there are enough people who have time to use it. I don't."

Polly Wetherill: It's a good idea. The alumnae building has a much cheerier atmosphere than the library.

Helen Kramer: It would be nice to have one on the first floor of the Student-Alumnae building; otherwise I'm satisfied with the library as it is. I'm not a reader by nature."

Betty Lou Leuty: It really doesn't make much difference to me, for the only reading I do is for my classes. I'm concerned in the comic section in the daily newspapers."

Mary Lillian Courtney: A new reading room in the library would be just fine. But what is wrong with the old one in the library? If we can help both, I guess I could be quoted as saying I'm in favor of it."

Daphne Smith: I think that a great deal of enjoyment could be obtained from reading in a room in the alumnae building. Since I live there I enjoy all during the week. I think the change for a pleasure reading over the week-end would be a grand idea. I'm all for it!"

Roberta Marks: I think it's a good idea, because it would probably have better hours and be cozier."

Virginia Touchton: It would be a good idea, especially if it were open every night during the week-end. However, I usually spend very little time doing pleasure reading."

Dorothy Schepke: It is a wonderful plan providing it will be open long enough to read in. I'm

Chi Omegas Give Party Honoring House Mother

Members and pledges of Chi Omega honored their house mother, Mrs. O. S. Lanier, with a surprise party last night immediately after dinner. The party was in celebration of Mrs. Lanier's birthday which will come during the Armistice holidays.

The guest of honor, known by her friends as "Aunt Willie," has been the Chi Omega house mother for fourteen years.

After refreshments of vanilla ice cream and chocolate cake were served, the chapter sat around and sang sorority songs.

in favor of having it over at the alumnae building because it is a nicer atmosphere."

Ethel Crown: It's a wonderful idea if the new room would be open more often so that more people could take advantage of it.

Nancy A. Hall: I think a reading room in the Student-Alumnae building would be nice because people get tired of going to the library all the time. They could enjoy a change of atmosphere every now and then. The surroundings are very pleasant there now.

Hazel Smith: Personally I don't think much of the idea because we already have one reading room in the library, and not many of us can find time from our studies for reading in it.

Frances Allen: I think it would be a good idea but we certainly don't need one in the library and not in the Student-Alumnae building too.

Ruth Campbell: I think it's a good idea. More girls like to read.

Kathryn Adams: I think it would be a good idea as more girls go over to the Student-Alumnae building for pleasure. It's more central for lots of girls.

Marian Crocker: It's a good idea but not so profitable because so many girls have to read so much for newspapers."

Mary Lillian Courtney: A new reading room in the library would be just fine. But what is wrong with the old one in the library? If we can help both, I guess I could be quoted as saying I'm in favor of it."

Musically Speaking

BY VIRGINIA DUNN

The most musically pleasing sound that will be heard this week will be the 4:30 bell this afternoon. It isn't that the sound of the bell will be any more melodious today than it is any other day; the idea is that the sound of the bell will have a peculiar significance this afternoon . . . it will officially usher in Armistice vacation. So it is with any music; the total effect upon an individual's musical appreciation sensitives depends entirely upon that individual's mind set, the circumstances and the expected effects of each hearing of the musical situation . . . thus, whether you like a certain performance of any given composition depends upon yourself as much as it depends upon the performer. So, when you go to the Artist Series program next week, don't go in a pessimistic, well, show-me-and-I'll-do-something mood. You yourself must contribute to the performance, not only by applauding at the right spots in the program, but also by assuming a receptive, friendly attitude. That's the reason the first Artist Series program was so successful; the audience was so friendly. Therefore, one present seemed almost to glow with brotherly love.

There's one musical feature missing this year at the Armistice season; that is the Armistice-ous singing in the dining hall at breakfast. Remember those freshmen breakfasts every year? Each was when everyone was going home for the first time? Then, as now and before holidays, the dining room sounded like a conservatory of music. Starting at about 7:20, "Train Bells and Whistles on My Mind" was the favorite song, and it always was accompanied by tinkling glasses (WATER glasses) and plenty of woo-wooing.

Red, White, Blue

Since everything is red, white, and blue this week, you'll be hearing lots of patriotic music on the radio. Perhaps the most popular patriotic song there is, however, is one about it that makes one feel patriotic, too. "I Am Proud to Be an Indian" has that same quality . . . they're both tops in my hit-parade.

Officially, "The Star Spangled Banner" should be the most popular patriotic song in America." However more people know both the words and music of "God Bless America" than know the national, "The Star Spangled Banner." It's impossible to say the national anthem came into being. It seems that it just sort of developed. Francis Scott Key wrote a poem entitled "The Defense of Fort McHenry." during the bombardment of that fort in the war of 1812. Then, in 1931, it was decided that the poem was written. He had heard a political song, "Adams and Liberty," during 1798 which he liked very much. Therefore, he wrote the poem in rhythm to the beat of that political song.

However, the tune of that song had come over from England. John Stafford Smith, English musician, had written the music for the title of "Anacreon in Heaven." Somehow or other it became mixed up in politics and the result was the heavenly . . . It was a political ditty about Adams. Eventually the Revolutionist incidentally, it was written in 1770's and the poem was put together by some unknown person. And "The Star Spangled Banner" was adopted by congress as the national anthem in 1931. Now do you know why it's so hard to sing?

"America" is another of our patriotic airs. The words were written in 1832 . . . And the tune just happened to be the tune to be originally from Europe because the same tune is used in many countries . England's national hymn, "God Save the King." is sung to this same tune.

"The Battle Hymn of the Republic" is the song that Kate Smith "John Brown's Body" . . . This song has always seemed like a bat-

Alumnae Board Plans Meeting

Directors Will Gather Here For Business Next Saturday

Announcement has just been made by Mrs. J. P. Ashmore, of Graceville, new president of the Alumnae association, that there will be a meeting of the board of directors all day Nevember 16, at the college. The meeting will begin at 10 o'clock in the morning. Committee appointments and other alumnae matters, including further plans for alumnae homecoming, will be made at that time.

Other members of the alumnae board are as follows: Mrs. George E. Lewis, of Tallahassee, vice-president: Miss Daisy Parker, of Tallahassee, recording secretary; Miss Charlotte Stevens, of Tallahassee, executive secretary; Miss Helen Shepard, of Tallahassee, treasurer; Mrs. Katherine Blood Hoffman, of Tallahassee; Miss Lucy Lang, of Trenton; Mrs. Marie Pearce, of Fort Pierce: Mrs. Evelyn Kennard West, of Tampa; and Miss Dorothy Dodd, of Jacksonville, directors: and Mrs. Frank D. Moor, of Tallahassee, immediate past president.

It was voted recently to restore the homecoming time to Thanksgiving and continue to have Alumnae college in the spring. The annual business meeting, election of officers, and class reunions will continue to take place at the Alumnae college.

A truly educated and cultured individual should have some knowledge of the fine arts and contemporary thought in many fields. Every student at Florida State college for women has an opportunity within her own dormitory for supplementing her education if she will use her eyes and a part of her leasure time in the pursuit of learning.

Dr. Olivia Dorman dean of students, has provided, through the social fund, which she administers, two magazines for each dormitory, including Harper's, Atlantic Monthly, Reader's Digest, Life and other magazines of note: and a copy of the Sunday New York Times for every hall. These papers and magazines are kept in the parlors of the dormitories for the use of all students within the hall and their friends. One has only to observe the "dog-eared" appearance of the papers to realize to what extent they are used, a mute expression of the appreciation of the students for this privilege.

A further addition to the cultural life of the dormitory is the acquisition by three dormitories of some very fine paints of modern art masterpieces. Landis hall will soon have upon its walls a copy of Van Gogh's "Landscape with Bridge." Gilchrist hall is the proud possessor of two of Cezanne's works "L'Estague" and "Mount St. Victoire,' while Jennie Murphree hall has acquired Casanne's "Landscape with Houses." These paintings were paid for with money from the social fund, but the students had the pleasure of selecting the pictures they wished from a group recommended by Mrs. Beatrice Byer Williams, head of the art department. The students of Gilchrist hall became so enthusiastic over the selection, they were not content with one picture, but collected among themselves suffecient money to purchase a second picture.

Reynolds hall, by vote of its house council and director, chose two books for its parlors rather than a painting. The books selected were "Best Loved Poems of American People" and a collection of the "World Famous Paintings." Bryan and Broward halls will make their selections sometime during this year.

All five dormitories have been supplied with copies of the book, "Building Your Personality," by Hattie Marie Marsh. This volume included chapters on speech, poise, dress, beauty aids, grooming, etiquette and health, and provides practical suggestions by which the student may develop her personality. The books are constantly in use which indicates a desire on the part of many students to improva their general appearance and manner.

It is hoped that the additions of books and works of art to the dormitories will further stimulate the mental curiosity of the student body and emphasize the need for a full intellectual life.

alternate trip they will visit the U. S. Veterans' hospital and many other points of interest in St. Petersburg. This trip will come to a close with swimming in the gulf of Mexico.

Exhibitions Shown

Exhibitions will show certain phases of the work of the Florida State Board of Health, scientific instruments and materials, and scientific books.

On Friday there will be a swimming and water sports program at the Bath club, an informal banquet, and a showing of a film on vitamins. Saturday's program will consist of the field trips, and dinner at the Nikko Inn.

The session will close with a joint meeting of the biological and physical sciences sections of the academy and the Florida section of the American Chemical society.

Service Brings Out Torches' Meaning

Presidents Of Classes Talk at Torch Night

The Torch Night ceremonies were impressively carried out Wednesday evening in the open air theatre. After explaining the symbols of the three torches—Artes, Vires, and Mores—to the freshmen, the presidents of the three upper classes, Pat Brandt, Grace Bail, and Kitty Jo Hickman, held their burning torches while the freshmen walked by in solemn procession. Each freshman lighted her torch from the fused flame of the three. With upraised torches burning, the freshmen were challenged to "guard them well" by Cornelia Watson, mistress of ceremonies. The service was ended by the singing of "Garnet and Gold" which the whole group hummed softly in conclusion.

Bees Mar Fun For Botanists On Field Trip

Plant Search Ends Disasterously For Student Collector

Chirp, chirp—tweet, tweet—slush, slush—and then bzzzz—"When I looked behind me I saw a ferocious looking bumblebee eyeing me in an unfriendly manner, so I began running. The next time I turned around two other bees had joined him and they were all surrounding me.

"Then—a moccasin curled up in front of me, and all I could think of to do was scream and execute a prize-winning dash in the opposite direction." Thus Edith Williams, student assistant for botany, broke the spell of nature's medodlous sounds on one of her more exciting field trips in the swamps.

"Oh, yet, the bees caught me when I turned around," she added, "but after all, isn't that better than a snake?" Such field trips are taken every other week by Dr. Herman Kurz, director of botanical laboratory, and two or three students. The next one will take place tomorrow, when Dr. Kurz, Betty Baggs, and Edith will travel to the coast at Port St. Joe and Panama City.

Other trips have been made to Marianna, Chattahoochee, and the Apalachicola river district. Around the latter place is found the "torreya" which is a tree similar to a cross between a pine and a cedar. This is the only place in the world that it can be found. During such trips the students learn many geographical facts regarding the relationship between the river formations and the plants growing nearby.

On campus these students may be seen carrying huge cans on their backs and either snipping flowers here and there, or staring intently up into a tree. "We use a can so that the flowers won't transpire and iose all their moisture and thus wither," Edith explained Their specimens are used for the biological sciences, general botany, plant morphology, and spring and fall flora classes. "We work under the belief that fresh, liviog materisl makes a course so much mora vital throughout the year" she added. "Then too, it allows us time to get into the good fresh air and sunshine."

After completing each trip, the student assistants preserve some of the flowers and ferns and the leaf specimens. Other specimens they discard immediately after class use. Of those preserved, some are put in formaldehyde in standard museum jars, while others are pressed on pressing boards. They are left on these approximately three weeks before being mounted on other boards with Scotch tape and covered with cellophane. They are then put into herbian cans to keep them from being destroyed by bugs.

These cans, containing specimens with such identification as scientific and common names, locality where found, habitat, and date, are then placed in cabinets in the bontay laboratory. The girls are then ready for another field trip encountering bees, moccasins, or any other exciting piece of living organism.

Phi Alpha Theta Hears Dr Boyd

History of Spanish Pottery Is Topic For Discussion

Dr. Mark Boyd, head of the Malaria Research Division of the Rockefeller Institute, discussed the history of some Spanish pottery that he discovered at Fort St. Francis, Jefferson County, Florida, at the Phi Alpha Theta, history honorary, meeting last Monday night. He displayed his collection of pottery and showed guests some old maps of Florida and other historical places of North America.

Dr. Boyd's hobby is history and historical research especially that of the Spanish missions in Florida.

At a recent Phi Alpha Theta meeting the Florida State college chapter voted to grant a charter for a chapter at Richmond college, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Phi Alpha Thetas attending the meeting Monday night were Dr Annie M. T. Popper, Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, Dr. E S. Cotterill, Miss Florence R. Tryon, Miss Daisy Parker, Selma Byman, Dorothy Nickerson, Muriel Boyles, and Patty Holbert.

Delegate

Jean Holloway, president of Florida state college Panhellenic Association is attending the southern regional Panhellenic meeting at the University of Tennessee this week. She is accompanied by Topsy Mitchell, president of the Pi Beta Phi sorority. They will represent the Panhellenic council on this campus at the meeting.

Teachers Play Student Role

Mrs. Agnes Chagas, from Brazil, is teaching Portuguese to a class of 12 faculty members. She is also doing scientific work in the city with Dr. Mark F. Boyd.

Her husband is a leading scientific in Brazil. Her father was president of Mackenzie college of Sao Paulo (Saint Paul), an institution affiliated with the state University of New York.

Members of the faculty class are: Dr. Margie Burks Miss Myrtle E. Dolbee, Miss Marie Davis, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Miss Rachel Black, Miss Isabel Fernandez, Dr. and Mrs. A. R. Seymour, Dr. Dorothy L. R. Breen, Miss Dorothy Purse, of the demonstration school, and several city school teachers. They are preparing for travel in Brazil and would like to be able to speak in the Brazilian manner.

There has been a demand by the students for a class in Portuguese, but to no avail until now

Ruge Hall Plans Service For Dormitory Students

The Holy Communion service on next Friday morning in Ruge hall will be a corporate communion for students of Jennie Murphree hall. The service is opened to all students, but those living in Jennie Murphree are especially invited to attend this Holy Communion celebration. A number of corporate Communion services are to be observed by other dormitories and sorority houses within the year.

Registration Affords Faculty Merriment, Surprise, Awe

Perplexed Negroes Delight Registrars With Cheerful Naivety, Concern

Waiting lines, half-holidays, numerous jokes, and a jovial crowd all added to the color of a patriotic setting October 16, when lads and dads stood in line to register.

Dr R. L. Goulding, principal of the demonstration school, recalls several amusing incidents which brightened the day for the faculty members supervising registration in this precinct.

One negro man, upon reaching the questioo that asks to what person may the draft authorities refer at any time for the address of the person in question, paused with a perturbed frown. Dr. Goulding, upon trying to make the question clearer, asked: "Do you have any relatives that would know where you might be at any time?"

"Yas suh!" the negro replied, as if the godly secrets had at last been revealed to him. "Ah's got a sister."

"That's fine," said Dr. Goulding, somewhat relieved. "Now, what's her address?"

"Ah'll just be doggoned if I know just where she do live. She's somewheres in South Gawja."

"Hmmmmm. So you don't know what her address is. Well, just write down her name and maybe that will be enough information."

The negro scratched his head for a few minutes and then said, "Ah'll just bedoggoned if I can remember what her last husband's name was. No suh, I believes she's done married again since I last heard from her."

And then there was the negro who had a very unusual identification mark. When asked what specific characteristic he had that could be used as an identification mark, the negro's white teeth shone from ear to ear in a mammoth grin. "Yes suh! I got an appendix sar. Does you wants to see it?"

The faculty members are still trying to decide whether the negro said that in all sincerity or otherwise.

Dr. Goulding states that the system of registration was so well organized that at least 1,000 persons could have been registered at each district station. Tha majority of the people were registered in the early part of the morning. Several young men who were slightly under the draft age appeared just to be assured that they did not need to register. There were some, too, that were well past the age limit, but "just wanted to ease their minds about the matter."

The afternoon found a few people who had not registered, although the faculty members were required to be present at the registration station.

Dr. Goulding believes that a year of military training will help many of the young men to assert themselves in later life. He said that the cheerfulness of the registrees was significant in that no men grumbled about having to register.

He told the story about the negro woman who went down to the local chief of police and declared, "I wants to reject my husband"

The chief, taken aback, said, "You want to what? You mean you want a divorce?"

"No suh," she replied, "I just wants to reject him, cause ain't the army after him? Well, he ain't been s'portin' me for nigh onto five years, and I ain't going to let him get past the guvment by a-lying that he done got me to 'sport. Yes suh, I wants to reject that man!"

Modern Art Design Will Be Displayed

Exhibit Will Include Textiles, Wallpaper

Modern textiles and wallpaper will be on exhibition for about 10 days, beginning Wednesday, under the sponsorship of the art department. The exhibit, which will be of particular interest to all design students and those enrolled in home economics and industrial arts courses, will be in rooms 313 and 314 of the Westcott building.

Miss Dominca Mastalio, an alumna of Florida State college for women, who has opened her shop in New York as a specialist in modern art, is sending the panels. Miss Mastallo's exhibits are to include over 32 hand printed textile designs and wall papers, in the modern motif, as her shop handles only modern work.

Students and visitors are invited to inspect these displays.

Reporter Makes Campus Survey Of Study Habits of Students

Most Lessons Done at Night After Light Flash, Making Weekly Extensions Necessary

By KITTY JO HICKMAN

With the entrance of the new quarter and the conclusion of a probably unsuccessful one, the majority of the students at Florida State college for women make firm resolutions for study.

Just to help those ambitious souls who wish to find new and better ways of study, a poll was made of 50 students chosen at random concerning the whys and wherefores of studying the light that quarter.

After a study of the figures below, we find that the average Florida State college woman studies best by taking class notes and by reading the textbook. She prefers to study in her room, but mainly because the library lights hurt her eyes. Most of her studying is done in a night after night flash which makes at least one night's study necessary. She studies an average of 23 hours a week.

How to study is very important especially in the eyes of the personnel office which, gives out a long list of "do's and don'ts" to indicate to freshmen the best methods of study.

Class notes seem to be the basis for most studying. Nineteen girls study their notes almost exclusively. Next comes reading the text books, and taking notes or underlining important passages. Fifteen girls do this. Nine girls learn by memorizing, and seven girls learn by writing down what took place in class right after the class period. Most notes are taken in the form of outlines. They are usually dated and arranged in special sections of the notebook.

First Concert Will Be Given

Cowles Will Conduct College Orchestra Wednesday

Florida State college orchestra will present its first formal program on Wednesday evening in the college auditorium. The performance is the regular fall concert which has been presented annually for many years. Walter Rael Cowles is conductor of the orchestra.

On the program for the orchestra concert are Symphony in E flat No. 9 (London) by Haydn, in Adagio, Andante, Menuetto, and Allegro con spirito; Intermezzo Romantique by Mansfredi, in Pastorale, Lamento, and Intermezzo; Suite No. 3 from "The Well-Tempered Clavichord" by Bach which was arranged for the class in instrumentation: Concerto Grosso No. 8 by Corelli, in Vivace, Largo, Vivace, and Pastorale; and Overture "Ruy Blas" Opus 95 by Mendelssohn after Victor Hugo's tragedy of the same title.

Solo parts will be played by Virginia Rouse and Helen Dahlinger, violinists, in the interpretation of Manfredi's Wellmachtkantonment; and by Freddie Lee Hall and Elizabeth Stuart, violinists, and Bettie Potter, violoncellist, in Concerto Grosso No. 8 by Corelli.

The arrangement of Bach's "well-tempered Clavichord," in Prelude 3 was done entirely by the orchestra class in instrumentation. The number was planned for string quartet, two violins, flutes, one oboes, and two clarinets Each year this class studies building and arrangements for small ensembles, under supervised direction. Students make the actual arrangements which are specially for orchestras and smaller groups of musicians. Last year was the first time such a course has been offered, and the seniors arranged No. 22 in B flat minor of Bach's "Well-Tempered Clavichord."

The orchestra cordially invites all faculty members, students, and others who are interested to attend the fall concert.

YWCA Organizes Vesper Advisers

Faculty, Students Join To Plan Programs For Vespers

Mary Lois Thomas, president of YWCA announces the newly organized vesper committee, committee on college vespers. This committee is to act in an advisory capacity and will be planned to set a number of special programs during the course of the year.

The first program arranged is a memorial service on December 4 for Miss Rose Denham, at which time they will have special choir numbers and tributes to her.

The second program is to be given by Miss Virginia Wynn, in charge of book reviews, poetry readings, and musicals.

The members of the Faculty-Student Committee on College Vespers are Mary Lois Thomas, Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, Polly Hendrix, secretary, Miss Mary Lou Bennett by Mansfredi, in Pastorale, Lamento, and Intermezzo; Suite No. 3 from "The Well-Tempered Clavichord" by Bach which was arranged for the class in instrumentation: Concerto Grosso No. 8 by Corelli, in Vivace, Largo, Vivace, and Pastorale; and Overture "Ruy Blas" Opus 95 by Mendelssohn after Victor Hugo's tragedy of the same title.

Solo parts will be played by Virginia Rouse and Helen Dahlinger, violinists, in the interpretation of Manfredi's Wellmachtkantonment; and by Freddie Lee Hall and Elizabeth Stuart, violinists, and Bettie Potter, violoncellist, in Concerto Grosso No. 8 by Corelli.

Forum Will Feature Carving Technique

Etiquette Instruction Offered By 4-H Club

All Florida State students will have an opportunity to polish up their etiquette at the meeting this evening at 6 o'clock when the 4-H club presents a forum entitled "Can You Carve a Thanksgiving Turkey?" Chief speaker of the meeting will be Miss Ruth Armistead, instructor of the Students-Alumnae building will be also present. Miss Ruth is the home economics department. who will offer suggestions for correct table etiquette.

Copies of "The Art of Carving," by Elizabeth Ellington and Miss Anna Mae Sikes, extension nutritionist of the local home demonstration office, will be distributed to members of the audience to aid in thanksgiving carving.

Immediately following the forum 4-H club members will attend a short business meeting.

Yancy Given Sophomore Cup In Convocation

Mortar Board Director Makes Presentation To Home Ec Major

First Year Since 1937 Cup Not Shared By Two

The Mortar Board award for sophomore scholarship was presented to Elizabeth Yancey in convocation Tuesday by Miss Holcombe Green, regional director of Mortar Board.

The award, a large silver loving cup, is given to the student who makes the highest average in her class for her sophomore year. Elizabeth's average was 2.96.

Home Economics Major

Elizabeth is an economics major from Umatilla, Florida. She says her main interests are history, astronomy and books. "From adventure stories to story stories" She likes all kinds of books but prefers fiction. Her grades for her freshman year averaged 2.9.

Her activities on campus include membership in the home economics club, the history club, and the Presbyterian league. While in high school she was on the basketball team and active in dramatics. She was valedictorian of her graduating class in high school and received a medal for outstanding citizenship.

Elizabeth says her ambition is to be a home economics teacher. Her hobbies are reading, sewing, and carpentry. She likes to make designs under which she designs herself. When jigsaw puzzles were all popular a few years ago she made them herself and sold them for five cents apiece.

Slightly Excited

When asked what her first impression of Florida State was, called in convocation, she said

Council Makes Refugee Plans

Religious Workers Will Attempt To Bring Student Here

Plans are being made to bring a refugee student to Florida State for the second semester which begins January 27, it was announced this week by the Religious Workers' council, sponsor for the project.

It is hoped that the council may be able to bring an English-speaking student similar to the college by that time. The organization made an effort to get such a student here last fall, but was unable to do so because of the war necessary funds.

Approximately $175 more is needed to finance the venture, which is being supported by student organizations and the denominational groups, the YWCA, sororities, individuals from both the student body and faculty, and the town churches. It will take $525 for the entire undertaking.

Those who have been appointed to serve as sponsors for Florida are Miss Miriam Wilson, Presbyterian student secretary; Dr. Ruth P. Pinner, of the psychology department; Miss Billie Ruth Curtis, Baptist student secretary, and Betty Nickerson. Appointments are pending for Robert D. Miller, council president.

Winner Of Scholastic Award

The Mortar Board scholarship cup, annually presented to the junior having the highest average for the preceding year, was awarded to Elizabeth Yancey during convocation Tuesday. Mrs. Holcombe Green, regional director of Mortar Board, is shown making the presentation.

Editor To Give Review Of War

Kilgore of "Democrat" To Speak In Bundles Campaign

John Kilgore, managing editor of the Tallahassee Daily Democrat, has been engaged as the next speaker for the "Bundles for Britain" program at Florida State college for women. He will address students, faculty and townspeople at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. December 3, in the Auditorium Conrad theater. His subject will be "An Editor Reviews the War."

Mr. Kilgore is widely known for his editorial comments, having won the editorial award offered by the Associated Dailies of Florida three times, and having been widely quoted by other newspapers.

He has served on various Florida newspaper spending the last 12 years in Tallahassee, where he has been a key observer during legislative sessions. He wrote a book entitled "240 Percent Club" about Ernest Bartel" who has attracted much comment over the state. Last summer he spent one month at the Atlanta business men's training camp, sponsored by the war department in publicizing its defense program.

The nation is in demand regularly as a speaker before different groups. He has made several addresses on American defense and on democracy, and his last address at the college was made about two weeks ago, before the Florida Association of Publicity Directors, which lunched at the college dining hall.

National Catholic Women Re-Elect McCollum Head

Mrs. J. W. McCollum, of Gainesville, who has been prominent in Florida state and national Catholic circles for many years, and one of the first state college graduates to receive the prized "Alumnae Award" several years ago, has just been re-elected president of the National Council of Catholic Women at a session held at the annual convention in Detroit.

Florida Farm Colony, Close To Gainesville, Contrasts Widely With University

By ELEANOR YOTHERS

A giant mosquito! Unfortunate: a dash of chilly weather; a tall young man wearing an overcoat that reaches hat; black and white tuxedos; swirly evening dresses; and Gainesville, Fla., on a cold, forbiddingly friendless. These are the symptoms of Florida State College for women girl associates for the week-end at the University of Florida in Gainesville.

Dances, football, and men are a terrific symptom of the week-end "Gainesville." But how many of the girls that participate in the week-end gaiety realize that one-and-one-half miles northeast of the university campus there exists another state institution? This institution is a de-ided contrast to the university resembling it only in the fact that it is governed and supported by the state of Florida.

The Florida Farm Colony established in 1921 was founded as a correction in Alachua county for the purpose of providing the proper care, protection, and segregation for the feebleminded and epileptic of Florida. These are the only two classes of people considered and they must be residents of this state. They are not under six or over twenty-one years of age.

Classes in psychology and social studies in the University of Florida summer session as well as in the academic year often include a tour of the colony in connection with their studies of the mentally deficient. During this conducted tour the students have a chance to observe and to talk to many of the 587 patients of the colony. 381 are male, and 277 female. More patients are received from Hillsborough, Duval, Dade and Polk counties than from any other sections of Florida. The colony is under the control of the Board of Control consisting of the state institutions, and J. Maxey Dell, M. D. is the superintendent. A chief physician, business manager, athletic director, dietitian, laundryman and laundress, nurses, teachers, and others make the personnel of the institution.

Previous to the founding of the colony, there were no state means for the care of Florida's feebleminded and epileptic, except to a limited extent in the Chattahoochee hospital. Today ten well-ventilated buildings house the patients in the colony. The majority are ward buildings which are generally divided into a large room for daytime use one for sleeping, and a small bathroom, a one-story fireproof hospital, accommodating 60 patients, and a cottage for the superintendent are modern of the structures. The buildings are arranged in an oval formation and are connected by colonnades. The farm and garden are located on the east and north sides of this cluster of buildings.

The main building, situated at the entrance to the colony contains the wards for the girls with the highest I. Q's and the offices of the two resident physicians. These doctors are assisted by the staff of the Gainesville hospital. An average of 570 patients per year are admitted to the colony hospital for treatment. In addition about 16 patients, not residents of Gainesville, are treated daily. The children receive special treatment twice a year.

Twenty-one per cent of the patients are epileptics As very little can be done for them except the best that the colony directors can do is to keep them under care and severity of the seizures. However, the feebleminded advocates the erecting of future buildings so constructed as to lessen the physical injuries the epileptics often receive during their attacks.

All patients must undergo complete physical examinations upon entering, and during their stay their infirmities are corrected as far as possible. A daily physical examination is also given. The Terman Revision of the Binet-Simon intelligence tests determines each individual's I. Q. This information is the basis for classification. A plan possible advances in study of work and aids them in directing the training patients. Each child admitted is given an opportunity to progress as far along academic lines as possible. Afterwards, the children are given a chance to learn something about work which they may be helping to follow should they be released from the institution.

The occupational department functions throughout the year. The winter months are devoted to study for the first four grades is carried out for those unable to progress it, but the material taught is governed mostly by the mental level of the individual. Emphasis is placed upon practical knowledge.

In the industrial division of the institution an effort is made to find some work which each adult patient can perform well. Groups are assigned to the farm, dairy, laundry, poultry yard, boiler room, kitchen, dining room, sewing room and others.

The recreational department furnishes the most pleasure for the children in the colony. A movie for a movie to be shown in the assembly hall twice a week. Radio gets in one week and the box the next. Ping pong, baseball, diamond ball, basket ball, horseshoe pitching, races, and the Boy and Girl Scout clubs are helping to improve the mental attitudes of the patients.

The farm, dairy, and poultry department is almost self-supporting, and probably will be in the next few years

The foregoing paragraphs have demonstrated how Florida provides for its unfortunate feebleminded children, but many improvements and facilities could be added in each department which would tend to raise the standard of living for the inmates and also to increase the general well-being of the individuals.

Plane Roars Wake Dorms

So you wondered what that tremendous roar was that woke you up Tuesday morning in time for you to get to breakfast on time?

According to unprejudiced, reliable feminine sources, it was caused from 12 planes—each of which contained a lieutenant instructor from Maxwell field in Montgomery, Alabama.

The instructors have been in Miami and Orlando and were supposed to have left here Tuesday. The 12 finally started out for home again today, but after flying 80 miles they turned back on account of weather conditions. In your alarm clock still out of condition?

CGA Sponsors Red Cross Move

Room-To-Room Canvass By Freshmen Closes At Suppertime

Receipts in the Red Cross drive last night amounted to $50 and indications were that a total of $150 might be reached by tonight, according to Mary Pierson, who is in charge of the students' campaign for the work on campus.

The College Government association is sponsoring a room-to-room canvass for the Red Cross and final plans are to be effective to raise the past record of low rank in contributions. The drive closes tonight.

Mart Pierson, first vice president of the College Government association, is in charge of the freshmen drive which will be of short-lasting. Mart met with the group Wednesday night to discuss final plans and to distribute the necessary materials to them.

Every floor of every dormitory was covered yesterday and will be tonight between the hours of 5 and 6 o'clock when the contributions will be appreciated but not necessary. Everything if will be eligible for membership, according to Mart.

The members will receive their buttons, stickers, and membership cards soon afterwards.

Miss Mildred Pinnegan, instructor in French at Florida State college for women has charge of the faculty contributions. Senator Leroy Collins is chairman of the Tallahassee Red Cross membership drive.

NSFA Reporter Reprints Flambeau Editorial

The NSFA Reporter, official paper of the National Student, Federation of America, in its latest issue published in November 9, has reprinted an editorial from the Florida Flambeau.

The editorial, written for the October 25 issue of the Florida State paper is entitled "Is It Worth It?" and concerns extra-curricular activities and organizations. In introducing the editorial, the Reporter says, "From an editorial in the Florida Flambeau, a Florida State College for Women comes a challenge to college extra-curricular activities."

AAUW Group Hears Becker

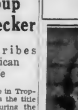
Professor Describes Central American Way Of Life

"Contemporary Culture in Tropical North America" was the head of the lecture given during the meeting of the American Association of University Women in the assembly room of the Rowena Langston Student - Alumnae building on Tuesday by Henry P. Becker, assistant professor of geography. The discussion was accompanied by the projection of pictures taken by Dr. Becker during his tour of Central America this summer.

Dr. Carmen Rogers, associate professor of English, presented the speaker and explained the series of programs planned for AAUW meetings throughout this year. The general theme of the programs is a study of American cultures. The first lecture concerned South American culture Dr. Becker's talk on Central America was the second of the series. Future programs will present various aspects of North American culture such as painting, music, literature, and religion. Among the speakers that the AAUW hopes to present are Robert Frost, T. S. Stribling, and William Crouch, all noted American authors.

"Perhaps this is our second struggle for independence, and it is indeed a cultural struggle," said Dr. Rogers. Therefore the AAUW is studying the cultures of the Western hemisphere in an effort to create understanding of the United State's neighbors in North and South America.

In his speech Mr. Becker contrasted the two cultures of Central American nations, those in the coastal lowlands and of the central highlands. He characterized the highland life as based principally upon an agricultural economy of subsistence farming in small homesteads and in vast estates worked by tenants.



The lowland life according to Mr. Becker is dominated by the exploitation of the natural resources of the region by foreign companies which produce a temporary economic development by the extraction of such commodities as oil, mahogany, and bananas. Mr. Becker emphasized the part played by American capitalists in draining these countries of their resources while removing most of the profits from the nations in which they are produced. As an example, Mr. Becker referred his audience to the book, "The Plunder Of Peru," by C. D. Kepner, Jr., and J. H. Soothill, which tells the story of the United Fruit company.

In explaining why the upland regions of the Central American republics are underdeveloped, Mr. Becker described the natural barriers of the mountainous country, the poor transportation, and the extremely low standard of living, which he believes to be before that of the Southern negro. He showed pictures of Mexican life taken during the trip there in 1938 which confirmed his statements of the miserable living conditions experienced by the peons.

Mr. Becker also contrasted the Anglo-Saxon culture of the United States with the Latin culture of the Central American nations and pointed out the difficulties to be overcomes before all American nations can come to understand one another.

In conclusion Mr. Becker stated, "It seems to me that we must be realistic in our relations with them and realize that there is a growing resentment in these countries . . . against domination by what they call the 'Colossus of the North'."

Speaker

Miss Etta Lane Matthews, assistant professor of library science, will speak on children's literature tonight in the browsing room of the college library. This is the third in a series of programs given each Friday for all students.

YWCA Will Give Informal Banquet

Thanksgiving Is Feature Of November Meeting

November meeting of the YWCA will be a banquet instead of the usual meeting which all members are invited. There will be special decorations featuring the Thanksgiving theme.

The program will be entertainment, not instruction, and the new cabinet members will be introduced. Miss Ida Brim and Miss Joanne Weaver will be in charge of the program and the decorations respectively.

The president, Mary Lois Thomas, requests that all members who can come to the banquet leave their names on the list posted on the bulletin board in Westcott building. She also urges that all members make arrangements to attend.

On Thursday the YWCA newsletter will be distributed containing all the news and activities of the month. It is under the direction of Marie Manley and is illustrated by Mary Anna MacBride.

up in a bull session." And while most students demand quiet, two or three will be found in the corridors accompanying their studying.

Science's hazy half of the girl interviewed like to study at night, and 18 of those study after last light bell. Only a few girls do any part of their studying in the afternoon. Five study between classes because the tendency to concentrate is not broken. Three students find time for study for a week-ends only, and two girls are found concentrating in their early classes. Five girls say that they study when they can find time from meetings and rehearsals—this is mainly in the mornings. Eight girls claim, with need for light flash.

One student says, "I like to study after rec until 9:45. Then I go to the Spic for a cup of coffee and go back home refreshed to study until 12 or 1 o'clock."

Another says, "I like to study in the Spic for a cup of coffee and go back home refreshed to study until 12 or 1 o'clock."

Two girls go to the Spic for personal office prescriptions, one finds the advice is to study not more than outside of class for every hour in class. This would be about 32 hours a week.

However, upon looking at the results of the survey one finds only four students who study more than 30 hours a week. Three of these girls study between 30 and 35 hours a week, and the other one studies 36 hours a week. Thirteen girls study between 20 and 25 hours a week; nine study between 15 to 20 hours a week, eight study from 10 to 30 hours a week; five people, from 5 to 10 hours a week; and one girl, a freshman, studies only four hours a week.

Most girls, when asked about hours studied per week gave the average number of hours, but said that the figures were usually less during the first part of the quarter and more during the exam week.

In contrast, however, one girl says, "I cram at the beginning of the semester when I'm in the mood and while the teachers lay down the law. Then I usually drift along until time for quarterlies when I review what I can depend upon my reputation for the rest."

In order to study as many hours per week as necessary, all but 18 girls of the 50 take at least one light out a week. Fifteen girls get an average of one light out a week, and 12 get two a week. Eight girls stay out last light flash at least three times a week and one girl stays five nights a week. Two girls manage to study after midnight six times a week, and one girl studies after 12 every night.

Former Student Publishes Book

Author Dies As Her Book On Home Economics Goes to Press

The late Dr. Helen M. Carter, Ph. D., former Florida State college student from Pensacola, is the author of a new book entitled, "Home Economics and the College Student," recently published by Farrar and Rinehart, Inc.

Dr. Carter graduated from this college with a B. S. degree in 1913, and with an M. S. degree in 1914. For a time she was a member of the faculty in the school of home economics and went from here to Columbia University where she became head of the department of home economics. Dr. Carter was one of Florida State college's most distinguished alumnae, and was chosen for the win the Alumnae Reward of Merit.

She died just as her book went to press.

Florida Farm Colony Contrasts With U. of F.

for residents, more buildings are needed in order to isolate patients with contagious diseases; social workers must be added to the colony staff for the purpose of collecting personal information about newly admitted patients and about the adjustment to their environment of those on parole. The need for sterilization among feebleminded everywhere is observed by Dr. Dell, a strong believer in the eugenics work, a beauty shop for the girls, and a swimming pool would do much in bettering the health of Florida's feebleminded.

The majority of the colony the observer receives both general and detailed impressions. In the case of morons, the women seem far more abnormal, physically, than the men. Unsightly appearance, obese, and have straight hair. The physique of the men are severe, slightly inclined toward clumsiness, however.

The morons type of patient usually seems normal to an observer at the first glance, but upon closer scrutiny of the features and after observing the actions of the person, the outsider realises that he is "something wrong."

In the case of the imbecile and idiot patients, however, it is easy to distinguish them from normal humans. Some extreme examples are found in the types inspired themselves firmly on the minds of all who see them. The airplane boy, for instance, is a thin deformed piece of humanity. He has short, curly hair, bulging eyes, and a beak nose. He has been continually repeating the same airplane sounds and odd motions which have won him the title of airplane boy. The frail fourteen-year-old indulges in the most childish behaviors. His only pastime in life is to sit on the floor, keep his head twisted to the right, and in rythmic movements to bend it down to the floor, to constantly rub his hands, and to utter grotesque grunts of grunts.

A prime example of the extreme helplessness of idiots is illustrated by the case of a fourteen-year-old hydrocephalic girl. In the colony she a little excited," she said. "I knew what my grades were, but I didn't know what chance I had for receiving the award. The thought everyone must have been able to hear her heart beating as she walked down to the stage.

Some of her friends were grinning more than she was as she left the stage. One looked as if she had made the award and the other looked as if she had earned it. When her picture was being taken after convocation, all of her nervous strain evaporated and joked about it.

This is the first time since 1937 that the award has been presented to a single girl. Frances Doulan received it at this time. In 1935, Lyrtle Thompson and Ruth Rogers were joint recipients of the honor and last year Evelyn Strickland and Wilma Johns were presented with the cup. Elizabeth will be allowed to keep the cup in her room for the remainder of the year. Next year it will be presented to the sophomore who makes the highest grades this year. Elizabeth's name is engraved on the cup.

Pianist, Aided By Dictionary, Gives Impression Of America

Sari Biro Says All Americans Have Good Time, Aren't Conscious of Reality of War

By MARY ANNA HAMPTON

To be received by New York music critics as among the top group of contemporary pianists artists within a year after arriving in America, to have the unstinted acclaim of the thousands who have composed her audiences, and yet to be in her twenties, charming, eager, and vibrantly keen to enlarge her environment, seems incompatible.

Sari Biro, Hungarian keyboard artist who gave two performances at the college last Monday and Thursday nights under the sponsorship of the college Artist series, has been in America only a year. In that time she has not only completely mastered the English language, but has established herself in New York's testing ground, Town Hall, and has, at the point in "I have grown ten years in this year."

"It is so different in Hungary after I study. There is no way to compare your great cellers here with European cellers." Miss Biro was graduated from the Royal Academy of Music in Budapest, completed the courses in 3 years instead of the usual five.

"I have been very lucky to be American. I love to be here—the American people are so kind to me. I never live in Europe as I used to again." Miss Biro said, trying very hard to find the right words to express her thoughts.

Her English is not very much improved since her arrival. Her vocabulary, though adequate for ordinary conversation, is not yet adequate for the more intricate ideas she wishes to express. She "loves babes" and is engaged in studying English with her particular favorite being the mimosa, which grows on the hospital she has in a crib, having the body of an infant and an intelligence of head five or six months greater. Lillian was born with this deformity, a child of very well-to-do parents, she has been given the best of care, and on her care and on skin grafts. As she looks at her face she takes up so much room she has an eye on either side of her head. The nurses have been taught to be quite conscious of the fact that they must not call attention to her and further apart. Lillian's feebleminded child is rather unusual, seems equally as intelligent as that of an ordinary child of ten. Her interests are those found in the schoolrooms where the three classes are studying, is encouraged to sing, write letters to her family, and to participate in they are capable of. The teacher informs visitors that there is no possibility of growth in which she cannot find some particular ability to develop, sing, draw, or similar attributes.

In the epileptic wards as in the other wards, the patients are physically sound and seem to take little interest in their fellow inmates or the visitors.

The Boys' Club of the Farm Colony a person cannot help but wonder at the many killings and sterilization of the feebleminded when there can be a great benefit to mankind. A feeling of depression accompanies the individual after a visit to the colony and sentiment favoring that method that would be used to vent the existence in the future of such individuals that now inhabit the Farm Colony."

French Riviera. "They are hard to—but so very beautiful."

In reply to the question of what sort of advice she might offer ambitious young pianists desiring to become successful, she said:

"Some ambitious students practice too diligently, and try too hard to learn a selection as the teacher interprets it. Everything comes from hearing; I hear the song as I think it and play it as I am hearing it inside." But then she added, "I never be able to play just what I am hearing."

She continued to say that the student, more than being able to feel or "hear" the selection in his mind, must have the stamina to work hard also. She was emphatic on demonstrating the method by whose parents push him to play when he is tired, and not at all sure when he is too young to have received the thorough drilling in harmony and the many exercises these pieces can be mastered. "All children want to play big things over here, and they play them with no children."

She told how many parents have brought their young musicians here to Miss Biro to be prepared for her. The children often present remarkable talent and evidences of long practice, although the pieces were rendered with little feeling for the real spirit of fundamental skills.

A centrast to the type of young musician, she mentioned a pupil of hers in New York, a little French prodigy, not yet ten years old. Because of rigid training in the fundamentals of technique her music is well interpreted although not yet thought out.

Miss Biro then referred to a comment on the vastly different impressions received by various types of moods of American people as contrasted with Europeans.

The conservative, serious minded European, she said, are "not much—not much gay." She contrasted Americans. "In our country it is very hard to find a person who do not say the truth."

As for what has observed Americans, she feels that they are seldom serious minded or conscious of the reality of life. Design do they begin to realize its seriousness.

"In America all have a good and wonderful time. Everything is ed. "Every one leads an independ- life." They are also continued and Americans make a effort off to have a maid." In her country rarely do have several maids in a

When Miss Biro apologized for her inability to express herself well, saying "I say what I can, but not what I should," One reporter murmured that she was having marvelous use of the same trouble in her French conversation. Miss Biro laughingly replied, "Why do you want to speak a foreign language when you can speak English?"

French Society Plans Program

Meeting Will Feature Songs, Talk About French Sports

A program including two new French songs and a talk on French sports will feature the semi-monthly meeting of the French club today at 5 o'clock in Broward lounge, according to Lell Landis, program chairman. The meeting is open to the public, and all students who wish to receive their pins are asked to join before the holidays.

Final plans for the showing of "Mayerling" Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock in the Augusta Conroy of the Tallahassee public library will be completed at this meeting. The showing is free for the setting the stity of Vienna. The theme is the doomed love story of the archduke, Rudolph and Baroness Marie Betsera. Charles Boyer, starring in the despotic bureaucracy of Franz Joseph and the empty ritual of the court, she has become a pet unable to surmount the traditions of his caste. The lack of balance of his heredity. Rumored Jewish blood, his lonely environment and his love for Marie Vetsera form the basis for the story.

Danielle Darrieux and Charles Boyer, playing the leads in the picture, have been starred in fifteen picture critics for their fine performances. The picture which was generally conceded to be one of the most distinguished pictures of recent years, is the first picture from the novel "Idyl's End" by Claude Anet and directed by Anatole Litvak.

Lake Bradford To The Rescue As Pump Fails

Scarcity Of Water Tops Camp Weekend During Armistice

The lake water of Lake Bradford, Camp Flambeau, proved helpful in more ways than one during the weekend of Armistice holidays, when the girls had spent the weekend at camp must have carried as large a supply of water off when the camp's pump refused to work.

However, the girls didn't rely upon lake water alone for their supply, but made the trip daily for part of it, and obtained part from Levy's store.

The girls must think that these campers were satisfied with having to "rough it," as they reserved for them. Oh, no. They must make themselves more thirsty than ever by mixing their salt and sugar at meal times. Proving a hunch might prove helpful in the sugar bowl this time.

Another water catastrophe took place Monday morning when a fire call for the camp caused by a storm in the middle of the chain of lakes. Upon the beaching of the canoe the pathetic sight of a ride back to the camp to inform the others of the mishap Here- ous indigestion? Yes. That night. to top off this eventful week- end the campers awoke Tuesday morning at 5:45 o'clock. The trust was to have been in front of the cabins at 6:30, but wasn't. The only available lake water for the campers could have used to phone for transportation was out of order. In case you're worried about what happened to our poor unfortunates—well, reached classes safely, two of them via a truck ride).

Camping Class Will Beautify College Camp

Group Will Finish Surf Boards, Make Key To "Tapestry"

Contributions will be made toward the beautification of the college camp this week-end by the Camp Leadership Class on its second weekend visit this Saturday and Sunday, according to Miss Katherine Montgomery, director of physical education.

"In past years classes have contributed a totem pole, carved and painted by hand, depicting Indian symbols the history of the camp," said Miss Montgomery. "This totem pole stands in the council ring which was also constructed by a Camp Leadership class." This year's class has widened the circle so that several hundred may be seated for campfire programs. Another contribution of past classes has been the settlement, where outdoor camping activities can take place. Use of the settlement has been renewed this year.

In the large camp house, over the fireplace, hangs a "tapestry," on which in Indian symbols indicates the values to be derived from camping experience and the activities of camping. The class plans to interpret these symbols for the public by placing a key beside the wall-hanging.

In the process of construction are two surf-boards which will be completed and painted in garnet and gold and a second chair. Indian symbols assin will be used together with the college flambeaux.

Seating 1100, this modernistic building has been called "the newest and best between Jacksonville and Jacksonville" and "the nicest south of Atlanta."

Wednesday the first picture will be shown in this auditorium. It will be "The Mark of Zorro" with Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell and Basil Rathbone. Prices will be the same as the State theater at the present time and a complete revision of the State policy will go into effect.

The program for the State theater from now on will be a double feature Sunday and Monday; first run pictures brought back for Tuesday and Wednesday; a revival picture Thursday and a double feature, a western and a good action picture Friday and Saturday.

A. P. Taller, at present manager of the State theater, will be in the future city manager and W. P. Neel will be State theater manager.

The new Florida theater building consists of a lobby, ticket booth, rooms, candy and cigarette counter (no popcorn will be sold), large women's rest room and balcony, stage, projection room, manager's office, and other necessary rooms.

Insects Given To Zoologists

Scorpions, moles and such creatures may be common pests to most of us but the zoology department proudly boasts a whip-tailed scorpion and a ground mole among its most recent acquisitions.

Eita La Roe donated the scorpion, having found it in his cellar. Some people say that the scorpion is poisonous but this is mere legend. The case here is proof that its bite has ever killed anyone, according to Miss Enda Devinny, of the zoology department. Another name for the scorpion is the pranipus. It is found only in the southeastern parts of the United States.

The gift of the ground mole came from Dr. Venila Shores, history professor. Dr. Shores found the mole tearing up her front yard and caught it for the zoology department.

Does Armistice Mean "Peace"?

Vacationists Bemoan Fact That Holidays Bring More Blues And Exhaustion Than Joy, or Popularity

BY MITZIE JOY SOLOMON

"I've got a right to sing the blues. I've got a right to feel low-down—" This was the melody plaintively wailed by many a fair co-ed who had been spending these past few days upon her return from the Armistice vacation.

Of the 50 girls interviewed, there was a remarkable similarity in their responses to "How do you feel now after your Armistice vacation?" "Inexpressibly sad and utterly exhausted." One usually sparkling girl gazed progstly from under heavy eyelids and mumbled, "I feel as if I haven't slept for days and days." and then she laughingly added, "and so I have!!!"

Twelve of the 50 girls were really sassies, who just couldn't "take it." They attributed their weary footsteps along the worn path to the infirmary and spent all of Tuesday in blissful oblivion. Three of these girls agreed that bells must have rung and people must have gone by, but if they did, it didn't bother them. Two of the girls who went to the infirmary said that the melodious sounds of snoring ranging from the top to the very bottom of the scale disturbed them so much that they decided that class would be much more peaceful. At least their professors' voices were soothing.

It was generally admitted that many of the girls slept through their classes, and were really amazed at their ability even to find their class rooms. One girl said that she had been completely amazed when after class had been dismissed she just remained deeply in blissful slumber. Her instructor tapped her gently on the shoulder and apologized for waking her, but said that someone occupied that same seat the next hour, or he surely wouldn't have disturbed her. The girls agreed that most of their professors were very generous and tolerant, although one instructor gave a "pop" quiz to help wake up her students.

One rather chubby girl said that her main problem was choosing between eating to the dining room for meals or just sleeping. Although she just loved to eat, she couldn't keep her eyes open long enough even to see the food, so she decided upon sleeping, out of sheer necessity.

There were two vivacious freshmen who said that their excitement and good spirits were sustained for almost two days after they returned, but then quite suddenly they felt perfectly limp and lifeless. They finally decided that it was due to lack of sleep; so they closed their doors, placed chairs against them to prevent their usually welcome guests from entering and to sleep they went.

It was the concensus of opinion that what really was needed was another vacation to allow for some measure of recuperation. Five of the girls, however, said that their vacation has enabled them to start working again with refreshed minds. However, one maintained, "Right now I feel as if I would have felt much better if I hadn't gone away to come back."

Half of the girls said that they were more homesick now than they were when they first came to college, and they had to become orientated all over again. When they finally felt better, D's were distributed, and now they were right back to where they had started.

Three sorority sisters said that their coming back was merely a preliminary for getting ready for the next affair, and although they were a bit the worse for lack of sleep, they were very ready to start all over again.

One of the best parts of the weekend, it was agreed, were the "bull" sessions held afterward at colleges, where absolutely everything is recalled to mind including a very critical estimate of "that ugly gown Joan wore" or "how perfectly divine Alice looked in her blue net."

Dates are discussed and then re-discussed. Of course, all matters of prime interest such as: who was bidded for Phi Frolic, who'll receive the envious attention of the more unfortunate souls whose dates didn't rate.

Tarpon Club Asked To Give Exhibition

An invitation has just come to the Tarpon club asking them to swim on December 27, at the annual meeting of the National Aquatic Forum at Fort Lauderdale. Ahead of the girls are expected to attend, but it has not been decided for sure who they will be. The Grantland Rice Sportlight of the Tarpon club made last year will be shown at this meeting.

Miss Marjorie Mayer, swimming instructor here, has been asked to speak to the forum which will meet in Fort Lauderdale from December 25 until the 29.

At this same time there will be the big east-west swimming meet attended by swimming teachers and leading swimmers from all over the state. This is the second time in the last few years that the Tarpon club has been invited to demonstrate formation swimming at an aquatic meet.

Gainesville Team Will Swim Here

The University of Florida swimming team will appear here November 22 in a playnight exhibition of speed and form swimming, stunts, and diving. The Gators will be guests of the Tarpon club, several members of which will swim with them.

Jean Wood, Marion Swanson, Ruth Smith, Irene Hoke, Irene Friend, and Dennes Ecker will take part in the speed swimming. Jean and Irene Friend Dennes Ecker in the diving exhibitions.

The Tarpons will use the newly devised lighted harmony of their form swimming for the first time on this occasion. A serial consisting of Irene Hoke, Irene Friend, Dennes Ecker, Patsy Robert, Nancy Dunn Chaffee, and Marion Swanson will swim with the lights, and Peggy Barker will be on call as substitute.

Mystery Cloaks Pageant Theme

Tarpons To Swim Twice For Guests, Once For Students

Mystery surrounds the theme of the Tarpon club's thanksgiving pageant this year but it will be built on a patriotic note, according to limited statements by members of the club.

The main showings of the pageant will be given for alumnae and parents on November 28 and 29 at 8 o'clock in the gymnasium but students will be admitted only if extra room is left in the balcony.

A dress rehearsal of the pageant will take place on November 22 at 8 o'clock, which students are invited to attend. A repeat performance for students may be scheduled sometime after Thanksgiving, but the date has not yet been set.

About 25 members and minnows of the club will take swim in the pageant.

Play Features 'Trojan Horse'

Florida High Schedules 'American Passport' For This Month

Rehearsals are proceeding at a rapid rate for the Florida high school play, a sparkling three-act comedy by Dana Thomas which will be presented by the junior and senior classes of Florida high school on November 21 and 22 in the Augusta Conradt theater.

The story concerns an American father who is greatly worried about the "Trojan horse" and subsequent finds, to quote his own words, that he is "feeding three of her ponies in his own home." The play is woven in the fabric of today's problems and today's challenge facing America, yet it is bound together with laughter and dry humor.

The cast includes Mac Withers as Ed Hamilton; Doris Maise as Amelia, the 12-year-old Jack Madigan as Dick, the son; Mary Catherine Spear as Judy, the older daughter; Ruth Sherman as Sybil Jennings, in love with Dick The role of Bertha Hamilton, the mother, is played by Mary Mc-Earn; that of Bill Wilson, by Bobby Russ; Aunt Jen, Mr. Hamilton's aunt, by Mary Ann Waller; Mrs. Schwartz, a neighbor, by Sylvia Robbins, and Mr. Cyrus, father's employer, is portrayed by Bill Messer.

The play is under the direction of Marie Crouch of Florida State college and supervised by Ralph Donaldson.

Mayer Holds Tennis Lead

Hall, Harper Challenge Champion In Final Week of Play

The ladder tennis tournament is running in its last week of play with Pat Mayer, who plays a fast, dynamic game of tennis, still on top of the round. Close on her heels are Starling Hall and Cecelia Harper. If one of these two does not topple Pat from her lead before next week, she will be the champion player of the school, as far as this tournament is concerned.

Players in order of their place on the ladder are: Pat Mayer, Cecelia Harper, Starling Hall, Mary Jane Medlin, Marcy MacKintosh, Lib Moore, Minnie Lou Moore, Pat Kasmarsh, Inez Hoke, Ethel Fields, Marion Prevling, Paulette Nixon, Margaret Carter, Betty Collier, Nancy Lee Doegrit, Elisabeth Eisard, Chillsbath, Orleme Cox, Peaches McKay, Catherine Stimson, Barbara Barron, Phil Eckland, Wayles Wood, Doris Morford, and Rachel Erwin.

Brown Reveals Floorshow Plan

Tapdance Specialties Will Be Feature Of Playnight

A special floorshow will be featured at the regular playnight tonight at the gymnasium. The floorshow will specialize in song and group tap dancing with routine-originated on this campus by students in Miss Nellie Bond Dickinson's advanced classes. Staging of the routines will be done by the girls doing the dances.

"Boy Meets Girl," is the title of the first number which will be done by Jeanne Colley and Nancy Lee Doegrit. Next will be "Typical Cuba" by Irene Friend and Cornelia Watson.

As a grand finale 26 girls will give an extra-sagaitly staged military tap. Girls who will tap in this number are: Ellen Baldwin, Louise Bateman, Virginia Berfield, Dawn Cashi, Jeanne Colley, Florence Demuy, Nancy Lee Doegrit, Frances Estelle, Irene Fremd, Anne Gaylord, Peggie Gerach, Carmen Granzo, Elena Mae Howard, Sadie Lewis, Dorothy Luten, Mary Fay McClanahan, Brenelle Mobley, Helen Morrison, Pat Patterson, Mary Rhame, Audrey Jean Stephens, Tina Van Brunt, Doris Wainwright, Cornelia Anne Watson, Eunice Worn, Mary Nell Yon, and Marjorie Silks. All dances will be done in costume.

Hostesses for the Playnight, which will include the revelar effects of ping pong, dancing and badminton, are members of the Playnight committee. Mortar Board will sell drinks.

Newly Organized Archery Club Will Hold Tryouts

Tryouts for membership in the archery club will be held on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday afternoons from November 13 to November 22 between 4:30 and 5:30 o'clock at the archery range. All interested interested in archery are invited to compete.

The Archery club has been organized on this campus is under the sponsorship of Miss Ruth Lehmann, head of the physical education. There has been no election of officers as yet, however, Bus Erwin is the acting president.

The purpose of the club is to sponsor an archery tie in with collegiate meets during the coming year. To become a member a score of 200 has to be made on a Columbia Round. This round consists of 24 arrows shot from the 30, 40, and 50-yard line.

HE BOWLS WITH EXTRA SPEED AND EXTRA POWER

SMOKES CAMELS FOR EXTRA PLEASURE

His "Fireball" made him a bowling champion. Slower burning won Joe Norris to Camel cigarettes

WHAT A MAN in a bowling alley! He was the "big" wonder" a decade ago. Today, with a long list of sensational titles at his belt, the bowling world still wonders just how he gets such pin-blasting power and such baffling control . . . such extra power and extra control!

No question, though, how Joe Norris gets the extras in his cigarettes. Burning at the slower-burning brand . . . Camel . . . for extra mildness and found several other pleasing extras as well, including extra smoking.

Slower burning . . . costlier tobaccos—what pleasure they can add to smoking! More mildness and coolness because Camels are free from the irritating effects of sno-fast burning. More flavor—because slow burning lets the flavor come through. And along with extra pleasure—extra smoking per pack (see below, right).

Promethus Bound

Back in the harness after a week in the election at even yet our feet aren't steady. The things that happened on and around the Associated Collegiate Press convention in Detroit are still too fresh to be salted down and organized are only a blur. Nevertheless on the basis of the odd minutes here and there since Monday we've had a chance to do a little reflecting about the convention itself and the college press in general.

It all began with Lee White's talk on "How Much Freedom for the College Press?" White is the director of public relations for the Detroit News and a former editor of the Michigan Daily, and he has known the college press, for him, "freedom of the press does not mean that every individual may say exactly what he pleases. A college newspaper is the property of the university—the institution as a whole, physically, financially, and students which constitute the human element. In addition, it belongs to the community, church, state, and all the other social institutions which make possible the existence of the university. . . . Students with professional aspirations want their college experience in journalism to be as excellent as it can possibly be. It can be this only if the publication fulfills its obligation of fair utterance to the community, which has given it birth, and it must adhere to the best standards of the best journalism." He concluded, "Success in the professional field of journalism depends on being a grade of a disciplined school of journalism, and although you are granted freedom of speech, you will find yourself less independent than you would like to be."

White's words are thinking words, especially for us for whom they are intended. As other newspapers, the Flambeau finds that more than one editor actually and figuratively ties our hands and we at times grow weary trying to prevent the strings from binding us. We want to stick here because as White, a staunch believer in the freedom of inquiry and expression, upholds, there can be no worse tragedy than that the serious impulses of youth. Remembering our obligations to our college community, we went to keep our paper a service to the campus and a training ground for journalists.

Talking with other delegates we found that college papers everywhere also have their ties and strings. We breathed a sigh of relief when we talked to the editor of a faculty-sponsor paper whose staff ceased to stories end turned them over to the sponsor who then compiled her paper. We were safe there. We wrote our own stories and headlines and galleys and suffered, but we were the ones who were learning newspaper work, not the teacher.

And that's as it should be. Newspapers that kept putting itself on the back because it was able to publish issues four and five times a week. That paper we found existed under the direct control of the journalism department, and all the issues were dummied by the published material. Somehow they seemed to have the saddest plight of all. Their hands were tied, but if they were tied they were tied by the seemed proud of a technical triumph won at the expense of their own freedom of expression and initiative. Perhaps that is to be preferred: stubbornly to disagree. We'd rather bump our heads against the wall all year long fighting to maintain all college traditions than to see our heads on the platter of our strings.

In the roundtable discussion on editorials at the convention, the speaker, Wesley Menner, associate professor of journalism at the University of Michigan, said the duty of the editor is to reflect the intelligence of the campus. We flinch a little at the task he gives us. It hits in the head so many of our petty little thoughts, our silly orchids, and our saucily onions. It's not easy to think clearly on every issue that appears. We can't expect to, but we are willing to fight for the privilege of trying.

A President Speaks

The latest issue of the NSFA Reporter, official publication of the National Student Federation of America, carries a letter written by a former president of our student body and also past president of the Federation, Mary Jeanne McKay, which we reprint here:

"Recently I read in the newspapers a story in which a college president denied a group of students the right to hold a political discussion meeting on their campus, in spite of the fact that this is an election year in which interest in such matters is unusually keen, and that the meeting involved one of our two major accepted parties. In explanation of his reason, he was quoted as saying, 'We do not discuss controversial issues on this campus.'"

"What a picture that description of his college paints! Its day-by-day assertion Einstein's theories in his higher mathematics classes! Can they discuss Darwin's teachings? How about the economic theories which are held by this man in? The very idea that he personally has the power to designate areas of thought and discussion, and that he can so autocratically control his students' wishes, suggests authoritarianism in one of its worst forms. And yet, for the most part, our citizenry relies upon such an atmosphere to produce the leadership and the vision necessary to preserve our democratic way of life.

"There are too many colleges like this one in our land—too many which have the questioning mind, the unorthodox thinkers—in unacceptable numbers and with unacceptable views; and where the ideal of a cooperative community in which all groups share in responsibility does not exist. For only precisely these reasons, students themselves must take a major role in creating the democratic ideal of the future. It is not enough to ship, any other, we see the students of our lands seriously hampered in their efforts, we American students must wake up to the challenge and accept this responsibility. How comforting is the thought that our wisdom and foresight will be manifested before we have joined together and have formed a national student organization dedicated to helping us to become better citizens. It is the necessary useful and active life for the National Student Federation.

Sincerely yours,
Mary Jeanne McKay.

Books--Friends

This is Book Week. Good Books—Good Friends—that's the theme for this year. The City of Paris, in which we have our Book Week, probably the nearest to college students, was started in 1919 by Franklin K. Mathiews, librarian of the Boy Scouts of America. He interested other librarians in the idea of devoting a particular seven day period each year, mid-fall between the summer and Christmas holidays, to stressing books for boys. Finally the term broadened to Children's Book Week, and it is the week children's has been dropped. It is a week for all.

According to the editorial forum of the Library Journal, the business of Book Week is to bring a child and a book or library together in an exciting opportunity to introduce one group after another to delightful old friends, to arouse in the child a curiosity to read. Not teachers and mothers, college girls should be interested not only in Book Week for them, but for the whole year. Their professional background will be their responsibility. A solid backing in Good Books—Good Friends is a valuable investment in living for everyone.

"In spite of modern theories to the contrary, a single standard of behavior for men and women is necessary. It is not a question of being modern or old-fashioned. Fundamental sex differences between men and women haven't been changed by the centuries, and the girl who conducts herself with the same freedom men do is only asking for trouble." Dr. Nora Winther, professor at the University of Minnesota, concludes that more than anyone else, differences between feminine and masculine behavior.—ACP.

Unless we are willing to claim or admit that the population of this country is es a whole of an inferior type or that its leadership is poor, we are forced to conclude that we are not weep over the fact that the lowly classes are contributing much to the population. In fact, if it were not for the lowly classes and their other so-called upper classes would become a permanently diminishing segment of the population." Dr. Constantine Panunzio, associate professor of sociology at the University of California, denies it is a calamity that the poor have the most hebies.—ACP.

"People in Central and South America hate North Americans. They still think of America in terms of Yankee, which is still far worse than the connotations carries here. If the United States is to get the confidence of the South American countries the people here must make an effort to learn the Spanish and the human beings without dollar marks and, above all, are not arrogant. They resent the fact that you do not speak their language because they think you consider Spanish nonnecessary, and many of them attribute arrogance to ignorance. The best tool for winning their friendship is to learn their language." The ease in behalf of the Spanish language is given a new twist by Jean Aubrel, professor of romance languages at Presbyterian college.—ACP.

Collegiate Comebacks

"Guardian Angels, love will send thee—" (Where the devil were they?)

Skipping lightly over the Georgia-Florida game. (There is a Santa Claus.) we must not mention an incident that gave us renewed faith in modern youth. We were walking down Main after the game watching all the mad, mad gaiety when we heard a loud whoop coming from between slightly bewildered cars diving to and around it. Being inquisitive, we watched the progress of the yell. It dashed in and around and under cars until it approached a likely looking blonde. "Look," it said as it grabbed the girl by the ankle and thrust a huge shoe and her foot. "We've found Cinderella!" When last seen, the yell was perusing a red-head. Brunettes just don't have any luck.

And still on the subject of the most intelligent comment we heard the whole time we were there and Cinderella don't go very well together, do they?"

We have a feeling that this business of advertising Mussolini as an Alumnae rather than a Pal's weekend will hit quite a blight off the young girl athletes. We always did think that worrying about whether your wall-mate during roommate was going to offer you a cigarette in front of your family who is so proud of little you hadn't noticed, and Cesar can't go very well together, do they?"

An upperclassman who's been cherishing a rather gauche faculty idea that Florida State College has spent the better part of the week dating until bemoaning the advent of reversible hooks. It seems that seeing the Younger Generation in backward bodices like Mademoiselle Red Riding Hood's bonnet by out of style like a recently wrung out Apple Mary.

"Daddy, will you sign my report card, please?"

It was a quite work, but the proud father of the precocious brunette was so flattered that he came through anyway.

Oh, well, one method of attack is as good as another.

Now that unsatisfactories have come out and we're all on, or we're not on pro, we can only say, "Ah, ah!"

We were rudely awakened Tuesday morning by the arrival by squadrons of planes that sounded as though they were flying about two feet above our heads. Our first and only thought was to dash for the nearest bomb proof shelter, but at the roommate reassured us that the planes were merely those owned by the glamorous cadets to our west. We were glad to note that Pensacola was still there, though. We only wish that they'd arrive in convertibles instead of bombers.

Of The World

By MARY CELESTE HARDEE

The Rome half of the Rome-Berlin Axis has shown itself to be inferior to its enemy on land, on water, and in the air this past week. Mussolini's troop made a howling failure of their march into Greece, for they were routed out in confusion and disorder. Contrary to the wish of those expected, the Greeks resisted and proved to be good fighters in contrast to the lack of skill displayed by their enemy. The Greeks believe that a plan was afoot for the overthrow of the Greek government at the exact time when the Italians marched in. The rebels were to take over the government and the Italian troops and air forces were to terrorize the people into submission. But the revolution did not occur. The Italians attacked and at first won easily. Then the Greeks launched a counter-attack and soon had driven the Italians from that territory they had occupied during the first few days of the fighting. The tide of battle was turned in favor of the Greeks by the expert fighting of the Greek mountain troops, the Evzones, who reached the Albanian region in time to rout the Italians.

The fighting is still going on. As this is written every day win their territory from the Italian troops. Added to the Greek Air Force they have forced their enemy back still farther into Albania.

Mussolini suffered another great blow when the battleship Littorio of his total battleships were considerably crushed by the British. Here is an attack on the Italian naval base of Taranto. It is thought that the Littorio will not take part in the raids, for they have been damaged so badly that the battleships than bombing ships. In addition to the crippling of the battleship Littorio, Britain also sunk a supply ship, damaged a cruiser and destroyed a destroyer. The fact that so much of Mussolini's fleet was damaged will greatly influence the balance of Mediterranean naval power in favor of Great Britain.

Armistice day—a day when Britishers thought perhaps the Nazis would be driven out of their air-raids and observe to some extent the armistice between German and Allied forces on November 11, 1918—found the first air-raid in which the Britishers planes participated with the Germans. But the weather bothered and soon proves their skill as pilots and bombers. Nevertheless British fighters observed that there was little fun in shooting down an Italian—they knew beforehand they'd get up no resistance.

At least one member of Thomas' audience, the editorial writer of the Hillsdale college newspaper, agreed wholeheartedly. He acknowledges his approval by saying: "He holds no illusions that he and a elected, so he is motivated by an ideal. Year after year a few more rules are gained. Thomas is well aware of the fact that the country is not ready for socialism, something which will be accomplished in a Democracy. He knows that by a slow movement, so he writes and lectures with doctrine, as an educator. So, when Socialism arrives, it will not be by bloody revolution, but Questions: What type of Artist series programs do you like best? the least? Would you rather see a ballet? a play? a concert? why? what?

In answer to the above questions the majority of students said they preferred the musical programs in general, but the Metropolitan Opera ranked as a close second. Most of the students expressed dislikes, but those who did selected piano recitals as the least favorite. A good deal of interest was expressed in the programs previous to its presentation, and the effectiveness of the attributing tickets were the changes suggested by the students.

Sara Sheldon: "I am most interested in instruments; therefore I like the symphonic orchestra programs, mainly orchestra and ensemble. I prefer groups to individuals or soloists. I am not in favor of any changes."

Gwendolyn James: "I like the operatic programs best, and am especially looking forward to the ones coming this year. I do not have any changes in the programs."

Marsel Rice: "I prefer individual programs because I enjoy the variety the programs as they are."

Betty Jane Bendall: "Musicals are my favorites. I should like to see some dancing included in the programs, but aside from this I don't think any changes are necessary."

Betty Thornton: "Musicals are my favorite Artist series programs. I guess, but as I'm a freshman and haven't seen very many types, I think like something else better. A dance recital would make a nice addition to the series."

Jane Schultz: "Musicals and dancing. I thought the Martine Dubois program was fine. I think any changes are necessary, but I would like to see some again."

Harriet McWherter: "I like the orchestras. I'd like to see more than one type of piano recital. I don't advocate any changes."

Ovella Linton: "I'm partial to symphony orchestras and ballet, probably because I like symphonic music. I thought Dickson very much last year and I definitely enjoyed the musical side of the programs. The forthcoming operas will be real treats. No changes are needed except the addition of more renowned persons for the programs. People will attend if this is done."

Vivienne Rainey: "Since I am a music major I find everything that has to do with music. I like musical programs better than I do the speech programs for this reason. I do enjoy the dramatic productions, however. I liked Miss Bird and I'm looking forward to the operas. I don't see that anything needs changing and I like the idea of the performances at night."

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK

Contemporary Student Thought . . .

By DORIS CARTER

Norman Thomas, Socialist party leader, flatly condemned conscription in a responsible audience at Hillsdale college, Michigan, during a recent non-political meeting. "I am against conscription because it means militarism," he declared that sooner or later our country will be forced to actively fight for our democracy, but that we do not believe that the crisis will be here within the next six months. "Tin-Pan" Pan-Americanism is the result our American colleges and universities are making in the advancement of friendliness and understanding relationship. One or two South American guests are being entertained at every Pan-American week-end. Everyone shakes hands with those he has not met and learns the basic quest with the self-complacent attitude that we are better off than Pan-Americanism. "Steaks ice cream and cake, coffee, stiff conversation and superficial thoughts and words will never help world relationships," believes the editor. Real Pan-American friendliness, says Thomas, only through the efforts of both continents to understand each other in conflicting beliefs, and by the common consent of a majority of the people."

A twelve to three vote was the result of the Florida Alligator's student opinion poll last week on the question: Do you think the United States will soon be involved in war? The 15 students questioned answered in the affirmative that sooner or later our country will be forced to actively fight for our democracy, but that we do not believe that the crisis will be here within the next six months. "The English-speaking democracies." Winston Churchill said, "will have to be somewhat mixed up together in their affairs for mutual and general advantage." That raises four questions that Clarence Streit, who seemed to answer in his article, "For Mutual Advantage," organization of the November Atlantic Monthly.

The most influential book since 1920 was Hitler's Mein Kampf. Not until April, 1939 did a translation appear. Streit's plan of "Union Now" by Mr. Streit, became which advocated the federation of 15 democracies of the world into a union for mutual advantages. The union advocated by this article is a federation of the remaining democracies.

The four questions asked (Streit are: (1) How far have active events moved us toward uniting together? To the thresholds the short answer is that we have developed farther on. (2) What practical challenge today is there in the coming months? Above all it is going to continue evolving in a slow, unconscious way, a chick inside the egg, or it is going to take form with a few abruptness, as when a chick breaks through the shell, signs point to the latter. (3) What are the issues involved? When are we going to begin to give this mixture form? Where are the leaders to form? How are we going to organize it, and what are we going to examine in order to find the mutual and general advantage that would be served by making this mixture on the lines of "Union Now?" (4) What moral and spiritual satisfactions the come from victory—victory for the democracies? Victory would be for all species—and what a reward for achieving unity by means achieving in the nick of time and over terrifying odds! Is there anything in life that we really deserve to be called a New Era?

Events have already brought us and the British to the point where we can only wait, believes in the other. For the first time in history nations of a single armed power of the earth to which either can turn for help according to the need before have Americans and Britons depended on anything but each other for their freedom and their way of life. In this unity, the situation is so new that uniqueness has not even begun to be explored.

What Lies Ahead?

Among all the dramatic factors in the situation there are three major certainties that favor the growth of understanding relationship together of American and British peoples. The first is the fact of their coming. Another is that the American people are not to be forewriter comes. The third is the signing of the Triangular alliance to prevent the aggression of the mixing together of British and American Affairs.

No one can foretell how much time will be required for the progression of the British Isles and how much difficulty hunger will bring to the British on the continent. Winter gives us added confidence that the British will be united time—in which to endure. However, we must not trust winter too much.

There remains the great danger that Japan and the Tripartite Alliance will precipitate us into war. Japan is unpredictable and its acts are not noted for their reasonableness.

What of the Issues Involved

We can be sure that we Americans have to have the approval from the British before the British will agree to anything that come up where, when, and how shall we unite with them and for what purpose.

If we wait too long we lose the possibility of uniting with the United Kingdom and Canada, and can unite only with Canada. And we lose the help of the United Kingdom of South Africa. Whether we approve or not, the British Commonwealth of Nations, while their naval power is strong and intact, or whether it is united with Germany, we shall be uniting with the war.

The British have held out another year and called for help from the United States, believing that critical moment may cause the Churchill government or British people to surrender because of the issue. The results of this would be drastic.

What Are Mutual Advantages?

Needed mutual advantages are mentioned here. One of the most immediate is that Union Now proves to the United People of Kesterling Hitler out of all the remaining democracies. Streit gives us the best means we can get to overthrow the dictatorship on the continent. The plan removes evils of world anarchy that produced dictatorships and war. It guards us and our friends and foes against aggression in the mistakes of the last war. Defenders would be more strong and then to go to war on an alliance basis and fight to make it

Musically Speaking

BY VIRGINIA DUNN

Musically speaking, this is a large week . . . as the saying goes. The Artist Series, the college orchestra in convocation, two musical pictures at the local theaters, Jan Garber in Jacksonville for the Florida-Georgia game, and the annual fall concert of the college orchestra . . . all of these furnish a musical setting for droopy sleepy people who "Just couldn't sleep a wink all the time I was away!"

Of course, descriptive music for Wednesday afternoon at the post office isn't to be forgotten. Perhaps something like "Closing time, day" . . . or the little tune that the words "The worms crawl in, the worms crawl out" . . . Well! Ya don't mean anything in particular to me, but . . .

Program notes: Wasn't Sari Biro petite? . . . she is rather bashful . . . most of the girl were surprised that she could be so accomplished . . . her dynamic left force, were surprising for so young a person. She seemed to play with every ounce of her being . . . not just her hands and arms, but also with her mind and soul. She gave one a feeling of intense concentration upon the composition at hand.

Miss Biro came to the United States in May . . . when she arrived she didn't know a word of English. Her music didn't depend upon her knowledge of any particular language, however. She now speaks English quite well.

You know by this time that "Bitzerweet" is playing at the State theatre this weekend. Even if the play wasn't by Noel Coward and just the names of Nelson Eddy and Jeannette McDonald would be enough to fill the theatre at each performance. This picture is a four-star attraction. Nelson Eddy and Jeannette McDonald in the cast, directed by W. S. Dyke, one of Hollywood's best directors, and Noel Coward, director, actor, composer, producer, and playwright . . . who wrote the vehicle.

Seen on campus: an umbrella made of oiled silk . . . the design was a line of music running all around the edge of the thing. A yellow dress . . . and the belt had a score of music embroidered around and about the waist. It goes to show you that music fits in anywhere!

"God Bless America" was sung as a blessing in Landis dining hall this weekend . . . "Bolero in Blue" is in the grooves for your listening pleasure. Hear it by Larry Clinton at the Sweet Shoppe. Have you seen the little card that says "When the Swallows come back three spots?" . . . that's the way the time was labeled on a certain nickelodeon. Perryboat Serenade." Is in number two spot on the hit parade . . . maybe it will make my predicted five place sometime before its popularity dwindles . . .

"Stardust"'s number one on almost every Florida State's favorite-fee lists . . . "I'll Never Smile Again," continues in popularity here on the campus. Have you ever noticed that the lonesome, love's-labor-lost type of song stays in the limelight longer than the happy rollicking type? Remember "The Music Goes Round and Round?" . . . and even the "Beer Barrel Polka" isn't what it used to be. But "Stardust" . . . "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" . . . "I Get Along Without You Very Well" . . . such songs are always welcome. Maybe the psychologists could explain it.

And then . . . there was the woman who remarked after hearing a recording of the great Caruso's voice . . . "Isn't it a pity that he had no one to hear him sing except his Man Friday!"

Pi Phi Province Officer Will Pay Annual Chapter Visit This Coming Week

Mrs. John R. Brooks of Jacksonville, province president of Pi Beta Phi sorority, will visit the Florida Beta chapter of Pi Beta Phi on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of this coming week.

The visit of the province president is an annual event during which time the officer discusses the work and de-velopment of the chapter with its members. Included in the carefully planned program for the limited amount of time that the officer will be there guest the members of the chapter have arranged for Mrs. Brooks to have conferences with the various officers of the chapter, luncheon and dinner "get-acquainted" with the girls, a conference with Dean Dorman, and also for an after-dinner coffee to be given at the Pi Phi house on Monday evening from 7:30 until 9 o'clock until 9 in honor of their visiting officer.

This will be the first time that Mrs. Brooks has visited this chapter of Pi Beta Phi as its province president since until the first of this year the office was held by Mrs. George V. Thorpe of Miami. Mrs. Brooks will come to Tallahassee on Monday from Alabama where she is now visiting the Pi Beta Phi chapter at Birmingham-Southern college, and she will leave on Wednesday to visit the chapters at Rollins college and Stetson university.

discussion will ensue during which the chairman and the representatives hope to clarify any questions in the minds of the students.

According to the leaders, the state citizens division of the TCDA stands for three things: informed, clear, and decisive thinking. Informed thinking consists of disseminating propaganda, weeding out that which is false. Clear thinking includes the conclusions reached regarding certain situations, mainly concerning the discussions and their policies. The key word of decisive thinking is "acting." This mean taking decided steps in the right directions when the right direction is found.

It is these three types of thinking plus the determination to defend democracy that the TCDA office upholds. The committee is entirely devoid of any political or church affiliations. It is simply a democratic organization for citizens of this college.

Kay Chesney, chairman, explains that the ultimate aim of the committee cannot be predicted. "The purpose is to urge the defense of America. We do not urge undue emotional excitement about defense or about immediate fighting, but we do endorse making plans for defense. It is highly incongruous to close our eyes and preach pacifism. We have a general idea of what will happen. Plans are being drafted so why should college women stand

Cocktail Club, Hawaiian Dance, Robin Hood Party Will Entertain Pledges

Three parties will be given this weekend for all sorority pledges beginning this afternoon with the Alpha Chi Omega "Five O'clock club." The house will be decorated like a real night club, with the hostesses dressed as cigarette girls with short red skirts and white blouses. Menus and invitations are shaped like black top hats. Gingerale cola, and lime frosse representing various cocktails, will be served from a bar.

For entertainment a floorshow will be given consisting of songs, dances, and comedy acts.

Olive Stallwell is in charge of refreshments. Virginia Leslie, costumes; and Mary Ann Smith, entertainment.

Tonight the Kappa Delta house will be decorated with palms, leaves, and fruits in keeping with the theme of their annual Hawaiian pledge party. Guests will be given leighs as favors when they enter the door.

Hawaiian music will be played throughout the evening. Refreshments will consist of fresh coconut, pineapple sherbert, and coconut macaroons.

Mildrew Woodberry, pledge president, is general supervisor of the party, with Ruth Wisdom in charge of decorations.

Zeta Tau Alpha pledges will be hostesses tomorrow afternoon with a Robin Hood party, which will be given outdoors if the weather permits. Each hostess will be dressed as a character of the Robin Hood stories. Invitations to the party were small brown hats with feathers.

For refreshments hot dogs will be served as roasted venison, and grape juice as Burgundy wine. Winnie Briggs is general chairman of the party.

"There are three reasons why such a defense committee should be formed on the college campus and supported by college women. In the first place college students have more time and opportunity to develop their intellectual capacities and to study problems such as the defense issue. Second, people respect college women to take a definite stand one way of the other on major current problems. Third, the men of the United States are being drafted so why should college women stand aside?"

Home Economics Group Convenes

Fifteen Go To Meeting Of State Association In St Petersburg

Nine students and six members of the faculty of Florida State college attended the annual meeting of the Florida Home Economics association in St. Petersburg, November 8-9. The theme of the meeting was "The Place of Florida Home Economics Association in the Program for the National Organization."

The Tide Water Beach hotel was headquarters for the convention-goers. Dietitian, home economics teachers, homemakers, farm security superintendents and supervisors of NRA and WPA homemaking projects were all represented. Members of the west coast division were hostesses to the association meetings.

Special dinner meeting convened in the evening. Dr. Ruth Current, president of the state association and professor of home economics education at FSCW, headed the executive committee; Miss Leila Venable, instructor in housing at FSCW was chairman of the housing committee; Dr. Dendel Tampa university was in charge of the consumer's goods committee.

Guest speakers at the general session Friday night was Miss Marjorie Heseltine. Her address was based on "Nutrition and Health Problems and Children." Miss Heseltine is nutrition consultant for the Children's Bureau Department of Labor, Washington, D. C., and author of the nutrition chapters in home economics text books.

Immediately following the general session a formal reception was held in the hotel lobby by the Weekly Study club of St. Petersburg.

Election of officers was held at the business meeting on Saturday morning. Miss Dendel Davis of St. Petersburg was elected president; Miss Lucy Lang, vice-president; Miss Ruth Blake of Tallahassee, extension division, was elected secretary and Miss Mary Rector Sandiss, dean of school of home economics at FSCW, state board state councilor.

Dr. Ben Graves, professor of household economics at Columbia university, spoke on "The Challenger of Family Needs." He stressed the place held by the home in the foundation for national defense. Dr. Andrews is a noted authority on household economics and is author of several texts used by home economics department on campus.

Miss Heseltine addressed the group on "Activities of Home Economists in the Defense Program." Talks to the group were given on public health, legislative measures, standardization of consumer's good, and the place of women to defense measures.

During the afternoon session the Ocala district, the Jacksonville district and the Miami Chamber of Commerce extended an invitation to the association for their meeting next year. Reports of special and standing committees were given.

Miss Lucy Lang, vice-president, presided in the early part of the business session. Dr. Carmen, president, presided during the remainder of the session after routine duties.

Mrs. Verla Tippley of St. Petersburg planned tours for the groups. First stop was at the Jordan Park Housing project where the groups were shown through several units and allowed to inspect the grounds. The FHA project was designed to replace negro slum districts. Cleanliness and sanitation are two of the requisites of tenants and rent for these units can not exceed one-fifth of the income of the tenants.

Turner's Sunken Gardens was second on the tour. Hrs was served. After viewing the parade of wood the groups separated for other activities. The convention was officially adjourned at 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Those attending from FSCW were Marcia Shartzman, Barbara Sutton, Ann Williams, Jean Phillips, Miriam Stuckey, Rosella Ferguitt, Ruth McCann, Ruth Hendricks and Caroline Johnson. Members of the faculty attending were Dr. Carmen Rogers, Miss Leila Venable, Dean Margaret Rector Sandiss, Miss Janet K. Smith, instructor in textiles, and Misses Helen Cate and Miss Edith Hois, instructors in nutrition. Miss Bobetta Fraley, supervisor of the vocational home economics program; Misses Clarine Belcher and Anna Mae Sikes of the extension division; Mrs. Edna L. Butler and Mrs. Nina Mae Williams, teacher trainers, and Mrs. Rex Todd Withers, state teachers trainer, state department of education.

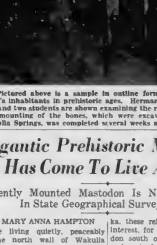
Misses Stuckey, Pruitt, Phillips and Johnson served on the press committee for the convention with four girls from Tampa university.

Prehistoric Monster Has Come To Live At College

Recently Mounted Mastodon Is Now On Display In State Geographical Survey Office

By MARY ANNA HAMPTON

One living quietly, peacefully in the north wall of Wakulla Springs for between 25,000 to 100,000 years, was a gigantic prehistoric hastodon. Now standing in the exhibition room of the Florida Geological Survey are its remains, which, mounted, are about 12 feet long and 9 feet high, showing that he at one time was a husky fellow.



In the fall of 1939 the mastodon's bed of fine marle was discovered by a group of geologists from the state department who were making a preliminary survey of his existence. With the aid of two men employed with long grappling tongs and a pump for removing each bone at a time, geologists worked from December to October and November of that year. Excavation proceeded immediately under the direction of Dr. Herbert Vernon Allan Stewart, of the college faculty.

At Wakulla Springs, Mr. George T. Christie, owner, much interested in the excavation, granted the geological permission to search through the property. The fossils were put with other earlier discovered bones from the vicinity and exhibited for a number of years on the campus of the present telephone building.

When the geological department moved to the new building, preliminary work began on the mounting process.

The American mastodon belongs to the Pleistocene or more comparatively recent period—only a few thousands years ago—during the time of the glacial epoch era and shortly after. The mammoth, mastodon, sloth tiger, saber-toothed horse, deer, and early man were exhibits in contemporaries.

Differing from its relative the elephant, the mastodon is more massive, stocky and broad. Students may observe the bones in the new office of the Florida Geographical Survey in the lower floor of the old dining hall.

Pictured above is a sample in outline form of a species of the earth's inhabitants a few million years ago. Hastodon, master, state geologist, and two students are shown examining the reconstructed skeleton. The mounting of the bones, which were excavated from a part of Wakulla Springs, was completed several weeks ago.

the series is a wonderful opportunity and I enjoy every program."

Paul Haldoran: "I like most of the programs. At the moment the only chance I should like would be to have at least one afternoon performance."

Jean Betts: "I like piano soloists, but I think the concerts would take place in the afternoon as well as at night."

Harriet Collins: "I like the piano recital Wednesday night, but I like symphony orchestras best of any thing. There are none that I dislike, but I think I would like them all better than the Marine Band. No changes are needed as far as I can see."

Evelyn Butts: "I like the orchestras, but I don't go very much to be a good judge."

Evelyn Butts: "Well-known musicians I'd like to see more plays produced also."

Nancy Kulp: "I like entertainment and would like Cornelia Otis Skinner offered last year. I like the dramatic productions but I'm not fond of organists. More 'big names' would be a profitable change."

Martha Griffitts: "More famous singers. I didn't particularly enjoy the recital last year, but I think the series offers a wide variety of programs."

Frances Parker: "I like all the programs, but I enjoyed the Marine Band particularly this year. More students would enjoy the series if the artists would include in their programs more familiar selections. I should like to see more plays and a dance recital."

Hope Yon: "I especially enjoy the musical programs but I would like to see ballets on some form of dancing."

Jeannette Williams: "I like the plays best. I like all the programs but as I love plays I naturally say that I like them the best of all. Artist series programs."

Mary Padgett: "I enjoy them all but I like the bands the best. The only change I would like would be to have some ballet dancing included."

Marianne Huddleston: "I didn't like the Marine Band as well as I have some of the other programs. I like the variety of the series."

Nan Ingram: "The plays are my favorites. I've liked all the programs we've had so far. I'd like to see more plays and dancing."

Ruth Parr: "I liked the Marine Band very much, but I'm not particularly fond of piano players as I don't have any special interest in piano. If the artists could select more well-known numbers it would be nice. More celebrities and more universally known productions in less classical lines are the changes that should be considered."

Phil Eckland: "I suppose the music and other selections you don't like should be more worthwhile, but just the same more selections could be chosen. I like all the entertainments the series offers. It is a very broadening."

Theo Blalock: "I liked the singers and the dramatic productions. I would like to see more of these types of programs and I favor a little type of dancing lectures."

Ruth Love Morrow: "I enjoy any kind of music, and I think a lot of people's time would be saved if the tickets for the series could be put in the girls' mailboxes."

Catherinette Hamilton: "More men singers like Lawrence Tibbett. I'd like to see a new form of ticket distribution and I favor a swing band."

Penelope Knox: "I like the plays and I think it would be nice if we could have season tickets for the series."

Sara Duke Bryant: "I like the plays and would like to see more plays by 'no' to such things as cello players."

Floread Brown: "I think that Artist series programs would be of the type that will appeal to the larger majority of students. There are too few who are interested in special instrumental presentations, but everyone enjoys singing, dancing, and whole hearted jazz. Think Artist series programs, such as the operas, 'Carmen' and 'Madame Butterfly,' are excellent examples of that type which more of the students really like."

Charlotte Cooper: "I like orchestrals or bands the best and I'd like to see more plays and dancing."

Ruth Parr: "I liked the Marine Band very much, but I'm not particularly fond of piano players as I don't have any special interest in piano. If the artists could select more well-known numbers it would be nice. More celebrities and more universally known productions in less classical lines are the changes that should be considered."

Phil Eckland: "I suppose the music and other selections you don't like should be more worthwhile, but just the same more selections could be chosen. I like all the entertainments the series offers. It is a very broadening."

Theo Blalock: "I liked the singers and the dramatic productions. I would like to see more of these types of programs and I favor a little type of dancing lectures."

Debaters Use New Topic In Clash

"Resolved: That the nations of the western hemisphere should form a permanent union;" was the subject for discussion at the Debate club meeting yesterday afternoon. Josiah Weaver and Margaret Christie Harrison supported the affirmative while Betty Robert and Mary Brice Deaver opposed it.

No decision was rendered in the divided clash debate, participated in for practice. Advisors of the club, Miss Sadie Gertrude Young, assistant professor of economics, and Miss Lula Wyly, instructor in speech, criticized the debates afterwards.

The Debate club plans to attend the Second Tourney at Winthrop college, Rock Hill, South Carolina, which is scheduled for December 5-7.

Delegates Return From Detroit Wet, Cold, Dead, But Delighted

Distaff Editor Tells Of Three Day Convention Of College Editors, Business Managers

BY VIVIAN AHLSWEH

Well, all I can say it—this is a fine dish of fruit. Up to my ears in term papers and back parallel and I'm drafted to write "a cute feature" on the convention. "Cute" mind you—and the way I feel . . . What a life

Well, I suppose the best thing to do is to start. Yeah, start—but where? Tch-tsh, there, as Shakespeare used to mumble, is piano solos least because there is not enough variety in selections I should like to have a few of Chopin and some boy's efforts . . .

Phil Eckland: "I like bands like Harry Marine Band, and good men singers. However, I think we should have some dance groups come here. I like poetic kind of stuff."

Pat Paterson: "I like the idea of operas that are coming soon, and well-known plays and artists like Donald Duck are also my top favorites on the Artist series. Plays that have no particular point for the audience are at the bottom of my list. I should like to see a good play company like the Hedgrow players, come here.

Don Hosmer: "I like plays and I also wish that more dance groups, such as Doris Humphrey and some ballets, would be featured on the Artist series programs. Concert orchestras and singers are good too. There should be brought at least one dance group here a year.

Tam Thomas: "I think we should have more solo programs instead of bands and once in a while a stage play should be presented on the Artist series. I like them all very much and have no suggestions as to changes other than to get more solo artists."

Keith Walker: "Dance and symphony orchestras are my preference. However, I like them all. I think it would be nice to take an entire student body poll to see which type programs they like best and select according to their preferences."

Carree Brown: "Singing and dancing programs are my favorites on the Artist series, and maybe one group selection a year. I think once a year is enough for concert orchestras The programs now are better because they are more varied."

Bets Davis: "Dancing, singing and plays are what I like and would like to have included in the series. I should like to be able to see both operas."

Betty Starr: "I like the dance artists and the musicians; anything except a violinist. It would be nice if one real big name could appear in the series once a year."

Bee Venning: "Any kind of dancing except modern. I'd like to see Nelson Eddy."

pians and men. And the greatest of these two are—well, anyway, we've had a wonderful time with both M's. Right after we got in Thursday we had dinner, changed our clothes, and went down to the convention headquarters in the fourth floor to register. We were ladened down with notebooks, writing pads, pencils, tickets to functions and dances, and a badge with our name and Daily Tar Heel pinned the badges to our coats—and a minute later we were swallowed up in the crowd.

Pep talk number series. "Oh, Florida Say, do you know So and So in Florida?"

Well, since then, up until now, things have been going along at a fast rate. To be coherent, I remember snatches of all sorts of things—a tour of Minnesota's boys next door who sang as all good boys do, their room continually being full of stockings and such drying . . . Harriet at the dance with the Minnesota delegate . . . The small quips Midge gave her at the top of the elevator . . .

Singing "Rassed But Right" . . . Borrowing Midge's Tweet perfume . . . Being the host of the most popular fraternity at the convention . . . And Cleveland's ever changing ideas with people from Florida . . . The convention's program including exhibits, tours through the radio station and Cleveland Press and the Dodge Motor plant, Sigma Delta Phi Dutch treat dinner, a banquet, convention, an Old Timers' Party, the luncheon, the banquet, and finally the dance . . . Window shopping . . . Writing post cards . . . Going over to Woolworth's for ads, and almost getting stopped by the Detroit police for speeding . . . and so ultra that when we approach the desk to the lobby to hand in our key or merely inquire for mail, we feel like walking on stilts so they'll see us. Our room is darling—complete with television sets. Wonder how we are trying to resist and stationery and toilet stickers that we are not resisting. Midge's Oldest Boy Friend me to tell you a joke about that . . .

As for the convention—it can be described in two words: meet-

Language Teacher To Attend Meeting

The chapters of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish, and the American Association of Teachers of Latin are having a meeting on Saturday at the University of Florida.

Miss Marie Davis, instructor in French and Spanish and Dr. Arthur Romey Seymour, professor of modern language, will represent the department of modern languages at this convention. Miss Davis will give a report on the teaching of French in the state of Florida. Dr. Seymour is chairman of the state committee concerned with the teaching of foreign languages in Florida.

Forum Will Meet Tuesday Night

Junior Representative To Student Group Will Be Chosen

At the student forum meeting Tuesday night a junior representative to the forum will be elected, and the topic "Our Part in College Women in the Defense Program", which was discussed the last meeting, will be continued.

Following this Florida State college's delegates to the proposed convention in Detroit last week will give a report of their trip. Delegates to the convention were Sonia Mitchell, editor of the Flastacowa; Mary Myers Alfred, business manager of the Flastacowa; Vivian Ahlsweh, editor of the Distaff, Midge Scott, editor of the Flambeau, and Harriet Benson, business manager of the Flambeau.

Chairman of the Student Forum is Mary Pinholster. Other representatives are Nancy Kulp, sophomore and Dot Nickerson, senior. The next meeting of the forum will be held at 7:30 o'clock in the Westcott.

tion in the College Magazine for me . . . Putting in a call to Jacksonville at 3:00 a.m. and then sleeping on . . . Our room 152 . . . Marcia Shartzman, Ann Williams and Jean Phillips . . . Ann's Aunt Ida's exploits in the night. Mary Jane's fur coat with her, and Sonia's collection . . . Sonia's getting up in the train smoker . . . The dedication from Phi Mu sorority to Detroit by piano . . . Harriet's stockings so dirty after the dance . . . Taking pictures of the whole hotel . . .

Yankee slang: "no kitten" for "no kidding." . . . Standing in line in a cafeteria . . . Harriet says, "Don't expectorate if you expect to rate in Detroit" . . . The argument and debating at the roundtable discussions . . . Some of the famous men who came to speak to us . . . Meeting the only decigals sent by the University of Florida, and Jack Coast at the Review—and one of the nicest decigals . . . The gratifying number of phone calls we got . . . The hotel's reaction to our Florida and Favorite convention joke: Secure tonsil to another—"This motel is Florida's favorite . . . Don't swallow coming."

Midge Scott's wait in Christmas mail . . . Names of other delegates: Jack Coast, Frank Dub, Joan Boyd, Rep. Bettz Mae Dickinson. All the notes we took . . . Hearing Xavier Cugat . . . Cugat's hair polish . . .

And just millions of other things. We've had the most wonderful time, Betty—so don't ask me when I get in. Just have it be turned down and the shades drawn. Good-night, love from me and pleasant dreams.

VIVIAN.

all. We need a 'man singer' though. I'd like to see more programs built on these programs, and consequently I'm looking forward to the operas."

Verne Cody: "I like most of them, and I'd especially like to see some plays. I would also like to hear a dance."

Mary Catherine Bellas: "I like them all but orchestras are my favorites. More plays and operas would be wonderful."

Jean Pickel: "I don't like any type the best. I just like the variety the series offers. I would like to see more dancers though."

Mickey Graham: "I like orchestras the best and I certainly enjoyed the Marine Band. It would be nice if we could have some orchestras like Harry Priester from Boston. I like the plan, too, of having one performance in the afternoon and one at night, as to chances, the library ought to be open both nights for the girls that do not go on that particular night."

Charlotte Balkom: "I like to hear people or orchestras that everybody knows about like the Marine Bands. I also like the speech performances. I can't appreciate the majority of piano soloists Dancing, such as the Russian Ballet would be a nice addition."

Helen Caldwell: "I like those programs that included popular and light classical music. I think Guidance Talks Will Begin Soon

Assistant Will Open Series To Assist Students In Choosing Work

The series of vocational guidance lectures sponsored by the personnel office will begin a week from Monday when Miss Ruth Strickland, assistant professor of sociology, will speak on "Social Work as a Profession." The talk will be at 4 o'clock in Conradi. Miss Conradi theater.

The lecture series will be given December 9 when Miss Mary Wolfe, instructor in zoology and bacteriology, will speak on "Careers in bacteriology laboratory. 10th lecture at 4 o'clock will be Laboratory Technology as a Career. The vocational guidance lectures will be concluded December 16 when Chrisman holidays.

The lectures are sponsored by Miss Carolina Comer, assistant director of personnel, and Edmund Burke, associate professor of history.

The purpose of these new programs is very pleasing to Janice Herring, president of the Y.W.C.A. who said when one of them, more or less informative, friends of the college, would be present.

Miss Herring is unable to speak because he is planning to leave Monday stay in South Carolina, where he is now conducting South American politics, but after the holidays she will be on easement to lecture here.

Miss Turner is a Boston native. He has written the personnel office that he will be glad to accept an engagement on Monday, which is the only time that he will be scheduled here. Miss Herring will leave his church on

Instructor Gets Butter Used for Reducing Hips

Miss Helen D. Cate, instructor in foods and nutrition, announces the arrival of a new sample of butter that will be of great benefit to quite a number of girls among those wishing to reduce their measurements.

On Tuesday Miss Cate found that there is a small package containing a substance that has been named for. It was a sample of a new type of butter. She does not contain any calories. It looks, the same and feels the same, but figures will show that it is not the same.

Girls Struggle With Scenery And Props for Demonstrations

Electrical Effects, Stage Settings, Costumes Are Kept Secret by Odd and Even Workers

BY MARY MONAHAN

Paint, nails, hammers, light bulbs, wires, bolts of cloth, needles, thread, thimbles and spools all unite in making the Odd and Even demonstrations successful, although the audience seldom realizes that many hours of work were expended by people behind the scenes to produce the finished product of the glamorous evening.

The girls in charge of electrical effects work for hours on correct lighting for each scene, changing which will bring out the best possible views of the stage settings and also flatter the singers and speakers. Experimentation for each scene may take hours before the director is satisfied. Everything may progress smoothly for awhile and then suddenly—total darkness! Short circuits, burnt-out bulbs, and blown fuses are only a few of the headaches which girls in charge of the electrical effects for the demonstrations.

About two or three weeks before the demonstration girls are seen on the lawn at each side of the Westcott building, on the grass out by the gym and almost anywhere canvas may be spread, painting industriously on big sheets of canvas stage setting. Covered with paint from head to toe, their backs aching, they work tirelessly on to make their demonstration the winner. Each year the inquisitive freshmen peruse and ask, "What are you all painting?" The busy girls barely glance up, but snatch the curious one with, "Oh, I'm just practicing," or some other inanity. The demonstration must be kept a deep dark secret.

After the canvas is painted and has been given time to dry, the girls carry it to the auditorium and begin to assemble it in the correct place on the stage. It is usually necessary to have four to five hours to arrange the scenery and to nail the different parts together. After they fix a few pieces down to go on the audi-

Landis Offers Collegiennes Meals In Bed

Student Business Caters To Sunday Luxury-Lovers

Attention! Landis hall—hear ye! Are you of the vast list of luxury-lovers who adore breakfast in bed? And who like being waked from a sound sleep gently and not by a blaring alarm bell?

Then you will be welcome to the right school (that is, hall) for with the flick of a pencil Sunday night you may dwell like a queen in your dormitory bedroom Sunday morning.

Try out the excellent "curb service" offered by Hield Breakfast Managers, Inc., in the form of a Sunday breakfast special between the hours of 8:30 and 10:30 o'clock. The menu includes toast, assorted jellies, and kind of fruit juice and hot coffee for the small sum of 15 cents (30 cents in the dining room, if you don't belong there). Choice is allowed on the toast and jelly items, but those that orders will be considered also.

The formal initiation of this newest idea in campus big business took place last Sunday morning when 25 girls were served breakfast in bed (or otherwise) at the special opening prices of 10 cents per breakfast. So many girls expressed disappointment at being out on that Sunday's round that the "Curb Company" expects almost double that number this Sunday.

The way the company operates is very interesting. The food is ordered from the dining room just as it is for meals, and on the piece of operation is Landis kitchen. Here occur the three things to keep the toast hot; the second of them fills the orders from room to room, and the last distributes the plates for diner. First breakfast is served at 8:30 and the last one on until 10:30 (unless specially requested, in which case women should attend church).

Lists will be placed on all bulletin boards starting in Landis on Saturday night where all the girls interested may sign up for their name, room number, juice preference and food desired.

The success of their new program is very pleasing to Janice Herring, president of the Y.W.C.A. and when one of them, more or less informative friends of the college, would be present.

ASCAP Sponsors Music Contest

Fellowships Will Be Awarded To Further Creative Work

Students in all institutions of higher learning, graduate students included, are eligible for the fellowships, each valued at $720 offered by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in connection with the contest, it was announced today.

The winner must use the Fellowship for formal instruction.

ASCAP urges originality, stressing America's rich native lore as source material, and encourages the creation of credible characters. The eight awards of $720 each will be announced about commencement time.

From active faculty members, a board of judges is selected in each of the eight regions covering the entire country. Judges evaluate the works submitted, not for excellence of an individual number. They make their verdict on the script, and score on the performance of the work. However, the composition must be eligible for the competition, it must have been given an actual performance by a professional group.

ASCAP points out also the element of practicality in all phases of the work to facilitate the contest for production by winning plays. The Society will cooperate in this by introducing the best manuscripts to the producers of Broadway and Hollywood. Winners receive $720.

The ASCAP, founded by Victor Herbert in 1914, is a society of music copyright of creators of song, is the chief source of all performing rights of American entertainment. Many of its successful members, like Herbert, create their work by writing college musicals.

Deems Taylors' "The Echo", a musical comedy was first a New York University amateur musical production, and contributor to the musical plays of the same institution were the prolific song writing team of Rodgers and Hart, Oscar Hammerstein II, of "Show Boat" fame, and a Columbia amateur play wright, Harold Rome was also a Yale graduate. Lorenz Hart, Yale before he began writing songs of great significance for Broadway revues. Otto Harbach, dean of American librettists, is also a graduate of Yale, as Al Knox, and an inspiration to student playwrights while he taught English at Whitman.

Now well established in its second year of nationwide operation the ASCAP Fellowship competition is encouraging authors of college musical plays has stirred students' notice to new interest in this field of creative work. The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers believes that improved standards of college theatricals will be reflected in later years in the professional stage, and that the entire entertainment field will benefit.

Student Forum Selects Yonge Representative

Resolution is Passed By Group to Assist With Knitting

Scott Tells Students Of Press Convention

Belle Yonge was elected junior representative to the Student Forum at its meeting Tuesday night. Other names nominated were Blanche Saul and Sara Duke Bryant.

A continuation of the topic of the college woman's part in our national defense program Belle gave a report of the other college newspaper editorials regarding Bundles for Britain and other similar organizations. She said that although she was not participating in these organizations and did not of them had started doing so last spring.

RESOLUTION DRAWN

The following resolution drawn up by Phoebe James was accepted by the group:

"We, the participating students of the Student Forum of Florida State College for Women, believing that the colleges of America should aid the power in Europe which is now in sympathy by this present war, hereby resolve to give the fullest support to any activity supporting the organization known as Bundles for Britain and to any other activities which we may take part."

Following the defense discussion Midge Scott, editor of the Flambeau, gave a report of her trip to Detroit as a delegate to the American collegiate Press convention.

The five girls representing FSCW in the convention went up on the train via Pensacola, Birmingham and Cincinnati. Upon their arrival in Detroit they were registered in the Book hotel.

The first meeting of the convention was held the night of the girls' arrival. This meeting was a reception at which Lee White, director of public relations of the Detroit News, was the main speaker. The theme of his talk

Cone Proclaims State Art Week

Tallahassee To Observe Same Week In Effort To Spur Interest

November 25 to December 1 has been designated Florida State Art week by Governor Fred P. Cone, according to Mrs. eStrbie Sawyer Wilson, chairman of the Florida State committee for art.

Mayor Commissioner Sam A. Wahnish has also proclaimed that week as art week for Tallahassee. Similar proclamations by the state's five Florida sculptors and craftsmen an opportunity to exhibit their work.

Committees in Florida localities have completed plans for displaying art week sales exhibits in state fair exhibition buildings, in department stores. and women's clubs.

According to Governor Cone's proclamation the art week will encourage and stimulate interest in the American people to become acquainted with the work of our artists, and to foster appreciation of the same in their homes. "Americans should encourage their own home" they become a reality."

Criminology Class Hears Pardon Board in Action On Field Trip Tuesday

Five students of Dr. Paul Shanklin's criminology class heard the pardon board meeting in the capitol building Tuesday morning.

Composing the board were Governor Fred P. Cone, Mr. Robert A. Gray, secretary of state; Mr. J. Lee Lake, comptroller; Mr. George Gibbs, state attorney general; and Mr. Nathan Mayo, state secretary of agriculture.

The trips made by this class have been to the city jail, county court, Chattahoochee and Marianna. The next trip planned will be made to the state prison at Raiford.

Those students going on this trip were Mary Ann Hampton, Dina Florend Brown, Lou Atkinson, Marguerite Mooney, and Elsie Crews.

Leaders of Demonstrations

Chairman of Odd demonstration, which will be held Wednesday evening, is Elizabeth Miller, left, while Lou Atkinson, right, heads Even demonstration Tuesday night. The themes of both programs are kept secret.

School Group Meets Today

Teachers' Conference Takes Up Problems Of Our Defense

The school, and national defense is the theme for the Ochlockonee education association meeting underway today at Leon High school with approximately 350 teachers from five counties in attendance. Presiding over the general session this morning is Otis L. Peacock Leon high principal and president of the association. Counties represented at today's conference include Gadsden, Leon, Wakulla, Jefferson and Madison.

Appearing on the program of the general session at 11 o'clock this morning is Dr. W. S. Allen, president of Rollins university, discussing "The School's Part in the National Defense."

Other speakers at the general 11 o'clock session this morning are Miss Marguerite Moore, president of the Florida Education association, with Superintendent of Schools with Lay Organizations" as her subject, and Dr. E. L. Mowbray, director of administration and finance, state department of education, speaking on "Ways to Improve Continuity of Service of Teachers."

Demonstration school teachers participating in the educational meet are Ward T. Fletcher, conducting a sectional meeting on mathematics, and R. Kelly, who is in charge of the natural science section meeting.

Group meetings and the general session are scheduled for this morning with election of officers, reports of committees and later general meetings to take place this afternoon.

French Honorary Initiates Four

Members Give Banquet To Honor Neophytes

Last Wednesday night at 8:15 o'clock Pi Delta Phi, the French honorary, initiated four new members at the home of Dr. A. R. Seymour, in the modern language department.

The new members presented were Mary Lou Atkinson, Marion Pernald, Helen Hoffman and Belle Yonge.

After the initiation a banquet was given by the members at the home which Dr. Seymour's guests were the welcome and Belle Yonge, the latter responding to the toast in an anecdote as she was presented. There was no speaker at the banquet.

The programs were in the shape of the club colors. The pictures were blue, white, and red, which designates the colors of the French flag. The favors were miniature red candles in holders made of gum drop, with life savers as handles.

The menu was in French and most of the conversation during the meal was carried on in French.

DAR Chefixico Chapter Meets At Phi Mu House

The Chefixico chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution met at the Phi Mu house Monday at 7:30. Mrs. Maynard Bevard gave a report on the state board meeting in Leesburg. No projects were adopted as the chapter is trying to build up its own organization.

The next meeting will be held in December and will be entertained at 5 o'clock. All students eligible for membership in the chapter are invited to attend.

Holiday Menu Announced

Students and alumnae visitors on campus for the Thanksgiving holidays will be served a total of 260 turkeys, weighing 40,000 pounds for their Thanksgiving dinner, Miss Sadie Graves has announced today.

In addition to this, 100 pounds of cranberries, 72 gallons of calumba juice, 50 gallons of gravy, 450 pounds of green peas, 175 pounds of rice, and 10 crates or celery of 2 dozen stalks each will be served.

Other items on the Thanksgiving menu are 3,000 rolls, 100 pounds of butter, 80 gallons of ice cream, 350 dozen brownies, 70 pounds of nuts, and 2,000 pounds of coffee. The coffee will be served at the dinner in the residence halls.

For decorations of tables will be fruits which will be in the form of apples, 5 boxes of oranges, 10 bushels of autumn leaves and pineapple, and 16 boxes of grapes.

First British Bundles Leave FSCW Campus

Over Two Hundred Girls Knit Various Garments With Military Yarn

The first shipment of knitted material by campus knitters was sent to the Bundles for Britain headquarters in New York by the local committee last Wednesday, November 20.

Included in this shipment were balaclhou helmets, "V"-neck sweaters, mitts, sweater jerseys, sea-boot stockings, socks, scarves, airforce helmets, atoptic-nerve protectors, mittens. Approximately 200 students are now knitting. They are using navy blue, gray, dark gray, white, and khaki.

In order to have a greater efficiency in the management of the campus branch, the following committees have been recently organized: production committee, Mary Ann Bailey, wool; vice-chairman for campus Vivian Adams and vice chairman for off campus, Beth Blair. The campus committee includes Frances Strickland, Betty Nolles, Peggy Gleruch, Mary Frances Adams, Betty Shuman, Ruth Sloan, Betty Scott, Frances Nelson, Inez Williams, and Elizabeth Thurston. On the off campus committee are Mary Anna McBride, Hinda Kreyling, and Marianne Smith.

The knitting instructions committee is composed of Frances Heard, Miss Solomon, and Georgiana Blumburger. Chairman of the publicity committee is Pete Holbert, assisted by vice-chairman Jane Mendendall and Marguerite Diaz.

Dot Nickerson is chairman of the program committee with Margaret Christie Harrison, Jo Ann Hendricks supervising the materials and rooms, are Amelia Ellis, Frances Bale, Maud Marian, friend, vice-chairman, Margaret Hall is chairman of the membership room.

Thanksgiving Festivities Open With Registration Of Alumnae At Longmire Building Tuesday

Traditional Activities Will Be Carried Out For Homecoming

Dining Room Will Serve Turkey Dinner For All

Thanksgiving Activities will begin Tuesday with registration of alumnae at the Student-Alumnae building. All alumnae are requested to wear identification badges, which will admit them to reserved sections at the demonstrations and at the games on Thursday. Even demonstration, which will take place at 8:15 o'clock Tuesday night, in the auditorium of the Westcott building, will officially open the festivities, with Odd "night out" following at 11 o'clock.

COLOR RUSH SET

The traditional "color rush" will prompt many late sleepers to be up and out at the gymnasium when the race begins Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock. The Odds will attempt to outdo the Evens at Odd demonstration Wednesday night at 8:15 o'clock, in the auditorium. At 11 o'clock the Evens will celebrate Even "night out."

Traditional Vespers at 5:30 o'clock Thursday morning with a half hour worship service to be held in the auditorium. The service will be opened by a chorale prelude, "Deck Thyself, My Soul, With Gladness", by Bach, after which the Call to Worship will be given by Dr. Edward Conradi. Next, the entire congregation will join in the hymn, "Thanksgiving Come," to be followed by prayer offered by a student. Then the college Glee club will offer "Sanctus" by Peori Curran. The Thanksgiving speaker will be Dr. Kathryn Abbey. Dr. Conradi will give the benediction, at the close of which the college Glee club will sing the three-fold amen. The worship service will be closed by an organ postlude with Miss Margie Mabrey Dow at the organ. Miss Dow's chorale improvisation of "Now Thank We All Our God" by Karl Eberl.

FSCW Roll Call For Red Cross Sets High Mark

More Than One Hundred Students Become Full Members of Group

A total of $1,064.30 has been collected to date in the annual American Red Cross drive for members in Tallahassee. Of this amount $156 has been contributed by the Florida State college for women. In comparison with last year's $113 and with the amounts collected in previous years, the goal for the 1940 drive is the best in the history of the college.

Full memberships of students total 107 with an additional 43 for the 1939 drive. Faculty membership reaches 194 as contrasted with last year's roll of 147 teachers. The present Tallahassee membership is around 700.

The FSCW campaign in charge of Mary Plowden, concluded on Wednesday and Thursday. The last drive for funds on the campus previous week was dispensed with and students obtained membership at the Red Cross table in the lower Westcott. Sophomore Counsil girls supervised the drive.

The following girls contributed $1.00 and received full Red Cross membership:

Browsing Room Program To Feature Campus Poets

Poetry will be read by Miss Betty Rose Scott in the Browsing room this evening at 7:30 o'clock. The poems of the poets of college days in the Florida State college for women, will be featured. This event, which is one of a series of programs, by Miss Henrietta Howell, head of the cataloging department of the library.

Senior Party Date Is Set

At the senior class meeting held immediately after convocation Tuesday, it was decided to hold the senior Christmas party on December 16 in the Tea room of the dining room. The party has always been given in Bryan before, but this year it was decided whether or not to break this tradition Pat Brandt, president of the class, presided over the meeting.

Joubert Upholds Student Parties

Instructor . Tells Group To Be Constructive - Not Destructive

William Joubert, instructor in accounting and economics, spoke on the importance of political parties on the college campus at a meeting of the Student party Wednesday evening. An open discussion followed Joubert's talk.

After a few introductory remarks on the part played by women in national politics, Joubert discussed the outstanding advantages of student political participation through party organization: (1) this party organization gives students the opportunity for free discussion of vital issues; (2) it gives students who would not otherwise have the opportunity a chance to get into office; and (3) it affords students practice in political participation and helps prepare them for later social and economic life.

Political party organization of campus politics is an aid in avoiding self-perpetuating administrations which may easily occur when students are on campus only four years which is, after all, a relatively short time. Joubert explained.

He prefaced his remarks on the disadvantages of a student political party by saying that he had gathered these ideas through questioning students and faculty members on the subject. The first arguments usually given against active student participation in political affairs is that students are too immature, too irresponsible, too lacking in interest and that they need to be governed from above. Joubert said that these ideas stated that a student party would be organized militaristically and for the purpose of fighting and that the students really don't have the intelligence to participate. He then pointed out that there may be objections to the student party but that this is not one of them. He illustrated this point by observing that the majority of the voters in the United States today have even graduated from high school. If the college students don't have the intelligence and maturity to govern themselves, how can a group in the United States has. Joubert argued.

A second argument advanced against student political parties was that the students had too much to do that they don't have time to participate. Joubert stressed the importance of learning to participate in politics and explained that students might benefit more by such participation than through some other activities.

A third argument expressed was that "women are not made to participate in politics." In answer to this, Joubert said that if there is an interest on the part of the participants to do constructive things, there is a place for participation.

Joubert offered several warnings to those who are organizing the Student party on this campus: (1) Be sure to be sincere in their participation in a democratic society.

He pointed out that there is a danger of collecting a group of "iconoclasts and cynics" whose only purpose is the vilification and slander of those with whom they disagree. He stressed the fact that such an organization must be constructive and not destructive. He warned against setting up political benefit as an objective and explained that the organization needed a strong, constructive ideal to work toward, that ideal being a greater Florida State college for women.

"There is no use in advocating change for change's sake," Joubert warned. While working toward an ideal, there is a need to preserve worthwhile institution. He also stressed the point that it is essential to adopt a constitute of cooperation rather than antagonism toward those who are above in power. Student rights are delegated toward those who are above in power and students should have a cooperative attitude toward these powers.

Joubert stated that if there are changes which the students wish they won't get them by sitting down; there must be a permanent organization with an active membership. In conclusion he admonished the students, "Work and study and fight and fight and be willing to take defeat like good sports if it comes."

In the discussion that followed, the need of a party platform was pointed out and it was suggested that there be a committee to discuss and set up tentative objectives.

Harriet Benson announced that Dr. Harold Richards would speak at the next meeting which will be on Dec. 4. This will be the last meeting before Christmas vacation.

Browsing Room Is Only Place Where Studying Is Prohibited

No Textbooks Allowed in Comfortably Furnished Lounge for Recreational Reading

BY LORRAINE COTTRELL

Students three steps from the inside of the door of the library one may find perhaps the only room in an academic building of the Florida State college for women campus where studying is prohibited.

The browsing room of the library provides a pleasant and educational form of recreation in a home-like atmosphere where one may browse among the volumes to glimpse the life of Amelia Earhart, climb on a fairy tale, peruse Morley, dabble among the arts, or galivant about the globe in general.

The browsing room had its initial opening in 1931. The 1929 graduating class of Florida State college provided for the furnishings and the College Government association of 1930 gave $200 which was the first gift for books. Due to this voluntary interest of the College Government Association in the promotion of the browsing room, the Carnegie corporation donated $5,000 for the Marion Talley books and the hire of a student assistant. Mrs. Mae Leslie Cone Richardson, librarian and professor of library science will discuss books that are appropriate for Christmas gifts Also Dr William Dodd, dean of the college of arts and sciences, will read "The Christmas Carol" by Charles Dickens.

Throughout the year the members of the library staff will give book reviews and hold informal discussions.

From the opinions of various students who use the browsing room, it is concluded that the room is fully enjoyed. It offers a homelike atmosphere as well as the splendid choice of reading material. It is to be either "dated," "chewed," or "swallowed" according to the time and mood taste the individuals has to apply.

Who Outfitted Art Teacher's Chilly Venus

Canfield Discovers That Mysterious Person Has Clothed Statue

And have you seen Venus's new fall wardrobe? She presented a favorable picture when she swung last week especially for Miss Lucian Canfield, assistant professor of fine arts, in the form of one of her two student assistants.

It seems that Venus got chilly and, having been noticed the latest campus fads in clothes, she has agonized by her jealousy for some of her own.

So, when Miss Canfield calmly entered the room on said evening, just what should she see before her but a one-man—or should we say woman—fashion parade showing such good taste in the choice of her artistic clothing as to be positively unique only with a more experienced art critic. Venus refused to reveal where she begged, borrowed, or stole her clothes.

A huge red scarf was draped about her body and ended in a most effective bow on top, while a white sweater and multi-colored apron completed the outfit.

Dashing to Marge's room to find out the name of her strange proceedings, Miss Canfield was met by an equally dazed expression on her assistant's face. "No, I don't do it," was the only reply she received.

Further investigation revealed no definite clue to anyone's guilt, but the finger still points to one person unknown who dressed Venus was that freedom of the press carries with it certain limitations and responsibilities.

Midge said that one of the most interesting talks was made by H. C. L. Jackson about newspaper columns.

One speaker wanted a more streamlined system of make-up. He suggested the tabloid size paper. Another refer to the suggestion the Emory Wheel as an example. He pleaded for intelligent tricks of make-up against make-up for beauty.

In a huge banquet given by the General Motors company, Charles F. Kettering, vice president of the company, spoke on "Research in the World of Tomorrow."

At the annual meeting of the convention Marcel F. Poder, roving editor of Reader's Digest and the Chicago Daily News Syndicate told of "History in the Making" as he has covered it. He has been present at every major world event for the past 20 years.

According to Midge, the convention was a success and all of the delegates came back with new ideas for their publications. Other students who went to the convention were Harriet Benson, business manager of the Flambeau; Sonia Mitchell, editor of the Flastacowo; Mary Myers Alford, business manager of the Flastacowo, and Vivian Ahlswelt, editor of the Dotaff.

Ratcliffe Plays Many Roles

England Has Been Expanding Coeducational Colleges at Expense of Girls' Schools, According to British Lecturer

BY ELEANOR YOTHERS

Traveler, journalist, lecturer, professor, and author are roles which S. K. Ratcliffe has acted during his life. It was in his latter capacity as a lecturer that the noted Englishman spent two days last week at the Florida State college for women.

This short, thick-set, white-haired gentleman, decidedly English, has been lecturing in the United States and abroad for the past 25 consecutive years. He has made seven trips to the Florida State college campus with his wife while on a lecture tour in 1936.

In connection with his lecturing with that of four years ago, the only changes Ratcliffe noticed were the new buildings which he found upon his return visit. He explained that American colleges have more advantages than English colleges as they are greater in number and larger in size. The reason for this is that the control of many universities in England is in the hands of religious groups. Ratcliffe explained that there is no coeducational school that girls' colleges are more numerous than boys' and that there is in the direction of co-education. "Coeducational schools are limited in number."

The first coeducational college at Oxford are separate foundations. Women were admitted to Oxford 40 years ago by an Oxford statute limits the number of female students to not more than 25 per cent of the total enrollment. The women's college in Oxford are Oxford, while Cambridge still withholds them from the students. The girls' colleges are small. The courses in the women's educational institutions are in the same manner as new for the daily newspapers. These methods of college reporting are often inconsistent, according to the Englishman. This is especially true in regard to reporting cancellations. Ratcliffe cited his lecturer's experience that very rarely does the college reporter attempt to write a summary of the talk. As a result, often times it is the speaker considers incidental is emphasized by the amateur reporter and will appear in headlines in the next issue

The college reporter should learn to write a summary report of the lecture done by professional from the universally serious practice of misquoting. Mr. Ratcliffe suggests that the best hand in putting the reporter's words in quotation marks is the place of direct direct quotations from the speaker can be remedied if the reporter would take shorthand. However, most of American reporters are done by longhand while in Britain it is done mostly in shorthand. In using the longhand method off reporting as Mr. Ratcliffe himself does, reporters should train their memories to recall the points and the theme of an address.

Also there are very few departments of journalism in British universities. London university, to which Mr. Ratcliffe was connected as lecturer of the university extension department, was a pioneer in this field. In these journalism departments the newspaper staffs is not stressed. Instead they guide the student in taking the subjects most valuable to journalists such as economic courses and such subjects that are needed as a background for journalistic work.

Mr. Ratcliffe has been traveling in the United States with his daughter for the past two years and has seen no direct evidence of opposition to the draft among the people. Usually he returns to England in the spring, but this year he had no reason to go back as he could be of no use except in speaking to the men in the canada. He visited in America also because it was election year and he wanted to see the whole of an American campaign.

Throughout this past year he has been speaking and traveling mostly in the middle west. From Tallahassee he flew back to New York. After leaving New York he will proceed to Canada where he will be speaking to Canadian clubs for three weeks, going as far west as Vancouver. Then he will sail for present time Mr. Ratcliffe is a traveling correspondent of the Spectator, English weekly journal.

Mr. English home is at Buckinghamshire, between London and Oxford. It is at Beaconsfield in the path of air raids. He has two daughters, one with him in the United States, the other married in England, and a son, Prancis. The son is in the secret service of the Australian government and has written a book called "Flying Fox and Drifting Sand," which concerns his studies of the Australian desert. He is 29.

Concerning the war, Mr. Ratcliffe says the British are independent of winning, but that the war is now entering on its most crucial stage. "We have already had more air raids now than before. We are changing the character of their war tactics slightly. At present the Germans have switched from their slow, heavy bombers to lighter, swifter planes. They are also bringing the submarine into active play. Until the fall of France, Britain controlled it; the majority of United States citizens do not regard the war as extremely serious.

torium to view their work as the demonstration will be given that night. Most of them begin to get their costumes together early in the scenery, especially if one period is planted lighter blue than the others.

As soon as the theme for the demonstration is announced by the chairmen of the costume committee, they begin to plan the costumes. Bolts of material, thread, materials needs and thimbles are collected and work begins. Needles are busy up until the day of the demonstration and every one is costume in condition. Of course, some costumes are of a different type entirely and have to be made of tin cardboard, straw, leather or other material. Also the shoe for costume usually takes more painstaking work. It must be comfortable more exactly, and welded, pasted or drawn together in some way. The costumes are of every description seen by the student body for

Venable Uses Real Turkey for Lesson

Students Learn To Carve For Thanksgiving

Preface to Thanksgiving came last night when Miss Leila Venable carved a real turkey for the 4-H club and their guests in the basement of the Student-Alumnae building.

The lesson in carving was open to all students and intended especially for the students who will sit at heads of tables next Thursday in the dining room. Two tables were set up with exhibits, one bearing the turkey and needed implements, the other a simple arrangement of fruit and vegetables. The purpose of the display was to show how an attractive Thanksgiving table decoration could be produced at a small initial cost by using produce.

Miss Venable was assisted by Marjorie Nesmith of the 4-H club who handed her implements as she needed them, Wilma Smith, Frances Bell and Mary Ruth Hendricks are in charge of the program. Miss Venable is transferred from the local home demonstration office.

Boyer Brings Sighs, Tears

As the lights grow dim, a moment's hush comes over the crowd of 1,000 spectators. Then to end a auditorium, a girl murmurs, "I wonder if I will be able to understand this movie at all as it is in French." "Sh," whispers her neighbor, while the title reveals Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux in "Peasants."

At the beginning of the picture soldiers march through the streets, while occasionally the camera flashes on the screen. "Isn't he handsome?" and "Look at her eyelids, that's an unknown voice saying. Then the first love affair of Archduke Rudioph and Marie Bastevra achieved the effect of a sentimental drama in a trance by the climax of the drama. A few couples keep back the tears and as some girl correctly remarked, "I hate to break this beautiful spell by going back to studying."

Students Practice Camp Technique

Class Donates Hanging And Vane to Camp Flastacowo

The camp leadership class spent last Saturday and Sunday at Camp Flastacowo getting practice out during the weekend. Games, handicrafts, and stunts were built around nature subjects, and the students studied the plant life at the camp.

The group left for the camp in a spater-print wall hanging in the new camp house. They also made and donated to Flastacowo a weather vane designed as a silhouette of Pegasus, the winged horse. This weather vane will be placed on the boat house to provide help in directing courses for "sailors" using camp sailboats.

Miss Mary Sehlle, instructor of the class, and Mrs. Betty Komark, nature specialist, led the group.

Childhood Books Go On Display

Library Features Group Of Favorite Stories For Young Readers

The library display this week features books for young children. The poster outside the periodical room is a miniature from favorite childhood books, such as "Black Beauty," "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," "Tom Sawyer" and many others that recall happy memories of lovely ladies, gallant knights and animals that talked.

The display in the center of the lobby displays a collection of interesting and inexpensive editions of books for small children, while just another display case contains books that have won the John Newbery Medal for their contributions to literature for children.

On the small desk in the left-hand corner of the lobby are several books and periodicals that are of and to interest the youngsters. A larger bookshelf contains books that appeal to the child, the adolescent, the adult, and the aged, while for the Florida State college student there is a small display of books a college girl would like to own.

Astronomy Group Elects Officers

The Astronomy club met Tuesday night and election of officers was held. The following were elected: Sue Erwin, president; Mabel Jackson, vice-president; Ruth Thomas, secretary; Catherine Quinby, treasurer; Catherine Bellamy, publicity chairman.

Plans were made to hold a telescopic observation at the next meeting on November 26. The following meeting will be held on December 3, and will include photography of the moon and other heavenly bodies. A camp trip was planned for the second semester. The club holds three meetings monthly, two of them being observations and the third consists of a program and business meeting. All meetings are held in 104 Westcott building at 9 o'clock.

Tam Thomas, Avis Tucker, Mary Dana Brown and Betty Sarvold. The sophomore tee or ax was composed of Frances Kirkland, Mary Lou Kine, Stella Valenti, Jo Fullerton, Beverly Burbans, Jo Miller, Diana Vergowe and Mary Pfeiffer, with Lela Laura, Penny Counselman, and Ruth Roelmer, as substitutes. The freshman teams was Dot Bryant, Marjorie Lambert, Carmen Crespo, Jere Turner, Mildred Jewett, Todd, Joan Schuh, Jeff Jeffries, and Nancy Teeple.

Performers in Winter Pageantry

The first performance of the annual water pageant presented by the members and minnows of the Tarpon club, to be held Saturday night, will be open to students. At later performances, next Thursday and Friday evenings, only parents and alumnae will be admitted. Members taking part are: Vivian Adamo, Mildred Anderson, Gale Angus, Mary Armes, Peggy Barker, Barbara Beckwith, Nancy Lee Doggett, Betty McMichael, Marion Swanson, Anne Wilson, and Edna Earl Wilson.

Mortar Board Plan Activities Guide

Honor Society to List All Organizations

Mortar Board project for the year is to investigate the publication of a guide or handbook concerning student activities. This guide will cover all campus organizations available to Florida State students and it will explain the work the organizations and how the students can get into them.

At the Mortar Board meeting held last Sunday night in Landis tea room, the girls planned to sell Coca-colas at the games this season. They will also sell peanuts at the Odd and Even Pajama Rush and volleyball games.

On the Sunday following Thanksgiving, the members will give an alumnae breakfast.

A culture meeting will be held next Sunday night in Mother Beth Purseon, the Phi Beta Phi house mother, will speak on the situation in Europe. The Mortar Board will invite about three guests.

Spirogira Makes Plans To Lead Odd Night Out And Entertain Alumnae

Spirogira, Odd honorary, has planned to take for this coming week's activities and will start the week by leading Odd "night out" on Tuesday night. On Wednesday they have reserved a section for Spirogira alumnae and actives at the demonstration and have sent invitations, for which reserved places to Esteron to be their guests that evening. Thursday Spirogira tables and tables for the members of the Odd teams have also been reserved.

The Spirogira goats will honor alumnae and actives at a reunion banquet at Camp Flastacowo Friday night. Elaborate plans have been completed for this affair. Saturday morning, they will climax their week of activity with their annual breakfast to be held at the Three Torches.

All Students Asked To Check Overcuts

Posted on the registrar's bulletin board is the list of all students who have overcuts recorded against them for the first quarter. Each student is asked to look to see if her name is one of those. Anyone thinking that a mistake has been made in her case should check on it at once in the registrar's office. Over-cuts which are not straightened out will result in loss of credit at the end of the semester.

Ahrendt, Winslow Will Give Recital

A joint violin and piano recital will be given by Mrs. Christine Ahrendt, violinist, and Miss Mary Esther Winslow, pianist, in Thomasville, Georgia, on next Tuesday night.

The concert is open to the public and will be presented under the auspices of the Thomasville study club, who present music programs bi-annually. This joint recital is the first of this season. The concert will begin at 8:30 o'clock in the Thomasville high school auditorium.

Mrs. Winslow is a member of the school of music faculty, and Mrs. Ahrendt, an accomplished violin player, is the wife of Professor Ahrendt, head of the violin department.

Sophomore Council Will Sell Peanuts

Sophomore council will begin its series of fund-raising activities Tuesday night by selling peanuts at the Odd demonstration and also at the Even demonstration on Wednesday night.

Council members will act as ushers at the Tarpon club demonstrations Thursday and Friday nights, at the University of Florida swimming exhibition, and at the Odd-Even pajama parade Monday morning in the gymnasium.

Alumnae will also be assisted in various ways throughout the homecoming weekend.

Eta Sigma Phi Conducts Program On Greek Play

Members of Eta Sigma Phi, national classical honorary, gave a program on Plautus at the meeting of the Classical club Monday night.

Jean McDowell gave the background of Roman comedy and its origin from Greek comedy. Roxiby Kelton gave the life of Plautus and his style of writing. Lenore Cohen presented a review of the original "Amphitryon," and Louise Whittier gave a talk on the new "Amphitryon 38" presented on Broadway by Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontaine.

IRC Will Meet At Gainesville

Holbert to Read Paper On Potential Danger In South America

"Europe, the War, and the Americas" will be the theme of the 1940 Florida state conference of the International Relations clubs which will be held at the University of Florida on December 14 and 15. Among the papers which will be read at this conference will be one by Paisly Holbert on "The Dangers of Totalitarian Influence in South America."

Several Florida State students will be chairmen of round table discussions on "The Western Hemisphere," "The Far East" and "The United States and England." All the meetings of the conference will be held in the Florida Union hall and the banquet hall.

Miss Amy Hemingway Jones, division assistant of Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, will preside at several of the meetings. At this time Dr. Marion Irish, associate professor of Political Science, and Johnnymae Wright, president of IRC, will confer with Miss Jones on the plans for the Southeastern Regional Internation Relations club conference which will be held here in February.

Any member of this division of the International Relations club may attend the state conference in Gainesville. So far 18 students are planning to attend.

Caretaker Of Library Dies

On last Monday night, Stents Watson, janitor in the library for the past ten years, died after an illness of only a few days.

It is thought he was a native of Marianna, the funeral services will be held this Sunday in Tallahassee at the church of God where he was minister. Burial will take place Sunday afternoon in the family plot in Marianna. He leaves a wife, a son, and two granddaughters.

Stents was a familiar character to all faculty members and students who saw him in the library. He will be missed as one of the most important and finest part of the campus. He guarded it as if it had been his own home, and always carried out his orders to the letter. He took care of the reference room, catalogue room, and the desk, although he was interested in the library as a whole.

Not long ago Stents began laying the foundation for a new church he was starting to build on West Georgia at set in Tallahassee. The only vacation he ever took was a week each spring in order to attend a church conference.

HOW TO WIN BOY-FRIENDS AND INFLUENCE STAG-LINES

By Dalea Dorothy Clix

Dear Miss Clix: Oh, if human beings only had wings, instead of hands! This summer I met a young glidar pilot. He took soaring among the clouds for hours, day after day. I begged him to help falling desperately in love! But on every forms my Bird-Man is as impersonal as a sea gull sitting on an ice-floe! Why won't he notice my beating heart?

DESPERATE

Dear "Desperate": You say your Young Mr. Icarus is "impersonal." Well, what about yourself? When you're not swooping among the clouds, how do you look? Mannish clothes, nose shiny, hair disheveled? Or, have you learned how to "go feminine" in your dalliance? Do you take real trouble with your hair? with your make-up and lips? with your hands—yes, and with that all-important matter, your fingernails? You'll get lots farther with expressive, alluring hands than you would with flapping wings, if it's a man's heart you're reaching for!

AND NOW, DEAR, READ THE NEXT COLUMN CAREFULLY!

WHAT YOU CAN DO TO HAVE MORE BEAUTIFUL NAILS

Let the brilliant, gem-hard lustre of DURA-GLOSS give your fingernails that marvelous attraction and allure that men admire! DURA-GLOSS is the smartest new nail polish that's different! DURA-GLOSS flows on more smoothly, leaves the brilliant beauty of color longer, resists tackling and chipping before! Have the most beautiful fingernails in the world—buy DURA-GLOSS!

Girls Rest Up After Holiday

The Tuesday and Wednesday following Armistice girls with drooping eye lids and lagging steps filed down to the infirmary to sleep off the effects of the holidays. According to infirmary records there are approximately 50 percent more girls who enter the infirmary at this time than at any other specific period. On Wednesday after dinner the 62 girls came into the infirmary merely to lie down for an hour or two.

The average number of students entering in one day ranges from 15 to 20. This number has decreased since last year. Miss Florence Cook, the head nurse, said that it was necessary to have last year for 50 or 60 to come into the infirmary in one day.

A decrease in the number of the more serious cases is reported although there are more office calls of a less serious nature.

4-H Club Receives Bid To Rural Youth Session

Florida State college 4-H girls have just received an invitation from the University of Florida 4-H club to participate in the annual rural youth conference to be held there later this year.

At the business meeting of the group last night, Frances Palmer, president, appointed a committee of four, Dorcas Stone, Rosiln Kelley, Wilma Smith, and Lizzie Mae Cowan, to make arrangements with the Gainesville boys for the meeting.

Tarpons Reveal Pageant Plans

'Water We?—Americans' Is Title Of Six-Act Aquatic Show

"Water We?—Americans" is the title of the six-act water pageant to be presented by the Tarpon club for the alumnae guests next Thursday and Friday evenings.

A patriotic theme will be carried out and will be featured by the tarpons swimming while carrying American flags. Patriotic music will be played throughout the pageant. At one end of the pool will be a large outline map of the United States with a six-foot Uncle Sam standing inside it. Above this will be the words "God Bless America."

Decorating the other side of the pool will be red and white horizontal stripes adorned with blue stars, while the lights overhead will have little red, white, and blue stars pasted on them. Programs will also carry out the patriotic theme and colors.

Coming in the corner of the pool Eleanor Merrill, honorary member of the Tarpon club, will stand in and "God Bless America" dress and will announce the acts by use of placards around her neck. She will represent the "Spirit of America."

The first act entitled "We're Prepared" includes formation swimming by tarpons and the minnows Act two, "We Fly," is a diving exhibition, while act three, "We Figure" will be done by the minnows.

Act four, "We Spectator", a sextet composed of Tarpons will feature small electric lights fastened to their arms and suit. Comprising the group are Irene Rokr, Lois Irene Pence, Edna Earl Wilson, Nancy Lee Doggett, and Marion Swanson.

A decrease in the number of the more serious cases is reported although there are more office calls of a less serious nature.

For Our Protection

Several years ago there was much discussion and agitation on this campus over the then current vogue of conversation — social diseases. Magazines and newspapers were then carrying articles on the dread infections. Speakers traveled the country enlightening the public concerning a subject that had long been veiled. At that time the State Department of Public Health conducted a clinic here at the infirmary, giving Wasserman tests to all who applied. About 700 students took the tests, none of which proved positive. Perhaps this encouraging fact suspended the fears of those here who had vocally expressed their opinions on the matter. For some reason or other the campus has stopped voicing its fears, and the issue of social diseases has been tabled.

Yet was the fact that 700 students of 1800 enrolled took tests that proved negative indicative of complete freedom from infection then, or is it indicative of such a condition now? What evidence is there that those students were representative of the entire student body or that all those who might have had fears of infection offered themselves for tests? In view of these questions, we wish to reopen the issue, not for the thrill of discussing a subject long taboo but from a desire to insure the good health conditions of student body.

Few medical authorities expect much trouble from the selective group that forms a college student body of this type, yet them all agree that it is advisable and expedient for everyone to take tests from time to time. According to a pamphlet issued recently by the United States Public Health service, fifty per cent of all syphilis cases are acquired innocently. Although there are those who disagree with this view, it is a fact that makes us sit up and take notice. Here where students live in close communal contact, where we often borrow drinking glasses, take a drag from a friend's cigarette, or use her lipstick, one infected case could cause much misery.

For personal and group protection, stress on the importance of early knowledge of infection seems imminently necessary. Several courses have been suggested to us as expedient answers to the problem. The most desirable in our way of thinking is compulsory Wasserman tests for all as a part of the regular medical examination before matriculation. This idea probably sounds obnoxious, as the very word compulsory is enough to stave off many. We, too, know that few want to be told to take a test for syphilis. No matter how much we try to remember that many cases are contracted innocently, there is something condemning in the thought of being forced to take a test for a social disease. Yet, remembering the clinic held here three years ago, we know that many girls who secretly wanted to have their blood tested stayed away because of embarrassment, fear, or pride. If everyone had their blood tested as a matter of course along with blood pressure, lungs, pulse, and skin, the tests would probably take on a different color. Should the tests prove negative, we could feel a little safer, a little more select, and should the tests prove positive, we would have the advantage of treatment either at home or at the infirmary.

In conclusion, we quote an article on syphilis published in the American Journal of Public Health for July, 1939: "Establishment of easily accessible, well-managed syphilis clinics may encourage infected persons to seek treatment earlier than they otherwise would, but a serious obstacle to complete success of this method is offered by the fact that many infected persons are completely unaware of the presence of syphilitic lesions during a period in which these lesions are most highly infective. This is particularly true in regard to females. Moreover, infectious cases of syphilis occur principally among youth and young adults. It is of the utmost importance, therefore, that the syphilis control program should include adequate facilities for seeking out persons who are potential sources of infection in order that they may be brought under medical care and rendered non-infectious as promptly as possible."

We Give Thanks

Next Thursday the campus will celebrate Thanksgiving. Besides the conventional birds, bees, and flowers that we've always heard about, we have a great many other things to really stop and be thankful for. Of course, we have overloaded schedules, term papers, and unfaithful boy friends, but the planes that fly over the college's Gothic structures at seven in the morning, although they are instruments of death and destruction, have no intention of harming our peaceful, secluded settlement. Death, destruction, and real war are totally unknown to us. For all this we certainly have something for which to be thankful.

To get down to our immediate surroundings we also have something that a great many of us think we have a right to give thanks for. That something is a chance for student expression which in these days of censorship and general reactionary tendencies is continually becoming more precious. At present the student publications on our campus, in spite of subtle pressure that is constantly exerted on them, still feel that they have a fighting chance to make the wishes of the students, minorities and majorities, known to those who hold the strings. To this we have a right, by all definitions of democracy, and for this we are indeed thankful.

Some members of our campus community, however, often seem to view the idea of student expression from a more or less totalitarian perspective. They seem to forget that freedom of speech and freedom of editorial expression on all subjects and in all forms is something to be cherished and perpetuated.

Which all brings to mind the editorial, "Democracy at Home," which appears in the current issue of the Distaff and which has caused a great deal of comment in many campus circles. It is not our point here to praise or oppose what the editor has said, but merely to defend her right to say it. And to say we are thankful for our chances of expression and for those students who are willing to have their opinions printed.

First of all, the editor has been charged with being "destructive instead of constructive" whatever that may mean. But so long as a democratically elected editor uses facts as the bases for her writing doesn't she have a right to point out conditions and situations that she believes are unjust and need correction even though she has no definite remedy to offer? Is she at fault merely because she's alive and awake?

Then some students have gone so far as to say that the editor is using strong handed methods to present the opinion of one group and suppress that of another. But let's see. Has anyone ever heard of a campus publication refusing to print the opinions of all students on our campus? Aren't the pages of the magazine and newspaper open to all who are willing and interested enough to contribute. Anyone who has worked on either organ, and most of those who haven't, will understand the necessity of printing the material available. If it is all of one mood and color, is the editor at fault?

We believe that in presenting such views against the editor, students are condemning themselves on just such grounds as they roast the publication heed.

Yes, believe in our right of expression, believe in it with all our hearts. We're willing to fight for it and at this time of year, when thanksgiving is in order, to give thanks for what we have.

Children Or Adults?

Are we, the students of Florida State college, adults? We like to think that we are. In fact, our trump card in any agitation for more freedom is the fact that we are. We ask that rules and regulations be modified; we beg on bended knee for an honor system; we ask that we be given unlimited cuts. And we claim that because we are grown up, because we have an adult view point, we deserve to be treated as such. There isn't a student in this institution who would not be over-joyed were we given any one of the above mentioned things.

One of the best places to prove ourselves members of a responsible society is in our own library. This beautiful building, containing a very fine collection of books is ours—yours and mine. However, it is ours to use and not to abuse. We are free at any time to use the various books and materials contained therein. We also enjoy the privilege of having open stacks, something which many colleges and universities do not have. How very lucky we are to be free to wander through the rows of books, examining them at our leisure. Haven't you often gone into the stacks in search of a particular book and become so engrossed in the many fascinating volumes to be found there that you completely forget what you came for? Haven't you often wished you had nothing else to do but spend an afternoon delving into some of the books you see on the shelves? There is nothing so stimulating to one's appetite for knowledge as to see worth-while books arrayed before you.

If we have an honor system any where on this campus, we have it in our library. Here is our chance to prove that we have developed the proper attitude, an attitude of responsibility and respect for the property of others and of society.

From July 1, 1938 to July 1, 1940, a total of 421 books were taken from and never returned to the library.. This is appalling, to say the least. This is something of which we are rightfully ashamed. We tell of the beauty of our campus, we are proud of our buildings and our scholastic rating, but we don't tell that hundreds of books are stolen each year by US. As college women, we will some day become the backbone of American society. How, pray tell, can we make ourselves worthy of such a place if we aren't even honest?

Collegiate Comebacks

Stuck away in a wee small corner of last week's Daily Democrat (and it should have been splashed across the front page), was the item that 60 officers and 1200 men are going to spend a couple of days here on their way to Blanding. We would like to offer our little bit to make America safer for you know what. Our suggestion is that we hand 'em over the campus—complete with little gold handbook. We need the vacation anyhow and they should feel right at home with bells and light flashes, facilities for court martial and what have you. All we are really lacking is facilities for K. P. duty, and that could be arranged. After all, we're very adaptive people!

And speaking of being open to new and different ideas, we are glad to see the force of progress playing upon our campus. After a very heated meeting, the senior class decided to bow to change—youth, so ready to adapt itself to anything progressive, and all that—and to have senior dinner in Landis instead of Bryan dining room. This, it seems, will be bad because underclassmen can't stand on both sides of the arcade to watch the seniors carrying candles into the D. R. We can just see hundreds of froshs, sophs, and juniors, trying to hide their disappointment and holding back a tear, while eating food made tasteless by a frustrated desire to see all the pretty caps and gowns. Wherever there's progress, there's heartbreak.

We wrote the following poem when we realized that Thanksgiving was almost upon us and we couldn't think of anything to be thankful for except that we were still living, and when we considered that angle we wondered if it was worth it, what with term papers, etc. to be done. We were lost in deep thought for hours and finally discovered quite a number of items, which might, or might not be worth pondering over for a whole day Thursday week.

We're thankful that we're not on pro, (Like so many charming girls
we know),
That Christmas time will soon be here, (Since September 8 it's been crawling near.)

Then there's Odd-Even play with its fire and spirit,
If they broadcast maybe we can hear it,
For weekends from which we come back dead,
And recup in a nice warm infirmary bed.

For rules to keep us out of harm,
And the social committee to add to our charm,
For eight months to store up our summer vim,
We bow our heads for this interim.

Ten minutes of silent preoccupation, if you please.

Oh, yes, we almost forgot, we're thankful too, that the university is a mere 150 miles away, and that they have a football team so that we can get real honest-to-goodness-lump-in-the - throat, school spirit.

Since our guiding stars have decided that the Flambeau staff must play Cinderella and be in by twelve or else—, we have come to the conclusion that it was a misguided soul who wrote, "The pen is mightier than the sword."

If the paper ever appears with the front page blank, you can always use it to take notes on and be glad that the Flambeau staff had a good night's sleep—unless they were conscientious enough to develop a case of insomnia from worrying about the paper.

The following item reminds us of a story we read once about college life. The hero was the same sort of "rah! rah!" boy as our hero.

After consoling any number of our friends who all thought they had dates with the same man this weekend, we've come to the conclusion that he sends out mimeographed form letters asking for dates whenever he decides to come up and give the girls a break.

In case you ever get a post card signed the "Silent Lover" pay it no heed—you're merely one of the masses.

Electrostatic experts report that lightning strikes planes hundreds of times yearly, without damage, but none will state definitely that a direct bolt wouldn't injure the plane or occupants.

Of The World

On The Labor Front

John L. Lewis surprised many throughout the United States when he kept his election promise and resigned Monday from his post as head of the CIO. Calling the convention to order for the last time, a thunderous applause greeted him. A hushed silence prevailed when he dramatically announced his plan. In his opening address he made a plea for unity, saying that a leader could be strong only through cooperation from the members of the organization. Lewis' successor will in all probability be Phillip Murray, able, moderate, vice-president of the CIO and of the United Mine Workers. Since Lewis has no intentions of resigning from his post as president of the United Mine Workers, he will continue to exert control over the CIO.

All hopes that the resignation of Lewis would bring about peace between the AFL and the CIO were blasted by an address Tuesday, when Lewis bitterly attacked the AFL leader, whom he referred to as "Old Lady Green," and declared that the CIO would continue as an independent body. He made a fervent and emotional appeal to the members of the CIO to keep the organization alive. William Green has been for some time ready to meet with the leader of the CIO to discuss terms by which the two labor camps might reach unity, but due to the personal bitterness of Lewis, there has been no such conference. Any peace terms proposed by the AFL and presented to the probable president-to-be Murray, will be subjected to Lewis' approval, which will in all probability never be secured. Sidney Hillman, who has long worked for unity between the CIO and the AFL proposed such a conference to discuss peace, but Lewis declared that no possibility for peace existed. So the domineering Lewis remains as the power behind the CIO.

In Congress

An unexpected surprise came Tuesday in the House of Representatives when a resolution to adjourn was defeated by a combined vote of the insurgent democrats and republicans. As a result, Congress will in all probability remain in session until January 3, when the new legislature will meet. Throughout the European crisis, the republicans have stubbornly opposed any move for adjournment. President

Or Forever Hold Your Peace . . .

(Editor's note: Student opinions will be accepted for publication in this column if mailed to the Flambeau or placed in Flambeau box in Westcott office by Wednesday. All articles must bear writer's name and address).

The writer who penned "Far From the Crowd" October 11 was so passionate and so obviously upset over Florida State girls' "scorn" for the outside world that I am finally aroused enough from my lethargy to rise up and say "Whoa!"

Surely this explosion wasn't brought on entirely by the smallness of the presidential straw ballot conducted on campus. That seems easily explained. It isn't that we aren't loyal Americans who fully appreciate and demand our right to free speech and proper representation. It isn't that we didn't care who were elected on November 5 to guide the United States through what may be the most difficult crisis since its founding. It's just that most of us realized that it was just a "straw ballot" and that our vote wouldn't make the slightest difference in the real election; so with so many other things to do that would make a difference we just plain forgot.

And then many of us didn't have a preference. This year's issues were so complex, party lines so loosely drawn, and presidential candidates seemingly agreed on so many major points that the election came close to being a choice of personalities (and knowing that our poppa's language on the subject has undoubtedly affected our opinion, some of us didn't vote).

I wouldn't have voted for the above reasons, and because I didn't want to cut up my Flambeau, if someone hadn't solicited my ballot and given me a plain piece of paper to vote on.

But as for the accusation that our thoughts are completely taken up with collegiate activities and happenings I say "Why not?" The fact that we have come to college at all shows our desire for a better way of life in a better world. Perhaps we are idealistic; perhaps we won't find our better life (the better world part of it seems doubtful in spite of the millions of people, excluding us preoccupied college students, who are concentrating on it), but while we are here why not concentrate on what we have come for?

I agree with Lula Joughin who wrote in favor of universal college

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK

Contemporary Student Thought . . .

Much antagonism over the entire country has resulted from the action taken at the University of Michigan. Last June thirteen students received word from the president of the college, Dr. Alexander G. Ruthven, as follows: "It is the decision of the authorities of the University of Michigan that you cannot be readmitted to the University," and the letters gave no reason for such a decision.

All of these students were active in the American Student Union. Some fought against Negro discriminations in Ann Arbor, Michigan, some helped organize an anti-war meeting in which 3,000 students took part; some assisted the UMWA-CIO in passing out union leaflets to the low-paid university employees.

The Reverend Owen A. Knox, chairman of the National Civil Rights conference, declared that "by barring from the University of Michigan those whose ideas on how democracy may best be preserved differ from his, Dr. Ruthven has shown that he is not willing to uphold the cornerstones of democracy. He is labeling those whose opinions he does not like 'radicals' or 'fifth columnists' with the implication that such people are somehow exempted from the guarantees of the Bill of Rights."

President of the American Civil Liberties said, "In 46 years I cannot recall a single instance of a well-behaved, industrious, mature student being barred from reentry because of his views on public questions."

No longer is this case a private affair. Millions of Americans throughout America have shown their concern at such a breach of American rights. "You be the judge—America be the jury," was the substance of the CIO paid circular sent out to various newspaper editors in the United States.

A most unusual comparison between the Michigan case and Millsap college, Jackson, Mississippi, was drawn by the Purple and White, Millsap newspaper. Several discussions and lectures have recently been made at Millsap college concerning the problem of Negro discrimination. Millsap students have quite openly attacked the situation, because they believe that they themselves cannot prosper until the Negro question is solved. The logical conclusion of the Michigan case in regard to some of the students being dismissed for Negro discriminations, leads the Southerners to believe that "the Northerners, who have always pictured the South as a hell of Negro persecution and tenant-farmer slavery, are now discriminating against the colored people themselves and assertedly shipping their students for objecting to it."

Paul Moritz, representative of the Student Service fund, who has just spent eleven months in China recently lectured at Louisiana State university concerning the problems Chinese college students are undergoing. Moritz has personally met many of the 45,000 students enrolled in Chinese colleges and universities and directly has come into contact with many of their difficulties. Because of Japanese bombings the institutions continually move from various places in China, necessitating continual moving on the part of the students also. What Chinese students cannot understand, says Moritz, is why the American religious organizations contribute in building their colleges, while so many of our business groups help make it possible for the Japanese to bomb them.

Because of these Japanese bombings, the educational institutions have lost their libraries, textbooks, and other supplies.

Inquiring Reporter . . .

What is your opinion of including the price of annual picture tickets in the yearly fees charged all students? Why?

In answer to the above question the overwhelming majority of the students asked favored the idea of the price of the tickets being included in the annual general fees. The most prevalent reason given was that the fact that the excessive cost was a tax on the budget of the student. Those who opposed the idea felt that it would be an infringement upon their right of choice.

Anne Shellhorse: "I think it would be a good idea for that way everyone would have her picture in the annual. It is often hard for students to pay out $2 at the time of having their pictures taken, but I don't believe it would be near as hard to pay it along with all the other fees."

Margaret Clements: "It most certainly should because I know right now I can't afford to scrape up the $2."

Frances Compher: "I think it should be included in the fees because a lot more students would have their pictures taken if it were."

Edna Mae Howard: "I do not favor the inclusion of annual picture tickets in the yearly fees. Many students have a tough time paying the fees already required. Year by year the fees are increased, and if we begin to include non-essentials in these fees we will soon make FSCW a "rich man's school" to which many daughters of tax payers who support this institution cannot afford to come. Annual picture tickets cannot be classed as physical or mental necessities—or even "cultural advantages." Besides, why not leave us a few choices to make?"

Helen Morrison: "It should. The girls around here, or most of them, usually have other uses for $2. It makes a hole in most of our budgets and results in an "out-of-season" request for money from home."

Beryl Dawson: "This is a a very good idea. I would much rather pay all my fees at one time."

Mary Monahan: "Yes, I like the idea. It's quite a shock to my budget when I have to pay $2 for a picture ticket. Anyway my father has to pay sooner or later, so why not make it sooner?"

Johnnyman Wright: "It seems to me that if we include the price of annual tickets in the yearly fees charged all students we'd avoid a lot of trouble collecting the money individually and would assure the picture of every student appearing in the annual. Yes, that would be a definite step in more centralization and greater ease in putting out the yearbook."

Harriet Benson: "On the surface, it sounds awfully good, but my opinion of it is that it's quite a bad idea. We have freedom to decide for ourselves few enough things—let's keep this freedom. Some of us don't care to have our pictures in and some of us can't really afford it. Why force us to buy what we don't want?"

Kathryn Donnelly: "A good

Formal Dance to Climax Thanksgiving Festivities On Next Saturday Night

With the music of Ted Sherwood's orchestra, the annual Thanksgiving formal dance will be held next Saturday in the college gymnasium. From 8 to 12 o'clock swinging skirts and formals will swing and sway in the clutching arms of the Thanksgiving celebration.

The color scheme for the decorations will be green and white and black and white, the colors of the Cotillion club and Village Vamps, respectively. At sometime during the dance members of these organizations will tap girls for membership.

Chaperones for the occasion are Dr. and Mrs. Paul Shankweiler, Dr. and Mrs. Coyle E. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Becker, and Mr. and Mrs. Royal Mattice.

Mary Lou Atkinson is chairman of the dance committee. Other members of the committee assisting her are Jane Price, in charge of arranging for the orchestra, and Mary Lou King, in securing the gym. Jean Chanel and Frances Cushing supervising the decorations. Nancy White limited the chaperones while Pat Channon and Mary Quinn Hudgins arranged the refreshments for them. Sandra Hawkins corrected the distribution of dance tickets. Audrey Atherton will direct checking at the door.

Morris said that "the most amazing thing of all is the courage of the students and their perseverance in the face of hardships." The students seem to blame the Japanese army rather than the Japanese people. The Chinese government, believing these Chinese students to be the future promising power of their nation, have refrained from drafting the students into military service.

Vesper Speaker Named

Miss Miriam Wilson, Presbyterian student secretary will give a talk at Vespers Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Westcott Tower room. The Baptist choir will sing at this time.

Publicity Heads Get Suggestions

Press Speakers Explain News Requirements To Chairmen

Publicity chairmen of all campus organizations and sororities were asked to attend the last meeting of the Press club, held Tuesday afternoon in order that they might learn what the publicity office and Flambeau want in the way of news.

Louise Burger, society editor of the Flambeau, was the first speaker, and addressed her remarks mainly to sororities. She suggested that, "When a reporter telephones to fing out the news, try to have it ready for her and give specifically the name of the function, date and place to be given, themes, refreshments, entertainment, honored guests, committee chairmen, and in the case of formal dances, the guest list."

Miss Rachel Pitchford, director of publicity, then told what she wanted for her office. She explained that the more the organizations help the publicity office, the more it can help them. "The biggest help the publicity chairmen can give is be sure to attend every meeting and keep notes on all that happens. Then make a typed copy of them and turn them in to the office as soon as possible."

Miss Pitchford told the chairmen that she liked to cater to local interest stories, but whenever the organization's publicity chairman is in doubt as to what to turn in, let the office do the selecting. She explained that the material goes out mainly to the Florida press, although the Associated Press uses some of it, so it is important when using names, that the complete name and title be given instead of nicknames. On important occasions it would be very helpful to forewarn the publicity office.

Belle Tonge, one of the news editors of the Flambeau, then explained what she wanted in the way of assistance from organizations. "All that Miss Pitchford has said goes for the Flambeau too," she said, "but let me emphasize the giving of time and place in all your information. Also try to give details, and if a reporter sends you a note, answer it telling where and when she can find you in order to get additional material for her story."

The main purpose of this meeting was to let the organizations know how they can help the reporters get their stories in on time, and in turn enable the Flambeau staff to finish its press work by midnight on Thursdays. newspapers may share control with the men who own them. The radio is looked to hopefully as a check on the newspapers.

"The New Deal is prepared to surrender much to prevent an open fight, but I hope there will be a limit to its patience. No government is good enough to be trusted with the control of the press. But control of the press by a few wealthy individuals and corporations may be just as unwholesome."

the newspapers didn't do their best. An analysis of how five leading pro-Willkie papers slanted their space during the campaign shows how hard they worked to elect their candidate.

"A good deal of nonsense about the past appears in attacks on the press. Newspapers today are probably edited with more decorum and fairness than formerly. Unfortunately the best that can be said for most of our newspapers is that they are not as unfair as they once were. They are not the medium they ought to be for the discussion and debate almost of the great issues before us.

Alpha Chapter Appoints Standing Committees For This Year

Standing committees for the 1940-41 year were announced at a meeting of the Alpha of Florida chapter, Phi Beta Kappa, held last night. The membership committee is headed by Dr. Dorothy Rose Blumer, assistant professor of psychology, acting as chairman. Members of the committee are Miss Myrtle Dolbee, assistant professor of Spanish and German; Dr. A. R. Seymour, professor of modern languages; Miss Margaret Dow, associate professor of music and theory; Miss Kathleen Gruppe, Landis hall director, and Mrs. H. H. Hoffman. The scholarship committee has as its members: Dr. Olivia N. Dorman, professor of classics and dean of students, chairman; Dr. Dorothy R. Breen, associate professor of Spanish and French; Miss Miriam Wilson, Frances Cofer, and Wilma Johns. Dr. H. R. Richards, professor of Physics, is chairman of the committee on endowment, and other members are, President Edward Conrad and Senator Claude Pepper.

Several proposed changes in the by-laws were discussed and acted upon. Consideration was also given to plans for the observance of Founder's Day which occurs on December 5. The original society was established at William and Mary college, December 5, 1776, thereby becoming the oldest Greek letter society.

At the annual business meeting of the Alpha chapter which was held recently, officers for the year 1940-41 were elected as follows: president, Dr. Venita Sheres, associate professor of history; vice-president, Miss Anna May Tracy dietition, associate professor of history; secretary, Dr. Viola Graham, associate professor of physiology; treasurer, Miss Ruth Fairman, assistant professor of Latin and Greek; historian, Mr. E. R. Smith, professor of mathematics.

Honorary Plans Alumnae Events

Esteren Will Entertain Spirogira Members

Plans are being made by members of Esteren for a homecoming of alumnae members of the Esteren honorary next week. This week-end members of Spirogira will receive invitations from Esteren to attend the Even demonstration Tuesday night. At the program that night the guests will be presented with favors symbolic of the occasion, Esteren will be guests of Spirogira at the Odd demonstration the following night.

Thursday morning the annual alumnae get-together will be in the form of an Esteren breakfast in Landis kitchen. Invitations to approximately one hundred alumnae and faculty members have been extended. Green and white, the honorary's colors, will be the featured colors at the meeting. Paper bows of these colors will be placed on each table.

Following breakfast, members of Esteren will attend the Odd-Even games together, after which they and their guests will eat Thanksgiving dinner together in the dining hall.

Members of Esteren are Jan Welch, Mart Brown, Peaches McKay, Ella Maude Jones, Marian Prevling, Grace Hall, Martha Stribling, Rosa Wood, Rosa Goals and Gwen Stevenson. Louise Crosby, Babette Mary Jane Medlin, Lou Atkinson and Chancey Owen.

Bombs on Britain

The German blitz throughout the past weeks have mercilessly attacked and left in ruins several of the larger English towns in the Midlands. Coventry, bombed last Thursday, was left in an appalling state after one of the heaviest, fiercest attacks yet staged by the Nazis. These determined attempts to beat the English into submission are taking their toll. The actual damage suffered through the attacks is kept a secret.

Yesterday the second of these attacks on the Midlands occurred, when wave after wave of Nazi bombers appeared over the industrial centers. The Germans hoped to have changed their tactics and intend to cripple the British industries instead of their merciless attacks on the civilian population of London. For the raids on the capital have grown less intense as other industrial

Annis Is Guest Speaker At Newman Club Meet

Dr. Edward Annis was the guest speaker of the Newman club at their meeting this week. His talk was entitled "The Newman Club."

Business discussed at the meeting included the planning for the Christmas party to be given by the freshmen for the upperclassmen. Lita Bowles was appointed general chairman and undercharmen include Pat Halleron, chairman of the refreshment committee; Betty Hennessee, chairman of decoration and finance; Pat Cavanough, game chairman; and Rosita Andris, invitation chairman. The party will be given in December.

Education Society Hears Sadie Young

Kappa Delta Pi, national educational honorary, had a meeting Monday night at 8 o'clock in the library of the Demonstration School. The general theme of the organization this year is "Universal Truths."

Miss Sadie O. Young of the economics department of Florida State college for women spoke on "The Prevailing School Thought in Economics." The meeting was open to both faculty and student guests.

The next meeting will be held December 17 with the annual Christmas program. At this time Mrs. D P Pinner, counselor of the group will tell a Christmas story

In the near future 20 "flying fortresses" will also be sent, it is believed. Since the heavy raids on the Midlands, the operations against them more than ever.

Catholics Attend Southern Meeting

Twenty-five students from this campus are planning to attend the annual Southeastern conference of the Federation of Newman Clubs on the campus of the Georgia School of Technology this weekend.

Activities there will include not only a business meeting but also the Florida-Georgia Tech football game and a banquet at which Dr. L. N. Britain, president of Georgia Tech; Bishop O'Hara of Savannah and Atlanta; and Bernard B. Kane, president of Catholic Layman association of Georgia, will speak. This will be followed by a large dance.

Of the 25 girls attending from FSCW there are two official delegates: Kathleen McCarthy, senior delegate, and Thea Bullock, junior delegate. Other students who will make the trip are Frances Dunaway-Wilson, Alice Hobson, Rachel Erwin, Carmen Alvarez, Nana Kurtz, Josephine Castellano, Vivian Guastlardo, Ruth Hendricks, Joy Willis, Pat Carroll, Rosita Andris, Nancy Coleman, Pat Hansen, Betty Gilbert, Theresa Bullock, Elizabeth Waterman, Stella Valentine, Dorothy Day, Mary Olive Pinckney, Betty Hennessee, Gene Dountry, Jeanne Chasel, Lorraine Cottrell.

Thanksgiving Is Theme Of J W O Formal Banquet And Dance Tomorrow

Tomorrow night the 60 members of the Jewish Women's organization will be hostesses at their annual formal dance and banquet. A Thanksgiving motive will be carried out in both the decorations and the favors.

The banquet is to be held at the Cherokee hotel. Blanche Saul, social chairman, is in charge of arrangements.

The club room is to be the scene of the dance. Sim Arnes heads the committee for decorating the hall. The club colors of blue and white and a varied assortment of colors will be used.

Lillian Rosin and Florence Lutz are other committee heads who will serve with Miriam Bushell, president. Sara Tepper, treasurers, and Selma Schloss, secretary, as official hostesses.

Ben and Mrs. Robert Miller, Dr. Hugh Wasoom, and Dr. and Mrs David Max Steyer will be the honored guests and chaperons at the J. W. O. national Hillel foundation dance

Odd and Even Honoraries Forget Rivalry At Party

Casting Odd and Even rivalry aside, members of Esteren and Spirogira had a breakfast together at the Sweet Shop Wednesday morning. Place cards for those girls in the Odd honorary bore the members' names with small Odd caps in the corner. Esteren place cards were labeled with small feathers.

At this time Spirogira extended an invitation to Esteren to spend a weekend at camp with them on December the fourteenth. After plans for this were discussed, the two organizations sang Odd and Even songs.

"Even Dealers" Win Election In Landslide

Joe's Steven" Patch Up Romance; All Ends In Happy Climax

Grant Replaces Brown As Demonstration Cast

Pat R. Right, the candidate of the Even Deal, defeated Mrs. Joe's Steven, the Ordinary party candidate on Tuesday night in the even demonstration which was received amid a tumult of rock, sand, and good luck tele-type. Addison directed the demonstration.

The last minute change in the cast of the even performance was caused by a knee injury to Mary Brown while playing basketball. She was replaced by Pat Right, who won last in the role of Steven. Eve's fiance.

Professor Stamp

Mrs. Stanley Stamp, Jeanette Crane and Dot Hickman sang a quintet immediately preceding the rise of the first curtain during the Even Deal political rally held Monday in the Gym-Dandi- pressed their fellow- ed election of all would carry the aims of her party, while Mrs. Sarah Bryant) patiently waited for the Steven Party to get in a few minutes alone with his love.

As entertainment for loyal supporters of Eve, the Jitterbugs Augusta Alberson and Ida B Sanders and Mildred Bolley then sang a duet from the opera "Tales of Hoffman"

The lovers moments alone came to an end when Mrs. Stamp returned to a hotel terrace. After Steven's pleading his love and asking Eve to accept his ring immediately instead of waiting for the election to end, Steven failed to step on his shoulder. While Eve was trying to figure out the form of ballroom dancing Mr. Martha Rosborg singing "Cats and Day."

Hay Plans Talk On Her Travels

Exhibit Of Travel Books Featured This Week In Browsing Room

Dr. Marion J. Hay, associate professor of education, will give an informal talk about her travels in the exhibition at 7:30 o'clock today in the Browsing room of the library.

Dr Hay and her husband, Harry Hay, associate professor of travel bureau in Tallahassee, have planned and conducted tours of Europe and America for the students, faculty members and alumnae of Florida State college for women. His year due to conditions abroad the tour was conducted western Mexico.

A display of travel books chosen from the collection of some two or three thousand books will be exhibited on the various tables in the Browsing room. These books will be placed there for the amusement of the students who are interested in travel.

Next week on Friday, Miss. Louise Richardson, head librarian will talk about books suitable for Christmas gifts and will offer suggestions.

Classes Display Crafts, Cards for Christmas

Christmas cards and crafts are being exhibited this week in the library cases in the lower floor of the education building by the Industrial arts department.

The Christmas cards were designed and made by the class in elementary arts. This class has been making trays, rush pads, and other things which may be help in creating Christmas gifts.

The class in camp crafts is exhibiting designs in silver and leather. These crafts have been on display at the Tallahassee Woman's club this past week.

Future Monthly Dance Guests May Depend On Dame Fortune

New Method Suggested For Ticket Distribution To Prevent Tiresome Waiting in Line

BY MITZIE JOY SOLOMON

Most of us are quite familiar with the many disadvantages of the present method of distributing tickets to the monthly dances. It is not very pleasant to stand in line an hour or so, and then to find to our great chagrin and disappointment that all of the tickets have been given out, and that the slack and alas, must spend Saturday night at home—alone. Of course it's even worse for those of us expecting dates and planning to take them to the dance, not to have a ticket for them, and to have to entertain our absent-but-number brains with ways of spending a pleasant, entertaining evening. And it's quite a let-down to have to content ourselves with appearing in unis; street dresses when we had already envisioned amazing the mighty male by appearing perfectly glamorous in dazzling evening frocks.

It's quite disheartening, too, to stand in line and then discover that some girls have made "lists" and said that your waiting was futile—so, it's really not fair. So we're looking for a remedy, something to give everyone an equal opportunity to get their tickets without all of the unnecessary business that is attached to getting Tall.

Approach Island

While a dice game was going on the scholar of the crew (Jean Pirkle) indicated a tiny, lonely discourse on book with the Captain Odd-Eye (Madge Parham), until Oddcar (Betsy McMichael) discovered through her eye-glass a native girl, and that they were approaching.

Act two was laid on the beach of the Isle of Tall in the late afternoon. Among the natives who met a colony of luring native women who entertained them with food, drink, and dancing. Oddaki Wa Wa (Nancy Kulp) first sang English as "Bye Bye" written by Jean Pelkie, and as an encore, "Temptation," the history of which is unknown. Then they accompaniment by Jean Hitchcock.

The "clue, cute Barnacles" as the natives called them, then made upon request a visit to a while the natives gathered around in admiration. Then, Oddcar's mate, their hostesses entertained them with a native Hula-Hula dance and song "Little Brown Girl" led by Betty Davis, for which they received an encore.

When Oddcar learned from one of the native women about his that Madame Luckonga (Betsy Rovira) was being held prisoner at the Bungalow, all the men sing a farewell song "Fifteen Men on a Dead Man's Chest," and set out to rescue her.

Act Three

Act three opened at dusk in the heart of the jungle, where the evil Bwana Monsters have their camp. A jungle dance was just begun as a scare for the imprisonment of Madame by the Witch-doctor, Margaret Clemenia. Other characters included Mary Bennett, Marjorie Harris, Alice Armstrong, Minnie Hall, Robert Hubert, and Nancy Lee Doggett. Following this the three spirits of succession of the Bwana Mary Kate Irwin, Margaret Blake, and Betty Jones added to the mystic atmosphere.

Shortly after the spirits had died, the cook (Ann Hall) made a ship arrived just in time to free Madame. A dance by the crew was followed. "Hawaiian War Chant" after which the Bwana Monsters appeared of Jean Hitchcock, Jean Colley, Frances Booker, Lucy Hamilton, and Madelyn Thompson sang "Beat Me Daddy Eight to the Bar."

A special ballroom number by Vivian Adams, Jean Pelkie, and Lucille Hall was given, and the scene was closed with "Hawaiian War Chant" set which the whole company danced around during the gunrel sang "Ragged but Right" after which Madame Luckonga, as a reward for their bravery, brought for her treasure chest of Odd basketball and valley ball players.

Others in the cast were Sara Fuller as Pea-Sea; Kitty Mc-Mann as Nero the Cook, Carolyn Howell as Mary Ann, Jean Hamilton as Luscious Lulu, and Sue Pirkle as Native Princess Marjorie Patterson, Marguerite Mooney, Frances Brodes, Frances Brooks, and Marcy Macintosh.

Native dancers were Betty Davis, Lucille Hamilton, Myrtle Valkenburg, Mae Hampton, Betty Brannan, Lillian Sample, Martha Swanson, and Joan Miller. Native singers were Nancy White, Lorraine Wood, Joan Miller, Native Pierce, Eleanor Merrill, Elizabeth Dunn, Harriet Mullins, Louise de Jarnett, and Katie Hedrick.

Art Students Show Work

Abstractions and compositions in tempers have been put on display in 314 Westcott, department of art. These are not regular exhibits but pieces which were placed there by students who might come to the department during the week and observe them.

Charcoal drawings in 315 Westcott and designs in 313 are also on display.

Attention, NYA Girls

NYA students are prohibited from working time prior to the December 11-January 1 period to be counted in that period. This is prohibited both by the state administration and also by federal statute and would constitute a falsification of the records. Time reports for each month-by payroll period are intended to reflect the exact hours earned during that payroll period and also the proper dates on which such time was earned.

During the present payroll period, November 11 to December 10, students may work up to five hour more than the allowed monthly time for other period. If this is possible, but it must be reported for the date on which it was worked.

Andrews Offers Vocation Tests

Students Asked To Sign If They Wish To Take Guidance Exams

Dr. Elizabeth Gordon Andrews, director of personnel, has offered to give a limited number of vocational tests to students especially sophomores, who are in the process of selecting a major or to choose a vocation. These tests will be administered to 100 students on Thursday, at 1:30 o'clock in 303 Westcott.

Dr. Andrews announced the test have been sent to sophomores who have indicated uncertainty in the choice of a career. These students are asked to come to the personnel office before 5 o'clock the test immediately if they wish to take it. Students who are especially interested in taking the test may sign up for it also, but they will be given preference and Dr. Andrews expects the list to be filled in the near future.

In the past Dr. Andrews has given vocational guidance tests to the freshmen, but next term she has also attempted to give such a test to sophomores to assist students seeking career guidance. If she feels that these tests to be given next term, sophomores for the purpose she will offer more of these tests.

Dr. Andrews believes that the sophomore year of college is the best time in which to allow students as to the choice of their life work. Last year she interviewed all sophomores for this purpose.

Jan Savitt And His Top Hatters Will Play For Fall Frolics

U of Texas And Gator Clash, Dances, Smokes Will Make Up Exciting Week-End

Next week-end, December 6 and 7, will be the Fall Frolics week-ends, Ville's biggest week-ends. This year the Florida Gator, Fall Frolics ever, since the band to be brought to the University campus is Jan Savitt and his Top Hatters.

Besides the concert to be held on Friday night, there will be an informal dance on Saturday morning, and a formal dance Saturday night. Various fraternities and sororities are planning to entertain with pop dances, smokers, breakfasts and parties. Friday night will be the Cavalier's dance. Saturday morning will be the Kappa Sig breakfast and various other pop dances will be given during the week-end. Last year the Thanksgiving football game between the University of Texas and the Gators will be played.

"The Inter-Fraternity Council" announced by Billy Tunnadine, president, "is doing all it is power to make the week-end a success. We want and urge you Tally Ho's to cooperate and help us and we promise you a glorious time."

And now for a bit about the famous Savitt, who will play for the dances on the week-end.

Born A Gypsy

On September 22, 1912, in Petrograd, the drums of the Czar's Imperial Regimental Band beat a merry tattoo. Shouts of "Congratulations"; "So it is a boy eh?" filled the barracks where the band members were loiking about. Vodka flowed from dozens of bottles. Another Savitt had come into being. Truly a day of celebration.

Yet in the bandquarters of the Imperial family all was calm and serene. For nothing had happened to disturb that serenity. The drumbeats, the merry shouts, the free-flowing vodka—for were not to celebrate the arrival of an heir to the throne? It was a private party the Royal musicians were having, to celebrate the birth of a son, one of the first members—a Russian of French descent named Savitt.

Christened Jan, the Savitt youngster never had a chance to escape his destiny—to be his birthplace. When the 18th month of life he rolled around the Savitts suddenly packed their belongings and left Russia forever, bound for a new world—America. Philadelphia was their destination, but they wasn't long before the Savitt family was firmly ensconced in its new surroundings.

Musical Prodigy

Jan showed an early aptitude for things musical. At the age of four, with no previous tuition, he was teaching himself the violin by ear. Two years later he was receiving lessons from Leopold Auer, world famous violinist and teacher connoisseur with a young pupil. Jan was easier to learn. His memory for things musical was remarkable. Impressive. And two months after he began his music lessons he attended Pinsch by performing beautifully a difficult concerto and composer himself.

Savitt was looked upon as a musical prodigy by his parents and

New Buildings May Remodel Campus Scene

Architect's Plans Call For Changes In Present Set-Up

By LOUISE LISK

In the last three years Landis dormitory, the infirmary, the dairy barn, and the Student-Alumnae building have all been added to the group of red brick buildings known as Florida State college for women. But building does not stop here; there are plans for the future.

Studies have been made by the college architect, H. D. Memdenhall, for an addition to the gymnasium. These plans have passed the completion as it is an extension northward to balance the south wing, which houses the pool. This new wing would have bowling alleys on the basement floor, lockers and showers on the main floor, and a dance studio and a modern dance practice floor on the top story. It would also have an elevator.

Bryan hall has been studied and plans made for its complete remodeling and renovating. The present dining room, which is the students and most of the rooming are suites. It is believed that Bryan would offer only two-girl rooms. The interior would be made more attractive by this remodeling.

Plans will be given Mrs. D. P. Comer, counselor of the group, will tell a Christmas story. At this time, the nine new girls will be pledged.

Yearbook Rated Third Class

NSPA Critical Service Announces Standings Of Annuals

According to the recently published ratings of the All-American and critical service of the National Scholastic Press association, the 1940 Florida Flambeau received third class honor rating among yearbooks of women's colleges with an enrollment of 500 or more.

Last year's annual had for its theme "footprints in the sands of time" and was edited by Jean Webster.

All-American honor rating, theoretically presented to the superior books in each group, was awarded the Illwoca of MacMurray college in Jacksonville, Illinois; Mirage of Mount Mills college in Oakland, Cal.; and Stephenocopia of Stephens college in Columbia, Mo. In the large women's class, the Stephenocopia was especially praised.

Yearbook scorebooks were recently mailed to 652 staffs whose books were entered in the 1940 All-American critical service. Of this number, 262 were college and 390 high school yearbooks. All-American honor rating was awarded to 122 book's which were superior in their respective groups, 12 college and 90 high school books.

First class rating went to 96 college and 204 high school yearbooks. Second class rating went to 40 college and 266 high school books. While third class rating was received by 12 college and 20 high school yearbooks.

Evans Elect Candidate In Opening Feature Of Holiday

Students Offer Thanks At Y Worship Service

Tuesday night launched Thanksgiving activities when the Evans presented their demonstration, featuring the landslide victory of Pat R. Right and her Even Dealers over the Oddicrates headed by Odds Evans. Cheering between the scenes was led by the four Even cheerleaders Marion Prevatt, Audrey Atterton, Jackie Higley and Rosa Maude McDowell.

After the demonstration Odds paraded over the campus with their band tenderers shouting and cheering in celebration of "Odd Night Out."

Wednesday at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning resulted in an almost complete victory for the Evens, who succeeded in tying their colors on every building except Bryan hall which displayed colors of both teams as a result of a tie.

Wednesday night, the Odds demonstrated their talents with the production, "Odducation." In which loyal Odds made a trip to Florida State and visited La Conga from the evil Even camp. Odds' cheerleaders Virginia Jones, Minnie Ratliff, Ruth Torrey and Betsy McMichael led the Odds in their cheering. Following this play the Odds' basketball team defeated their spirits soar over the campus after which they participated in a pep rally in front of a giant bonfire, the climaxing feature of Spirit Out.

Worship Held

The traditional "Thanksgiving Worship Service" sponsored by the YWCA began at 8 30 o'clock Thursday morning with a half hour prouram in the Westcott auditorium.

The service opened with a chorale prelude "Deck Thyself, My Soul, With Gladness Adorn" by Bach after which Dr. Edward Conradi gave a "Call To Worship." A prayer by the entire congregation followed the singing of the hymn "Come, Ye Thankful People Come." The college glee club sings was directed by Pearl Curran. Dr. Kathryn Abbey was the speaker at the service.

Dr. Edward Conradi gave the benediction, following which the audience was dismissed to an organ postlude by Miss Margaret Whitney Dow.

Highlight of homecoming celebration was reached Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock when traditional and basketball games played at the physical education building at 10 o'clock.

Dinner Highlights Day

Following the games alumnae, parents and students flocked to the dining room at 5 o'clock for the traditional Thanksgiving meal. At each table, as well as at fruit centerpiece, guests enjoyed turkey and all the trimmings including cranberry sauce, celery, cranberries, green peas, rice and hot rolls, cream potatoes dressing and salted pecans.

After-dinner coffee was served immediately after dinner in the parlors of the residence halls.

The Tagore by the department, "Writer We? Americans," with a group and with different judges.

Moor Represents Florida at Meet

First Lady Will Address Congress For Women In Cincinnati

Representing the Alumnae association of Florida State college for women, Mrs. Perry Moor, Tallahassee past president of that organization, will attend the Women's congress in Cincinnati this week in New York. Mrs. Moor has been chosen to be one of four delegates from Florida on the basis of three points: prominent club and civic work, an outstanding college work in the Alumnae association, and a member of the American Association of University Women. The official delegate body will be limited to 300 persons.

The purpose of the congress is to survey woman's work for the past century and to visualize some post century and to visualize some of the accomplishments toward which women may strive. The preparatory work for the convention has been done by five committees in these fields of women as interest: economics and social welfare; education of women; ethics and religious values; government and politics; and world peace through world organizations.

Among prominent speakers at the congress will be Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Dorothy Bellanca, Pearl Buck, Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Crystal Bird Fauset, Dr. Margaret Mead, Mary Winston Mims Zimmerman, Countess of France; Mrs. George V. Perjuan of Canada; Mrs. Isabel Perron of Mexico; Spain; Senora Ana Rosa de Martines Guerrero of Argentina Carmen Chapman Catt is general chairman.

The committee in charge consists of the state presidents of representative of the following cooperative national organizations: American Association of University Women, General Federation of Women's clubs, National Council of the YWCA, National Committee of Church Women, National League of Women Voters, National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs, National Association of Women Voters, National Women's Christian Temperance Union, and League.

Scientists Meet During Weekend

Harold Richards Named Division Chairman

Last week-end seventeen individuals from Florida state college for women attended the annual meeting of the Florida Academy of Science held in St. Petersburg. Students of the St. Petersburg Junior College were hostess for the meetings.

Dr. Thomas Bellamy, professor of sociology, was the chairman of the social sciences division which convened during the section of the meeting. He spoke on "A Reconstruction Program for Feminism."

Dr. Harold F. Richards, professor of physics, was elected cairman of the Physical Science division for the year.

Exhibitions were presented by individual departments and different books were exhibited "e the guests. Another part of the program were the field trips, one a tour of the city and the other a trip to Tarpon Springs Sponge docks.

Those attending from Florida State college were: Dr. Paul Bowman chairman of the Tallahassee division of the academy; Dr. Bellamy, Dr. Richards, assistant professor of psychology; Dr. Herman Kurz, professor of botany; Dr. Ruth Parker White, orthopedic physician and professor of hygiene; Dr. Lucy Gill, professor of physiological chemistry and nutrition; and Dr. Ruth Nichols, instructor in zoology.

Miss Isabelle McKinnell, instructor in physics; Dr. Mabelle Lynn, instructor in physics; Dr. Mary McGregor, assistant professor in chemistry and Dr. Harold F. Richards, assistant professor of physics.

Dr. Thomas Zandtra, assistant professor of physics; and Leland Lewis, professor of chemistry.

Camp Flastacowo Is Result Of Faculty Member's Dream

Miss Tissie Cawthon Conceived Idea In 1916; Many Additions Make Camp of Today

By SUE CHAIRES

Back in 1916, one of those turbulent World war years, there lived in the mind of one of Florida State college's advisors the dream of a camp as we know it today. A quarter of a century has brought to reality the hopes and plans of the founder, Miss Tissie Cawthon. Pla-ski-ow-wo Camp has been the letters of Florida State college for women, staged a lasting memorial to those who could visualize dreams years ahead instead of months.

In that year 1916, amidst all the worry and trouble a war brings, Miss Tissie Cawthon, known to everyone as always the set, had time to see the necessity for a plan of outdoor recreation away from campus. At that time, she was dean of women and also head of social directions and dean of students.

Her private donations parties for raising money and all other methods used by enthusiastic planners were sponsored in order to help this idea in functioning reality. Two years passed and this year saw the purchase of the first lot, located on the present site at Lake Bradford Road over which all the money was used to buy the lot, no housing facilities were available until three years later.

Cabin 1, the largest of the three cabins erected, was erected in the school year 1921-22. A large stone fireplace with a big hearth rounded by a wide screened porch on the ground floor. A kitchen and a club room with a fireplace that extends almost the width of the room, create an atmosphere of friendliness felt by all who enter. Electricity only performs there. Upstairs a sleeping porch contains thirty-five cots and has filled practically every weekend.

Special Playnight Will Honor Guests

Committee To Dedicate Musical Program To Alumnae

A special program tomorrow at play night in the gymnasium will be dedicated to the alumnae who have returned to the campus for homecoming festivities are invited as usual.

Four numbers have been planned as entertainment. A song written by an Alumnae Club Miss Kathleen Gruppe, social director of Landis hall, will be sung by Martha Stromberg. Marjorie Copeland will play her accordion, and a specialty dance will be given.

The new school song written by the camp leadership girls, to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne," will climax the program. The girls will sing it as they did in convocation the last week.

The gymnasium will be decorated for the evening and the play night committee will act as hostesses.

The names of all of those fellow whose ballots were drawn will be published in the Flambeau as well as posted in conspicuous places. A disc would be set for all of these girls to come and their tickets with a time limit included. If they did not come in after their tickets at the specified time more names would be drawn to fill their places, and the process would be repeated. Thus 350 girls would be able to buy their tickets with a minimum of effort.

The above is, of course, only a suggestion. Nothing definite has been adopted yet, and any and all suggestions will be welcome.

U S Army Air Corps Will Fly Into Tallahassee in February

City Airport Prepares for Influx from Orlando Of Twenty-One Hundred Uniforms

BY CATHERINE BELLAS

Men—2,100 strong! Soon after February 1 a total of 2,100 officers and men of the U. S. army air corps will come flying into Tallahassee from Orlando, where they are now stationed, according to reports.

These soldiers are members of the 23rd Composite Group, the 1st Pursuit Squadron, the 34th Bombardment Squadron, the 54th Bombardment Squadron, and several units of the U. S. army air corps will come flying into Tallahassee from Orlando, where they are now stationed, according to reports.

At present the commander of the new air base has not been appointed, nor have any of the army planes arrived at the Tallahassee airport. However, several army officers are in Tallahassee supervising the construction of the 87 buildings and other structures on the site of the new air base on the old Tallahassee airport, which is located three miles west of the city on the airport road (Pensacola street or State road 500).

Construction of the numerous structures necessary to the maintenance of a complete unit for the over 2,000 inhabitants at the Tallahassee airport was begun by a local contractor on Monday, the 14th of October. At an estimated cost of $1,124,000, according to the Public Relations bureau of the War department, the army expects to have completed within three months the following units: Seven administration buildings, 32 barracks for enlisted men, eight day rooms, one enlisted men's mess hall with a capacity of 1,000, two smaller mess halls, five operations buildings, four buildings containing officers' quarters, one officers' mess, one post exchange building, a recreation building, a hospital and an infirmary, a theatre, three warehouses, hangars, machine storage tanks, shops, a radio station, five magazines, and many smaller structures.

According to City Manager Malcolm N. Yancey, the Tallahassee airport will benefit greatly by the establishment of an army base in connection with it. Already 265 acres of land have been purchased as an addition to the Tallahassee airport with $124,000 appropriated for further equipment. An application has been made to the Civil Aeronautics authority for additional funds.

Because the United States army has decided to use the Tallahassee airport as a base, the facilities of the airport will be greatly improved to such an extent that the Florida-Georgia run from class two to class four, which is the highest class of airports recognized by the CAA.

City Manager Yancey reveals that the arrival of the army planes has brought many problems to the city fathers. The population of the city will be increased suddenly. It's hard on the community to keep up with the expansion of its schools, utilities, and housing facilities.

In regard to the housing problem the city manager points out that the army plans to build 100 houses near the airport for married officers and their families. He expects local capital to finance any further home building that is needed.

When questioned as to why the army chose to expand its facilities in Florida so suddenly, City Manager Yancey replied, "Our climate has a whole lot to do with Florida's obtaining so many air bases."

Other army air base construction projects which have been started in Florida are those at Jacksonville, Tampa, where over 5,600 men will be stationed; Drew field in Tampa, for 900 men; one for 3,600 men at West Palm Beach. The army is also conducting the establishment of a base at Gainesville. It now has large tracts of land near Kendall and as well as other smaller ones scattering throughout the state.

Tallahassee welcomes the news of the anticipated influx of men into the Tallahassee area and from the opinion held by one prominent citizen the army post will mean little to the average student. At the end of a line drawn from that the new air base a 9,100 inhabitants will change the FSC and the town as we have known.

A few statements of representative citizens are given here.

A junior—"Tallahassee is very fortunate in getting such a new development.

Another commenting on the single men who wish to data collect from the army post, the students of the new army post should be given the privileges which without any restrictions other than those already prescribed by the college for all students. Fundamentally these boys are the same as the students here and should have the same way. It just happens that they are stationed in the United States army. It would be an insult to the army to discriminate against these students."

A sophomore says "I think that the establishment of an army air base at Tallahassee is a wonderful opportunity for FSC girls to broaden their personalities and make up for the lack of education that they have had. I hope, however, that the pilots will not be inclined to disturb the early evening slumber of Tally students by their swooping dives."

Says a freshman: "I think that when the army post is established it will be beneficial to a great information in the college restriction list. The faculty and social directors with the aid of a few discreet students and requests from parents, should enforce these changes

The opinion of another freshman is "I don't think many of the girls will date the common ranks privates, but the officers may offer some possibilities. I think restrictions should be put on dating these men since the girls can't possibly know what sort of a man they may come across."

Finally a sorority member gives her reaction: "I don't think their presence will make much difference to the average student. They will be here only a few days, but I think the Gainesville men will have preference as usual."

Musically Speaking

BY VIRGINIA DUNN

Many thanks to the Campus Commentator for the little note on Walt Disney's latest venture "Fantasia." I'm inclined to believe that the reason most people don't like to listen to music by the great old masters is because they always expect the worst, and they usually get it when their minds are made up about the compositions before the first note is even sounded. To enjoy music one must have a receptive thing to listen to . . . you can't go into an audience and just listen unless you're a natural-born music fiend, simply for all you may have an idea of what the composer was concerned with when he wrote the symphonies in the way of programs heads or talks of the music. This is the point of entrance for "Fantasia Notes."

Program notes are short considerables of the part the composer played at a particular time; if you remember, the program for the Marine band concerts contained short sketches of the compositions to be played. Thus, we saw that this composition described the flight of a bee, and that we read that during the piece we hear the bee's new home from country to country . . . inroad; caverns, rough and smooth and fiercy clouds. Knowing this in advance, we listened to the music with actually appreciating the flight of an imaginary airplane as it pursued its course in the air and ground . . . we saw the calm ocean as the machine traveled from continent to continent.

We wouldn't have seen the airplane if there had been no program notes. After all, how are we to know that the bee's flight is what the composer meant an airplane? He could just as easily have meant a bee to look over a new meandering of the imagination.

The item about Walt Disney's picture is in the manner of a program note. Sarah Duke did a little something about his idea in program notes. Some of the best is "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" . . . so you know that's the one draw. you've all heard the name of Toscanini in connection with Disney's picture, and you've heard about Stravinsky's "Rites of Spring" . . . so you know that's the one heard that it sounds like a collision of actually two pianos playing milk cans with a carload of ducks. Put all of these points together and you have a picture to see.

Tickets have been distributed this week for the Tallahassee Civic Concert association. Five concerts are scheduled as follows: Don Cossack chorus, Nelson Eddy, Anne Jamison, soprano, on January 17. Ballet Russe on January 31 . . . all of these concerts are well worth your attention. If you don't like to hear the music perhaps some of your friends will be sick on the night of the performance and you can use someone's ticket. The ticket for even Nelson must be purchased in the spring; so don't let such splendid opportunities as a chance to hear Nelson Eddy until long after he's dead.

wisely held his career in check, and his ambition to be a famous young children should be deprived of their morning childhood, just to further a career. He attended the same public schools as the other youngsters played the same games they did; had the usual packs of Tallahassee the new's and of any number of trousers sliding into holes during sandlot ball games. Yet he found time to practice diligently on his violin without neglecting his home duties to the grindstone

Early Training

At the age of fifteen he was the recipient of a scholarship to the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. His continued improvement in the musical world won him two subsequent scholarships for the furtherance of his career. During a concert by pupils students of the Institute, Savitt's playing for the first time gave indications of special interest to one particular violinist. Leopold Stokowski, the interested party was Leopold Stokowski, who offered the talented youngster the opportunity of becoming the youngest member of the Philadelphia orchestra.

After playing with the Philadelphia orchestra for two years Jan became the first string violinist which won the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of Philadelphia with similar groups. This led to the quartet's engagement by the Columbia Broadcasting System for a coast-to-coast radio series from the studios of WCAU, in Philadelphia.

Conventioners Caught In Bog As Boat Leaks

Several of the faculty members from the Florida State college for women who attended the annual meeting of the Florida Academy of Science in St. Petersburg had an adventure not included on their original schedule. They were "bogged down" but not with science.

It all happened on Saturday afternoon on the scheduled boat trip to Tarpon Springs, which was part of the schedules planned by the St. Petersburg Chamber of Commerce. With spirits high the party left on the two-hour journey on the Anclote river. Several miles out one of the boats sprang a leak On this ill-fated boat were Miss Elizabeth Lunn, instructor in physics, Dr. Thomas Sanders, assistant professor of physics, and Dr. Louise Witmer, assistant professor of psychology. Water began to fill the boat rapidly and the boat neared home port. Some of the Anclote river. Several miles out one of the boats sprang a leak On this ill-fated boat were Miss Elizabeth Lunn, instructor in physics, Dr. Thomas Sanders, assistant professor of physics, and Dr. Louise Witmer, assistant professor of psychology. Water began to fill the boat rapidly and the boat neared home port. Some of the passengers were forced to go aboard to test the depth and immediately found water was over their heads. When the same up and climbed aboard, he decided that the best thing to do was to steer the boat over to the marsh and let the passengers wade in.

"Naturally we were all excited," said Miss Lunn. "The last thing I remember was Dr. Witmer holding her shoes at shore's edge. I don't know what she took for I figured that I could wash my stockings and that my shoes would be hopeless if the marsh bog got on them.

"Soon after we had gotten off the boat the other boat came up and picked up the other party as it could handle and then left with assurance that another boat would be along presently to pick us up. It was getting dark and we were all anxious to get home. If the rescue boat hadn't come to pick us up when it did, nobody would know where we were," said Miss Lunn. "As it was, we had thought to spend the night in Zandra's saved the day by having a good supply of food and a few unused oversleeves listening to different programs.

When the party finally got back to St. Petersburg they discovered that they had to crawl into the room in which the chemists were to meet since the door with the keys to the room hadn't shown up. And they didn't arrive in the city until long after the meeting was over.

The lesson: always be sure to have a spare oversleeve in the suitcase," said Miss Linn.

New Building May Remodel Campus Scene

tortia and the auditorium would be remodeled into college classrooms. There would be room enough for more space in many departments. The 12 average-sized class rooms which would be provided in the remodeling would fill this need amply. The new auditorium and a music building would be placed just below the Student-Alumnae house building. The Demonstration school, and Copeland street. Both would be auditorium would cost at least $250,000; and the music building $150,000.

These buildings will probably be achieved in the order of their priority: Byran, the gymnasium, the Demonstration school, and the auditorium and music building.

Plans for remodeling Byran dormitory are in the hands of the architect of the board of control. There is a possibility that these plans will be authorized in April session of its state legislature. If so work can start in June and Byran will be finished by second semester of the next year. There would only be 75 girls affected by the remodeling during the first semester as each wing would be made one at a time. These girls could be accommodated in off-campus houses until second semester when they could move in to a Byran whose interior would be modern and attractive as the exterior is interesting and beautiful.

Camp Flastacowo Is Result of Faculty Member's Dream

A small annual fee will be paid by students each year upon entrance into the club. Funds from this building and all other improvements which have been added since 1934 will be used. Then when Cabin I was built the additional funds were used for a small portion of dock gave to Flastacowo the first semblance of its present camp layout.

Since the problem of vagrants and thieves, breaking into the boat house, and mutilating property became a real menace, the need for a caretaker was realized in 1937-38, and a small cabin was built for him in that year. But with the passage of time and the growth of Florida State college. "More space," became the cry. Florida State girls seemed to grow in the matter of needing away from campus.

Finally additional acres were purchased, and Dr. Conrad presented a small tract of Lake Bradford to the college. The caretaker was given a larger house near the lake front, and his cabin became Cabin II, the smallest of the cabins. Twelve persons can conveniently sleep here.

Cabin Four also at present appearance in 1932-33 when new docks were added and Cabin III was built. Cabin IV is the duplica of the oldest, accomodates twelve persons. Cabin V is built from a number of games and a piano.

Each succeeding group of campers has worn its concention of true camp ideals into the atmosphere that seems to pervade the Council Ring. Inaugural Balls To Be Held At Colle

Tuesday, January 7, when Governor-elect Spessard L. Holland takes over his duties, will be red letter day for all Florida State college students. He has turned over Christmas vacation the day before, the students probably be released from p or all of their classes to attend inaugural festivities.

Since any tickets or special courts are necessary for admittance to the two inaugural balls on the campus that night, each of the student body will don formal attire and attend one or the other.

The grand ball is expected to take place in the gymnasium where Max Platiner's, orchestra will furnish the music for the dancing.

Ideas for better camp life for girls, who aspire to be camp leaders, also prevail. Many of they believe will establish as something more than just a week-end camp. Council Ring acts as a unifying force toward binding camp leaders and campers into a united tightly by ties of friendship and common interests.

A wide clearing to the south of the camp is used for the Settlement. The rudiments of crude camping are taught. Camp leaders are required to have a bit of practical experience gained. By building crude utensils made by hand, is done the Settlement. Here also campers enjoy meals cooked over the glass even sleeps here.

Two war canoes, with a capacity of twelve paddlers for regular canoes, capacity of six persons, are kept for use. A sailboat dot the lake from day afternoon until Sunday noon. Many girls learn to swim in the men's Athletic association swimming pool, although it provides new items of equipment each year.

Basketball Victory Goes to Evens Again

The Battle 17-14 | ish Last Minute Goals

By ALICE LUDLAM

After a fast and spectacular quarter, the Evens and Odds battled 'em out to a draw on Tuesday morning to play and forth with no scoring until the last quarter, when Odds burst forth with unexpected strength and brought the score up from 15-7, where it had been the first quarter, to 17-14, and the wild cheering of the Odds, the only cheering in the open-ing-up of the game, shot a red two minutes before the ended. Immediately after-the Margaret Carter, of the team made good a foul shot in the timers' whistle blew, the final score 17-14, in of the Evens team. This is the consecutive year that the basketball team has won the Thanksgiving game, which year started the platform game Walton and Jean Wood.

The game was unusual in that it was from the start, a hard guards rather, than that of the forwards. Both teams Battle, and Betsy Ross of the Odds, and Peaches Mc. Jan Wells, and Myrtle one of the Evens, played the game with unbelievable skill all the spectacular playing done by Jo Lonnie Lou Lonsole and Nancy White Hodge, Evens forward, Hodge, especially, never depend-their guards to stop Jean and Bernie Walton by using a chance to shoot more than a few feet. Jo Lonnie, Odds shooting little and mak-to baskets, was fast on the ball and able to keep up with pace of her ability to put, play-by far the name of the Odds with Margaret Carter and Wood second.

Peaches Mc Brown, the fast-driving forward of the Evens, was out for so a leg injury a week, was unable to play in game, honored by the cheer-squads of both teams before game. The nurse i the stands to look at times that the of the referee could not see it and the playing continued some time after. The Odds cheers, in their red, white purple costumes, and the Evens, with green and gold out-and their respective teams in and songs between each other, at halfs and at time out, gymnasium was packed to with sophomore coun-terest.

The starting line up for the was: forwards, Jean Wood and Walton, and Elsie Rives, Odds, Anna Frances McKay, Jane Wells, and Mrs-daughter. In the starting line-the beginning of the sec-half Rives was replaced by Mc freshman, Martha Twit-who played until the fourth when Rives once again into the game to make a for her team. Jean Wood captain of the Even basketball and also the student coach. The starting line up for the Odds was: forwards, Margaret Carter and Cornelia Watson, and Peaches Walker, Guards, Frances Ann Betsy Ross Howe, and Wells. Although the remained in the game for entire length, the Odds had to find as a substitute for who would click and kept scoring their forwards around. In the last quarter when Mar-Carter, Cornelia Watson and Lee Hoffman started scoring the ball into the basket place. In the course of the Bertha Lee Hoffman sub-ted for Lucille Walker, Ruth Thomas went in for Sheila Watson, then Walker re-Carter and Watson re-ed Walker Carter came in Thomas did this combination ed the game. Juniors Prove Ball Champions

Gainesville Swimming Team Adds Variety To Playnight

In the most varied playnight yet presented by Floread Brown and her committee, the Junior teams won both the volleyball and basketball championships from the University of Florida swimming team, with some help from the Florida State Tarpon girls, who presented an unusual type of water show, besides the regular dances and time last Friday night. All of these events combined brought out a capacity crowd to the gymnasium.

The first event of the evening was the presentation of the University swimming team in their first attempt at exhibition swimming. Ed Hood announced the events.

First on the program was a novelty race between Jer Hood, captain of the team and unbeaten champion of the University swimming team for six years, and eight members of the Tarpon club, in a race between the girls using the relay against Joe. The girls won by a few feet in what looked like a put-up job. The girls in the race were Ruth Smith, Irene Hoke, Dottie Anderson, Jean Walton, Nancy Lee Doggett, Marion Swanson, Peggy Barker, and Calla Manges.

The diving team, Bill Snelling and Jack Lee, was next on the program. Both as a team and individually showed the University excellent form and coordination.

Immediately following this a brother and sister act, Paul and John Harris, dressed as clowns, gave their version of comedy dives, in a manner that had the audience convulsed with laughter when their heck necks. Several members of the team demonstrated strokes, racing starts, and turns while the Tarpon club presented their Aqua Nuts as part of the program. The Tarpons presented one of their numbers featured in the Gainesville Aquacade, which number is done by six of the girls wearing electrically lighted costumes.

The visiting team, not to be outdone, then presented a number based on the exhibition the local swimming team given at the intermission of the football game, the highlight of this farce was a formation called the diving formation, dedicated to all Tallahassee girls.

The first event relay on the calendar, also caused much excitement. A team, composed of Ruth Smith, Nancy Lee Doggett, Irene Hoke, Haven, and Eddie Triplett raced against the team with Marion Swanson, Calla Mangels, Billy Reed, and Sonny Welch. The former team was the winner. Per Hoke who cared to see it the swimming team then divided up and played a game of water polo, one of the toughest games in the world.

The boys on the swimming team are Art Van Havern, Bill Snelling, Morton McAuslin, Joe Hood, Billy Reed, Dan Beardsley, John and Paul Harris, Sonny Welch, Harry Wanninan, Jim Zoli, and Eddie Triplett.

While the swimming team was performing, the volleyball game to determine the class championship was going on in the main gymnasium between the Junior and freshman teams, with the junior team, as yet unbeaten since its organization, once again taking the crown without any trouble, despite the fine playing of Carmen Crespo, Jere Turner, and Dot Bryant of the freshmen. Outstanding players of the Juniors, did unusually fine work. The final score was 44-18 in favor of the juniors.

Players for the junior team are Meta Heims, Paulette Nolan, Cecelia Harper, Marion Webster, Elisabeth Eunice, Mary Jane Meddin, Avis Tucker, Tam Thomas, Betty Lou Moore, Mary Dana Brown, Ethel Crown, and Betty Sarvold.

Players for the freshmen are Dot Bryant, Carmen Crespo, Jeff Jeffries, Margaret Todd, Marjory Carter and Bernie Walton tieing for second place one point behind.

Miss Mary E. Settle, faculty coach for the Odds, and Miss Grace Fox, faculty coach for the Evens, were the presiding officials for this game.

The walls of the gymnasium are decorated with a large figure of Uncle Sam standing against a background made of the United States and with stars and red and white stripes of crepe paper around the balcony.

In the first scene was were prepared within the features formation swimming by large groups. A particularly beautiful effect in this episode is one in which the whole group forms with a circle while floating. The formations are marked by the excellent form shown by the swimmers in their front and back surface dives and their underwater swimming.

In the second scene, We Fly, there is a diving exhibition by Jean Walton and Peggy Barker. The girls begin by performing the same dives simultaneously and conclude by doing different dives at the same time with Irene doing the back dive and Peggy the jack-knife with each one doing a corresponding forward dive.

In the third scene, We Speed, a relay race featuring six swimmers was staged. The first group to swim on the feet of two of the girls, supposed to make them able to swim faster. The relay was a medley consisting of free-style, back and breast strokes and dives in addition to the new stroke created by the flappers on the feet of the girls called the crawl in another lap.

As a spectacular, the fourth scene, featured the new lights which have been developed for the Tarpon club. Six swimmers wearing small lights did several intricate formations underwater swimming in the darkened pool. The lights in the swimmers were the only illumination and made the strokes of the girls distinctly visible even when they were swimming underwater. A spectacular effect was produced when they do triple pinwheels; the lights flash and the speed of the motion makes this intricate figure seem more impressive.

The pageant was concluded with the singing of "God Bless America" in which the audience took part.

Even Racers Win Color Rush

Green And Gold Bows Adorn Seven Buildings As Result of Victory; Contestants Tie For Decorating Bryan

The determined efforts of seven Even runners carried them to victory Wednesday morning in the annual color rush contests. Bryan was the only contested building on which the green and gold did not reign supreme, after the first race for Bryan was judged invalid because one of the runners jumped the starting signal the second race was declared a tie. The Evens amassed a total score of 7½ points; the Odds, ½ point.

Beginning at the gymnasium at 7 o'clock, the runners started their stride when Jeanne Eyman, Even racer, snatched the green and gold bow from the outstretched hand of Odd Nellie Lorimer, who held the colors, a good second before Virginia Greene, the Odd runner, ended a courageous spurt which was begun too late to win.

Next, the crowd of loyal Odd and Even participants and spectators tramped to the roadway in front of Landis. Here Even Paulette Nolan won over Odd Beryl Mitchell by a sizable margin. Peaches McKay held the colors.

A hotly contested race for the dining hall resulted in the third straight Even victory. Annette Cone, Odd representative, was defeated by freshman Jere Turner.

A difficult uphill race for the library was next. Jean Hitchcock, Odd runner, lost to Mary Lambert, Even speedster.

Then followed the contest to decide whether the green and gold or the red, white, and purple should decorate the main entrance to the history building. Tam Reese, Even, outstripped Ruth Smith, Odd, in this race, also run over an uphill course.

The sixth race was for the honor of placing the colors on historic Bran. Martha Twitty, Even contestant won the race by a narrow margin, but the judge, Jean Wood, declared the race invalid because Martha had jumped the starting signal in her eagerness to vie with Martha Zack, Odd contestant. The race was later rerun and adjudged a tie.

The Student-Alumnae building was the object of the seventh race. The contest between Irene Hoke, Odd, and "Tommie" Larrick, Even, was very close, ending in another Even victory.

The climax of the series was the final race, that for Westcott, in which the runners were started outside the main gates by Dr. Bellamy's firing the starting gun. Jean Wood, captain of the Even basketball team, and also in charge of color rush, beat Peggy Barker, Odd competitor, to the colors held by Kitty Baughn on the front steps of Westcott.

Immediately preceding the beginning of color rush at the gym, unofficial color rushes were held in all the dormitories as the ruling bell rang. Sleepy students snatched up their Odd or Even colors carefully laid out the night before and tore out of their rooms to decorate their own doors and those of their neighbors who hated of rival affiliations. The doors of house directors were objects of several plots laid by enthusiastic students, as well as all outside doors of the dormitories, elevators and stairways, arcade entrances and washrooms.

Rivalry was high in upperclassmen dorms where Odds and Evens tacked decorations frantically before leaving to witness color rush. In the freshman dorms, shame to say, many doors bore green and gold emblems the evening before the color rush on Wednesday.

Many novel decorations were in evidence. The vice-house chairman's room on the 100 floor of Gilchrist was glorified by a replica of the three torches done in red, white, and purple crepe paper on the door. One senior hall the occupants of one "compromise" room hung out their wash on the door to proclaim their divided loyalties. It consisted of five soiled cloths, one a different hue—red, white, purple, green and gold. Two sophomores crammed their devotion to the red, white, and purple by hanging on a pair of shorts printed in these colors upon their door. On the 200 floor of Gilchrist, it was prohibited from taking baths or showers by red, white, and purple bows on every shower door. Even Susie, the near-wide spin who roams the campus, was seen wearing Odd colors Wednesday morning.

"Alma Mater (Latin for 'Beloved Mother')" came into collegiate use because a student referred to mother of Christ, is placed over the entrance of Bonn university, Germany.

Snow White Doll Is Prize Winner

Odds Conquer Evens 25-19 at Volleyball

Dolls Made By Baptists Will Go To Mission For Christmas

Audrey Bolton and Hazel Puller share a blue ribbon by merit of their prize-winning Snow White doll, which placed first in the Baptist Young Woman's auxiliary doll show last Friday night.

Snow White was dressed for Sunday school in a white flannel coat with red embroidery. In her matching purse she carried a tiny Kleenex, a comb, and a penny for the collection.

The red ribbon for second prize went to the dolls made to be sent to the Tampa mission for Christmas, was received by Elsie Merritt. Norma Baxter, Edith Schenck, and Mary Cotton for their twins Mary and Martha. The dolls were dressed in wine-colored velvet pinafores and white dotted Swiss blouses.

A yellow ribbon, third prize, went to Lucille Arnold for Alice with a matching cap and dress of Alice blue.

The dolls were kept on exhibit until Monday. Judges for the show were Miss Margaret Moore, Miss F. J. Sherman, and Mrs. Geo Simmons. Decisions were based on the following points: workmanship, neatness, time spent, originality, and attractiveness.

All together there were 24 dolls on display, including one midget doll, Doris Burke and Dr. Robert Goulding were timekeepers, and Mart Pierson and Gene Bryan linesmen. Referee was Miss Katy Montgomery and umpire, Miss Betty Lehmae.

FSC Will Sponsor Two Swim Meets

This year Florida State colleges is to sponsor the Southern Telegraphic swimming meet of which it was the winner last year. The college will also sponsor the national telegraphic meet.

The southern meet will be held between February 15 and March 15. Plans are now being made and tryouts will begin next Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Anyone who would like to try out should report to the gymnasium at that time.

According to Miss Marjorie Mayer, swimming coach, Florida State college has a good chance of winning again this year.

Red and Purple Maintain Lead Throughout Battle

By BETTY ANN TAYLOR

The Evens went down to a defeat 25-19 before the Odds serves and spikes in the fast-moving Thanksgiving volleyball tilt Thursday. While a huge cheering yelling crowd looked on, the Odds maintained a steady lead throughout the game. Only once in the first few minutes of the second half, did the Evens seriously threaten the Odd lead with a tied score.

The first serve was made by Odd Captain Bernelle Mostyn. Three points were registered for the Odds before the Evens succeeded in making their first tally. Time and again the ball passed back and forth over the net as Odd-colored teams tried to spike it in that the opposing team would not be able to recover. Time and again the spikes were pickedup to be picked up and returned to the air as the audience watched breathlessly Both sides used good team work and the ball to time it perfectly lines to be put over. Throughout the game there was considerable good serving, very few balls landing in the net or out of bounds.

At the end of the half neared, the Evens put up a stiff fight and succeeded in whittling the Odd lead down to one int. When the whistle blew the score was 12-11

In the second serve of the last half the Evens succeeded in lifting the score 18-13 with Elizabeth Eunice serving. However, the Odds regained the lead on the next point and it was not so closely contested again.

The Odds scored seven points in a row with Stella Valenti serving and the whole team backing her up with fine pass-work. Under this consistent playing the Evens could not stand up. Immediately after Stella's serve with the score at 20-13 time out was called. Following time in and four Even substitutes were sent in. With the Odds still ahead, the Evens succeeded in breaking their opponent's winning streak with three straight points under Marion Webster's serving. The Odds sent in four subs and a few minutes latter the closing whistle blew as the score stood at 25-19, while the Odds cheer rocked the gymnasium with their cheers.

Bernelle Mobley, Odd captain, says that the victory may be due in part to a good luck charm which she possesses—a rabbit's foot. Each year in the past before she went into the game, Bernelle privately kissed this rabbit's foot. This year, however, instead of performing this ritual in private, the whole Odd team kissed the foot. Maybe the first kissing of the luck been playing the team won.

The Odd lineup in the game consisted of Bernelle Mobley, captain, Kitty Baughn, Pirsed Brown, Mary Lambert, Frances Eckland, Diana Versowe Josephine Miles, and Elizabeth Howe. Substitutes were Josephine Pilano, Carmen Crespo, Mary Lou Bowden, and Lola Lasaru.

Those in the Even starting lineup were Paulette Nolan, Dorothy Mostyn, Meta Heims, Cecelia and Jere Turner. The substitutes on the following Even team were Carmen Crespo, Mary Jane Medlin, and Avis Tucker.

Scores of the game were William Joubert, and Nelle Loyless, Mary Coyle Barker and Dr. Robert Goulding were timekeepers, and Mart Pierson and Gene Bryan linesmen. Referee was Miss Katy Montgomery and umpire, Miss Betty Lehmae.

Polly-Inanities

In step with the spirit of the times, we too have conceated a list of Things To Be Thankful For.

We are thankful that the army air corps will come here in February—to make the ratio of men to girls more nearly normal. The Christmas vacation is only three weeks off (another week end we'd fold up like sheets), that Florida's Fighting Gators have a bonfire some Vitamin B and are bringing joy back into the hearts of their supporters, that we are Strong, Healthy Girls.

We are thankful that the 260 turkeys had plenty of white meat on them, that something is going to be done about those cracks in the walls in the library, that our roommates got invitations to Fall Frolica (Jan Savitt, too. It just ain't fair!)

We are thankful that we've only got three more term papers to do, that we get at least one letter a week decorated with a lipstick outline scrawling, that the price of cigarettes is stable, that the Greeks are wiping up the Italians, that Thanksgiving comes but once a year.

We are thankful that we are knitting for Britain instead of hitting for Berlin, that there is a Gainesville, that childish innocence and maidly purity still linger to such an extent that few know what it is, that women are so, that we still have six weeks to apple-polish before exams.

We are thankful we are in college in an inaugural year so we may have a free day off to attend parades, that the dates of our inaugural ball are non-existent, that there is a new movie palace in town and that Thursday movies are 25 cents. How about a little drop in prices for this boost'; that there is an infirmary to repair to when the strain of life becomes too great—if you can afford it.

We are thankful that our mother, at least, loves us, that spring is coming in four months, that we will be free to open windows in the library and that our credit is still good.

In addition, we are thankful for the wonderful glow of unselfishness that we get every time we realize we are working for Experience (fraternity girls get half), that we have the CGA Suggestion Box, for moonlight and magnolias.

We wish we could be thankful for ocdneation.

Thankful, Yes. But-

Yesterday was a day on which to be thankful. Granted that our blessings outnumber our sorrows, that no one Sir Walter Raleigh cloak for women a debt of thanks and appreciation too great even to express, but there are still some things on which could bear alteration. Perhaps the things which we here bring to the attention of the "powers that be" seem trivialities as compared to the many problems which are done to make our college life an easy and a happy one and happen to be the very step for the better makes for a more perfect whole.

First, consider the method of distribution of dance tickets. Because of the limited space in the gymnasium, the number of tickets is necessarily limited. An announcement of the dance tickets are to go on sale is nothing short of an announcement of war to come, for in order to obtain a ticket, one must literally take part in a battle royal. Buying a ticket means standing in line for two hours or more, having people crowd in front of you, and finally being told that you've been standing there for nothing as you do not have the required petition for the dance committee, we do say that the method is not a good one or even a fair one. This week in conversation on dance committees and their suggestions from the student body to better the present system, which is all well and good. However, we have noticed that though committees are prone to do a lot of griping about this thing and that, they seldom make any real efforts to change things. We offer here a possible remedy. Though it may be far from perfect, it is at least fair and would at least save many students a long wait in line and a feeling that they will become someone saved places in line for six of her buddies.

All students desiring a ticket to a dance might be given a number in advance by a certain date. These names might be put in a hat, so to speak, and drawn by lot. The names of winners would then be posted and they could come and buy their tickets. All tickets not claimed by a specified time could be sold by the dance committee.

Next on this fault-finder's list is the method of assigning dining room tables for the week-ends. It is a terrible inconvenience and bother to have to get a new table assigned every Thursday. It seems to this writer that after experiencing several hundred weekends, the dining room could do a fairly accurate job of judging approximately how many students eat in the dining room on weekends. Instead of assigning a new table to every single person in school, could not there be, say, two tables from each sorority or other group and as many other tables as necessary? Tables could be reserved for the weekend in alteration, say, for example, one through twenty this week and twenty-one through forty next. The number of tables could be cut down, room on weekends is probably not appreciably smaller except on rare occasions and only a small percentage of the student body would be inconvenienced, whereas as it is now, a large number is inconvenienced every single weekend.

However, if the dining room cannot formulate a workable plan for handling the necessity of reserving tables each weekend, at least a better time for reserving of weekend tables might be found. The present time, Thursday right after lunch, is certainly a bad one. And the confusion of people entering out of the dining rooms, stretches, or should one say, winds, the long line of people waiting to reserve tables.

Third on this week's list of faults is the deficiently unnecessary method of tickets to Odd and Even demonstrations. Though dormitory students receive their tickets through the mail, off-campus students must call for them. This in itself is not sufficient reason to cease the passing of them, but here is a reason for stopping it. Tickets are not collected. Though a feeble effort is made to do so. There is absolutely no necessity for having tickets to these affairs. And $200 is spent might well be put to more profitable use.

Signed Margaret Painter.

We'd Take a Loan

Tucked away in the fourth paragraph of a news story concerning the meeting of the advisory committee of the Florida Federal loan corporation is an announcement that is of interest to students. The story also considers the question of the meeting, according to Dr. W. H. Graham, secretary-treasurer of the organization and University of Florida representative to Florida State college for women as well as at the University of Florida."

The possibility of such an action stirs our imagination and hopes and makes us hasten to add our hearty endorsement to the plan.

According to the news release, the committee will meet on December 7 in Gainesville, to further plans and map out the coming week-end. University of Florida students complete their educations. Presidents of Florida Rotary clubs compose the committee. The corporation is sponsored by Rotary and its purpose is to build up and administer a loan fund for apprenticeship and other training for girls. Under the organization, 372 individual loans have been made, and the year there are 44 girls in term and 18 short-term loans outstanding among students. The long-term commitments average approximately $150 per student and the average period of the estimated total yearly expenses needed by the average individual.

The need for a special agency by which worthy and deserving upperclassmen could borrow money to go on with their education has long been felt by many students. There is a necessity rate in the sophomore, junior and senior classes in assisting girls in financial difficulties. Dining room scholarships and the other scholarships can not cover all the girls who need assistance. Every year some of these girls receive letters saying that due to great demand for jobs, we will only be awarded one type of employment, that is just so much work to be done, and that must of necessity be spread among as many of us as possible.

Then there's another angle to the beautician. Time and time again we read articles and hear people say that it is not wise to work while one is in college. Does so much of college life and opportunity when one spends hours of each day behind a beauty spring. If we were able to obtain loans repayable after graduation or by working during the summer, we would probably be able to go on with our educational advantages now.

In many other colleges and universities throughout the country student officers and editors receive remuneration for their services. We have found that many leading state college girls are prevented from even running for offices because they can't afford to give up the job that is necessary to pay their expenses. As long as we do not offer any financial compensation for these girls, we will have to go on losing prominent girls because they can't afford to lead. If we could offer them loans, this at least would give them a chance.

For these reasons we want to endorse any plans the corporation may make to extend aid to us.

"A diploma is no longer a bar to city service. Of course, politicians do not like highly educated people, but the politicians no longer control the situation. It is very important of the city, state and federal service there are openings in technical positions, in such fields as engineering, architecture, public health, physics, chemistry and others for which the training can be acquired only in college or in post-graduate work. We do need intelligent men and women in every department of government, and we hope to make it better for life work." New York City's Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia invites civil service as a career for college graduates.—ACP.

Collegiate Comebacks

Twenty-one days 'til vacation;
then we go down to the station . . .

Pome on the order of Ogden Nash.

I am one of those people
Who periodically try to be a good sport.
And I fall down.

For two years I forego the dubious pleasure of riding.
And then
One day I go riding for two hours
And the next day
I'm riding again.

This leaves me very sore
And what is more
I'm sore where I leave where.

My roommate who has a marked tendency toward the cave-dweller
Talks me into some without desserts
She is very turbacious
So I leave before desserts at all times.

And being very thin anyhow
I get constantly thinner.
Besides this she does calisthenics
And so I do calisthenics
And my muscles get hard.
And if there's anything I hate it's muscular people who get up in the morning to take cold showers to make them more red blooded that he already is.
Which said roommate does golly
daily.

So when I get out of school I'm going to be a hermit
And stay very thin.
Who asks me where my sack cloth and ashes are Won't get a bid.

I will point with pride to my Simmons bed
With a table at the head where I will keep such things as a comb and a toothbrush
And I shall grow ampler.

And I will become chubby like a little ball
And that will be Every Saturday I'll pick up my feet and leave town town to eat a double banana split.
And if I fit
I will get into a local tail and have it fitted back to retreat.
And life will be very, very sweet.

And I won't be a sport.
Of any sort.

At breakfast the other morning
we, with our usual aplomb, passed the cream to the girl at the head of the table. She shocked us no end by refusing it with the caste reply. "No thank you, I only use sugar in one form—distilled."

THE FALL ROUND-UP
By MARY CELESTE HARDEE

Germany, Italy, and Japan have just completed a round-up of Europe, adding to the Axis Hungary, Rumania, and Slovakia. Surprisingly enough, the strong teutonic exertion of Bulgaria has been lessened, and observers believe that that country will remain outside the Axis for a while. Turkey whose fate is linked with Bulgaria's, due to their proximity, was very much relieved. It is believed that Russia is behind Bulgaria's unwillingness to join forces with the Axis, for Stalin thinks that Bulgaria should be included in her share of Europe. At any rate, this country will not be a European powers is over for the present.

What is Hitler's purpose in adding the signature of these countries to the pact? We know his ultimate dream is to form a "united states of Europe." In all the lesser states would work for the glory of a Great Germany. But this can only be brought about when the Battle of Britain has ended and Hitler proves the victor. It is in the defeat of England that Rumania and Hungary will play their part. Except for the bombs over Britain, Hitler has been relatively passive. During this breathing period, it is also thought that he is backing the new schisme...the long expected Mediterranean war is cut off de Sues from the British. It is suggested that by the use of both Italian and German forces—one marching from Libya across the Egyptian desert and the other down through the Balkans into the Asiatic territory—the British would be cutting off the supply of the combined Italo - German forces. Hitler can then concentrate on the neutrality of Turkey, who has threatened to fight. It is believed that Turkey will be no observer to this puzzle of Germany's next move, for Russia has warned Turkey to its knees, and make no bones with the German drive. And Stalin remembers that Prime Minister Churchill voiced his appreheension at the Russian-German course of action when he described it as a "riddle wrapped in mystery inside an enigma."

Bulgaria Reasoned

The British have had an Axis pincer movement reunited in the territories made by the Italian occupancy of Bulgaria yesterday.

Or Forever Hold Your Peace . . .

It has been said that the students on the campus are prone to be guilty of condemning things or actions on too little evidence. We were accused last year of not giving the judiciary of our college a fair trial. Perhaps the high grades of our law brawlers up until all hours of the night will tell us later whether they were really guilty of the offense that would cause them to be shipped.

I ask you, as members of the student body, what would you do if you were Hitler? You would find out anything. Would anyone tell us why? To those who left school last year, will any one tell us why it did not behoove the Florida coeds to stay down at the Democrat Club until after 2 a. m.? Perhaps one of the officers of COA and the health of the girls being tired last year was the reason for suspension.

It is often said that the question WHY is the most important. However, Socrates often used this method of discovering truth. If for one would hesitate to call such a man childish and stupid.

Let us ask why do persons call the question why stupid and childish? Why? Why is it because in that one word we can ask, a more irritating and more comprehensive question than in any other question of 50 words? This question does not require only a statement of fact, it demands a reason for the fact (or supposed fact). It is much easier to answer why to one than to say "you're so stupid" or "Such a childish question" than it is to think through the reason for and the defense. Especially is this true if the why is a personal question. If there is a consistent defense, one should not fear the question why, but be glad to hear it.

If there is a defense and we refuse to give it, we are to assume that our questioner has not the intelligence to grasp our defense? Is he to be condemned? Perhaps he is being greater than to assume that he or she could understand our reasoning unless we give them a chance to hear it, believe it.

If we are given a chance to evaluate the whole situation instead of only the gossip that leaks out, the student body may be found to have a capacity for intelligence and maturity. If every time a young child asked a question, he was ignored or only told a part of the truth he would grow into a very unintelligent person—if he ever grew up at all. Actually, the most intelligent person of the mother who told her child "You may go swimming but do not go near the water."

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK

Even Little Oddrey—

Contemporary Student Thought . . .

Following the lecture made by Dr. Walter Judd, a medical missionary for many years in China, Nancy Kulp, a junior at Florida state college, Staunton, Virginia, definitely began preparations to partially place an embargo on goods sent to Japan and endorsed wholeheartedly to the aiding of Chinese students. All Mary Baldwin girls are urged now to wear a Nazi emblem, or swastika pin on campus.

The freshman class was made responsible for seeing that their high schools are contacted. The freshmen's duty is to contact newspapers and magazines, the junior class to contact civic clubs and organizations and churches of each home town, and the senior class to present the campaign to the alumnae of the college.

In 1939 the Texas State college for women student opinion collected 1,000 answers to ques-tions men turned down marriages for worldly careers. The students thought they should take advantage of their education in a more democratic way than that of the home. But student opinion has changed, particularly within the last year. Few girls now plan to go out to make their mark in the business world as formerly. In a recent poll on the question, do you intend to work after you finish school? only 46 per cent voted in the affirmative, while 90 per cent voted "yes" in a similar poll. To the question, do you intend to marry within one year? 40 to 60 per cent of the seniors voted that they wanted a short experimental period in business, whereas in the 1939 poll, 90 per cent wanted such experience. This points to another evidence that increasing war apprehension has been embedded in our daily thinking.

The Auburn Plainsman voices its disgust at the growing enthusiasm of "God Bless America" as a substitution for "Star Spangled Banner." The Purdue Exponent disputes the right to the same honors as the national anthem, when the Louisiana State University band played "God Bless America" at one of their recent football games. Students are glad to let their feets rest, except their hats from pates and stapled them over hearts and stood stiffly at attention while the tune was on. "God didn't pick out this geographical spot to endow all his lofty virtues," says Louisiana's Daily Reveille. "We should be proud that we were born here; we should also remember that it's pretty much of a senetical accident that we are Americans. God doesn't favor Americ- blessings more where people are free to decide and where men act decently toward their fellows."

Bill Cenkar of Notre Dame's college believes that it is a very nice gesture to the campus or to the singer who first featured the tune, but nothing more.

The Plainsman believes that "America's patriotism must have its more fundamental expression than the material plea for divine blessings."—ACP.

What do you think of the suggestion that compulsory Wasserman tests be given all students?

Mary Ann Ingram: I think that all of the girls who knew what the Wasserman test was were very much in favor of it being compulsory for safeguarding the health of themselves and their friends. They found it a very constructive idea and hoped that it would be embodied in general health program. However, they felt that compulsory Wasserman that out of about 50 girls interviewed only about 5 or 6 of them had never heard of a Wasserman test, and when it was explained to them. There were some who considered it a violation of personal liberties to demands that such a test be given.

Dennie Thomasson: I am all for compulsory Wasserman tests not only here but everywhere. Venereal disease is a thing that is ing together here on campus, and all of us should be willing and eager to take the test. How can we combat such a horrible disease successfully if we don't find it first? And if Wasserman tests should prove that we have it on campus, the sooner the disease can be found the sooner it can be checked.

Betty Tolson: This is a very good suggestion, and I believe all students will be willing to cooperate.

Harriet Benson: The suggestion is definitely a very good one and should be adopted soon enough.

Marjorie Richardson: It is a very worthwhile, constructive idea but to be successful it must be done with full cooperation of all students on campus.

Catherine Bellas: I think that the idea is a good one. I don't think that there is any necessity for it on campus, but sometimes seems constructive but is just not necessary.

Nancy Kulp: I think it's a swell idea, and that we ought to go ahead with it.

Mary Celeste Fletcher: I think it is a good idea because I feel that it would safeguard the health of the entire campus.

Leona Ogle: I can't understand the reason for the sudden excitement and concern about it.

Anne Salay: I believe this scheme would be a good one for the man test of all students. It is only one means by which we can insure safety against the spread of disease and it will also tend to do away with the stigma and embarrassment which now exist.

Mary Ann Hamilton: I don't think its omission in our entrance blanks automatically brands us as bad sports.

Edith Wax: I believe in it very much for it is a necessary means to cope with a serious situation and perhaps help to prevent other diseases.

Viola Sharon: I think that everyone should be tested for the general good of all concerned. Most intelligent people cannot help but feel this way, too.

Doris Ramm: I think that it is a very good suggestion because it would improve the general cleanliness of the health records of all the girls at school.

Frances Somerhoon: I think it would be a good idea because it would insure a better standard of health and would be much more advantageous to the girls as well as to the people with whom we come in contact.

Kathleen Morrow: I think it is a very good idea because one is never certain of the contact she may have had and can feel safer with this precaution.

Pleasant Copeland: I think it is an excellent idea because we all like to know and be sure of our own health, and it is Frank C. Houseben, author of "The United States Army" appearing in the December Flight is an odd contributor to the magazine, the editor finds him one of the best informed newspapermen on the subject of the army and armament.

"Many people regard the Army as a hard, backward and resistant to new ideas. . . . I believe its officer class is readier and finer-spirited than it has profound doubts about the ability to adapt itself to Blitzkrieg era. The only answer to opposition on these scores comes from those officers and patriots who in all circumstances believe, by God, that the Army can array in the bestest fashion, and can lick the world!"

The American army today is facing a new situation, a launche of billions of dollars, is being forced to bring the army to its present state of efficiency. Now, they leave it to fate, to luck, to chance, to hope that the billions are properly spent.

"The American army is rebuild of our confused forefathers by a thousand compromises in organization and intermingling in accordance with the latest political ideas. It has been kept a small numerical strength. In accordance with democratic ideals, contains in its procurement doctrine and training the principles the blueprints of a military force of the World war weakfists in European politics."

"In respect to weapons and equipment, it is hardly applicable. American mechanical genius has produced a number of weapons which are probably the best in European army circles. The Garand rifle, the Tommy Gun, the Grand rifle, and the Browning.

"The army shows up well compared with the army of Switzerland, France, and Poland. Hanson Villard grants that the army is not prepared for a better broader vision, is more in touch with what is happening abroad than the public realizes, and is wasted on the studifying the lessons of the European war. American rifle marksmanship always the best in the world, and the Army Air Corps."

"Army circles admit that the army has been content too much to world progress in the field of tactics, but there's no desire now in leaders as since Cassar. However, they do not favor the adoption of any new in the adaption of new weapons to tactics. In this realm they are content that they have not been asleep.

"Army training besides has funds have contributed to a backwardness. There are free thinkers in the army who see that reforms are necessary. . . . The result is that the army officers be given full opportunity examine their efficiency reform minded officers should be close to them wherein they can study the problems of wanting and would enable them to improve their work.

"One officer would establish a moment of a controversial commission to suggest improvements and methods. One of the most constructive suggestions is the creation of a separate air department co-equal with the army and navy departments under a secretary of defense.

"Above any of the-recent discussions with army officers stands up with the conclusion that the American people are behind the army as sae. In any case the army is not a political issue, is youthful or old, certainly not reactionary."

"What is the best scout which can lead the army aright and which can be followed and put in the author's opinion seems to be a combination of the characteristics which have been the two extent points of views. Of these is that of the chief of staff, General George C. Marshall; the other is that of civilian Secretary Stimson, who, in impetuously eager to recreate the army along reactionary lines, Marshall wants a mass army, while Colonel Stimson wants a highly mechanized, and motorized force. You can hardly blame the latter for demanding large quantities of the material under the existing foreign policy.

"Today we have an opportunity to build up a small but scientific culture mesh by the adaptation of advanced scientific technique and the social lessons learned in the New Deal to solve what might rapidly become the symbol of a new era of democracy."

New York university has formed a separate department in higher education, which will train students to teach in colleges and universities.

Cotillion, Village Vamps To Tap at Thanksgiving Dance

Members of the Cotillion club and the Village Vamps will tap their new members at the annual Thanksgiving dance to be held tomorrow night at the gym. The dances will tap 25, and the VV's only three.

Presiding over the dance, Village Vamps are entertaining their dates at a dinner at the Three Sisters Dr and Mrs. Coyle Moore and Miss Mildred Pinnell, sponsors of the club will also be there.

Decorations will be in black and white, the club colors, and club committee is composed of Mary Smith, Barbara Brown, Betty King and Roberta Rhyne.

During intermission, Cotillion members will entertain their dates and her tappees at a buffet supper to be held in Landis recreation hall. Green and white cakes and sandwiches will be served.

This is the first time such an affair has taken place, but it is hoped that it will become an annual event. Miss Hampton is in charge, and is assisted by Dottie Anderson, Mary Connell, and Nancy A. White.

Present membership in the Cotillion club includes Lucille Waller, president; Elizabeth Moore, vice-president; Nancy A. White, secretary; Betty Brown, assistant treasurer; Martha Stroberg, secretary.

Virginia Wilderman, Jean Fehle, Nina Adams, Mary Lou Adams, Grace Bail, Jane Disher, Mae Hampton, Topsy Mitchell, Kathryn Smith, Dottie Mae Anderson, Mary Connell, Dotty Conn, Betty Herlrick.

Dotty Garrison, Margaret Herring, Betsy McMichael, Nancy Rhyne, Jean Hitchcock, Jean Kissel, Virginia Monroe, Ruth Ann Virginia Walker, Lorene Barbara Bennicker, Lois Lowder, Betty Hyatt, and Lila Lowder.

Membership in the Village Vamps includes, Mary Jane Lamb, president; Roberta Rhyne, vice-president; Dee Shalling, secretary Beth Mitchel, treasurer.

Lord Halifax, the British ambassador, made the statement, Lord Halifax welcomes this opportunity of stating that although Britain's does not join or associate herself either actively or passively in the enemies of Great Britain or attack her allies, it is the intention that in any eventual peace settlement to which Great Britain is a party, the integrity and independence of Bulgaria shall be respected. The British were not going to take advantage of the fact that Bulgaria did not join the Axis powers along with Rumania, Hungary, and Slovakia. It realize that in the present the German drive toward the Mediterranean, the logical move will be down through the Balkans, however, due to her geographical position, is not likely to accept England's offer.

That Britain at the present time is in a much better position without the Axis forces in the Near East than she has been at any other time during the war. Should Italy had attacked the British in Egypt at the time of the fall of France, when the Englishmen were so greatly concerned about the probable invasion of the British Isles, the forces might have been overwhelmed.

Greeks Victorious?

After weeks of relentless fighting the heroic Greek army at last realizes the end of the war in the Balkans, for reports Tuesday from Greece announce that the Italian forces, withdrawing in confusion, may be entirely surrounded and captured. On every side the insistent Greeks are pressing forward, capturing Italian towns and driving Mussolini's forces back into Albania. Added to Britain, whose RAF bombings have made it practically impossible for much needed reinforcements to reach the hard-pressed Fascist troops, the Greeks appear to be emerging victorious. In one battle, the Greeks, after having captured Italian tanks, used them to attack the rear flanks of the Italian army. The "Trojan Horses" completely surprised the Fascists, who believed them to be operated by Italians. The result was a merciless onslaught by the Greeks and utter defeat for the enemy forces.

But let us remember that this Greek-Italian war is not over and it is not won—yet. In a long war, all odds favor Italian forces. The Greeks may yet suffer the fate of the Finns, who so heroically resisted Russia for a time.

Sunday Breakfast Honors Returning Mortar Board Alums at Richards' Home

Visiting alumnae of Mortar Board, college honor society, will be honored with a breakfast Sunday morning at the home of Mrs. Harold Richards, national editor. In charge of the breakfast are the officers of Mortar Board, who are Betty Nickinson, Wilma Johns, and Pat Brandt.

At their meeting, last Sunday night, the members planned the party and were honored by a talk from Mrs. C. B. Ferguson, Pi Beta Phi housemother. Mrs. Ferguson spoke on her travels in Turkey.

Esteren Honors Alumnae With Breakfast Thursday

Members and pledges of Esteren had an informal supper together Wednesday night before Odd demonstration. Thursday morning the actives got-together breakfast honoring alumnae members of Esteren was given in Landis kitchen.

A breakfast of grapefruit juice, cinnamon buns, bacon, and coffee was served by the goats of the organization.

Approximately 30 Esterens were present including faculty and alumnae members.

Dinner Party Will Fete Village Vamps Saturday

Members of Village Vamps and their dates will have a dinner party at the Dutch Kitchen just before the dance Saturday night. The club colors of black and white will be the color scheme used. Large black vases of white flowers will be placed at either end of the table, while flowers arranged to form the Greek letters of Chi Omega, Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Delta Pi, and Kappa Delta, will be placed in the center of the table. Place cards will be in the shape of small V.V.'s.

"Turkey Tussel" to Fete Z T A Visiting Inspector

Miss Dorothy Gibbons of Rahway, New Jersey, national field inspector of Zeta Tau Alpha, is visiting the local chapter of that sorority this week.

Miss Gibbons attended school at Dickinson college from which she transferred her junior year. At Pennsylvania college she helped install the Gamma Epsilon chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha two years ago. Last year Miss Gibbons did graduate work at this college and was alumnae advisor of the local chapter.

As a field inspector of Zeta Tau Alpha, Miss Gibbons visits are scheduled among th 164 college and alumnae chapters of the sorority in this country and Canada.

Several parties have been planned for Miss Gibbons this weekend, including a "Turkey Tussel" this afternoon and general open-house honoring the field inspector.

Kilgore Will Give Talk

Campus program chairman of the Bundles for Britain group, Betty Nickinson, reminds students that Mr. John Kilgore editor of the Democrat, will speak at the Bundles for Britain meeting at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in Landis theater on Tuesday, December 3 at 4:30. His subject will be "An Editor Reviews the War Situation."

During the Thanksgiving holidays, alumnae are invited to visit the bundles room on the top floor of the Student-Alumnae building, where they may see the work that is being carried on at present.

★ FASHION PREVIEW ★

For the gay whirl of the Thanksgiving dance, odds and ends silks will rave over the selections of evening dresses in the December GOOD HOUSEKEEPING. Two of them are shown here. First is one of glistening stripes which comes in champagne rayon net. The other is pale blue and the cotton-and-rayon faille bodice is etched with brilliants.

KD WINS FIRST PRIZE FOR DECORATION; PI PHI VOLLEY BALL COURT IS SECOND

With the slogans "It Doesn't Cost a Fortune to Look and "You'll Have the Time of Your Life" done with the benefit of magazine covers on large scale, the Kappa Delt's was first prize in the Thanksgiving decorations. The KD's built a Fortune magazine with a cover featuring the Student-Alumnae building and a Look magazine covered Chi Omega house representing a Tarpon club member; for their first sentence. The words in the sentence were of large crepe paper covered letters. The second slogan had Time magazine on which the flag of Florida Blake college for women and flags of Odd and Even colors made the cover picture. Life magazine completed the slogan. On this magazine Even and Odd basketball players formed the front picture.

Second place honors went to the Pi Beta Phis who decorated their yard with a volley ball court. On one side of the court were the numbers of an even year and the date, November 28, and Odd colors were built. In the center of the two courts, above the volley ball net was a turkey featuring the colors, garnet and gold. The turkey's head moved from side to side as if undecided as to the outcome of the Thanksgiving games.

The Zeta Tau Alphas placed third in the decoration contest. Their house was decorated with a fortune telling booth draped in black. On the front of the booth was the writing, "Madame La Carneta" and inside the booth was a witch in garnet and gold. She held her hand over a colorful globe where she could see. Even basketball player were behind the witch wore the signs of the zodiac. On top of the Z T A house was the words "Written in the Stars" and "Welcome, Alumnae" covered with crepe paper and studded with stars.

The judging of the decorations took place Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Acting as judges were faculty members.

At the other houses on campus, Odd and Even colors were paramount. The Alpha Chis featured a fireplace and Thanksgiving table with Odd and Even and the college colors. Across the street, the Alpha Gams honored the alumnae with a garnet and gold-wrapped greeting and streamers from the top of the house, to the letters in the yard. The Phi Delts used a "Little Abner" theme. Their house represented "Dogpatch" and featured various characters from the Little Abner newspaper cartoon. On the balcony two Odd and Even Dogpatchers moved up and down at alternate times, denoting indecision as to which team would win.

In charge of decorations for the Kappa Deltas was Barbara Anderson, for the Phi Phis, Eleanor Yopher, for the Zeta Tau Alphas, Betty Cappleman.

THANKSGIVING COFFEES IN DORMITORIES ENTERTAIN VISITING ALUMNAE, PARENTS

In the parlors of the various residence hall, visiting parents and alumnae were entertained with an after-dinner coffee Thursday.

Jennie Murphree hall presented a short program along with the coffee including a vocal solo by Mildred Bailey, a piano solo by Marianne Smith, a quartet by Peggy Barfield, Jean Keenland, Nina Sweet and June Hale. The table was filled with fruit as a centerpiece. The room was decorated with fall leaves.

Reynolds hall en-tertained its guests with a very informal coffee. The refreshments were served from the kitchen by the girls on the social committee. A large pumpkin filled with fruit was the high point of the decorative scheme of fall with colored leaves and fall berries.

The table decoration at the party held in the parlor of Bryan hall was a very attractive spectacle. Lighted candles spaced down the center of the table made a most attractive setting for the fall leaves and berries that were scattered about on the cloth, and the silver bowl filled with fruit. The social committee was in charge of serving with Miss Isabel McKinzel and Miss Sarah Herndon pouring.

Gilchrist hall had a very informal affair. The coffee was served from the kitchen by Frances Greeks Join in Honoring Visiting Alumnae, Guests With Coffees and Suppers

Many coffees, parties, and suppers have been planned this weekend for alumnae and guests of the different sorority girls.

Yesterday afternoon the Sigma Kappa's had a coffee honoring their province president, Mary Ruth Murray. Tomorrow afternoon an informal "spider web" party will be given for members and pledges of the sorority.

Immediately after dinner last night members of Alpha Delta Pi entertained with an after dinner coffee honoring visiting parents and friends. Olive Oliphant was general chairman of the coffee.

Alpha Chi Omega alumnae, friends, parents, patrons and patronesses were guests at a coffee yesterday afternoon. Decorations for this party denoted a Thanksgiving theme. Maidie Thibeling was in charge of arrangements and was assisted by the pledges with the serving. Sunday morning the Alpha Chi's will have a breakfast in honor of their two new pledges, Gloria Waters and Martha Beck. Maurine Smith is in charge of the breakfast.

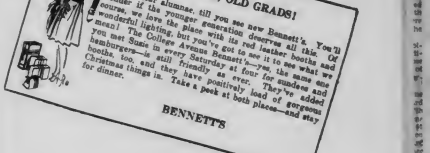
Yesterday morning Delta Delta Delta had a breakfast honoring the founding of the sorority at Boston college in 1898. In the afternoon visiting friends and alumnae were given an informal reception. A tea dance has been planned by the Tri Delt's for Saturday afternoon.

Thursday afternoon Chi Omegas entertained alumnae and parents with a Thanksgiving coffee. Dottie Mae Anderson, social chairman arranged the coffee.

Delta Phi Epsilon entertained visitors yesterday afternoon with an after-dinner coffee last night with a party for pledges and guests. An informal party has been planned for Saturday night.

Members of Kappa Alpha Theta had a coffee yesterday afternoon at which time the freshmen gave skits. Virginia Balkcom was general supervisor for the occasion.

Tomorrow afternoon the Kappa Delta's will be hostesses at a tea dance. Pledges will entertain the members with skits Sunday night.



Pi Beta Phi will have a buffet supper Sunday night for actives and pledges. An after-dinner coffee was given by the sorority yesterday afternoon.

Bureau Will Register Two-Year Graduates All Next Week

According to Dr. Elizabeth Gordon Andrews, director of personnel, registration with the placement bureau for two-year certificate candidates is optional. She states, we shall, however, be glad to enroll anyone who expects to receive a certificate in January or May. If you wish assistance in securing a teaching position for the coming year, please come to the personnel office Monday or Tuesday and make a definite appointment for a ten minute conference with Miss Usher for sometime next week. If you wish to register, please do so now! Do not wait until the second semester. We wish to complete all placement enrollment at once."

In order to register it will be necessary for a student to have penciled notes for her college credits; i.e., 12 hrs. Educ. 3 hrs. Eng. etc. and on her activities through graduation. She should have in mind the names of two or three of her instructors whom she wishes to give as references—her critic teacher (if she has not had practice teaching, this information may be supplied at a later date), and education instructor, and any other faculty member who has had her in class and can judge her teaching ability in democratic ways. It is preferable that she obtain the permission of her teachers to use their names as references.

especially good at school where we are in such close contact with one another.

Allee Norris: I'm very much in favor of vaccination because sometimes we never even know with whom we are going to room at school, and this would be a wonderful precaution for all concerned. It's not a subject to be buried beneath dignity and false modesty, but is far too important for this and should be brought to the attention of every student in school.

Mary Catherine Adams: I am definitely in favor of the vaccination that the Wasserman test be made compulsory for all students. It is a measure of protection to the entire student body, and when the test is required of all students there should be no embarrassment or objections to it.

Eleanor B. Harrell: It definitely should be had by each student at some time, if not in the pre-college health examination at least before graduation. If it becomes more general there will be no reason for any embarrassment. For the one with a normal viewpoint toward such a destructive social disease there is no need for such an attitude as the test is for one's own protection.

Rexetta Leonard: The suggestion is a good one if there is a need or reason for it.

Yvonne Martin: The test is the best idea ever, and certainly should be made part of our preentrance health examination.

Helen Beale: I really think it's a fine idea. There would be no embarrassment surrounding a Wasserman under these circumstances, and we would all certainly be a lot safer and more confident.

Alice Hodges: I think it is an excellent suggestion. Contrary to the belief of many, all students are not given a blood test before they come to school. Since it is hard, if not impossible, to detect the disease in its early stages, the best prosecution for each individual is a blood test. It would also help further to take the "hush-hush" attitude away.

Jeanne Reese: Yes, if there should be any positive students among us it would be far better for them to find out now and be treated than to find out too late. Most important, is the safeguarding of the health of those proving the negative.

Clyde Dailey: Frankly, I believe that the Wasserman test should be made compulsory for all students before entering college and at intervals during the students' college career. This will not only aid the girl in her personal health, but will tend, certainly, to lessen the extent of venereal disease in our various communities.

Willetta Willis: I think it is a grand suggestion to give compulsory Wasserman tests to all students because I think it will be helpful in preventing the disease among college students. It will also serve as a helpful check for students having the disease, and will help them to combat the harmful disease in its early stages.

Nonnie Lee Elkins: I think compulsory Wasserman tests should be given all students because the physical examination does not even begin to find out the facts that are disclosed by these tests. It would certainly do no harm.

Georgiana Hamburger: I'm all for it. It would be a wonderful practice and certainly would make loads of people a lot better off with that knowledge.

Doris Carter: I think it an excellent idea, and I believe necessary as a safeguard to individuals in group living.

Catherine Bell: At first, tests might be voluntary on the part of the students. After they had grown used to the idea, say in a year, the tests should then be compulsory for the good of all students in the college.

Helen Dahlgren: An excellent precaution both for the student and student body. The majority of people would never of their own accord have this test, and I believe that it will be only through the testing of the majority of people that such diseases will be eradicated.

Georgia Boasts Unique College

Mrs. Helen Weaver Connor, Transfer From Berry, Describes School Where Students Furnish Labor in Return For Education

BY MARY ANNA HAMPTON

She's a senior—little, blonde and twenty-married. But her three years at one of the most unusual schools in the United States has placed Mrs. Helen Conner Weaver, transfer student, in the unfamiliar place of the publicity spotlight.

For three years she has been to college working a semester between each year of studies, as do the majority of students at the Martha Berry schools in Rome, Georgia.

This is a cooperative school in which there is co-education, but the students wear uniforms; where the students have to keep lights out at night, but dates are dismissed promptly at 10:00 in the afternoon; where students attend dances twice monthly, but do only the square dance and waltz.

Helen Weaver, whose home is in Georgia, but who intends to join her husband in Manatee, Florida, when he receives his degree, has only nine hours credit of receiving her B. S. degree in mathematics. Because of regulations at Berry making 12 hours work the minimum load and requiring the married student to enroll she has not returned to Florida State college to complete her senior year. She is qualified to return to Berry to receive her degree, however.

Generally speaking, the college, founded by Dr. Martha Berry in 1902, is planned so that students may earn or pay all of their tuition by working for the school. Ninety eight per cent of the 200 to 300 students work out nearly all their expenses, and 75 per cent of these do not earn their entire way. All labor necessary to keep the college, its buildings, kitchen, farm, dairy, weaving rooms, and canning plants running smoothly is performed by students. Although nominational, Berry college is a protestant school, and it emphasizes religious life with four weekly chapels and a Sunday evening which students are required to attend.

"Classes are much the same as those at PSCW," said Helen, but she commented that here the "atmosphere" isn't nearly as friendly as at Berry. A majority of Berry students graduate, for, added Helen, "it isn't easy!"

Mrs. Weaver entered Berry college in January, 1937. She worked until May as one of the kitchen helps. As all new students must work four and a half months before they were entitled to enter the sophomore class in the fall.

The routine continued summer and winter, one semester of work, two semesters of classes, until May, 1940. Helen met and became engaged to her husband, Clarence Weaver, also a student at Berry, decided not to delay their marriage.

Although Helen worked in the kitchen, other girls have jobs in the weaving and sewing rooms, making curtains, spreads, baby jackets, afghans, ties, handbags, handkerchiefs. Each dress uniforms, or in the large canning plant, or in the dairy, or with the sanitation crew keeping halls, baths, grounds and buildings clean.

Boys work on the college farm, in the auto shops, or the industrial arts shop making wooden souvenirs, furniture, and school equipment. The boy's sanitation crew mows lawns, keeps trash and garbage cleared, and fights insects. The heavier dairy work and farming is done by the boys' hands.

Everyone is in uniform dress at all times. For the girls, class wear is chambray dresses in the "Mother Hubbard" style with sleeves and bloomers cut to the waistband. College girls have white collars and white cuffs on the long sleeves. Second to the green dresses, underclassmen wear red, and the high school girls wear blue. During the warmer

Pity the Poor Janitors!

"Peanuts, peanuts; anybody want some peanuts?"

Did they want them! Up until the opening session of both the Even and Odd demonstrations on Thursday and Wednesday nights, little blue and white clad Sophs more Council girls asked madly about selling their wares.

"Have you got a nickel? I want some peanuts."

"Toss me a nut."

"Pass the bag back this way. We want some more."

"Send that Sophomore Council girl back here. I want some PEANUTS!"

Thus came yells from all around as both Ioyal Odds and Evens enjoyed one of the major indoor sports of the American people—and they ate 500 pounds of them!

Weaver. Two new movies come to the school each month, and there are college dances twice a month. To these dances the boys and girls come in their campus clothes and have a great deal of fun with old fashioned square dances and waltzes.

Seniors may go to Rome, five miles away, as often as they like, except on Saturdays and Sundays, but underclassmen are limited to two trips a month. There are numerous clubs active on campus, such as the YMCA and the YWCA, the Home Economics club, the International Relations club, literary societies, and melodic clubs.

"Dating" is allowed in the afternoon only, and the couple must go to the campus store for the date. Girls dismiss their friends promptly at 4 o'clock. There is no casual strolling or sitting on the campus with men; the store is the "dating area." This establishment is a combination cafe, dry goods department, bookstore, and furniture store. Sunday afternoons men may call at the girls' dormitory and be received outside the building. Near the college is Victory lake belonging to the school, which is used as a picnic ground. Many Berry students eventually marry one another, "which pleases Miss Berry immensely," said Mrs. Weaver with a reminiscent smile.

Girls have been sent home for smoking, although men may smoke in their dormitory rooms only.

On separate campuses are the boys' and girls' dormitories and dining halls. By using three dining rooms, one for college and high school men, boys and girls do not eat together. Rooms in the girls' dormitory are well furnished; each girl has for herself a single bed, a straight chair and a rocker, a table desk, a dresser, and a closet. Girls are not permitted to have pictures for display of uniformity.

Martha Berry school. Mr. and Mrs. Ford donated funds for the recreation hall, two dormitories, a dining hall, and auditorium. The school is financed by many such endowments, and also by the sale of student-made products, including butter, ice cream, cane syrup canned foods, cloth articles, and wood souvenirs.

The home of Miss Martha Berry is on the campus grounds and is completely furnished and decorated by student handiwork.

Though Miss Berry is the guiding influence in school policies, a student government of four major officers and representatives from each dormitory hall work with a faculty committee in legislation. The council is headed by Dr. O. LeLand Green, president of the school.

The students enrolled are a select group of those having high scholastic standing in high school, adequate recommendations, and perhaps a willingness to work. Last year the office announced that it had received enough applications to fill the school 10 times with honor students. Most of the pupils are from the South, yet there are almost as many out-of-state students enrolled as from Georgia.

Needy Receive Baskets

Thanksgiving baskets for the needy was a project this year of the social service committee of the YWCA Food lasting over a period of time, such as staples and canned goods, was sent instead of the usual turkey dinner.

Another project of the committee is to send a large box of refreshing dresses and old shoes to the Florida Agricultural and Mechanical college where the clothing will be sold to the students there.

Doctor White Goes Touring On Horseback

Explores Wakulla Area During Armistice Holiday

BY BETTY JEAN DAVENPORT

Hundreds of girls were excitedly anticipating big weekends when the day for Armistice holidays to begin finally arrived. Some were looking forward to one mad whirl of college football games, chrysanthemums, ribbons, cheers and banners, while others were excited by the promises of military dances and parties. Another large group of students, whose homes are not far from school for them to go there for a weekend, remained on campus or had a lively time at Camp Flastacowo. But, wherever they went and whatever they did, chances are very great that none of them enjoyed their vacation any more than did Dr. Sarah Parker White, orthopedic physician and professor of hygiene.

Finding the weather suitable and inviting, Dr. White decided to ride horseback down to Wakulla Springs, which is located approximately 20 miles southeast of Tallahassee. She wanted to take a dozen along and have good facilities for taking care of the horses, so she made inquiries previous to her journey, and the caretakers at the Wakulla lodge had a crude stable built for the horses while there.

Dr. White is a great lover of horses, having ridden for many years. She finds that bridlepaths are more enjoyable to ride upon because on the pavement there is the danger of the horse's slipping and falling. On her way down to Wakulla, Dr. White traveled on dirt roads whenever it was possible to do so.

Whenever she did have to travel along the pavement, she took care to ride on the shoulder of the road. She had to face the sun all the way going down, and consequently, sunburned the nose rather badly. She found the ride through the fat quiet forest especially beautiful.

A friend of Dr. White's lives on a big farm five miles this side of Wakulla. On the way down, Dr. White stopped and put up her horses there to water and feed, rested her saddlebags at her lunch, and then lay down and slept for an hour on the ground before continuing on her trip.

"At Wakulla," said Dr. White, "the caretakers had my horses ready ---ride through the forest along the narrow wood trails; go swimming in the clear, cool water; go fishing, which requires a guide and a boat to make a trip far enough down the river to go below the sandbar, and only from there downstream is it permissable to fish—and you can have your fish served for breakfast the next morning!; and finally, to study birds at the springs and down stream." There are many species of birds, but Dr. White was especially interested in the Anginga bird. One finds a certain length to rush back to the peaceful seclusion of the forest and all of nature.

After expressing her love of horseback riding, Dr. White ended on old English phrase which she considers to be quite true: "Outside of a horse is good for inside of man." And in Dr. White's own words, "Horseback riding is better for the complexion, not from the outside in, but from the inside out!"

Zoo Gets Sparrow Bald Pated Duc

The zoology department received two additions to its "zoo" in a tame warden of Leon county and a two dollar bet from a hunter, to be used in question, a female bald pate duck who now is stuffed and on display in the zoology room.

The wager was on the part of the hunter who claimed that a bird was a pin tail duck while the game warden held that it belonged to the bald pate species.

Second addition to the zoo is a white throated sparrow. The explanation offered for the gift was that it was electrocuted on Enzu Dewitney of the zoology department found the little bird on the driveway beneath the electric wires. "It's one of the sweetest singers in these parts," said Dr. Dewitney of the ill-fated bird.

Miss Deviney mounted the birds.

Blind Girl Plans To Teach After Graduation In June

Alma Chalker Attends School Overcoming Serious Physical Handicap

Blindness which she experienced at the age of three as the result of an accident while playing with her little brother has not handicapped one 24-year-old girl as far as her education has been concerned.

Alma Chalker, slender, blonde senior has been a student at Florida State college since February, 1938, yet she passes unnoticed in the throngs as she briskly walks to classes with a constant companion at her side. Upon being questioned as to her need for a companion Alma explained that it is not a feeling of helplessness so much as it is her need for eyes which requires her to have a guide. In the dormitory where she shares a room with another music student and at home with her family she goes about most of the time by herself.

She has been much intrigued by the seeing-eye dogs which are used by many blind persons, but says that the expense has been the prohibitive factor in her case. She has been aided by several scholarships, the latest recently awarded one for $350 by the American Foundation for the Blind which seeks to help young people in obtaining an education. Something of her independence may be learned from the fact that Alma earned enough of her expenses the first three years here

Educators Will Go to Memphis For Convention

Hinson Will Officiate At Annual Meeting of Eyman Will Make Radio Speech At Conference

Memphis educators are preparing to welcome 1,000 representatives from colleges and high schools in 11 Southern states at the annual meeting of the Southern Association of colleges and Secondary Schools December 8-13. Dr. M. B. Hinson of the education department of Florida State college for women, as president of the association, will officiate.

Dr. Hinson, President Edward Conradi, and Dean R. L. Eyman will represent the State college at the convention, and Paul Eddy and D. E. Williams of the state department of education will also be delegates.

Many Will Attend

The association met last spring in Atlanta, when the time for the annual convention was changed to December. College presidents, professors and deans, city and county high school superintendents and principals of larger high schools of the cities and counties of the Southern states will attend.

There will be three general sessions daily in addition to conference groups and the four local radio broadcasts. Broadcasts from 11 speakers including part of one session will be on Tuesday, from 2:30 to 2:45 o'clock. Dean R. L. Eyman will speak over station WREC, Memphis, on the "Vocational Education and National Defense".

The meeting is planned as a working conference for those attending and with the social features to be a banquet the night of December 12, at which Dr. Hinson, as president, will address the entire body.

Annual Staff Gets Camera

Special Photographers Will Cover Campus For Flastacowo

A new camera has recently been purchased for use by the Flastacowo staff in obtaining a better pictorial coverage of the campus activities, announced Sonia Mitchell, editor of the yearbook, announced today. Five staffers have been selected to act as representatives of the publication and are in charge of the new camera. These representatives are besides Miss Mitchell, Lucy Austin, Mary Jane Medlin, Rachael Erwin, and Mary Ann Jones Holdsworth. Only three girls at a time will be responsible for the operation of the camera and the taking of pictures.

Each representative is given a theme card which designates her for cloister classes, teas, meetings and other functions at any time to order to take informal pictures for the Flastacowo. By means of the new camera the pictures were taken of the Thanksgiving activities.

Sonia said that the idea of getting such a camera for her publication was suggested at the Associated Collegiate Press conference in Detroit which she attended last month. At the conference the necessity of being equipped with a good camera in order to be able to completely cover the campus activities of the year pictures was pointed out to annual editors.

The staff will be trained each year to operate the camera in order that she may be in charge of it the next year and teach others. Miss Pitchford, publicity director, will be in charge of it during the summer.

Snapshots that aren't used in the annual may be obtained from Adams studio. Pictures that are not taken by the photographers must be obtained until the end of the year at which time they will be placed on exhibit and students may order the ones they want.

Kilgore Makes Analysis Of World Conflict For Knitters

"An Editor Reviews the War," was the title of the speech given by Julian Harris, editor-in-chief of the Tallahassee Daily-Democrat, before members of the knitting members, townspeople, and student Business Men's Club in the Augusta Conrad Little theatre last Tuesday.

In this speech, Kilgore made an analysis of the war and conditions leading to it. He pointed out United States should Germany win or should England win. The latter country has the navy and security although it is a fifty-fifty chance for victory.

"Should Britain win decisively, we know what to expect, because they will control the seas and the world's supply of raw materials. We know what to expect, because we have seen what we got from the shipboard, on foreign soil and at home.

These are valuable to us. Some

Campus Pests Make Friends Gnash Teeth

Bothersome Female Runs Extreme Risk of Being Murdered

By LORRAINE COTTRELL

There are several types of pests on the Florida State college campus for which there has been no fumigation—yet. Up to date you must have found your life interrupted with the annoyance of at least one of these "insects."

This epidemic has been prevalent for some time in one form or another. After a brief survey of the situation the student finds it has been concluded that the results of the infestation are most annoying and troublesome to the students.

Let us go through one day with a typical Florida State college pest. First, she must always be awakened by her neighbor because she forgot to turn an alarm clock to college, or else the ring of a clock disturbs her too abruptly with its piercing staccato scream.

Once she is up she monopolizes the room by leaving a flurry of clothes, hairs, and powder in her wake while she takes her shower. She just makes last breakfast on the run and arrives on the front side of the line in front of some friend with such commanding appeal as, "Oh, Mary, please let me in here. I'm in a terrible hurry and I'll be late for an 8:30 on the third floor of Westcott." And smilingly the friend relinquishes her place.

The food is never suitable at all times. Her appetite is varied. She is indeed in. "I think that's a silly old rule that won't let us have two fruits for breakfast, especially when all we get is eggs and a piece of a horse as the starting point at the Kentucky Derby because she wants to get to the front of the line as soon as possible after the mail is put up.

The mail rings and she is off galloping at top speed with no

Five Represent FSC in Debate

Dixie Tournament Draws Two Freshman And Three Seniors

Three seniors and two freshmen are representing the debate council of Florida State college for women at the Dixie practice tournament at Winthrop college in Rock Hill South Carolina, this weekend.

The girls attending the tournament are Joan Wesner, Patricia Holland, and Margaret Ann Harrison, seniors, and Lucille Miller and Emma Leigh Lambeth, freshmen.

The subject of the debate is the national question, Resolved: That the western hemisphere should form a permanent alliance for union for defense against aggression. The question will be debated by the direct and postponed methods.

In the social program is included a buffet supper, a banquet, and a mock wedding. Last year Joan Weaver was chosen the bride for the wedding by the vote of all the men debaters at Winthrop college during the Southeastern Forensic Tournament. At that same tournament Patricia Holland was judged the best single debater in a special contest, and was awarded a medal for the honor.

Forty-two schools were represented at the Dixie practice tournament last year. Debaters came from Florida, Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Sellers Organizes Band for College

Try-Outs Will Be Held After Christmas

The college band under the direction of Mr. Owen D. Sellers will have its meetings every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon at 4:30 in the auditorium in the western building. Thirty girls have already signed up to play in the band, but trouble will not be held until after the Christmas vacation. The band will just meet and play informally until its formal organization.

Mr. Sellers hopes to have the band ready to participate in the concerts, as well as a marching band, if enough interest is shown. Students are given an invitation to all those interested to attend the next meeting on Tuesday.

Cossack Chorus Will Sing Here

Civic Music Association Will Sponsor Concert At Leon Auditorium

Familiar strains of the "Volga Boat Song" will fill the Leon High school auditorium Wednesday night when the Don Cossack chorus and dancers are presented by the Tallahassee Civic Music association. Many college students who have joined the organization will be in the audience.

The chorus, conducted by Serge Jaroff, is the first of the civic artist series program, which will feature the Ballet Russe early next year. The Cossacks have presented more than 960 concerts in this country alone, offering a program of liturgic, folk, and soldier songs of old Russia with the vivid native dances of the Steppes.

The group is a product of old Russia. The first World war precipitated the Russian revolution and forced the Don Cossacks to flee. Serge Wranzen's White army into prison camps where they were liberated by Serge Jaroff into the world-renowned chorus they are today.

For the past year the second World war has caused them to transfer their headquarters from Paris to New York where they are preparing for American citizenship.

Turner, Carothers Lead In Primary Ballot For President

Seventeen Candidates Remain In Running

Seventeen freshmen are running in the final elections for freshman class offices next Tuesday. They were elected in the primaries yesterday out of 63 freshmen who were nominated in the class meeting Thursday.

Jere Turner and Lollie Carothers are running for class president; Jeanne Lloyd, Patsy Kavanagh and Marianne Smith are all running for vice-president because of the Betty Lou Jackson, Carmen McBeth, Cherry Mitchell, and Perry Lee Wilson will run for secretary for the two senate representatives; Marjorie Lambert and Nancy Temple, for secretary; Jackie Dew and Juliana Erck, for treasurer; Ruth Boyd and Betty Logan for parliamentarian; and Jean Eyeman and Edna Earle Whitfield manager.

Final Vote Tuesday

Final voting will take place all day Tuesday in freshman counselor rooms. They are located on the Westcott building and in the day student room.

Other girls nominated for office were, for president: Laura Lowder, Lulu Josephine Neel Ivan, Doris Roberts, Nell Sims, Rea Smith, Ann Wilson, Nancy Wyckoff Lewis, Nell Smith and Olive Stillwell; for treasurer, Frances Bell Miller, Lucille Miller and Mary Julia Thompson; for parliamentarian, Frances Blake, Mary Ann Jones, Sally Kinuried; for manager, Elizabeth Ann Bennett, Ethel Fields, Frances Lewis, and Peggy Barfield.

Voting in the committees exceeded all previous class elections, those voting numbering 344. The number casting ballots in the primary election was slightly lower, being only 497.

Members of the freshman class elected to committees are Kitty Jo Hickman, chairman, Betsy Ross Howe, and Carolyn Stowell.

College Vespers Begin Sunday

New Series Will Present Memorial Service To Rose Denham

At 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the Augusta Conrad Little theatre the first of a new series of college vespers for the entire student body will be presented. It is to be unusual these dedicational programs are not the customary YWCA vespers, but are an entirely new program, worked by the YWCA and the faculty committee of college vespers, which is made up of 20 faculty members and 20 students. The service will be in the form of a memorial to the late Miss Rose Denham, for many years a social director here and dearly loved by those who knew her. Many of her friends have been asked to speak and sing and by those who knew her as have a number of outsiders

The program reads as follows: musical prelude with Edith Pfarr at the piano and Myra Swindell, violinist; hymn, "Abide with Me" sung by the congregation; Scripture, Elizabeth McBride Hoke; solo by the entire Glee club choir; tributes from the faculty, Dr. William Dodd; Mary Flowers; tributes from the students, quartet: Christine Smith, Mildred True, Wilma Smith, Frances Rogers; hymn, benediction, Dr Edward Conradi.

Sarah Kuder and Marjorie Hamilton will be in charge of the stage decorations, and Polly Venning and Betty Branan are in charge of the ushering.

Dormitories Blaze With Posters And Signs As Election Nears

Candidates For Freshmen Class Offices Solicite Votes With Slogans, Verse And Cartoons

It is definitely not the Christmas spirit that has invaded the three freshman dorms. Although a display equally as colorful as that usually accompanying the Ronnie Murphree, Reynolds, and Byrnes doors and walls, the forthcoming election is the thought uppermost in freshman minds. Christmas, home, letters, and studies have only secondary places of importance.

This year's election campaign finds every bulletin board, the shower doors, ceilings, and a great deal of miscellaneous wall space covered up with red, and yellow posters that solicit the readers' vote by such slogans as "You'll do well with Stillwell," "Pinch us!" Lollie Carothers and the Die is cast. Keep Freshmen on top as in the past with Barfield."

The campaign has even been carried outside of the dormitory walls, for one enterprising soul stretched across the Jennie-Reynolds arcade and two mammouth posters can be seen displayed on the windows on the west side of Reynolds annex. Both of these voice concern vice-presidential candidates. Judging from the number and originality of the signs, the race for vice-president surpasses the other offices in campaign banners and tactics.

Jeanne Smith, vice-presidential nominee, has decorated her door to represent campaign literature. On the left front is a picture of the cow with lamps around which is wrapped black paper. The word "Marianne" has been cut into the paper on one lamp, and the word "Smith" on the other. The light from the lamp illuminates the name to the benefit of passers-by.

Kodak pictures, scenes from campus life, and figures are featured by many of the posters. One sign employing the comic-strip style shows Jane seated at the telephone in one corner of the poster and Margie weeping in the opposite corner. The caption below the two figures reads: "Good old Jags is speaking—Jackson for vice-president." And Margie weeping. She didn't vote for Betty Lou Jackson." Betty Lou Jackson are the themes that

YWCA Gives Staples Donated by Faculty And Students

On Thanksgiving day, the YWCA, through the aid of Mrs. Margaret Bristol and the Leon county welfare agency, gave some needy family $16 worth of groceries, meat, canned goods and staples, instead of the usual turkey.

The basket was made possible by the faculty members and students who gave their contributions to the YWCA table in the lower floor of Westcott.

This table was maintained by the YWCA social service committee and the following girls: Betty Grigsby, Carolyn Packard, Betty Miller, Lee Heyward, Irene Edwards, Carolyn Grimmer, Virginia Thomas and Zilda Carpenter.

Betty Ann Taylor was in charge of posters.

Editor Reviews War Situation of these rights are vital to our domestic economy, to our employment, and therefore, to our standard of living and to our ability to maintain cultural institutions. I am worth a great effort on our part to preserve such a status. Are we preserve it in a Nazi Germany wins?"

Kilgore continued, "On the other hand if we attempted to cooperate with a victorious Nazi Germany we would be forced, of course, to make treaties of friendship and of mutual helpfulness, trade treaties and armament treaties. You cannot cooperate without cooperating. And disaster would overtake us should we enter upon a few decades of frantically arming against Germany in a race against time and the exhaustion of resources, while maintaining or trying to maintain a sham of friendship.

"Under an appeasement peace we would be at the decided disadvantage of living up to our treaties and knowing that the Nazis would observe or break theirs as it might suit their purpose. We would be aware for example, of the fact that freedom of speech, and of the press, the power to congress and morality would prevent us from building a secret navy in violation of a treaty but that neither a Bill of Rights nor any conscientious scruples would prevent them from doing so.

"We would be forced to grant rights and privileges to German nationals, working under orders from Berlin, to travel freely in the United States and to engage in all the interlocking activities at which they are so adept in undermining the morale of a people. We know that no Nazi is ever just what he pretends to be. Every Nazi is also a spy; a consular agent is also a saboteur of sabotage; a businessman also a propagandist and a teacher will be prepared to feel the effect of an anti-Nazi propaganda and economic invasion.

"The first step we might anticipate would be the usual enticing pills and attractive bait. The Balkans had that experience, and it is not unknown to South America. The Nazis refused to pay high prices for Balkan products—the farmers clamored for the business and the governments agreed under pressure. Then there were several recharges and the payment arrived from Germany in the form of trainloads of mouth organs, cameras and aspirin—of which only the aspirin had any economic value.

"Our experience would not run that way. We might have a wider variety of payments in kind or even some form of monetary payment, but we could rest assured that no Nazi trade would come without a hidden purpose and a secret string tied to it. We would be forced to bargain for certain products of Asia and Africa which we lack and we would welcome an opportunity to rid ourselves of surplus cotton, wheat, and manufactured products.

"It might be Nazi strategy to permit us several years of employment of unusually advantageous trade relations. This would have the effect of inducing us to adjust our economy to a high rate of exports and imports, to the production for sale abroad of five or eight of ten million bales of cotton annually. This would put the Nazi fingers at our throats because they would then have the power to throw the cotton-growing south into desperate straits by suddenly cutting off the markets abroad, or to throw out of work those engaged in production of automobiles for exports.

"There is, therefore, no security in sight or imaginable for us should Nazi Germany win Europe and—through it—control of Africa and collaboration of Asia. There is no security for us and no insurance even though we should not be attacked within five years by a Nazi Germany victorious over Britain. The peace in many respects would be far worse than war since it is better to fight with a chance of winning than it is to remain idle while the morale and the economy are undermined."

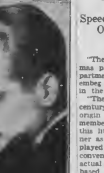
In conclusion, Kilgore said, "Britain, at this hour, is defending civilization—our civilization—and democracy—our democracy—from brutal aggression. It is not just, wise, not just sound policy, not last expedient, it is a necessity that we uphold her arm. If we do less now than is in our power to help stem the tide of barbarism that swells out of Central Europe we may take and apply to ourselves the words of Henry IV. 'Hang yourself, Brave Crillon; we fought at Arques and you were not there.'"

Girls Perform Various Duties While Working Through School

Secretaries Do Tasks Ranging From Collecting Flower Seeds to Sorting Catalogues

MARY ELIZABETH MONAHAN

Almost every faculty member at the Florida State college for women has what is called a student secretary. These student secretaries are those girls who earn part of their college expenses doing secretarial work under the National Youth- Administration. Their duties are in general, typing and checking future assignment sheets and grading papers.



The student secretaries often do work for the teacher which is not connected with classes. One girl said that she spent two days putting packages of flower seeds in a box for her faculty employer who planned to plant a garden.

Another of the girls said that she spent a week sorting catalogues on chicken raising. The teacher for whom she works was starting a chicken farm and took his hen-raising seriously. The student secretary said, "Mr B. has more books about hens and more about chicken raising than he has about anything else." She certainly am tired of sorting books on poultry, hens and the like. I do wish that he would invite me out to enjoy one of ever just what he pretends to be. Every Nazi is also a spy; a consular agent is also a saboteur of sabotage; a businessman also a propagandist and a teacher will be prepared to feel the effect of an anti-Nazi propaganda and economic invasion.

those hens I've helped to raise I think I'd feel that all my work on those booklets was worth while."

These student secretaries say that they firmly believe that they earn the $12 a month that they receive for this two-hour-a-day work. Of 25 girls questioned, 20 said that their work was interesting and only checking future assignment sheets and grading papers.

Ahrendt Will Talk On American Music

Karl Ahrendt, associate professor of violin, will speak on "Music in America Today" Tuesday, at 8 o'clock in Ruge hall.

Mr. Ahrendt is particularly well equipped to speak on American music since this subject is his specialty. He is at present working on the manuscript on his doctor's degree majoring in composition at the Eastman School of Music of the University of Rochester. This is perhaps the largest outstanding laboratory in the country for the American composer.

This talk is one of a series of lectures sponsored by the AAUW on the various aspects of American culture and civilization. Students interested in music are invited to attend this lecture.

Thespians Set Pageant Date

Speech Group Will Give Old Nativity Play In Early Style

"The Wiseman," annual Christmas pageant of the speech department, will be pgeanted December 17 and 18 at 5:30 o'clock in the Augusta Conradi theater.

"The Wiseman" is a twelfth century nativity play of Spanish origin It is the object of the members of the cast to present this historical drama in a manner so near the way it was first played as is possible. The church conventions of the period and the actual manner of presentation are based on available information and requirements of the play Originally the pageant was part of the church service being woven into the mass.

Miss Kemper Moore is in general charge of the pageant. Miss Mary Moody will arrange the setting and costumes, and Mrs. Frances M Huges will direct the musical arrangements. Betty Rose Scott, a senior majoring in speech, will direct the speaking parts.

brothers who are younger. While playing with one of her brothers in the yard of her home as a child her mother struck a piece of bone on a block, and a fragment of the bone entered her right eye. This accident, coupled with whooping cough which she experienced at the same time brought on complications resulting in total blindness in both eyes.

But this misfortune was not to mean utter darkness for Alma. She has been away at school practically all of her life, starting in a state school for the blind at the age of six in Talladega, Alabama. After finishing 11 grades—which is the extent of the schooling at Talladega, she taught music two years in a consolidated high school near Enterprise, Florida, in December, 1936, and remained at home a couple of years before entering Florida State college. Always she has roomed with someone else except for one semester here.

Alma has many of the everyday pleasures which any other student at Florida State enjoys. She is fond of knitting, and recently started a sweater for herself. She likes to hike and swim. She can play checkers, dominoes and other games. She likes to read poetry with a historical background Movies of a musical type and symphony concerts on the radio furnish her diversion from the daily round of studies.

She can do house work, but is not too fond of cooking. She once made a dress which was sent on exhibit to the Chicago fair. She has sung in her choir at her home and at Talladega and has played for church and Sunday school services She also had charge of the Baptist Student Union programs last summer.

Alma carries on a regular correspondence with at least eight persons beside her family, and letters are one of her chief delights.

One of her greatest ambitions is to find a congenial companion and to travel to many of the spots she has heard about all of her life. She holds no hope for any improvement in her sight, but this does not depress her as she hates self-pity. Her sense of humor would not permit her that.

Alumnae Win From Juniors

In a fast and interesting game of basketball Friday afternoon the famous alumnae of PKCW bowed the until-then-unbeaten junior team with a 30-11 defeat.

The alumnae, displaying the same flashy ball-playing they used in past years, and for which the campus still remembers them, stole the show from beginning to end, with Bet Rumbaugh, Jessie Pyne and Yvonne Marchesseau playing excellent ball. The guards, Hilda Spradlin, Louise Rice, and Frances Fryer also did their jobs well.

Players for the junior team were Janis Wood, Marion Previno, Virginia Barfield, Peaches McKay, Dot Ledford and Jane Wells. Margaret Carter refereed the game.

form many posters advocating the election of Lula Joughlin.

Adherents, and many places on words are in abundance. "Jook the walls," declared Lou Merrill dent. "Sall's the Gal." School will be tops with loving for one dent." "Jo Peckin for Senate- —Ann Peck." "The Senate needs Jo's whistle it." "Mac and rear lions! But everyone agrees that it's for Lula Elmelda Joughlin for secretary. "Don't miss a miss like Miss ——." "Pens- mint cures what ails you. "Why not elect Pheony for Senate."

"Pal in the senate." "Lula for Clever and sane, elect Jane." Avoid the Christmas rush and vote early for ——." "Mac and men are all for Mayer." "Muzin' miss muzin' Lula Joughlin Junior."

"An Even deal is what we want," "Sing a song for Joughlin." These are some on the unusual words which greet a prospective freshman when she enters. There is even a plea for votes painted on the floor in remains of the one hundred floor of Jennie Murphree.

Drama across the front hall on the two hundred floor of Reynolds is a clothesline full of paper garments hanging from it. Written on the paper shirts, ties, and socks is "Nell Smith is not a washout for Secretary. Vote Tuesday." Word Study Methods have been employed in the writing.

Besides the unusual signs there is quite a sprinkling of the neat, conventional kind of poster. One of the latter above the Jennie Murphree mailboxes is made from colorful collegiate and sale for support with black paper letters. Neat little cards reading "Shower your votes" on such-and-such a date hang on many of the shower doors.

All freshmen are urged to support various candidates in a whole-hearted manner no matter what they were a democrat or a republican before the 1940 freshman election.

Incidentally one candidate was overheard to say as she knocked at a door, "Oh, hello, I just thought I'd check up to see if you all are going to vote for me."

Badminton Takes Sport Limelight

Odd-Even Practice Gets Underway; Swimming Will Start Soon

With the Odd and Even teams both putting in their victories in the Thanksgiving games, the odds favor the volleyball game and the evens over basketball, the fruit starts all over again with badminton and swimming taking the sportlight.

Practice for badminton started last Monday for the Evens, under the student leader, Paulette Nolan, and Tuesday for the Odds under the direction of student coach, Betty Joughlin and Jane Wells. Margaret Carter refereed the game.

Paulette says that there are 34 girls out for practice, and that did not quite make any of the old team members who will be out next week. She is having a problem in dividing all the girls but she are getting to play for a little while.

Otris reporting for practice are Frances Lewis, Cecilia Trigo, Carmine Smith, Marianne Lou Moore and Jane Irving Mary Jane Dews, Jeff Jeffcoat, Jane Thompson, Nena Chillingworth, Elizabeth Miller, Betty Lou Jackson, Mary Morton, Jane Wells, Betty Joughlin, Ann Ford, Eleanor Calley, Ethel Pfeifer, Virginia Bimestefer, Margaret Izzard, Marion Webster, Jean Carr, Margaret Ann Bowden, Virginia Bowden, Jean Winter, Mary Lippett, Jane Telford, Peggy Barnes, Betty Rumbaugh, Mary Lee Walker, Lillian Townsend, Margaret Ann Bowden, Nancy Tate Thomas, Vicki Lewis, Alice Revell and Dot Bryant.

Jane Bryan has had a good many girls out for practice this year, with all of last year's champions showing up for practice. Tommy Thomas, the champion singles competitor here, is already playing the same brand of ball she played last year when she defeated Paulette Nolan in the finals. Margaret Carter, one of the best players in the club is also playing good ball.

Other players out are Minnie Ratliff, Mary Cray Holderman, Betty Lanerton, Miriam Bass, Betty Lou Moore, Mavey Mae McKintosh, Ruth Smith, Catherine Ward, Mary Boyd, Ruth Rosehner, and Gene Bryan.

"The swimming teams have not been forgotten, however, to be in full swing by next week under the direction of Irene Pfendt, student coach for the Evens, and Frances Battle, student coach for the Odds. Work already has been started for endurance and speed tests, which will be reported for practice. However, no swimming suits will be required by the coaches to come out, because there is plenty of room for them.

Portraits Of Florida Men Adorn Walls

Library Pictures Depict Prominent State Benefactors

By MARY STAFFORD

Many illustrious portraits adorn the library walls, but few students know much about the people they portray.

Near the entrance of the periodical room on the left hand side is a portrait of W J. Yocum who did much for the Florida State College for women as well as for the whole state of Florida.

He was graduated from Ole Lake City high school from 1890-92. then became professor of classical literature in the old Florida University at Lake City. Later he was promoted to the presidency of the university, a position he held for 20 years.

When the university moved to Gainesville in 1905, he gave up his administrative duties to again assume a professor on the university staff.

In 1915 he came to Florida State college for women as a professor of elementary education. Here he was greatly admired by the faculty and students.

The portrait of Yocum was presented at commencement in 1940 by Mrs. W. L. Gary, one of Professor Yocum's daughters, made the presentation address. Miss Nelle Bailey, director of physical education, accepted the portrait hung in the administration building. Another portrait in the library was ready for occupancy in 1926. It was removed to its present position.

On the northwest wall of the periodical room hangs the portrait portrait of Dr. Edward Conradi, president of Florida State college for women. This portrait was painted several years ago by H. Bettis.

A portrait of Dr Alexander Murphree hangs on the left wall to the east end of the room. Dr. Murphree did his greatest work when she defeated Paulette Nolan in the finals. Margaret Carter, one of the best players in the club is also playing good ball.

Other players out are Minnie Ratliff, Mary Cray Holderman, Betty Lanerton, Miriam Bass, Betty Lou Moore, Mavey Mae McKintosh, Ruth Smith, Catherine Ward, Mary Boyd, Ruth Rosehner, and Gene Bryan.

"The swimming teams have not been forgotten, however, to be in full swing by next week under the direction of Irene Pfendt, student coach for the Evens, and Frances Battle, student coach for the Odds. Large Crowd Sees Playnight Program

Show Features Dancing, Music, and Singing

A floor show planned by the F club in entertain visitors and alumnae was presented last Friday night at Playnight. A large crowd witnessed the program of which consisted of a variety of numbers.

The floor show opened with Martha Strobera singing "Tapestry of Love," a song written by Miss Kathleen Gruppe, social director of Sandhs hall. The next number was an accordion selection by Marjorie Copeland, who played "Dark Eyes."

A specialty dance followed, executed by four couples in costume. Those taking part were Jackie Higley, Betty Hyrsl, Mary Claire Poish, Christine Yarbrough, Joanne Whitney, Lou Atkinson, Ruth Ann Bryan and Mary Lou Hall.

The camp leadership class presented the song, composed on a recent camp outing. The tune is that of "Auld Lang Syne," and the title is "Tribute to Florida." The words are:

"We're loyal to our Florida,
With Gator as our mascot,
We'll honor her and cherish her
Now and all time.

To thee, our Alma Mater dear,
We'll raise our voices high
And sing our praises one and all
Forever to thee.

Oh, Florida, dear Florida,
We'll faithful ever be
And may thy name forever ring
Until eternity."

Among those pictures which were sold was a water color entitled "Saltboats" and a block print entitled "A Fury—entered—submitted by Jeanne Felkel, an oil painting entitled "Still Life" done by Phoebe James, a block print entitled "Trees" worked out by Sara Vending, a block print, "Fantasy", by Beryl Mitchell, a block print, "Seated Figure", by Jane Godbey, a block print "Hallelujah", by Frances Cushing, and a block print entitled "Heads" by Lydia Mead.

Dance Group Opens Membership Again

Tryouts Scheduled For Tuesday Afternoon

For the second time this year tryouts for the modern dance group will be held. This opportunity is opened to anyone who cares to belong to the group, and for those who were unable to be in the group during the first quarter due to Odd-Even games and Open House.

Up until this time there has been a pre-dance season of instruction for those who like this type of dancing, and at this time also Miss Elizabeth Cowell, head of modern dance on campus, will select those persons whom she thinks particularly outstanding in this class.

The girls who are chosen, with those members already in the modern dance group, will make up the group of dancers who will perform for their various functions throughout the remainder of the year.

Tryouts will take place in the big gymnasium Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Graduates Return For Homecoming

Georgia, New Hampshire Alumnae Visit Campus

One hundred and nineteen alumnae registered officially at the Student Union building desk for the annual homecoming last week.

Besides various cities in Florida alumnae came from Albany, Georgia; Atlanta, Georgia; Rome Georgia; and Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

Nineteen classes were represented by alumnae: 1915, 1917; 1918, 1919, 1920, 1925, 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1936, 1937, 1938, 1939 and 1940.

Approximately 180 guests registered in dormitories. Reynolds had boasted of the most, having 53 registered guests. Jennie Murphree had came second with 39. Gilchrist hall registered 28, Landis hall 27, and Bryan-Broward 20.

Parents' Days which have been scheduled at Thanksgiving for the last several years have been changed to May Day weekend. The Alumnae college will continue to be in the spring as usual.

Tennis Contest Opens Saturday

Pat Mayer Seeded First Player In Official Tournament

After a month and a half spent in a ladder tournament, designed to seed the tennis players on campus for an official tournament, the real tournament is ready to start at last. The first round will be played Saturday night, the second round, Tuesday night, the third round, Thursday night, the fourth, next Friday night, and the finals on next Saturday night. The winner of this game will be the champion of Florida State college.

Pat Mayer, who ended up on the top rung of the ladder in the preliminary, is the first seeded player of the tournament, and is the favored player of the tournament. Starting Hall, Lib Moore and Mayer Mackintosh are also in the upper seeded list.

After a player has succeeded in going to the third round she will be required to have an official referee for her games. The winner of two sets out of three rose up one step further in the tournament. The first round pits Pat Mayer plays Paulette Nolan, Rachel Ervin plays Minnie Lou Moore, Pat Kavanaugh plays Ruth Thomas, Irene Hale plays Elizabeth Russell and Orian Cox plays Peaches MacKay.

Mary Ann plays Margaret Carter, Neva Chillingworth plays Janet Stinson and Ethel Pfeifer plays Marcy Mackintosh, while Cecelia Harper plays Marion Prevatt, Jane Wells plays Mabel Jones Louise Crosby, Lib Moore plays Frances Eckles, Frances Bellamy plays Bettie Walton and Barbara Barton plays Brenda Brown and Betsy Ross Howe plays Waylen Wood and Betty Collier plays Nell Morford. Nancy Leggett plays Starling Hall in the last rung.

Starling Hall and Miss Rebeccca Averill are in charge of all arrangements for the tournament.

Long Live the Spirit!

Ever since nominations for freshman class officers were made on Tuesday, the first-year students on the Florida State college campus have been objects of awe in the eyes of some, horror in some, and yet admiration in those of a third group. Maybe it's because we're young, even green, in spirit, but for some reason the Flambeau feels that the freshmen are setting an example for upperclassmen so far as campus politics are concerned.

Whether the freshmen are setting an example or not they are certainly setting a record. It is certainly astonishing to think that on a campus, where less than 50 per cent of the total enrollment vote in the general spring elections, one class of about 750 students can get 546 ballots in the first day of its class elections when nominations were made. The figure may drop considerably by next Tuesday but the freshmen vote had dropped only slightly, to 497, in the primaries.

And it's not only numbers that stir the campus during freshmen elections. Just the spirit that's displayed makes upperclassmen sit up and take notice. There's something that makes the dignified seniors, juniors, and sophomores feel that something within them is dead when they feel the lively atmosphere that pervades Bryan, Jennie Murphree, and Reynolds when the freshmen get their first taste of college politics. There's something that makes them stop and wonder why the enthusiasm doesn't last through all four years.

Of course, some of the signs are silly. But they seem to work. Their purpose is to get people to the polls and from a look at statistics we would conclude that they have succeeded. If it takes something of the light frivolous nature to stir some of the more sedate members of our campus out of their dusty, webby, cells of apathy we'd say to turn on the jazz and frivolity.

All of the election spirit bring to mind what Dr. Harold Richards had to say at the Studenty party meeting Wednesday. According to the guest speaker, a good politician was a person who found a good policy or person to back and then got out and vigorously drummed up people to back this policy or person along with him. Well, it seems that, whether or not the freshmen have thought out any definit policies or not, they really have the idea of this backing business.

In spite of our enthusiasm over the freshmen we do not fail to notice their lack of basic policies. But isn't possible that, if real issues were involved in our spring election and if real campaigning was carried on, there might be a chance of getting a great deal more than half of the student body to the polls.

In conclusion we'd like to say that whatever the faults in the freshman election spirit may be, we'd like to see a little more feeling along this same vein live for a little longer than the first semester of life on the Florida State college campus.

"The liberal arts college, if properly organized, can function smoothly only in times of peace. It is simply unintelligent to imagine that it can continue its customary work satisfactorily in time of war. The two philosophies just don't mix. Either the college must proceed down its traditional academic path or it must put itself wholeheartedly on a war basis. Now this country has not declared war, but to all intents and purposes we are already in an undeclared war on countries we have identified as our potential enemies, and that is what causes the present complication." Dr. Levering Tyson, president of Muhlenberg college, denies that the "business as usual" policy is functioning.—ACP.

"Today it is obvious that Germany is a country that has to be reckoned with; it is obvious, too, we are not, to put it mildly, on friendly terms with her; it is all the more important to understand her and her language. Chamberlain did not understand German and for that reason perhaps could not understand Hitler." Dr. Berthold L. Ullman, professor of Latin at the University of Chicago, says the complete disappearance of German during the World war years was deplorable and foolish. —ACP.

Is it Fair?

Amid the gayety and festivity of the Thanksgiving dance last Saturday night the Village Vamps and the Cotillion club had their time-out to hold the spotlight and to tap new members. Their tapping ceremonies took place in a gymnasium decorated exclusively in their own colors rather than along a Thanksgiving theme. This was perhaps appropriate as it has become traditional that they use part of this dance to name their new members.

Maybe it is only natural that the organizations who help so much to conduct the monthly dances and who have been given this privilege and responsibility by the college should take this one chance to glorify themselves. Perhaps they deserve this. Nevertheless it bring to the surface the freak and unhealthy condition that exists beneath.

For the last few years the Cotillion club has been democratizing itself slowly but definitely, attempting to judge prospective members on the basis of dance ability alone. It opens its ranks to the whole student body, sorority and non-sorority alike, and this seems to be as it should be. We wish we could say the same for the Village Vamps, the "campus cuties." Controlled by four sororities it confines its membership to these groups, this year dividing the taps evenly between them. This made three apiece.

It may be fair to maintain that as they have been able to secure control of the organization, let them divide the spoils among themselves as victors. Perhaps that would be fair provided the power to choose the campus cute girls, if that is important, had not now become the permanent property of the four and they did not guard it so strongly. In any case it would be perfectly all right for them to have their organization if they kept it to themselves. We see little objecion there. It is presenting it to the student body at a student body dance as a part of student activities that make it a trifle ironic.

To think that in a student body of 2,000 girls, four groups limited by the quota system to 50 members should be the only girls qualified to be tapped vamps is to laugh. Among the sorority and non-sorority girls there are many as attractive and popular. For all our airs we are still a state school. Where ideally if organizations are to be recognized and upheld, they must prove their worth and how a little to our democracy.

Buy Christmas Seals

The annual tuberculosis seal sale has started in Tallahassee. "Protect us from tuberculosis," say the children on this year's Christmas seal for themselves and mankind.

It has been found that tuberculosis charts a strange course through the years of life, veering in and out among boys and girls, men and women, never giving any period in life a clear berth, but choosing certain years—the young, active, productive years—for its most violent attacks. Among teen age people, tuberculosis takes more lives than any other disease. During these years, it is more deadly among girls than among boys. Why? Science, as yet, does not know.

During the twenties, tuberculosis continues to take more lives than any other disease and it still kills more young women than young men. It is during the thirties that the toll of lives among men begins to mount and throughout the remaining years of life more men fall with the disease than women.

To fight this enemy scientists, medical men, health departments, and the tuberculosis associations throughout the country are working steadily. They need help. There is now no vaccine for the prevention of tuberculosis nor is there any drug for the cure of the disease. We and they need knowledge of the characteristics of the disease—how it is caught, how it can be prevented, how it affects the body, how it can be treated—and we must spread this knowledge.

Tuberculosis education must be universal. Tuberculosis is an infectious disease and can be in an advanced stage before the victim is aware he has it. During the months or years that tuberculosis can be hidden by apparently healthy looks, it is destroying chances of recovery of the victim and spreading the germs to many others.

It is necessary that we know such facts about tuberculosis. Educating a nation and at the same time financing medical research takes money. Though the sale of Christmas seals and small contributions from us this work can be carried on. What we can give in the season of giving is sorely needed. Let us give.

"The country must abandon the present cafeteria system of education in which the student is left free to select any academic diet he pleases, subordinate vocational training to liberal education, and recognize the differences in natural ability. Liberal education which is partly informative, party disciplinary and partly moral, in making men think for themselves, is the only effective training for responsible citizenship in a democratic state." Prof. T. M. Greene of the philosophy department of Princeton university believes American schools and colleges fail to provide students with an adequate education for life in a democratic society.—ACP.

The little rhyme of Billet Burgess', which appeared in Dorothy Thompson's column some weeks ago, still seems to represent the college students plight quite vividly: "I wish that my room had a floor. I don't so much care for a door. But this floating around without touching the ground is getting to be quite a bore."

"How can students learn respect for personal honesty and integrity if their college hires athletes while denying that it does so?" President John W Nason of Swarthmore college poses a question about character-building.—ACP.

Collegiate Comebacks

We have it from a reliable source that one of the Gainesville fraternity houses is being furnished with sorority placques, name plates, and ash trays. We can just see our fair lassies being made to feel completely at home at houseparties next spring by all the little knicknacks that they've learned to love in their own houses back in Tally.

We couldn't help being a trifle surprised when it was announced that all paries during Christmas vacation would please end at 8:30 in the evening. Oh well, one never knows what sphere of our lives they're going to influence next.

Note: We know it was only a slip, but we have to write about something!

'Twas three weeks before Christmas
And all over the college,
Not a person was stirring.
They were all seeking knowledge.
For ten days after Christmas
Our minds will be turning
To visions of knowledge
We should have been learning.
Yes, over the dorms lies a maddening hush
Of the girls who cram early, thus avoiding the rush.

We have been criticized innumerable times by people who remind use gently every Friday tha there should be more constructive criticism in our column. We tried very hard to think of something that could come under that heading. We didn't do so well ourselves but we can offer suggestions as to where to look for it.

The girl who has three tests the Friday that she leaves for Fall Frolics, and the girls who can't even leave for said week-end because of a physical education test, could undoubtedly offer something along the uplifting lines — so might the girls who slept through their first class after Thanksgiving who are on pro until Easter vacation.

We, too, should add to the chorus of clear young voices, except that we havn't gotten a letter in two weeks, and we haven't the three-cent stamp necessary to send a letter of complaint home.

Three Dartmouth college boys who apparently are hard up for dates are appealing through Life to all girls between the ages of sixteen and sixty who would like to attend their Winter Carnival. The only requirement seems to be that a prospective date be the out-of-doors type (physical ed. majors take note).

But surely, among that conglomeration of brawny men of the frozen Nawth, there must be someone who would like a sweet, southern, sit-by-the-fire type. If so, please notify.

Alumna Gets Position In Church Organization

An alumna of Florida State college, Elsie Renfroe of Tallahassee, has recently been appointed state Women's Missionary Union Young People's secretary in the Baptist church. Her headquarters, for the full-time position, will be in Jacksonville.

The Florida State graduate was prominently identified with work of the Baptist church in her undergraduate study here. Upon graduation she attended the Baptist training school in Louisville for the next two years, receiving her Master's degree in religious education. She also served as president of the student body there one year.

Syracuse athletes are barred from competition if they marry during the school year, unless the ceremony takes place during a holiday, such as Easter or Christmas.

Dictator's Discomfort

Mussolini received one of the heaviest blows of the war when the important Albanian town of Pogradec fell to the Greek army. The defenders fought bitterly but were finally forced to yield. In capturing the town, much Italian material came into the posession of the Greeks. The victory was most important, since the Italians had planned to group their defense system there. The Greeks continue to drive forward and at present are marching toward Porta Edda, one of the most important Fascist strongholds in Albania. It is expected to fall shortly. The Italian troops are in swift retreat all along the 100 mile front. Monday 5,000 Fascist soldiers surrendered, which caused the complete collapse of the central defense line. An announcement from the Italian government said that Germany would not aid in the war in Greece. The small Balkan nation is showing the world how a people, protecting their independence, can fight for their cause against a larger and more powerful oppressor. The mechanized forces of Italy were of little use to the army in the mountainous Balkan country. It seems that "the glory" is still Greece, but "the grandeur" has left Rome.

Another dictator, Stalin, has trouble on his hands this week when 4,000,000 citizens of his recently acquired territory of Bessarabia revolted because of "public indignation over scarcity and high prices of food, fuel, and machines."

Rumania itself was a hotbed of trouble this week, when the country was plunged into a state of disorder bordering on revolution. Germany, quick to take advaitage of any opportunity, marched her troops into the country to halt the confusion and bring about "law and order." To Hitler, this was a good excuse for total intervention. The disorder was brought about by the members of the Iron Guard who assassinated sixty-four members of King Carol's regime, as revenge for their leader Corneliu Zelia Cordreanu, for whom funeral services were held this week. The country is split into three factions: (1) those who wish to bring about discipline; (2) those who are supporting Cordreanu, the father of the

Or Forever Hold Your Peace . . .

Pardon me, but I'm confused. Can it be that our student body doesn't like the privilege of reserving tables for the week-end?

Last year when plans were first being formulated for us to eat by dormitories, the hue and cry against such action was widespread. Partially for our sakes the dining room now undergoes the inconvenience of reassigning tables for the week-end. Don't you like to eat with friends who may not happen to live in your dormitory? Week-ends are your only chance.

It's true that fewer girls eat in the dining room on week-ends, but the dining room has its past records and reports of girls signed out for the week-ends upon which to base an estimation of the number to be expected. It could indeed just take out tables here and there, but that would mean five partly filled dining rooms in use whereas we now use four more completely filled ones. This compactness is a great help in the actual preparation and serving of food.

So the dining room does of necessity use only four dining rooms, and in fairness to all and with respect to our desire to sit with a different group of people asks us to reserve tables for each week-end. Remove our interests and the dining room probably could formulate a workable plan to avoid this. Do you want them to?

Last week's fault finder began to criticize the method of assigning reserved tables and brought out related facts. So have I. Now let's examine the present method itself. Lines, long and frequent, are our most glaring evidence that we have a large school. To accommodate hundreds of students lines just come into being. I don't know of a way to relieve this situation, but maybe the time could be changed. It is bad to have the lobby jammed by a long line of girls waiting to get tables and that condition will exist then or any other time. Thursday at 11:30 there are no scheduled classes for the majority of us, so few girls miss getting tables because of lack of time. It's easier to get a table at noon than in the afternoon as we once did. But if later in the day would suit more people carry the suggestion to Miss Tracy. She likes to get student suggestions.

In self-interest, may I say that I am thankful because I'm a dining room girl and don't have to worry about a week-end table. Mine is always the same.

GENE BRYAN.

Contemporary Student Thought . . .

If a word to the wise is sufficient, then perhaps the following bit of advice from Tom Cauble, columnist on The Davidsonian, will prove valuable to campus politicians—now that freshman elections are nearing "Popularity and ability must be coupled with a certain mechanical perfection of dress and person in order to aspire successfully politically. It seems also to be the accepted fashion for candidates to spend some little time in and around the post office and environs and there swap intimacies with all those who pass these crossroads of local life. It is estimated that the successful campaigner must know not under 400 fellow students by their first names. Participation in sports is also a great expedient, particularly if one is extremely proficient at any such activity. Many of the political immortals of the past have been athletes."

President Brown at South Dakota college has suggested that the school raise its grade point average to a requirement of 1.8 for entrance to the junior class and an average of 2.0 be required for graduation. Because many students find it difficult to adjust themselves to college standards, President Brown does not believe first-year grades are a fair sample of ability. Therefore a 1.3 would be sufficient for the incoming junior class. Because of crowded facilities the college will have to lower the enrollment of the school in some way, preferably by this method of raising scholastic requirements.

A little out of the ordinary but quite logical is the argument in an editorial in Millsap college's Purple and White for dances held on campus under faculty supervision. Not only would they be able to keep outsiders outside, but the deans would be allowed to call time. If the system of opening all dances at 8 o'clock and closing at 12 were adopted, not only would the dance sponsors be able to concur with coed dormitory regulations, but the following class days' attendances would noticeably increase.

Through a study made by the University of New Hampshire's appointment bureau, says the Texas Lass-o, women graduates have had no trouble placing themselves as teachers in home economics. Vacancies reported to the bureaus have been double the number of girls eligible to fill them within recent years. The turnover in the home economics field is high because the average teacher marries within three years. Teachers of the languages rate lower in this scale, for their field is overrun. However, this shows that language courses are especially popular in today's schools. In other words the girl who can cook has little trouble in finding a husband. Gentlemen's preference for blondes seems to be a thing of the past. "The fact that men now prefer those wives who are trained in their domestic field would be considered by most economists as significant that young men now think along more practical lines." So says the Davidsonian.

Should the sororities at Florida State college be limited to a quota? This question has caused much discussion since last year when each sorority was limited to a quota for the purpose of building up the smaller sororities. This year the quota was made even smaller. Different sorority members have expressed their opinions on this subject.

Frances Booker—The quota system gives all sororities a chance to equalize membership. If the enrollment of the school increases to a large degree, the quota should be raised, but now let's keep it stationary.

Martha Zewadski—I think the quota system is not a good thing for this school to have. There are so many girls on campus that are just dying to get into one of the big national sororities and will not go a sorority unless it is one of the big ones. It is limiting unnecessarily and hurting girls unnecessarily.

Edna Sue Hendry—The quota system is an outrage. It has been a total flop on this campus. In the first place it has not helped the sororities for whom it was intended. It is only a hindrance and not an aid. In the second place a sorority having a large house cannot be supported on fifty members. I believe that the quota, if not completely lifted, should at least be raised to 60 members.

Martha Davis—I think that a school of this size should not have so limited a quota system. If the sororities were allowed 20 pledges a year, I believe it would be much more effective.

Gladys Johnson—I think that the quota system that Pan-Hellenic has worked out is good. It is so much more effective to keep the sororities smaller in my opinion.

Elizabeth Draughn—I think that the quota system has helped considerably on this campus. However, I do not think that the quota should be lowered.

Jeaune Reese—The quota system seems to me a very good one. It makes for equalization of membership among sororities and yet limits it so that there is a close relationship among the girls.

Jean Hoffman—I think that the quota system should not be used or at least be raised. The way it is now may make for a feeling of exclusiveness among sorority girls and may prevent some girls from joining the sorority they desire.

Virginia Thomas—I am against the quota system because it may keep the sororities from pledging the girls they really want if the number exceeds the number allowed. The quota system is very hard on rushees because while they can and want to join a sorority, they feel that it is useless to go to rushing affairs because there are so many girls that the sorority is obliged to pledge. As the system is at present, it has not accomplished one of its purposes, that is of helping the smaller sororities on campus to grow. Since it has been ineffective to a great degree, why not abolish it?

Dempsey Jo Lee—I am against the quota system because in a school this large it prohibits the sororities in having all the girls wanted and as it has not accomplished its purpose it seems useless.

Lilian Rogan—I approve thoroughly of the quota system because it enables the sorority to maintain closer touch among its members.

Mary Anna Hampton—Looking at the matter from a Pan-Hellen-

Magazine Jottings . . . .

By MARLINE DALE

In his article, "Look Homeward America," Irwin Edman, professor of philosophy at Columbia, says that our imaginations have got to come home.

Among the things that would have seemed incredible as late as ten years ago is the vanishing of Europe as a combination Nirvana and happy hunting ground for educated and semi-educated Americans. Certainly if the Nazis win (and even if they do not) the particular part Europe has played in the lives and imaginations of the more literate Americans is permanently ended.

Europe will not for a long time, possibly never again, offer the kind of escape into history and charm in which the irritating present can be forgotten. Nor will Europe be a happy hunting ground. Cultured leisure may be unknown in post-war Europe. Americans, moreover, may no longer be welcomed on a continent whose ruin they witnessed at spectatorial distance. What they looked for in Europe they will have to find at home.

The long-continued trek of American imagination to Europe began over a century ago and brought Emerson and Henry James sr. to England. What drew them abroad was in the first place a sense of the colonialism and provincialism of America. In the nineteenth century moved Americans with taste for ideas and beautiful things in letters or art had an increasing sense of their still colonial dependence on Europe in cultural matters. Many Americans could not help feeling that in the general opinion there was something trivial and unimportant about the ideas and arts they cherished.

But it was not only for the past that culture-loving Americans crossed the Atlantic. Echoes reached America that the new, too, the material of sensibility and talent, were to be found in Europe. The striking, the original, the distinguished, it was believed were not to be found in a country whose talent all went into gadgets and skyscrapers.

For the dernier cri in living culture as well as the tradition of the past, Americans went abroad. Even the last war did not disillusion them. America seemed culturally more insular than ever.

It would be a silly exaggeration to say that because Europe is now going through the agony of possible complete collapse, Americans were foolish in turning there for certain beauties of the past and charm of the present. Europe, whatever happens, still remains the source of our own past in science, in letters, and art. It is the world from which Western culture is derived. But no culture ever survived or grew by being derivative and colonial. It is just as well that America look homeward for their culture.

Only lately have Americans begun to examine the materials of American culture in terms both of their patrimony and their own present. There are various surface symptoms. There is, in the first place, the flood of historical novels and regional ones. But there is something further and more important, the finding of the American present, not in terms at all, but in images: the present as specific qualities and special promises in our own here and now.

Americans found they did not have to go to the Chateau of the Loire or the Renaissance palaces of Italy to have something for the imagination to feed upon. New York began to be beautiful when it began doing business in towers.

Nor is architecture the only art in which the American future is taking beautiful shape and finding expressive voice. Painters are discovering in native types and in native scenes, and—after long aping of the French—in native technique, a way of speaking to us visually of what our own experience may be in color and design. Paints speak with an incorrigable and unduplicable native accent.

One of the fears the cultivated American used to have, that is still found in certain quarters today, was that culture was destined to be killed by the fact of democracy. Today that old fear is proving curiously ill-favored. The native arts and native mind are beginning to have an audience in this country and a wide spread popular participation that a generation ago one might have believed impossible.

There is, oddly enough, a practical condition for the fine arts which both passionate democrats and passionate artists and connoisseurs forget. That is the condition of freedom, of spontaneous choice. Artists in uniform are not artists at all.

It would be shocking not to be shocked that a long tradition of genius may be coming to an end. But today the conditions for creation are ours and our works will at least not be poorer because they are honestly and natively our own.

Tally Girls Head for Frolics Featuring Savitt, Texas Game

Gainesville this week-end will draw some two hundred girls for the biggest Fall Frolics ever given. One of the nation's best orchestras will be there, Jan Savitt and his Top Hatters besides the football game between the University of Florida and University of Texas.

Opening the activities will be the concert Friday night given by Jan Savitt followed by the Cavalier's dance. Saturday morning the Pirate's will have their parade, with informal dancing later. After the football game in the afternoon, there will be tea dances at the various fraternity houses. A big formal dance will be held Saturday night. Many of the fraternities will give breakfasts for their dates Sunday morning. The Tri Delt's will return the hospitality shown them by giving a wiener roast Sunday. Sororities to Entertain With Informal Functions For Weekend Festivities

With the departure of so many girls for Gainesville, most of the girls that are left behind will content themselves with going to teas, suppers and slumber parties this week-end.

This afternoon the Alpha Gamma Delta's will give a tea from 5 to 6 o'clock for members and friends.

The pledges of Tri Delta will have a buffet supper for the chapter members Sunday night. Myla Lu Cameron is in charge.

A bridge party will be given by the Phi Mu's Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Refreshments and decorations are to be a surprise. They will also hold open house Saturday night.

Alpha Delta Pi will entertain at a tea Friday afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock.

On Saturday night the members and pledges of Delta Phi Epsilon will have a party together.

Zeta Tau Alpha gave an after-dinner coffee Wednesday night. Sweet sleep will be enjoyed at their slum'er party Saturday night.

Sigma Kappa will entertain for friends at their traditional after-dinner coffee Sunday night.

An informal party is to be given by Alpha Chi Omega Friday night.

On The Seas

During the past week British has suffered much loss from the submarine warfare which Hitler has recently begun in all its fury. In one day, Tuesday, Germany claims to have successfully attacked 17 merchantmen, an auxiliary cruiser, and two other ships, all totalling about 160,000 tons. Hitler has just announced that he will begin a new type of offensive, with the submarines operating "in packs like wolves."

Britain is undergoing more loss to her sea power than it is possible for her to replace. Wednesday she made a plea to the United States for 60 freighters to replace ships destroyed by the Nazis. Lord Woolton declared, "We must have speed! speed! speed! . . . . and ships! ships! ships!"

This government answered her plea by promising thousands of tons of merchant shipping to the British. Every ship that can be spared will be released for British use. The situation is tense, for it is absolutely necessary that Britain maintain her supply lines. If it is cut off by submarine warfare, she cannot long contnue to fight.

In Mexico

Vice President-elect Henry A. Wallace's recent visit to Mexico was far reaching in its results. Last Thursday was the inauguration day of Mexico'e new president Camacho, whose election was disputed by the followers of General Juan Andreau Almazan. By the visit of Wallace to Mexico, the United States recognized Camacho's claim to the presidency and brought about Almazan's renunciation of his claim In all probability this action prevented the outbreak of another civil war. Despite the rioting of the followers of Almazan, Wallace had a warm welcome from the Mexicans. Besides bringing about the formal recognition of Camacho, this visit was to promote good will and cooperation between the two countries.

Camacho begins his term as president under very difficult conditions, resulting from many pressing problems facing Mexico. He is succeeding Cardenas, a man who has been one of Mexico's greatest leaders. He becomes president when the country is in an economic upheaval, due to rapid social change. He faces a labor problem, mining problems, and the still existing problem of the oil fields. The action of the United States in recognizing him was of utmost im portance to him in carryng out his program and in bringing about a more unified nation.

Orange Bowl Queen Is Former Tally Student

A former student of this college, Jean Kobey of Orlando, will reign as queen of the Orange Bowl festival December 30 to January 2. Jean was selected by the state Junior Chamber of Commerce at a contest in the Colonial Orange Court hotel in Orlando Saturday night.

Elizabeth Rogers, sophomors member of Pi Beta Phi and daughter of Dr. William H. Rogers, professor of English, represented the city of Tallahassee as a candidate for queen.

Maids in waiting for the activities which will center about the New Year's day football game between Mississippi State college and Georgetown university, have also been chosen. They are Curley Hall of Tampa, Marion Johnson of Miami; Jean Azzatello of Sanford, and Aldine Tootle of Plant City.

After the festivities in Miami are over, the queen will pay a visit to Havana, Cuba, at the expense of the Orange Bowl committee. She will then go to Chicago to inaugurate a through streamline train service to Miami.

Jean would have been a junior if she had returned to school this year While here she was vice president of the Cotillion club and a pan-hellenic representative of Delta Delta Delta.

Last year's queen, Leila Norris of St. Augustine is now a freshman at Florida State college.

Richards Urges Campus Politics

Tells Student Meeting Political Training Valuable Fun

At the Wednesday night meeting of the newly organized Student party in room 306 Westcott, Dr. Harold F. Richards, physics departmental head, spoke on "Student Politics As Fun, Service and Training for Life."

Dr. Richards defined politics as a two-fold art. First, it is the art of forecasting popular reaction to a given policy or candidate. Second, it functions as an art of cobtaining popular acceptance of that policy or candidate.

"A statesman," he said, "is a master politician who never loses his high ideals and good motives. Roosevelt is one of the greatest living statesmen."

In his college career, Dr. Richards said he almost missed political science which in later life he proved to be one of the most important subjects he obtained from college. It was not until the second semester of his junior year that he even paid student politics the slightest bit of attention. Heredure he had been known as a good student and a participant in minor sports.

One day he met a political campaign announcement on a bulletin board and decided to run for senior class president. Standing for a democratic platform he advocated the installation of student government and was elected.

Through various anecdotes of his life as senior class president Dr. Richards brought out the point that "if you think there is something you want, be aggressive about it and go out and get it." If you play the game, play it at all angles" for example, depicted his campaign the speaker had promised student government and he promised to live up to that promise by writing a constitution, submitting it to the paper before anyone else had read it, presenting it to the faculty and having it accepted by the students. Until very recent years Dr. Richard's alma mater was running student government under the identical constitution that he had drawn up.

Other flashes from his life as a senior class president, need of college government, and chairman of executive council were glimpses of the audience when the speaker told of his most embarrassing moment as his induction ceremony, of quelling a foreboding student riot which concerned the dismissal of a revered coach, and of his winning over his opponent and eliminating most of his support during his tenure of office.

Dr. Richards advised students with political aspirations first of all to use action. "First make decide what you want and what fraction of it you can reasonably get. Then you must size up the people you're going to work for, with and on. Decide what you want, be realistic about it. Look at the results of either a winning or a losing outcome. Will you gain good experience no matter which is the outcome? Always count the cost and how you'll feel afterward. You're justified if you can gain political experience without hurting yourself and others."

Dr. Richards also added that you have to have political ability, whether you call it by that name or not as you are with people and are dealing with them no matter what your walk of life."

At the conclusion of the talk, Hazlett Benson, Student party chairman, announced that an executive committee will meet next Wednesday night at 7 o'clock to form a platform and to make nominations for elections. Sarah Wood was appointed chairman of this committee. Others serving on the committee with her are Marguerite Diaz, Bertha Bond, Betty Pearlman, Alfred Dey, Jayne Mendenhall, and Vivian Ahlswede.

Rega Raving From G'ville

By BILL REGA

If you knew how many weeks we've been writing this column and it's been thrown in the waste basket, you'd be sorry for us. But Isabel Day, your Collegiate Comebacks proprietor promised to get it in your paper this time or else bake a chocolate cake for us. She is, so it seems, a home ec major. So, since we love our chocolate cakes, we're writing some more.

If his column never has any news in it you can blame your editor. She sets a deadline for us to get this in, and the Alligator hasn't been published to breathe by then. We can look at last week's edition of the paper, but that means your news is a week old, and anyway Dr. Tigert has already told you that. So we'll just talk about the weather, love in bloom, and how man can be conquered by cinnamon.

There are fifteen shopping days just in case you're interested, and what are you going to buy for us?

We feel terrible. The trouble with vacations is that you don't get back you wish they weren't over, and look he long it is until Christmas. The Thanksgiving set is only got one day off, guess we should have had the whole week.

Big news of course, is about Pall Prolics. There's no doubt about it, everybody is going to be here this weekend.

Big times are being planned this weekend. All the fraternities have mad amazing plans for your entertainment, and it looks pretty like one of the biggest weekends ever.

The schedule will run something like this: Friday night dances all then the formal. Tomorrow morning from 10 to 12 o'clock the tea dances begin, and then in the afternoon, the Gators will beat Texas, and then there will be an evening dance.

In between times, you're on your own. Or your date's own—or does that make sense? Anyway, you'll have to see to entertain.

The biggest blow of the season was Alice Medlin's. Evidently it realized that about a week after we return from Xmas vacation we start midterms. Evidently it can happen here, in spite of anything Thompson might say.

Well, that's the high spot of this week until Friday and you, is that Marlene Dietrich is putting in an appearance here in Gainesville along about Thursday. Now, this is not going to mean much to you, but to Florida boys, and us in particular, it is going to mean indeed. We've reserved the two front rows and the sandwich concession.

Rooms here are as rare as hen's teeth. Where do you suppose they are? We know lots of fellows who are wearing their feet off trudging hither and thither looking to find some place where you won't be fore more than two hours. And consider our furrowed brows as we ponder what's left of our fingernails and plan budgets. Rooms, eats, corsages, dance tickets. Then this refreshment business! and what not. Who said it's a vacation?

Florida Revive will be out just in time for Pall Prolics. And it's raining in G'ville. Which, of course, is not news.

We're sorry about the whole thing.

Officials Attend Meeting

Dr. Edward Conradi, president, and Mr. J. G. Kellum, business manager, will represent Florida State college at the Florida state board of control meeting in Gainesville tonight and tomorrow. At this regular monthly meeting, the board members meet with the representatives from each of the four state educational institutions and rerular business reports are given and discused.

In some part an average value of less than three foot-candles illuminated the tables in the main room, when ten had been recommended.

One Lehigh student solved his problem by taking his study lamp with him every night in order to avoid eye-strain.

An editorial in the Vermon Cynic appropriately summed up Thanksgiving by saying that "there are so many reasons why we young Americans should have been grateful last Thursday. We are fortunate enough to be enrolled in institutions of higher learning where we are daily given the opportunity to study new things, to learn new facts, and to widen the circle of acquaintances. We young Americans have homes to which we may go and families who love us, when many others have neither."

Sociology Teacher Attends Meeting

Southern Conference Will Discuss Social Work

Mrs. Margaret Cochrane Bristol, assistant professor of sociology, left Wednesday to attend the second Southern Conference on Tomorrow's Children to be held at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, North Carolina, yesterday, today, and tomorrow. Mrs. Bristol is the Florida representative on the board of directors at this conference.

The first Southern Conference was held last fall at Atlanta, Georgia, and Mrs. Bristol with Dr. Cole of Florida and William A. Cole of the University of Tennessee took an active part in the organization of the conference.

Mrs. Bristol is to give a paper before the Friday evening meeting of the Conference on "New Trends in Social Case Services."

Scholarship Cup Will Be Awarded

The Omicron Nu scholarship cup will be presented to the sophomore who has made the highest grades during the Christmas year at a joint meeting of the home economics clubs and the home economics club tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in the Student-Alumni building. The guest speaker will be Miss Haseltine, who is a nutritionist connected with the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, Washington, D. C.

An informal reception will follow Miss Haseltine's address. At this time the students will have an opportunity to ask questions of Miss Haseltine about her work. Any student interested in attending the meeting is invited to attend.

ic point of view, I believe that the quota system now in effect discriminates against the smaller groups equally. Larger sororities choose their pledges more carefully. Smaller sororities have to accept pledges to increase their membership. Evidently, which is a natural incentive for higher scholastic and campus achievements to pledge the best girls; chapper unity; better chapter organization. The smaller group more conducive to cooperative action and atmosphere for a congenial pan-hellenic spirit among the groups.

Miss Ellen Stubbs —I don't think the quota should be raised because the standard of sorority is sisterhood, and if the quota is raised the members will not have a mutual feeling toward each other.

Muriel Humphreys: I am definitely in favor of the quota system. I imagine most sororities are limited by their national. Most of the chapter problems throughout the country have arisen because of too great an increase in numbers. This increase causes groups in which the girls are not even sure of the names of their own sorority sisters, and groups in which there is little sincerity or friendship which is so necessary. I am in favor of the quota system because, in my opinion, it promotes a closeness and strength within the sorority.

Betty Hyatt: I'm definitely against the quota system because I think it's very undemocratic. You have to choose between so few that a lot of girls that you really want to pledge are left out. When the sororities are too small they can't support themselves as well as if they had more members. The quota system hurts large and small sororities because it causes hard feelings.

Janet Wells: I do not think the present quota system has done what it was supposed to do. If a quota system is necessary it seems to me that some other approach could be devised.

Marie Byrd: Fifty is plenty because in larger sororities the members do not get to know each other as well. This system enables more sororities to function on campus and strengthens smaller sororities.

Mary Monahan: I think the quota system should be kept up so that the smaller sororities will have a chance to increase their membership.

Mary Celeste Hardee: I'm in favor of some form of sorority limitation, but for a campus as large as this I think the quota should be higher, with no chapter ever having over 85 members. If the chapter was larger it would become unwieldy, cumbersome, and hard to manage

4-H "Makes the Better Best"

Club of Four Leaf Clover Symbol Supplements Home Economics Activities, Offers Girls Leadership and Vocational Training

By LORRAINE COTTRELL

Head, heart, hand, and health are the interpretations of the four leaf clover, the symbol of the largest rural organization for boys and girls in the United States. The 4-H club, in its work, offers training in vocational and social activities through the medium of practical applications. The 4-H club members learn by doing.

The college 4-H club here at FSCW is composed of 73 members. Girls in the college club have all had previous experience in 4-H club work in their home cities where they have applied their learning in methods of food preparation, canning, sewing, raising poultry and livestock, and producing dairy products.

Green and white are the colors of the 4-H club. Besides being the color of the four leaf clover, green also intimates that "while you're green you grow." The white stands for purity.

The national motto "To make the better, best" is practiced in organizations throughout the United States, Hawaii, and in the recently organized units in Puerto Rico.

The college 4-H club acts as a supplement, as well as an extra-curricular activity, to the girls who are in the school of home economics. For the 4-H girls in other schools of the colleges the club on campus is a means by which these girls may continue their interest in the club. The club here does not require the continuation of club work, but includes in its program mostly social activities.

In addition to the practical knowledge the girls receive from the club work they are also able to gain greater benefits from their achievements. There are county 4-H camps throughout Florida that the girls are chosen to attend in the summer every year. There is also the state short-course given here at Florida State college the first two weeks in June to which girls come who have been selected for their outstanding work in their county.

Each year in June, also, the two most outstanding girls and the two most outstanding boys in every state are chosen to attend the national 4-H club camp in Washington, D. C. Then in November the most outstanding boys and girls in the various states win trips to the national 4-H club convention held in Chicago, Illinois.

Members of the 4-H club have opportunities to win scholarships on the basis of their past club work and excellence in their yearly projects. Frances Palmer president of the college 4-H club, has a state scholarship which is presented annually to a senior in the school of home economics.

Frances won the scholarship on leadership, club work, campus activities, and scholastic attainment. Last summer she attended the short course here and was laboratory assistant in the canning demonstrations.

During summer school Frances lived at the home management house for five weeks studying the problems of home management and the conservation of the fruits market. In 1935 she won a trip to Chicago on her canning project.

Tut Strickland, junior, won a special scholarship given by the senior 4-H club council. She has been in short course nine years and to the county 4-H club camp 10 years. For the last several years Tut has been a counselor at the county camp. In 1936 she won a trip to Chicago and in 1938 she was elected state president of the 4-H club.

Fern Robertson came to Florida State her freshman year on a state scholarship. Then in the college 4-H club and was awarded the Dade county alumnae club scholarship.

Fern has been a member of the 4-H club for eight years prior to college and has been a counselor at Camp McQuarrie in the summer of 1939 and at Miami Beach in 1940.

For her freshman year Ruth Hendricks also won a county scholarship for her outstanding work in the county. Ruth and Frances Palmer were the girls chosen from Florida to go to the national camp at Washington, D. C., in 1938.

Ruth attended short course for two years, and on her trips here in 1936 she contracted the measles in Chicago on her canning project.

In addition to being counselor at the Dade county camp for the past three summers Ruth has also been an active assistant to the home demonstration agent there.

At together Ruth has had nine years of 4-H club work and is at present in her second year of college club work. This year she is state scholarship winner in college 4-H club.

Among the 26 freshmen members of the college club are several girls who have taken prominent ranking for their work. Catherine Barnes won a national 4-H club scholarship which was presented to her last year in Chicago for her excellence in food preparation. She was one girl among four who received national

Bundlers Get Pins Bearing Crossed Flags

Pines bearing crossed American and British flags and the words "Bundles for Britain" have recently been issued to all those students or faculty members who have completed a knitted garment or are committee chairmen or vice-chairmen.

Knitting honors are still with Beatrice Sennett who has completed six balaclave helmets and one V-neck sweater, while Gertrude Rea Ruth Shoan with a V-neck sweater and a balaclava helmet, Selma Sonnstrom who has a V-neck sweater and an air force helmet, and Betty Jacobi with six boot stockings.

Highest honors in the faculty go to Mrs. Lee Miller for two pairs of socks, two pairs of mittens and a helmet; and Miss Mary Nola Hood, runner-up, with six boot stockings and a pair of mittens. Doctor Elizabeth Gordon Andrews has completed a pair of socks, and Miss Janet Smith a pair of mittens.

Mrs. Doris Kennedy of the business office has completed a V-neck sweater; while Mrs. Robertson, wife of Miss Rita Robertson, and Mrs. Herschel Graves, an alumna, have also turned in finished sweaters.

Murphy Is Co-Chairman Of Florida Committee

Elisabeth Waterman, member of the Newman club on this campus, was elected treasurer of the Southeast Province of the Federation of Newman clubs at the annual conference held this year at the Georgia School of Technology.

Also at the conference Winona Murphy was elected co-chairman of the Florida section of catenian committee.

The first Southern Conference was held last fall at Atlanta, Georgia, and Mrs. Bristol with Dr. Cole of Florida and William A. Cole of the University of Tennessee took an active part in the organization of the conference.

Mrs. Bristol is to give a paper before the Friday evening meeting of the Conference on "New Trends in Social Case Services."

Moor Returns From Congress

Alumnae Delegate Hears Prominent Speakers At Meeting

Mrs. Frank Moor, past president of the Florida State alumnae association, has just returned from New York where she was a delegate to the Women's Centennial Congress November 20 to 25 at the Hotel Commodore. Mrs. Moor represented the alumnae association and the local American Association of University Women.

Featured speakers at the meeting were Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, and Mrs. Ruth Bryan Rohde. Mrs. Moor revisited this college last year as well as such prominent women as the British Commonwealth of Nations and Latin American affairs who took part in the program.

Mrs. Moor chose the Education for Women group and the Government and Politics group of which to concentrate during the Congress.

Highlights of her trip were a visit with Mrs. Rhode to the girl's home where she met Captain Rhode, and a reception of plays and musical comedies Mrs. Moor was joined by her husband during the latter part of her visit.

Episcopal Vestry Plans To Honor Field Director At Supper Party Sunday

Student vestry of Rugg hall is planning a supper Sunday at 6 o'clock in honor of Miss Maude Dertzbaugh, field director on the vestry. The vestry is inviting all Episcopal students to attend and wishes that those wishing to eat at the supper sign on the Rugg hall bulletin board before Saturday noon.

All Episcopal freshmen are having a short meeting at 1:30 o'clock Saturday at Rugg hall to nominate freshmen to serve on the vestry. The student vestry is the directing body which plans the activities and program of Rugg hall under the direction of Miss Julia Gehan, student secretary.

Bundlers Get Pins Bearing Crossed Flags

Pines bearing crossed American and British flags and the words "Bundles for Britain" have recently been issued to all those students or faculty members who have completed a knitted garment or are committee chairmen or vice-chairmen.

Knitting honors are still with Beatrice Sennett who has completed six balaclave helmets and one V-neck sweater, while Gertrude Rea Ruth Shoan with a V-neck sweater and a balaclava helmet, Selma Sonnstrom who has a V-neck sweater and an air force helmet, and Betty Jacobi with six boot stockings.

Highest honors in the faculty go to Mrs. Lee Miller for two pairs of socks, two pairs of mittens and a helmet; and Miss Mary Nola Hood, runner-up, with six boot stockings and a pair of mittens. Doctor Elizabeth Gordon Andrews has completed a pair of socks, and Miss Janet Smith a pair of mittens.

Mrs. Doris Kennedy of the business office has completed a V-neck sweater; while Mrs. Robertson, wife of Miss Rita Robertson, and Mrs. Herschel Graves, an alumna, have also turned in finished sweaters.

All Episcopal freshmen are having a short meeting at 1:30 o'clock Saturday at Rugg hall to nominate freshmen to serve on the vestry. The student vestry is the directing body which plans the activities and program of Rugg hall under the direction of Miss Julia Gehan, student secretary.

Home Economics Scholastic Cup Given Schenck

Parker, Tillotson Get Honorable Mention

The Omicron Nu scholarship cup given each year by the local chapter of the national home economics honorary society to the sophomore in the study of home economics making the highest average for freshman year, was awarded to Ruth Schenck.

With a notational home economics major made a 2.66 average during her freshman year.

Awarded Saturday

This annual award was made Saturday night at a joint meeting of the Omicron chapter and the Home Economics club in the Student-Alumnae building auditorium with Eleanor Shuman, secretary-treasurer of the chapter, making the presentation in the absence of the president, Jean Hodge.

Another feature of the program was a talk on "Nutrition and National Defense" by Miss Marjorie Heseltine, nutritionist connected with the United States Children's Bureau in Washington, D. C.

Concluding the program the names and ideals of Omicron Nu were explained and set forth in a short talk by Miss Helena Richey, director in clothing and textiles. The Florida State college chapter of Omicron Nu is the 19th to be installed in the south.

Honorable mention in the Omicron Nu cup contest went to Miss Agnes Elizabeth Parker, of Tallahassee, who received a key and to Miss Jeanne Tillotson, of Lakeland, who averaged 2.34 minus.

Lynn Will Teach Photo Technique

Novice Division Offers Photography Course For Next Year

The department of physics has been authorized to announce a new course in photography to be offered beginning with the next term of the 1941-1942 academic year, it was announced at 223, will give three semester hours credit, and will be offered each semester.

The only prerequisite will be the required elementary physics course. Miss Elizabeth Lynn instructor in physics, is to give special work in photography at Agnes Scott college and the University of North Carolina to learn the course.

Course of study and has never been offered here before. Emphasis will be placed on practical experiments. For the present, the class will study practical photography, first making practical experiments in printing, developing, and enlarging, then making enlargements. There is a special enlarger in the dark room, and a regular camera will be used. Finally, they will make practical studies of the use of special color filters for various kinds of films. The course will include a brief introduction to technical matters. There will be a limit of twenty-four students, members of the department of physics to be given preference to those of interested students.

Heretofore, the college has only had opportunity for the study of photography under Advanced Physical Physics, but within the past few years a very limited number of students by their own interest have carried on different practical projects. Students doing this work in this course have made remarkable laboratory records.

Book Exchange Will Post List of French, Spanish Books for Sale

Doris Jackson, chairman of the YWCA book exchange committee announced today that the exchange will be open to post a list of approved French and French readers early enough before Christmas holidays to allow students with the specific books in their possession to bring them to the exchange. After the list is published, the exchange will be open in the YWCA room in the Student-Alumnae building for two days.

Books may be sold only at the beginning of each semester, and the exchange will not be open during the examination periods.

Omicron Nu Cup Winner

College Band Begins Career Under Sellers

"Bring Instrument, Join Our Group," Urge Musicians

"Please bring a musical instrument from home when you come back from the Christmas holidays," was the enthusiastic message of the newest musical organization on campus, the college band. "We need more players to organize, and we are sure we want it to be. If you can play a band instrument, show your school spirit by joining the school band!"

High notes and low notes rang through the auditorium when owners of clarinets, cornets, flutes, saxophones, bassoons, French horns, basses, oboes, drums, and other instruments got together under the direction of O F Sellers, for the first rehearsal last Tuesday afternoon.

The band has been organized for those people who, although "musically minded," do not participate in any of the musical activities sponsored by the music department as well as for any music major who might be interested.

Members who attended the first practice rehearsal said it should be an organization with efficiency. They plan to elect them at some later date.

Formal rehearsals will begin as soon as the Christmas holidays are over. At this time a publicity committee will be chosen and a membership drive will be made.

Alpha Chi Alphas Agree to Disband

At a meeting last week the members of Gamma chapter of Alpha Chi Alpha, national journalism honorary for women, decided by an unanimous vote to disband, the oldest departmental honorary on the local campus.

After reviewing past records of the local chapter and reports of meetings for the last several years, installation in Miami this past summer, the members decided that the organization was not worth the studying' money and effort.

Members and officers of the Gamma chapter are: Sarah Worth, president; Margaret Painter, vice-president; Sara Mooney, secretary-treasurer; Ann Ahlweb, editor, and Margaret Scott.

The first chapter of the organization, founded at the University of Tennessee in 1919, has now disbanded.

Ahrendt Defines American Music

Tells AAUW American Composer's Future Is Hopeful

Appearing as the third speaker on the American Association of University Women programs for this year was Mr. Karl Ahrendt, associate professor of violin, who spoke last Tuesday evening at Rose hall, on "Music in America Today." He was the first lecturer to address members and guests on North American culture, the two previous speakers having devoted their attention to Latin and Central America.

Dr. Carmen Rogers, associate professor of English, presented the speaker and explained the series of programs planned for the AAUW meetings throughout the year. The general theme is the study of American culture. Future programs will present various aspects of culture such as painting, literature, and religion. Robert Frost, an eminent American poet, will be the next speaker to appear January 30.

Mr. Ahrendt, who is a former pupil of Willy Hess in Berlin and Andre Tourret and Jean Rivier in Paris, opened his remarks, saying, "Of all arts, music is probably the best standard in regarding the soul of man because music gives utterance to his wordless feelings and aspirations." And as with men, so it is with nations. A nation's soul is expressed in the music of its great composers. The richer the nation, the more individual this expression will be.

"America is still a very young nation and is only in the first phases of developing an individual expression. In asking the question 'What is American music?', we find that it is not Indian music, for that is but the voice of the past and does not represent America today. Neither is it negro, which with the Indian music has attracted and will continue to attract composers in this country. Although he may occasionally have caught the flavor of an actual Negro tune, Stephen Foster's music cannot be termed true folk music since it was consciously composed by one man, and did not spring from the people themselves.

"Negroes are beginning to develop their own composers. The two best known contemporaries being William Grant Still and Nathaniel Dett. Some American composers have used mountain ballads and songs of the plain men as thematic material around which they have built structures of their own. Such types as Indian, mountain, Negro and cowboy are folk songs. But, as we have said, they spring from certain sections of our country and do not represent a universal expression.

Mr. Ahrendt continued his discussion on universal expression by saying that jazz was coming, perhaps the most representative of America since it won't be found anywhere else in the world except as an importation from this country. But jazz is too stylized and narrow to become the real American music of the future." Turning to nationalist music he pointed out that good nationalist music is inspired by folk melodies and by characteristic rhythms of the folk songs, whereas, nationalist music in the bad sense is that which is supposedly inspired from without, that is, from a set of standards imposed by government decree. "Art to be a true expression cannot be dictated to."

"There are a number of agencies in this land of ours which are engaged in the dissemination of music to all classes, first and foremost is the radio, for with-

Alumna Hears From Husband With British

Cheerful Letters From Lieutenant Reach Robertson

"Every week I receive a cable from my husband who is stationed at Derbyshire, England, and so far nothing has been blue-pencilled by the censors," reports Mrs. Jack Robertson, Florida State college alumna whose husband is a second lieutenant in the English Royal Scots regiment.

Mrs. Robertson is the former Ann Glenn of Tampa and is in charge of the Buddies for Britain drive on this campus. While in school, she was president of the Sigma Kappa sorority. She is a graduate of the class of 1937. During her honeymoon in January 1939, Lieutenant and Mrs. Robertson visited Tallahassee, but since her marriage he has been living in England and only returned to this country last June to remain for the duration of the war. She is very anxious, however, to return as soon as possible.

Cheerful letters which indicate the morale of the British people in the present world war come to her regularly. Lieutenant Robertson was deeply impressed by the trade of the 50 destroyers with the British.

He comments in part: "The deal with the United States has heartened everybody here, and I think it is considered one of the most important thing which has happened since the war commenced. I wonder if the Germans realize what it means—the aid of 50 destroyers."

About the random bombing which the Germans have done in England he says, "The indiscriminate bombings which the German airmen have done are a farce, as it merely makes the people mad as hell and hinder the war effort a whit."

In another letter he says, "Frankly we are glad the Germans have shot down 30 British—even the Germans can't go on doing this indefinitely."

He speaks also of the difficulty in location of getting sleep, of the trains delayed by air raid warnings, and of the rich level of the near his brother's home. In a recent letter he says, "Great danger in southern England from falling German planes"!

out a doubt it is doing more for the cause of good music than any other single factor. I might also mention an innovation which started as an advertising stunt but which has developed into a big project of vast significance in the musical education of the layman. I speak of the sponsorship of newspapers through the country of recordings of some of great musical masterpieces, and the presentation of these recordings to the public at ridiculously low prices—$1.50 for a whole symphony.

"Most important of the things now being done for the composer of music which will live (which is not the music in the popular vein, for that is written for a certain period, and is like dated coffee—as soon as it gets old, it loses its flavor), is the establishment of composers' laboratories or forums where the composer may bring his music to be performed and thereby derive valuable inspiration. American composers have not been idle; they have produced some highly significant works of undoubted originality."

Following this, Mr. Ahrendt played a recording of Roy Harris' Third Symphony so that the audience would be able to form his own opinion about such American compositions. "Whether this music will live for future generations is difficult to say. We cannot really evaluate the worth of contemporary music except in terms of ourselves. I think I can say though, that American music is beginning to show the earmarks of an individualistic approach. The presence of refugee composers from other countries will certainly result in the stimulation of an even greater interest in the realm of music which might well culminate in a new golden age."

In conclusion, Mr. Ahrendt said, "As for real American music, which will reflect the soul of the nation as a whole, we shall have to take the long view and know that we are bound to have in the generations to come, the highest musical expression which we shall be able to say is American."

Playnight Goes 'Back to Farm'

Barn Dance Will Bring Hill-Billy Songs And Haystacks

An old-fashioned barn dance will be the theme of Playnight tonight with the gymnasium decorated in straw and haystacks. Ruth Turres and Nancy Lee Doggett will be co-chairmen in charge. Guests are asked to come in costume, and a prize will be given for the best.

At 9 o'clock several hill-billy features, including a floor show and will present the "Tallahassee Billy Band," directed by Virginia Greene, p l a y i n g mountaineer songs. College Girls Frankly Admit Husband-Hunting Intentions

"Bride-to-Be" Club Gives Prospective Wives The Low-Down on Art of Marriage

BY NYNA DYE

Girls of the kindergarten and elementary school age and college women are as a whole the only two distinct members of the "marriage" as far as wanting a husband is concerned. Who has known a normal little girl between the ages of four and seven who did not want to marry the "object of her love and admiration." even if it was old enough to be her grandfather? Who has known a normal college woman who openly declared that she had no intentions of ever getting wedded? But we can plug high the examples of junior high and high school girls insisting that they intend to be married regardless of what comes along, but we know from experience that their boasting can be classed as "bunk."

To the college girl who knows and doesn't care if the world knows it too that she is always on the alert for a prospective husband, although this alertness is often futile in the average woman's college, we offer the following definitions of a husband which we hope will help:

Husbands are strange people.

A husband is a man who thinks his wife is lucky and doesn't know it.

A husband is a man who is convinced he can read the paper while his wife talks to him, and still not miss anything important.

A husband is a man who thinks a hunting lodge is where a woman would love to spend a vacation.

A bubadd is a man who likes his new cut-in-front evening dresses on any woman except his wife.

A husband is a man who reminds his wife of the no-goods he saved her from marrying.

A husband is a man who says "your son" when Junior wrecks the family car and "my son" when he is elected captain of the football team.

A husband is a man who gets someone else to shop for his wife's Christmas presents.

A husband is a man whose wife can drive all right—when he's not in the car.

A husband is a man who wants his wife to have everything she wants.

A husband is a man who would rather spend an evening reading a murder mystery than dancing with Hedy Lamarr.

A husband is a man who will wear any necktie his wife picks out.

A husband is a man who says brightly, "Honey, why don't you get Mrs. Jones to give you her recipe for biscuits?" but would be insulted if his wife said, "Why don't you get Mr. Jones to tell you how to handle your clients?"

A husband is an ordinary sort of guy who would have had an exciting, dangerous life if he hadn't married.

A husband is a man who has never been known to say "Swell" when told that company is coming.

A husband is a man who never grows too old to notice a nice figure.

But why go on?

A husband is a man—period.

There were six girls who lived in a certain Florida town who were prospective wives-to-be of six certain young men in the same town or nearby vicinity. They formed a society named a club which was known as the "Bride-to-Be" club, and encouraged and invited any prospective bride to join. The purpose of the club was to set the girls straight on marriage and husbands before taking that tragic step of declaring "I do." I understand the modern tendency on the part of both brides and grooms is to say "I will" which implies, "I don't want to, but I guess under a sense of pressure, I will." The six members of the club invited any married woman who had any story of any value to tell to the young sters and advisers of the club. And the meeting of husband-holders of the town flocked to the semimonthly meetings of the "Bride-to-Be" club."

The advice that the young prospective brides received ranged from methods of curing the husband of the drinking habit, to care of the children. Experienced wives said that marriage was a business as well, and that business at the present time was rotten. Many of the women pleaded for these six young girls to give up their plans because they seemed

Music Students Present Song

Program Features Love, Patriotic, Christmas Numbers

Opening their program with patriotic motif, members of the music department chorus sang "God Bless America" as their first number in convocation Tuesday.

Pearl Tyler played "Wedding of the Painted Doll," "Whispering Hope," and the "World is Waiting for the Sunrise" on the xylophone.

A solo, "Our Love Affair" by Lib Miller and "I Love Life" by the chorus followed, illustrating the kinds of love prevalent in the minds of college students.

The program continued with violin duet, "Play, Fiddle Play" by Freddie Lee Buhr and Virginia House and an imitation of "Man River" by the organ and a song including Lulu Cooper, Margo Clayton, Alma Anderson, Doris West, Mary Eleanor Powell, Lee Buhr. The sextet sang "Jingle Bells," "The Night Will Be Stay." The chorus then sang "Glow Worm."

The program was concluded by the spirit of Christmas with "Silent Night, Holy Night" played by the organ, "Jesu Bambino" sung by Mildred True, and "The Christmas song" by the chorus, "Snow Legend" by the chorus.

Virginia Dunn was narrator.

Soap Curtails Vocal Freedom For Freshman

Captors Wash Away 'Civil Liberties' by Slippery Means

So there is freedom of speech on the campus, is there? A freshman in Reynolds would deny this statement emphatically. If you asked her. For she has enjoyed second censorship of the most drastic kind—according to her interpretation.

Her situation involved bodily forces, even, and her privileges of resistance was taken away from her. Neither could she retaliate with any sort of revenge.

The particular incident in which the freshman was involved took place at a wash basin—of the most ordinary kind. But the weapon with which her censor punished her was of a very special kind, made for its cleansing and purifying powers—soap.

It seems that the culprit had uttered words of a slanderous nature against several matters. Her censors had forgotten their objections to be "naughty words unbecoming to young ladies of her social standing, and took matters into their own hands. The bodily relief over a wash basin while they strenuously applied soap and water to the mouth of the offender.

The freshman seemed to be doomed to the suppression imposed upon her freedom of vocalizing until a few of her hallmates enjoyed that old wash tub ears of those who had listened to her profanity. But even this pleasure was not allowed her. Her captors immediately washed away the evidence of themselves and forced it upon her.

Strange to say, the freshman could see no justice in the situation. Nor of her censors. We wonder why.

Demons Report Record of Year

Florida High Wins Seven Of Nine Games Played In Conference

Seven victories and two defeats is the record of the Florida High school for the 1940 season just concluded, announces Coach Donald Cantwell. Among the victories is Virginia Green, Nancy Lee Doggett, Peggy Barker, Emma Ecker, Frances Eckland Marian Swanson, Bonnie Craig, Dorothy Nelson and Ruth Hendricks.

defeated Wewahitchka by the score of 28 to 0.

Florida high played Crawfordville here in the fourth game scheduled. The local players won 18-14.

The second time the Demons tackled Santa Rosa, Florida high won an even more decisive victory. The score was 41 to 0.

A game with Sopchoppy was the next on the schedule, although the Sopchoppy team scored in the last few seconds of play, the final tally was 18 to 7 in favor of Florida high.

The season's windup was with Grand Ridge, a school new to the conference this year. The game won by a margin of 44 points, the score being 50-6.

The biggest game of the year was that held here with Peacock school of Madison, in which the score was Florida high, 33 Peacock school 7. The final score was 32 to 18 in favor of Florida. The Tallahassee squad plans to travel to Madison next year to play the Peacock boys again.

The best game of the year was between Florida high and Chattahoochee, Seminole local, 6 to 0. Several Tallahassee boys were intured in the game. Chattahoochee had won the Southern championship of six-man football teams and expects to be invited to play a preliminary game with an Ohio team in the Sugar Bowl for the national six-man football championship.

There are 14 schools in the North Florida Six-Man Conference, which was founded by Florida high five years ago. The game of six-man football was instituted in 1934 by Stephen Epper, a coach in a small Nebraska high school, and has had a meteoric rise in popularity among small schools throughout the nation.

Sports Leaders Chosen

The Odd and Even sports leaders for next year were chosen at a Woman's Athletic Association meeting Wednesday night. The leaders who were chosen are as follows: Margaret Carter, Odd basketball; Stella Harrell, Odd volleyball; Bernice Walton, Even basketball; Paulette Nolan, Even volley ball.

New Odd-Even Sports Begin

Swimming, Badminton Now Being Practiced By Rival Teams

While more people than can properly be taken care of with the present facilities are reporting for Odd and Even badminton, the swimming teams are progressing slowly with comparatively few people reporting. Irene Fremd and Frances Battle, Even and Odd student coaches of swimming, are directing practice in starts, turns, and endurance, as well as correcting strokes.

Odd badminton players are playing the game and perfecting the technique, since most of their players have played before. The Even team, mostly beginning players, is learning the serve and the rules of the game. There are 56 girls out for Even badminton, while 24 Odds have come out.

Proximity Of Old St. Nicholas Adds Brighter Note To Campus

Christmas Spirit Inspires Gay Decorations And Letters to Whiskered Gentleman

By BETTY JEAN DAVENPORT

College girls are really little girls at heart. There has been a rash of letters rushed to classes and a brighter note in voices in the last week or so. As it became term papers and book reviews are due, and several teachers have scheduled examinations for next week? Well, hardly! There's just a lot of Christmas spirit in the air which has been promoted by the announcement that holiday box tickets will soon go on sale; by the exciting decorations in downtown windows and department stores; by the crispness of the air, and by the formality of mail —just the dressed week ahead—who can visualize two whole weeks of glorious carefree vacation.

In some of the dormitories there is evidence of a gay mood. Outside one door has been constructed a miniature fireplace with "bricks" of red paper, and a pair of red stockings hanging hopefully, two candles resting atop the mantle. The transom over another door has been covered with blue paper, and a white star, concealing an electric bulb, gives the impression of a star. An ingenious person has a sign on her door which reads: "Minds you to understand better the people" desires of a college girl's heart:

"Santa, dear,

Remember me! I'm the one who let coffee and cake on the mantle for you every Christmas until I found you were a heavy drinking and eating it any more. Evidently, though, you prefer beer and pretzels I substituted. Drop around this year; there's a new brand I want you to try.

Santa, darling, really, I've tazed my best friend, but I can think of hardly anything at all for you to bring. I'll give you a complete list of what I have thought of, though. 'There are several items a college girl can use). For instance, I'd love a silver fox coat (it does look well in Florida); a watch would be nice, too, (diamond studded, please); "Bond Street" smells good—don't you think?); there's that too, too, adorable bedspread at the five and ten, and have you seen the new Buicks? They're quite cute and not a bit new permanent, too; (You know how my hair droops): A portable typing (Old-Even typing). Fancy clothes of any kind are always acceptable to me. I think there was something else.Oh, well, I can't remember. I'll let it go. Thanks, Santa, and Merry Christmas to everybody!!!

Class Games Will Be Played Soon

Inter-class competition in swimming and badminton will take place the week following return from the Christmas holidays, January 6. Winners of intersection games will play on Playnight and Odd-Even games will take place the following week.

The telegraphic meet has been scheduled for the week following Odd-Even playnight. Florida State college, who last year won the Southern telegraphic swimming meet, in charge of both the Southern and National matches will be in charge of the meet. The meet will be chosen by special tryouts at the beginning of second semester.

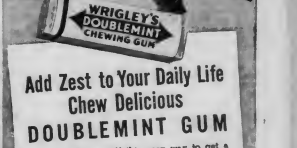
Workshop On Recreation To Be Held Here To Help Solve Problems

The first application has been received to attend the workshop on recreation to be held the first summer session at this time at Florida State college for women. The workshop will give opportunity to solve local problems in recreation of the public school teacher, community recreation leader, playground instructor, youth organization leader, homedemonstration agent, and others interested in recreation.

All applications must be in before next April 15 at which time a committee will select the 40 best qualified to attend the workshop.

Only colleges in the country are Louisiana and Mary and Harvard and Yale universities.

Corps Members To be Initiated



Life Saving Group Plans Ceremony and Picnic For Newcomers

Initiation of new members into the Life Saving Corps will be held tomorrow evening at Game's Woods. The party will leave from behind Byran at 5:30 o'clock for a program which includes a picnic supper.

All members will wear white and red, and the initiates will wear white. Initiation will occur before the supper, which will be an activity affair for new members. In the ceremony four officers and one member of the corps will form a cross with the president. Kitty Baughn is the senior. Each officer speaks to the group of those being initiated, and after each speaker finishes the cross turns, and the next speaker faces her mate. Finally the president makes the final address, completing the speeches. Other officers who will speak are: Instructor, Irene Fremd; captain, Dennis Ecker; secretary-treasurer, Gloria Cruce; and one member of the organization. The object of the ceremony is to point out the purposes and aims of the organization and to instruct the new members in their responsibility upon accepting membership in the Life Saving corps.

A camp-fire program has been planned to follow up with the program committee headed by Mary Lou King, and members Ervin, Rachel Erwin, and Ruth Smith. Ruth Crowe, chairman, heads the food committee, and Marie MacKintosh, and Peggy Barker committee.

Convene Wisely

The coming Christmas vacation looms ahead as an open season for youth conventions. Throughout the nation groups are planning conferences and meetings to discuss problems of collegiate, national, and international import. It seems that student leaders everywhere will gather to "face the future with courage" on all sides of the fence.

In New Brunswick, New Jersey, members of the International Student Service will gather to decide "How Youth Can Serve Democracy," while the National Student Federation of America is conferring on "The Role of Student Government." At the same time the American Student Union will be meeting in New York City for its sixth national convention with a "Keep America Out of War" theme. Simultaneously youth from religious, labor, and student organizations, and as individuals will assemble at Madison, Wisconsin, for the fourth annual National Youth Anti-War congress, sponsored by the Youth Committee Against War, affiliate of the Keep America Out of War congress. In addition to these holiday meetings a nation-wide representative "Town Meeting of Youth" has been called by the American Youth Congress to meet in Washington the weekend of February 8-9 to discuss the needs of students and out of school youth.

Central offices are flinging challenges to their delegates, spurring them to the opportunities to gather and "work out their role in the shaping of the world's history." Nationally prominent men and women of many fields figure in the mastheads of the letters and put their stamp of approval on these attempts of young people to show they are not so docile as writers would make men believe. With all this material flooding our mails, we have been stirred to make a certain few passing comments.

We liked sentiments expressed in a New York Times editorial speaking of the I. S. S. convention early this September: "A good deal has been said in disparagement of certain tendencies among American youth, especially as revealed when they meet in congress and pass resolutions. But one can't indict a generation, considering that this is the only young generation we have and the only one to which we oldsters can pass along our hopes and our jobs when we step out. . . . These young people, with some mature cooperation, are trying to get at the heart of the matter, with sessions dealing with threats to democracy, internal and external; democracy at work, including problems of consumers, workingmen and business; foreign policy; individual rights; and national defense. One wishes them luck." We believe that wide-awake young people meeting together to thrash things out intelligently deserve the well-wishes of all; and yet they need warnings and cautionings just as much.

Remembering a recent convention we attended, we hope that conferences will have sessions in which the students themselves exchange their ideas instead of "round tables" in which outside speakers absorb the program. No doubt we need to listen to the words of the wise, but oft-times we have as good advisers in our own colleges and we believe that conventions should be places where, for at least part of the time, the students compare notes and ideas.

Knowing our own reckless exuberance, we would hate to be among the convention mob when resolutions are proposed. The temptation to follow the crowd is too great, and the crowd, as we have been told many times, is a powerful tool when swayed. Seeing the long lines of names sponsoring these varied movements, we can't help being a little questioning: have they axes to grind?

No, youth leaders need more than luck. They need to keep their minds open. We have seen the "glories" of youth movements in Italy and Germany, and we are skeptical. Youth leaders need to use all the intelligence at their command if they want to "face this future" and accept the responsibilities involved. Another quotation from the same editorial rounds out our warnings. "They (the students) begin well with an awareness that youth is a passing phase, not a permanent stage. The so-called "youth problem" does not exist, save as part of the general citizenship program. We are all laborers in the same vineyard, though sundown and quitting time will come sooner for some of us than for others."

Bury the Dead

Last Friday afternoon at a very quiet and informal meeting, the five members of the local chapter of Alpha Chi Alpha, national journalism honorary and oldest departmental honorary on campus, after taking thorough stock of themselves and their organization, decided to disband. The members reached their decision in a very calm, unspectacular manner, but after the meeting was adjourned, they felt that celebration was in order because they believed that they had done the Florida State campus a real service in abolishing one of its many pointless, pretentious organizations.

Although the motion was passed in a rapid and rather carefree manner, the members had months, even years, of experience and contemplation to back their decision. They remembered members of former years who spoke of Alpha Chi Alpha with a sardonic smile and former students who, with a "you-know-what-I-mean" gesture, refused bids to join the organization. They also remember their own initiation ceremony, where self-control was almost impossible during the supposedly serious secret services explaining the purpose and aims of the society.

They also remembered, with even less difficulty, the national convention that was held during the past summer in Miami. They remembered the five-day meeting which always seemed to circumvent the question of women in journalism, their problems and possibilities, but centered, instead, on expansion, social contacts, honorary members, and a suitable prize for an annual contest. They went to a convention expecting to find at least a few people who would discuss the best channels for publication and employment, the problems of a collegiate editor, and the best schools of journalism. They arrived to find national officers who had never been inside a newspaper office or, if they had, never mentioned it. They found also that their chapter, in its present state of lethargy, had been awarded second place in the activity rating. Heaven help the other seven chapters!

They also remembered the national officers, in hushed tones, speaking of chapter that had not been heard from in several years. They remembered that most of the chapters that are active at present are in small out-of-the-way colleges and universities, and that three chapters were not represented at the convention. They found, by studying some of the society literature, that six chapters of the organization have disbanded since 1929. Most of these six were in large outstanding universities.

After the period of reminiscence, the members brought immediate conditions into view. First there was the question of representation in the Flastacowo for a minimum of $4.50. It's just in order for honoraries to have at least a half page in the annual, but the members of Alpha Chi Alpha, after their period of reflection, weren't so sure they wanted to advertise their membership. Besides the treasury report proved that $4.50 was definitely not available.

Discussion of financial matters brough the subject of new members into question, because a pledge period is always beneficial to the chapter treasury. When someone suggested taking in new members to relieve strained budget, a groan arose from the small group. As the discussion continued, all the members decided that their integrity would not permit them to talk any student into paying the necessary $13 to join an organization that has proved so worthless. They thought about the approximate $60 that Alpha Chi Alpha cost students on this campus every year and wondered just what was gained in return.

Also included in immediate business was the question of Alpha Chi Alpha's participating in the "Honors Day," which is being revived this year. They thought of themselves dressed in white, wearing their pins, probably carrying candles, and impressing innocent students who didn't know what an honorary was really like. Again their integrity would not permit them to carry on such a performance.

Thus, after some consideration, the five members decided to disband their organization and were proud of their decision. They did not feel that such action showed weakness or failure, but an ability to take an unattached and critical view of one of Florida State's many organizations. Then too, they were not ashamed because they know of and are members of other honoraries on the campus which are in similar conditions but are not so frank about it.

Alpha Chi Alpha, the first departmental honorary to obtain a charter on this campus, began the rage of such societies, which now add up to a total of 11. Would that it were probable that this new move of the Alpha Chi Alpha members would start a new movement on the campus—a sort of clean up and clear out campaign.

Students of Florida State college and students of the University of Florida make a big to-do about "cooperation between the two institutions." We're always talking about "pulling together," but do we?

Recently the University announced the date for Military Ball as March 21, 22, which, just incidentally, is the date set for our Panhellenic dance at the end of last school year. Naturally we couldn't and wouldn't want to give a dance on the biggest weekend of the year at the university.

In order for our dance committee to change the date for Panhellenic, more than a little juggling will have to be done. The college calendar is filled, and to schedule so important an event as the Panhellenic bop for another time will be a difficult matter. Besides, the date may be changed, only to find that Gainesville has changed their minds again. We realize that the date for Military Ball depends to a great extent on when an orchestra can be hooked, but it does seem that a little cooperation from the university regarding the setting of dates for social functions might be worked out.

Collegiate Comebacks

We might mention in passing (at least we hope we'll pass) the girl who spent an afternoon and evening washing and ironing linens. The next night she went to a Christmas party and Santa pulled out of his bag for her a miniature clothesline and clothespin set. She probably hadn't been a good girl anyhow!

It practically has us weeping, but one of our pet gripes has up and left us. The other day we were sitting peaceful and attentive-like when all of the sudden it was convocation and this was us and we liked it. It came as quite a shock. If things like this keep happening, we're goina to have to quit writing a column.

The army, they tell us, is in town. Our friends who have time to wander down College avenue to the metropolis tell us they have even seen one or two of them. What is not generally known on campus is the fact that the army loves it's little men and gives them every convenience. They have, or will have, little recreation rooms, a movie, and things of that sort. We can see the little Tally girl of the future, still sittin,' contemplating arson so that the boys would stop recreating at the post and we could have a spot or two of olive drab on the campus.

Refrain: Seven More Days 'Til Vacation:

Seven more days 'til vacation
But I feel no rush of elation,
In fact I feel only deflation,
At the thought that homeward
I'll roam.

I give vent to no shouts or to capers,
For I have two awful term
papers,
That give us the chills and the vapors,
That I have to write while I'm home.

Oh what did I do the first quarter
Instead of the things that I
orter
I ask as the time grows shorter
Oh where did I park my dome?

We're still worrying about this army business. It irks us no end that the lads are going to have their leisure hours so well taken care of. We can see the traditional Uncle Sam with his arms extended. Only he ain't saying, "America needs YOU." He's coaxing enlisters with something like this:
Join the Army—we've raised the pay,
And there's a double feature every day.

We hear that we aren't supposed to make any cracks at the dining room any more. Oh well, it's Christmas so we won't.

We take it back. We just heard that they had music in the dining rooms last Wednesday night. In Landis our informer tells us, the moosic was martial. The food kept time to the music. We dread thinking of what would happen if they played anything double-time. Maybe we'd even get to our eight-thirties on time.

After all we've been hearing about these new-fangled methods of teaching children to read, we were interested in finding out how it works. In the Dem school a shining example took place. The teacher tells us how it happens: You write on the board, "What is your name?" and ask one of your brighter children to read it. The infant responds with, "What is your name, little buttonhook." We look up from over our glasses and knitting, pursing our lips and say, "We prefer the good old-fashioned way.

We just found out that today is Friday the thirteenth. Goody! Maybe someone will assign us another term paper today.

Only eight more school days 'til we go home, and then we can start acting like ladies again—or at least as close as we'll ever get after four years of "higher education." Since for these past four years we have been battling with what psychology calls "thwarted impulses" from the shock of unlimited freedom at home during vacations, we think that this year we have the solution to our problem. We are going to rave our family install a rising bell, a light flash system, a date card, and a special floogle to greet us at the dining room door and inform us that the blessings has already been said at dinner and therefore we cannot have none. We want to make sure that we're still in the swing of things when we get back from heaven to you know where.

The other day we saw a sign that amused us no end (us and our perverted sense of humor), quote "Only ten more shop-lifting days til Christmas." Tsk, Tsk, some people just don't have no honor system.

Italy Hard Hit

Mussolini's armies, both on the European continent and in Africa received strong and decisive blows this week. His fight for Greece appears doomed, as a major counter-offensive fails. As his men hastily retire, the British, realizing their advantage, have chosen this time to begin their offensive in Africa.

A cabinet minister last week in London said, "If we can enable Greece to hold her own until we have disposed of the Italians in Egypt, we shall have secured for our armies a foothold from which we might threaten the flank of any German attack on Turkey. From that foothold we might eventually deal a mortal thrust at the German dragon."

Greece is doing better than holding her own. Her army has captured the port of Porto Edda and the Italian right wing behind the town was retreating swiftly Tuesday morning. Already in possession of one-fifth of Albania, they aim now at the capture of Valona. The battle cries are "On to Valona" and "Tirana by Christmas." The Italians launched a major counter-offensive in a last supreme effort, but the Greeks held their lines and succeeded in driving the Fascist forces back.

Reasons behind Mussolini's swift and bitter defeat are apparent. The heavy autumn rains made ponds of the mountain roads, making it impossible for tanks to pass. Greeks, accustomed to the mountainous country, scaled the crests and cut Italian communications. The British planes have reinforced the Greek fleet and further demoralized their enemy. As the Italian army admitted its defeat when its retreats turned into routs. As is customary for a defeated army, a new general, Ubaldo Soddu, has taken over the Italian command, replacing General Petro Badolglio.

Egyptian Blitzkrieg

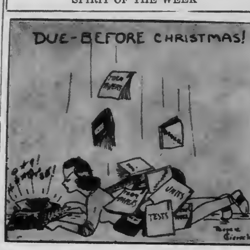
As the Italian army in Greece failed in its mission, the English have begun to "dispose of the Italians in Egypt." The British adopting the German blitzkrieg method Tuesday struck against the enemy forces along a front in western Egypt. In the first few hours of fighting they succeeded in capturing 1,000 Italian prisoners. Latest reports say that the Italian Mediterranean base of Sidi Barroni, one of the most important advance and rear troops has been cut. The number of prisoners held by the British is steadily increasing, as the Italians felt the impact of the British blitzkrieg tactics.

This battle will have far-reaching consequences. If the English succeed in smashing the Fascist army or in bringing about its retreat into Italy, the whole outcome of the war may be changed. The Italians are discouraged about the war in Greece. If the army in Africa fails to hold up, the whole of Italy's morale may be fatally shaken. If the British battle in Africa is the beginning of a serious offensive, Italy may be forced to withdraw from the war, which will give the British a definite advantage in the Mediterranean. It might bring the French-African colonial forces into the war against the axis powers.

If Italy is disabled, if Greece continues to hold out, there will be a new land front in Europe. But at present the British do not have the strength to take advantage of the opportunity.

Sea and Air

The British have reason to rejoice over events in Europe and in Africa. But the average Britain has a new menace—the startlingly increased submarine warfare that today causes more worry than the planes over Britain. This brings the threat of starvation. Germany has developed a new and far more dangerous method of submarine warfare—one with which the British cannot cope at the present. Hitler has combined air and undersea attacks—eagles with "packs of sea wolves." The planes "spot" the enemy ships; the submarine destroys them. In addition, the planes themselves have been used as attackers. Faced with the combination of two such deadly agents of destruction, England is worried. In her need she has called on the United States for help.



U. S. Must Decide

How will the United States answer?

Lord Lothian, British ambassador, made a plea to the United States yesterday for more naval assistance to keep the supply routes to the British Isles open, when he said that the outcome of the war "now depends largely on what you decide to do." He stated that the British need airplanes, munitions, ships and money. This country has been sending planes and ships in small quantities. It is not enough to meet the British need. The time is drawing near when this country must make a definite decision about

Contemporary Student Thought . . .

By DORIS CARTER

Students at the University of Minnesota have started a move to publish a list of all jokes used by their professors. The list will number and classify their favorite stories and wisecracks. Such an assimilation should prove valuable in the future when the instructor, who feels the moment has arrived for one of his much used illustrative jokes, will save time by merely referring to the number on the published list.

A survey is being held at Michigan State college this week to determine student opinion on the corsage ban that has been more or less in effect on the campus for the past two years. The idea of the ban was to save male party-goers money and would enable more students to attend formal functions. As a result the men who went to only one or two dances a year were scared out and their partners went flowerless, while dates of patrons were bedecked in blooms. Student opinion seems to agree that it is entirely a personal matter if a lady's escort sends her a corsage, and such matters cannot be regulated by student council authority or any other organization.

University of Kentucky is holding a campus Leap Week, whereby the unattached coeds may have an added advantage these few remaining days of leap year to catch their men. The Damsel's Decree set up by the campus YWCA, "Leap Week" sponsor, states: "This is leap year; some young men ain't enjoying life as they oughta; some young ladies ditto; and male pocketbooks need a rest. Be it here resolved and proclaimed:

1. It's the ladies who pay and pay
2. Joe College shall be the one to sit by the telephone waiting for Betty Coed to call for a date.
3. Girls open the doors; boys go out 'em first.
4. Boys, when escorted by girls, must keep to the inside of the sidewalk, so run-away horses and lurkers don't endanger them!

The only catch for the boys is that when its dark and gloomy, the powers rule that the boys are still the ones to see the girls home. No ladies out alone after dark."

The traditional Indian tribe theme for the annual initiation of new students was held last week at Texas State college in their main auditorium. The purpose of the occasion was to strengthen the bond of friendship between advisors and the student body. Following musical selections, a so-called medicine man, arose from the door of his tepee to relate the legend of the TSCW tribe. Around him were grouped his tribesmen, in keeping with the Indian stage setting, who were made up of the college class and Student Advisory council officers in the college. The new tribe members responded with the pledge of loyalty to their school. Climaxing the tribal ceremonies, Chief of the student body offered a prayer to the Great Spirit, after which the old students remained seated during the recessional of new students.

Ernest S. Hediger, recent Swiss lecturer at North Texas State Teachers' college, believes that Hitler has set out to build up an European union similar to that in the United States with the industrial centers in Germany and the agricultural centers in the rest of Europe. "Germany, with her coal supplies," he said, "will feed on the wheat fields of Rumania, the potatoes of Poland, and the farm products of all Europe. Germany sells her country eggs from Denmark. Factories of the conquered countries are already being placed in German factories, and the male population of Germany serves as a policing agent throughout the entire conquered territory." Mr. Hediger discussed in great detail the economical dependence of the countries of Europe upon Germany. His own country, Switzerland, is the freest economically and politically because it is of little use to the Germans and because all excess gold was shipped to the United States before the conflict. "The country ruling the seas," said Mr. Hediger, "will ultimately win the entire war."

In order that more students will be able to attend the plays presented by the speech department, it has been suggested that 25 cents be added to the annual student activity fee. This money would entitle the students to attend four plays a year, and these plays would be presented twice in order that all girls would be able to see them. Here are some opinions of Florida State college students.

Madge McCreary: I consider this an excellent plan. The 25 cents added to the student activity fee won't be noticeably missed by us (our parents maybe!) and we will have the opportunity to attend the speech plays.

Thelma Johnson: I think it would be a grand idea because then more students would go to the plays.

Mary Budd Holmes: I think it would be a fine thing. Although I am not a speech major, I enjoy seeing the plays. I think two performances would be a great idea.

Jane Garrett: Outstanding! I couldn't approve of the plan more heartily even if I'd thought of it myself.

Peggy Waters: Super! It's Papa who pays anyhow. I'm a hog about plays—speech and all.

Kathryn Ann King: I think this is a very good idea because it would make more people interested in the speech department especially after they had seen one or two of the plays.

Marcia Pawley: A wonderful idea. More students would go if the fee were already taken care of. I believe the students are entitled to good entertainment, and that the speech majors are entitled to appreciative audiences.

Ruth Odum: I am definitely in favor of the above plan. It is much easier to pay 25 cents at the first of the year than try to find 40 cents in the middle of the school year. Maybe there would be someone besides speech students at the plays, if this plan were adopted.

Jean Talley: The idea is one of the best I've heard in a long time. Often I would like to attend the speech plays, but when they are presented I'm usually waiting for my allowance to arrive. Therefore if I paid for it at the beginning of the year, I'd be able to see more of them than I do at present.

Barbara Woods: The idea's mighty all right. Everyone is wild to go to the plays, but it is next to an impossibility. Let's carry out the new idea. Besides maybe this way the speech students can see the plays.

Joanne Whitney: I think it is a very good idea and more students will attend them. They are worthwhile and I know a lot of the students will enjoy seeing them. And the students won't notice an extra quarter on the student activity fee. I will help the speech department to put on more and better plays.

Betty Jane Potter: Not enough students see the plays now because they don't have the money for the season ticket, and if the money is put on the activity fee, more stu-

Youth Still Likes Stamp Collections

Hobby Ranks First In Demonstration School Check-Up

Stamp-collecting is still the outstanding hobby among young people, if a recent survey conducted at the Demonstration school is any valid indication.

Fourteen students of the 43 who had hobbies were stamp enthusiasts, and a number of them have been collecting for five or six years.

Other collections ranged from doll to movie star's pictures. Two students took for old coins, three seek match book covers, Pieces of glass draw two students, and another looks for shells.

Four boys collect model airplanes, while three students spend their extra time drawing. One student keeps a scrapbook of poems, and another a collection of literature on music, opera and dancing.

Indian relics, pictures of Scotch soldiers, Indian head pennies, newspaper articles, cartoons, canaries, picture post cards, tin foil, and doll dishes fill the shelves of students' collections.

The survey was held by the library to obtain information on student interests. Some of the collections may be exhibited in the library this year.

Student Recitals Will Begin Soon

The first student recital of the year also the second will be given soon at 4:30 in the college auditorium.

The following selections were on the program: En Bateau (Zeckwer), Mariana, (Scott); Cry (Cyril Scott), Dorothy West; Etude Mignonne, (Schutt), Gloria Cash; The Butterfly (Merkel) Agnes Parramore; Mazurka, E Minor (Saint-Saens), Alma Anderson; Impromptu (Schubert), Cyril Scott), Alma Chalker; Pastorale (Scott), Alma Chalker; Pastorale (Dethier), Patricia Rogers; Largo Grave and Adagio from 2nd Sonata (Mendelssohn), Corinne Butler.

Other collections ranged from doll to movie star's pictures. Two students took for old coins, three seek match book covers, Pieces of glass draw two students, and another looks for shells.

Four boys collect model airplanes, while three students spend their extra time drawing. One student keeps a scrapbook of poems, and another a collection of literature on music, opera and dancing.

Indian relics, pictures of Scotch soldiers, Indian head pennies, newspaper articles, cartoons, canaries, picture post cards, tin foil, and doll dishes fill the shelves of students' collections.

The survey was held by the library to obtain information on student interests. Some of the collections may be exhibited in the library this year.

Virginia Hails From Virginia But Tennessee Horns In Too

Bristol, City of Double Personality, Maintains Two Separate Post Offices, Police Systems

Virginia Rouse, Florida state college senior, h.. had the unique experience of living in a border town divided between two states by its main street. This city is almost impossible to present them there.

Beverly Burhana: I believe this should be a good idea because it will bring more students out and will increase interest in the speech department work. It will also introduce an element of culture which is much needed in the college curriculum.

Ruth Thomas: Adding 25 cents to the student activity fee to pay for the plays of the speech department is a good idea. When money is paid in advance, people usually get around to making use of it. This would probably encourage the speech department to give bigger and better plays by having their productions properly appreciated by a greater number of the student body.

Mary Anna Hampton: The "Second-Mortgage" idea that is under construction would surely help secure a sufficient budget for the speech department. Whether or not the Little Theater would be overflowing at each performance is a matter for conjecture, for I know several students who bought season tickets last year and did not use them.

Mary Monahan: Good idea—if the crowds don't become too large for proper accommodation.

Marie Byrd: I believe this is a very good plan because everyone enjoys plays. I hope there will be some arrangement to accommodate the crowds.

Mary Angas: The idea seems to be an excellent one, and if the details and arrangements can be worked out satisfactorily I am everyone will enjoy them.

Priscilla Reynolds: I think that this would be a good plan since more students would be able to attend the plays. It would be much easier to pay 25 cents in the activity fee than to put out a dollar or more later on.

Marianne Smith: I like the idea. It would eliminate the bother of buying and selling tickets. Then, too, I think low paying people have really advanced many well-produced plays in their life, and this is one important phase in their education. If this plan would enable more to go, and still keep order. I say 'Go to it.'

Laurel Pierce: I, too, think the idea's grand. Dramas and historicanias are one field that this college doesn't put enough emphasis on, except for the speech majors. If more people had a chance to see these plays, I'm sure it would awaken new interests and create new enthusiasm.

Harriet Collins: I think it would be a good idea if all the students who want to go can be accommodated in the Little Theater. The auditorium has such poor acoustics that it would be

College Girls Will Publish Jaycee News

Draft Whisks Off Editor; Secretary Asks Student Aid

Did you know that nine Florida State college girls have recently begun preparations for putting out a state newspaper?

The paper is a Junior Chamber of Commerce quarterly publication and is entitled the Florida Jaycee News. The former editor, Steve Yates, was unable to continue his editorship as he was among the first Tallahassee men to be drafted. His absence necessitated a new editor and staff.

Ben Perloff, state secretary of the Junior Chamber of Commerce presented his problem of an editorless and staffless paper to the college journalism department. Earl L. Vance, departmental head, asked for volunteer workers from the journalism classes containing upperclassmen. Of those girls expressing a desire to be connected with the paper nine were chosen.

Sara Mooney, a senior majoring in journalism, is now fulfilling the duties of editor. Mary Catherine Bellas, Louise Burger Leonora Cottrell, Mary Grace Hardee, Norma Pennoyer, Isabelle Waterhouse, Sarah Worth, and Eleanor Wheeler comprise the Jaycee News staff. At present these students have been assembling material, writing stories and headlines, and becoming acclimated to the responsibility that accompanies the printing of a statewide newspaper.

One issue, edited by Steve Yates, appeared in October. The first of the three papers to be published by the student staff appear about January 5. Ben Perloff is acting as temporary sponsor.

The information for the paper is obtained from two principal services to which the Florida Junior Chamber subscribes. The paper itself is published and the type is set up at the Daily Democrat office.

Virginia lived on the Virginia part of Bristol and attended Virginia Intermont, during her freshman and sophomore years. Now she lives on the Tennessee side of Virginia.

At Virginia Intermont she received a diploma in violin study. She was the concert master of the symphony orchestra and a member of the Glee club. At the end of her sophomore year Virginia taught public school music for a year in two small neighboring towns. She entered Pre-public school music contests and won the first prizes for all five contests. This she calls beginner's luck.

Virginia's violin teacher during her freshman year was Miss Julia Wilson Walker, a graduate of Florida State college for women. Her second teacher was a graduate of Oberlin.

Virginia Rouse is a candidate for the Bachelor of Music degree this May. She is concert master of the college symphony and violin theater orchestra. She aims first also to be Glee club and ensemble and plays first violin solos in Bristol, Virginia-Tennessee, the city with a double personality.

Eyman Delivers Radio Address

Advocates Cooperation Between Employment Service, Schools

Closer cooperation between the United States employment service and the public schools, especially in the vocational training program maintained at public expense in the public schools was advocated Tuesday afternoon by Dean R. L. Eyman of the school of education at Florida State college in a prepared radio address over station WREC of Memphis.

Dean Eyman's subject was "Vocational Education for National Defense." His speech was part of the program of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools now holding its convention in Memphis, Tenn.

"By gearing itself to the task of studying the supply and demand for jobs as applied to various occupations the employment service could furnish valuable information in determining the training to be given by the school and that by industry itself. In this way it will serve as a standing influence to employment," the college official said.

"Such information provides in a continuing survey carried on by the employment service would extend to protect the nation against facing a crisis caused by our being entirely too short of trained workers in a given field at a given time," he continued.

"We have an agricultural index that includes supply and demand of workers by occupations." With such information coming to the schools and to industry, a balance could be given our training program.

"Likewise the United States employment service could cooperate with the schools and industry by assuming a greater responsibility for placement of those trained. Placement as well as guidance is absolutely essential to a balanced program of vocational education. Neither industries nor the schools as they are now organized have the machinery for assuming placement. Cooperation between any such degree of efficiency as to make use of the United States employment service if it should assume this work. Without adequate program of placement and guidance the nation suffers. Such a program can do much to absorb the shocks caused by lack of trained workers for an given occupation or vice versa to prevent excess workers and unemployment."

He continued, "Our schools should organize themselves in such a manner that they may take students for part time or full time, for day or for evening vocational instruction, regardless of age, provided the students have reached sufficient chronological maturity to be accepted by industry."

"Whatever of diversification there may be in the occupational needs of the community this diversification must be provided for in the vocational training of those who are to fill the jobs . . . It is a task for the schools in cooperation with whatever industries the community has in it.

"Whenever the schools and the vocations of a community unite their forces to give training to the youth that they may succeed fully fit into the jobs in the community, and each carries its share of responsibilities for this vocational training, we may say that the schools have a vocational training program which builds a strong community and that the schools have an adequate program of training not only for national defense, but for continuous national growth and strength.

"School leaders and the leaders in the vocations of any community must cooperatively build the school's vocational training program to fit the needs of both the vocations and the youth who enter them."

Dean Eyman is of the opinion that early in the elementary years, a program of crafts education should be incorporated in the pursuit of education so that most people will earn a living with their hands. A good background should have been laid in the elementary school for the beginnings of some specialization in the secondary.

He stated, "This general program of training could well and about the close of the junior high school year. The last two or three years of the high school period could be used for varying degrees of specialization.

"Further, this idea, the dean advanced provision in every state of a fry vocational schools maintained by state and federal cooperation where opportunity for vocational specialization could be made available.

Dean Eyman is a former professor of agriculture and a former member of the Agricultural Extension Service and farm adviser of Illinois and served as director of vocational education one year at the University of California in Berkeley.

Cresap Will Give Pageant of Dolls

A Pageant of Dolls will be presented by Mrs. James L. Cresap early next week at her home on Virginia street as a benefit for the Tallahassee chapter of Bundles for Britain.

A romance of American fashions will be told through historical dolls, beginning with the primitive Indian of 1492 and continuing through the ages to the present day styles of dress and hair worn at the time of different generations will be among the unusual portrayals.

College Girls Admit Husband-Hunting Intentions

fitted more for career women than for wives and mothers. Marriage was painted as the accepted, blackest point possible by some of the women. Others, because of two or three of the young newly-weds, it was just a continuous series of quarrels, tears, and making-ups.

The most valuable advice came from the elderly women who had borne children who in turn had married and had produced upon it more objectively than the other groups of women. Marriage to be successful in a family was not worth all of its costs. It was the only way to obtain that coveted goal for a woman. A career they considered to be a dried and superficial happiness, but marriage was a long lasting proposition. Adjustments must be made into something beautiful depending upon the two people's attitude who had entered into a marriage with each other. It was a full time job to make another how talented one was on the domestic side, if it was to be successful.

Many techniques of the age-old problem of how to have and keep a husband were one of the favorite topics of the women. A certain woman became a chief adviser, not because of her successful married although she considered it so, but because she had so much "good advice" to offer. Provided Asiatic ideas proved ridiculous and highly impractical, tried to rush the girls right on up to the altar. She said the best way to hold a husband was the simplest part of the marriage. But the poor woman was really to be pitied for she had shown herself knew that that certain lady's husband was more frequently with women other than his wife. Everybody in town knew that except the wife. How he could have the audacity to take her to church every Sun after she was more than many could understand.

The all prospective brides came to the conclusion that young men were fickle and it was up to them to carry half of the load, not only to do their share of work, but take part of the responsibility in the decisions.

Men are not looking for the helpless, scatter-brain type of girl for a wife according to Ruth Millett, a columnist who writes "We, The Women." A girl is expected to do something besides spend money. Men don't respect the thing the wife who does not help her husband in any way, who is nothing more than a dead weight even though a decorative one.

Today, young men know that the going will be tough for them in the future. They want to be get married, sure. But they want to marry girls who will help them to make a go of it. They want girls who will either make their husbands' small salaries go far by good management, or will contribute to the family income. They also expect their wives to help in the business by managing the social side of their business lives.

So if you want to marry an ambitious young man today, girls don't pull the "helpless" line. It is outmoded. Show the young man that you regard marriage as a real partnership, and make up your mind to pull your part of the load.

Ruth Millett also says that a girl should be a lot more with compliments than with catiness. Men, those who speaking to a man, never praises another woman for any quality which she herself possesses. If she is ugly, but chic, she raves about chic women. She plays up her nose at more prettiness.

If she has brains rather than "oomph," she pays tribute to brains in women. If she is clever, she pays attention to other women's cleverness, never their prettiness. And if she is a "born home-maker" she is the first to praise that ability in another woman. Men don't think that ever hands anything to the "career wife."

Her reasonins is obvious. By praising the best qualities in other people, she not only calls attention to them in herself, but she may convince her hearer that those are the most important qualities in a woman.

Then too, the smart woman knows that the way to make a man think another woman is dirnamille is to be catty about her. When one woman praises another it makes her appear perfectly harmless. And men aren't interested in perfectly harmless women.

Of course there is another good that comes out of compliments. Men are human beings after all, men when she is talking to a man gives the impression of being entirely sure of herself and her charms. It is when women run down other women that men suspect they feel they are slipping themselves.

And what does all this add up to, you ask. It was just an attempt to pass on to you some of the valuable information that was passed on to six certain young girls which has helped them in many ways in the course of time.

If you still want a husband, then I say, good luck, girls!

Trouble Finds The Kitchen

Home Economics Majors Find Cooking Is Not All Peaches and Cream Not Easy As Pie And That Even One Cook Can Spoil the Broth

By MARGARET ANN OSTBERG

It's an old saying that too many cooks spoil the broth. I have my doubts though, because after consulting several home economics majors I have learned that one cook can make as big a mess as two cooks, and here is my proof.

A future dietitian had to make the same kinds of cake over six times before she could make it to look like the cake it was supposed to be. She also worked on biscuits for nearly four weeks which almost cost her money for a repeat. Isn't that a pity? Maybe she can find a job somewhere and at a safe distance.

One smart girl is taking it so that she can use it when she gets married. Just in case she doesn't get married after graduation, she is going to teach. It until she can find some unsuspecting soul who will chase her until she catches him.

Not all things turn out for the best, however. Home economics major's first attempt at bread making resulted in a nice set of brick. Well, it may not have been a brick, but it was almost as hard. Her next attempt also did not very well either. She read the directions over and put two and one half times as much salt as was necessary into a fairly good batch mapped it she found it rather salty. In fact, there was so much salt in it that the taster thought that she was at the beach eating sea water. Things go from one extreme to the other. Someone else forgot entirely to put sugar in a custard.

Cooking is not the sole object of this course. The students also learn how to behave at tea. Model teas are given so that the girls may have first hand experience for learning to control themselves at future teas. At a certain tea, cheese crackers were served. A student guest stepped up to the table to get her and crackers. Instead of taking one cracker, she made the mistake of taking two. Immediately a hostess shouted at her in a stage whisper, "Hey, put one of those back, there aren't enough to go around."

Confusion is one emotion that just won't work in cooking. At least one major doesn't seem to think so. She had mixed one lesson and was trying to make it up in another period and at the same time trying to make the pie crust for that day. The recipe called for a teaspoon of salt in the pie crust and a teaspoon for the biscuits. Well, instead of putting a teaspoon of salt in each mixture, she put both of them in the pie crust. After frantically attempting to pick the minute grains of salt out of the crust, she had a dish all over again.

These students of the culinary arts said that as a rule their cooking is not bad at all, even well, but sometimes the cakes do not always rise to the desired level. When they fail to do this the girls serve a failure as cake, but not as good. Once in a while the baking powder is omitted and the cake is also not even bother to rise to the level of the pan-cake.

Bad luck cannot always be blamed on the cook though. Every cook, in a way, is a gambler ever to cooperate as the food just won't mood. This is best because the poor misfortunates' projects remain unfinished and the grades remain unfavorable, through no fault of the students.

But even that one unlucky girl was using didn't just refuse to work. It was: The problem was a badly singed girl. Her widow's peak was removed, half of her eye brows were gone, her eyelashes were mere stubs, and her hands burned.

There are several home ec maids on the fourth floor of Lan-dis that have proven themselves to be excellent cooks. It has become a habit for those who don't cook to help the ones who do decide whether or not the finished projects are worthy of being served. This is rather confusing, so it is said by the girls, but they like it works out. Each time a home ec major comes home from a cooking class, she usually brings the food she has cooked in that day's class. As a rule by the time this student reaches her room each.

Musically Speaking

By VIRGINIA DUNN

Thank you all for being such a good audience Tuesday; you had as much to do with the success of the program as the girls in the chorus or the . . . thank you for that feeling of friendliness which seemed to float around in the audience and up to stage; that helped tremendously in enabling us to put our ideas across to you. It has been suggested that at each convocation there should be a new girl from the music department; this would serve as not only an introduction to them, but would also give one a short moment of relaxation and listening pleasure after running from the dining hall to the Ad building up and down stairs, aisles and peoples' feet.

This is merely a suggestion, but if some one is interested in developing the idea, I'm sure that it would meet with the approval of a majority of students.

Another musical opportunity is forthcoming this Sunday afternoon at 5:30 at the Union when Inge Glee club will present its annual Christmas vesper program. The program needs no introduction; its appeal is so great that several hundred people were turned away last year because of lack of room in the auditorium.

With the concert Sunday comes another question—that of appetite. Is it going to be a turkey dinner? Or will we have to be content with a good old fashioned meal of ham and beans? Whatever it is, we're sure that it will be delicious.

Methodist Student House Will Celebrate Yuletide

A Christmas party will be given at the Methodist house at 7:30 o'clock, Sunday evening. Emily Iris Mann will open gifts for the student house and at this same gathering the presents for the or- phanage which the Methodist girls support will be packed and deliv- ered.

The program includes two skits, a reading of Christmas poetry by Beth Ford, songs by a double trio directed by Madge Clayton, and readings by Miss Ida Rowan and Martha Whitehurst.

Those taking part in the skits are: Helen Herrin, Josephine Armstrong, Marjorie Melody, Dor- othy Reynolds, Ella Wakefield, and Louise Whitlner.

Linnie Lou Gautier, Ola Belle Tillman, and Martha Whitehurst are on the party committees.

The program will be followed by games.

Santa Claus Will Visit Annual Christmas Party For Der Deutche Verein

Der Deutsche Verein, German club, will hold its annual Christ- mas party tomorrow night at 7:30 in Ruge hall for club members, students of German, and their guests.

The program will represent a traditional Christmas party in an old-fashioned German home, and will consist of German Christ- mas songs, games, and short humorous play, and several indi- vidual recitations. Those taking in the play are Marguerite Dress- er, Grace Thuler, Mary Hinleton, Josephine Miles, Suzanne Vetize, Ida Mary Satterfield, and June Durnell. Dorothea Guthrie and Ruth Uhrhan will act as grandfather and grandmother in the general program. Recitation of poems will be given by Evelyn and Jane Uhrhan. Mildred Boley will sing a solo, and freshmen will sing other songs. The last group of participants will sing together. Peggy Hunter will be accom- panist.

The climax of the program is the entrance of Weihnachtsmann (Santa Claus), who will distri- bute gifts from him and from the tree. Those who want to receive gifts, however, must keep the custom of saying a verse or prayers for the Weihnachts- mann in exchange.

Refreshments will be served fol- lowing the distribution of gifts. In charge of refreshments are Mary Hinton Smith, Ellis Adams and Martha Lipshitz. Phoebe James and Marlene Gaskins are in charge of invitations, and Sarah Cody and Lisa Voss are respon- sible for trimming the tree and other details.

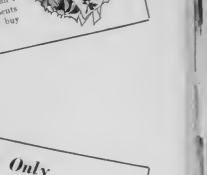
Gift Shopping?

On Wilson's Main Floor in the Lingerie Department are all sorts of surprises just a-waitin' your approval. They make ele- gant gifts, you know, to get on the good side of dear old 'Roomie'! You'll find undies cute and frisky in laced and frills and others neat and prim in tailored styles. You can tell my room-mate, I'll take the first kind.

The College Shop



And here's a piece of news hot off the griddle—A very special new sport shop —THE COLLEGE SHOP—which we predict, will be the hangout for all the "gang gals," is opening up this weekend in the new shop is to be no college Ave- nue, and we've had an inside lit- tle peek at it; know it'll be truly going to be on it; know it'll be truly going to be an answer to a college Maiden's prayer All the smartest, most up-to-the-minute suggestions for girls—and for you too— a complete line of sports wear.

It Won't Be Long Now

Say, did we get some wonderful present ideas! Just pop down and look around Boyerman's. Gaze at those precious linen hankies—the bright ones for cheerful Christmas shoppers. Or notice the navy and white slips just right for college days, our mothers. And for our college pals —is there anything better than cutsey pan- ties or some jewelry? Honest, eaten you can't go wrong and we know all your presents will be treasured if you remember to buy them at Boyerman's.

For Men Only

Down at Ray's, wonderful gifts for the boys we left behind us are still entering our eyes. One of the smooth- est things we've seen yet is a tie clasp set with its cute clasp, grand watch chain and tricky little gadget to hold his bills. An- other super idea is a military brush set to put next to your picture on his dresser. Or perhaps a billfold, always practical and popular. Ask the boy who shops at Ray's He'll tell you its the right place to go. You'll see some feminine articles there too.

Science Academy To Hear Stubbs

Members Are Planning Business Meeting Following Talk

Mr. Sidney A. Stubbs of the Florida Geological Survey will speak at the meeting of the Tallahassee branch of the Florida Academy of Science tonight at 8 o'clock in the chemistry lecture hall, room 207, science building. An important business meeting will be held after the lecture.

Mr. Stubbs will have as his subject, "Solution, A Dominant Factor in the Geomorphology of the Peninsular Florida." He will discuss in detail how underground solution has affected the surface features of Florida.

Mr. Stubbs divides the state into five main physiological divisions: the coastal lowlands, the central highlands, the Tallahassee hills, the Marianna lowlands, and the western highlands of these he discusses largely the central highlands and the Tallahassee hills.

He states that in the central highlands lakes are apparent but that "streams are conspicuously absent." In Pre-Tertiary and early Tertiary history the sendiments deposited were high in calcium carbonate which is pure limestone. There are two reasons for this, he says. The source material for sedimentary rocks was far to the north and only those materials held in solution by the sea water would be carried as far south as Florida. The deposited Calcium is the most plentiful mineral carried in that manner." Later, due to the conductivity of the lime by the warm and shallow sea and the deposition of millions of marine invertebrates the limestone was formed.

Mr. Stubbs explains that the modifications of the landscape by solution activity is the formation of a sink hole. First, an underground cave or channel is formed. Then the roof dissolves and collapses. If the sink hole is deep enough to reach below a permanent ground water level, it will be water filled and enlarged to a lake size. That is the origin of almost all the lakes in the ridge sections of peninsular Florida.

With the increased flow of surface waters there is an increase in the size of the original lake. In dry seasons the water table drops and so causes the disappearance of a lake.

He describes how the unconsolidate sands and sandy, highly fossiliferous, shell marls form the sediments in the coastal areas. The effect of solution is not so pronounced because of the planing action of waves." However, in the coastal regions there are pot hole formations which are caused by high rainfall and rank vegetation.

In conclusion Mr. Stubbs reflects that what to the layman seem to be unusual surface features are "almost entirely the result of the action of percolating waters and underground solution.

Defeated Candidates Club Taps Fifty-five Freshmen

The Defeated Candidates club tapped 55 freshmen this morning immediately after the rising bell. All freshmen who were defeated in the first and second primaries of freshmen elections were tapped and received black and blue plaidr ribbons and miniature dog bones.

The club will honor the new members at a "dutch" party and business meeting in the soda shop at 8:15 o'clock this morning. The party will also be in celebration of the club's birthday which falls on Friday 13.

Frances Ward is the DCC president and Marianna Boardman is secretary-treasurer. Other members of the executive council include Jane Watts, Alice Lidham, Evelyn Ann Doyle, and Kitty Jo Hickman.

Senate Favors Ruling Change

Residents Would Elect Own House Chairmen And Committees

At the senate meeting Wednesday, two constitutional changes in the residence halls and off-campus committee, were recommended. They were as follows:

Page 22, article 8, section 3, B, a.: "The membership of the Residence Halls Committee shall consist of the chairman and six other junior or senior students from residence halls, all elected by the student body."

This proposal recommends a change in the election procedure of house chairmen. According to the recommendation, house chairmen elections will be governed by the following section "The election of house chairman shall not be held in the regular spring elections. This election shall be held at a later date after the room reservations for the following year have been announced. Following this plan, the house chairmen for each dormitory shall be elected separately by the person who will live in that dormitory. Arrangements for freshmen dormitories will be arranged at a later date."

Page 22, article 8, section 3, part B, b which reads: "The membership of the Off-Campus Committee shall consist of the chairman and the chairmen or seniors all of whom live off-campus. This number may be changed by student Senate if found necessary. The members of this committee shall be elected by the student body and not more than one member of the committee may live in any given house."

The proposed change recommends the election of the off-campus committee members be as follows: "The elections of the members of the off-campus committee shall not be held in the regular spring elections. This election shall be held at a later date after room reservations have been announced. There shall be one member to the off-campus committee from each sorority house and she shall be elected by the members of her sorority." The remainder of the section will remain as it stands.

There may be a member from the same house the chairman is from since the chairman has no vote and each house should be represented.

Vice-Presidential Candidate Conducts Unique Campaign

Patty Kavanaugh and Her Freshman Supporters Gain Attention With Political Band

Bands seem to be the vogue on this campus these days. Last Tuesday a political band consisting of the ardent followers of Patty Kavanaugh, candidate for the vice-presidency of this year's freshman class, recaled prospective voters outside the auditorium just before convocation met.

This unique band was organized and directed by Starling Hall, and led by Sonia Mitchell brandishing a mop-handle baton. The band's first fete of said baton is most interesting.

It seems that Marion was a little behind a stick so Starling Hall decided to find one for her. The first victim of the search was an old broom the which absolutely refused to lose its head. Try as Starling could, she couldn't break the brook. Once more she set out and this time found a mop handle sitting in a corner of a dormitory hall.

When the maid of that floor said she was going to use it, our heroine said that she was going to use it too, but would bring it back that afternoon. Of course this still wasn't the most desirable of batons because of a large hook that was perched on one end of it.

As the procession rounded Jennie Murphree Hall, Mrs. Levy came out and, as she watched the spectacle, smiled benevolently upon the paraders, until she saw that mop handle. "Oh!", she cried, "My mop handle"!

The first parade was given at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning and helped to awaken the still sleepy people who filed out of the dining room after breakfast.

Starling beat the large drum and symbols while Elizabeth Jeffress blew the bugle. During the parade the symbols and drum became strained, but Mary Fields came to the rescue by offering to play the symbols. The parade continued.

Tangerines, borrowed from the physical education department were played by Nancy Oldman and Mary Puglisi.

Patty's parade was so well received by the members of the student body that another performance was given at the lunch hour. Pictures were taken for the Flastacowa and students marveled at this unusual campaign.

Wednesday night the band sought for a new idea. They wanted something different. It was something different because all the signs were not out one.

The band members and followers gathered flash lights to shine on that lone sign. Thus began the parade around Jennie Murphree. After Jennie Murphree was encircled once, a short pep rally was held. Following, the pep rally was a parade through the dormitory halls. The band marched through all the halls making enough noise to be heard for miles around, but this was not enough for many of the students who hung out of their rooms waving screeching alarm clocks.

A messenger, sent by a house director finally caught up with the enthusiasts and once more the dorms settled down to the usual confusion.

Students Will Not Dance

Although college students will probably be free to attend the inaugration ceremonies and the parade, no arrangements have been made for their attendance at the balls to be held at the gymnasium and the east dining room on January 7 honoring the new governor.

Students State Forum Opinions

Ahlsweh, Camp Advocate Using Debate Style For Forums

"What a Student Forum Should Be; the Topics to be Discussed and the Types of Programs to be Presented" was the subject of the Student forum program held Tuesday night in 309 Westcott building. Mary Pinckard Bryan, chairman, presided.

Before introducing the two speakers of the evening the chairman remarked that since 1935 there has been a student forum on the campus of Florida State college. In the earlier forums national affairs were dealt with in the discussions. In recent years both campus and national problems have been student forum topics.

Vivian Ahlsweh, editor of the Distaff, and Kathryn Camp, social committee chairman, were the two students invited to present their views on what a student forum should be.

Vivian Ahlsweh spoke first on her ideas as to what should be discussed in the forums. She advocated breaking away from committee reports and doing away with the topic of "Woman's place in the universe." A forum carried on in the style of a debate session governed by Robert's rules of order appealed to the speaker.

The Distaff editor selected campus problems rather than current national ones as best subjects for discussion. Topics suggested by the speaker included student government versus college government, the value of integrated courses, dormitory life, student cooperation, rules and regulations, senior ball, required courses, student parties, should girls be lalloped, and judiciary. A free-for-all discussion of the editors of the various publications on campus was also suggested.

Kathryn Camp considered a wide range of topics on a variety of subjects as suitable for forum discussion. She suggested a formally conducted type of forum.

The speaker suggested a project for the forum in which many other colleges would be contacted by correspondence ideas, problems, student government, and discussion topics of other schools should be brought to the campus and could be profited by. Constructive, not destructive criticism, was also included in Kathryn's suggestions.

Following this Sonia Mitchell, editor of the Flastacowa, had an all-American ranking annual passed around the room while she presented some of the ideas which she gained at the national convention in Detroit for year-book editors.

Hunter college recently dedicated its $6,500,000 building.

Former Student Directs Social Activities In Landis Hall

Gruppe Graduates From Groping Freshman To Social Director in Six Hard Years

BY NELLE LOYLESS

At Florida State college for women, dormitory social directors are neither altogether made nor are they just born. Miss Kathleen Gruppe, attractive young social director of West Landis hall, was once just a student here having graduated in 1936.

When a student at this college, Miss Gruppe was not unlike others. As a freshman and even as a sophomore she said of herself, "I knew very little about the rules or social procedure. I did as lots of girls do now. I just asked the director." She entered school in February and studied hard to make up the half year. She said, "I was not aware of it all."

Later, Miss Gruppe was associated more closely with College Hall committee chairman, were the two students invited to present their views on what a student forum should be.

Vivian Ahlsweh spoke first on her ideas as to what should be discussed in the forums. She advocated breaking away from committee reports and doing away with the topic of "Woman's place in the universe." A forum carried on in the style of a debate session governed by Robert's rules of order appealed to the speaker.

Topics suggested by the speaker included student government versus college government, the value of integrated courses, dormitory life, student cooperation, rules and regulations, senior ball, required courses, student parties, should girls be lalloped, and judiciary. A free-for-all discussion of the editors of the various publications on campus was also suggested.

Kathryn Camp considered a wide range of topics on a variety of subjects as suitable for forum discussion. She suggested a formally conducted type of forum.

The speaker suggested a project for the forum in which many other colleges would be contacted by correspondence ideas, problems, student government, and discussion topics of other schools should be brought to the campus and could be profited by. Constructive, not destructive criticism, was also included in Kathryn's suggestions.

Following this Sonia Mitchell, editor of the Flastacowa, had an all-American ranking annual passed around the room while she presented some of the ideas which she gained at the national convention in Detroit for year-book editors.

Hunter college recently dedicated its $6,500,000 building.

Students Will Hear Moore On Religion This Week

The Rev. Ansley C. Moore, from the Peace Memorial church in Clearwater, will speak at convocation Tuesday on "The Social Message of Religion." Dr. Moore is the second of a number of speakers being brought to the college as part of the religious program.

At 4:30 o'clock students will discuss questions with him in an open forum and at 6:30 o'clock there will be a banquet for the "Committee of 100" at which he will be guest of honor.

The committee in charge of the program is Peggy Thornton, chairman; Gene Bynum, Betty Nicklason and Delia Montero.
